EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

and

CIVIL RIGHTS

A statement of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations prepared for the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights

July 14, 1962
Nashville

The Tennessee Council on Human Relations is a voluntary non-political organization, chartered by the state, and open to persons of all races and faiths. It seeks through education, communication and leadership to foster an environment in which all citizens may live together in decency and dignity, free from discriminatory practices.

The opening statement in the 1961 report of the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights dealt with employment. The Council's choice of employment as one of its most important problems throughout the state serves to confirm the previous report. In the intervening months there has been progress, but not enough to dislodge employment as a chief area of discriminatory practice.*

Tennessee's population, according to the 1960 Census shows that only 16 per cent of the state's population is non-white. Removing from the non-white category the Indians, Japanese, Chinese, Filipino and "all others", the percentage drops to less than 1/10 of 1 per cent. This is true despite the increase of 300 per cent in Asiatic residents within our state. Therefore, the problems associated with discrimination are Negro-white ones. We are not forgetting the 2400 persons classified as non-white, other than Negro. We simply mean to say that prejudice and discrimination are transferable and when we clear away points of discrimination toward Negroes, we will modify or relieve discrimination toward other minority groups.

In September 1960, a two day meeting was held in Nashville to explore the employment opportunities for Negroes. A summary of that conference was made by Dr. V. W. Henderson and its opening statements describes the Tennessee Council's interest and commitment.

"Inherent within the democratic philosophy are basic individual rights which apply to all persons, or else they cannot, in the final analysis, be enjoyed as the privilege of any. Among these are:

1. The right to pursue gainful employment and economic security within the limits of the individual's highest capabilities and skills,
2. The right to participate in such schools, general education and vocational training programs, which will provide the needed skills, and

3. The right not to be denied either of the above opportunities by virtue of such accidents of birth as race, social class, or religion.

The greatest mutual benefit for the individual and society will obtain when these rights are maximally developed and utilized throughout the social structure and at all levels of capacity."

Your committee may have received statements dealing with employment from local groups throughout the state. We know that local councils have been working for breakthroughs in employment. There have been successes, such as sales clerks and clerical personnel employed in department stores and small specialty shops, check-out clerks, grocery clerks, etc. There has been some upgrading in large firms with Federal Contracts including Avco, Western Electric and General Shoe. It has been slow and tedious work, and has required great patience and persistence on the part of negotiating teams. Although many of the larger firms have Federal Contracts they have demonstrated little initiative in recruitment of Negro employees and have generally responded only to pressure. Dr. Henderson's statistical information of two years ago remains valid: Twelve thousand new jobs in Nashville firms since 1957 with less than 4 per cent Negro employees; almost no jobs above the unskilled level; of all unskilled jobs in Nashville over 80 per cent are held by Negroes; a 20 per cent increase in number of manufacturing jobs in Nashville since 1950, but only 5 per cent of those jobs are held by Negroes

Public utilities furnish a vivid example of discriminatory practices. Since they are monopolies traditional methods of demonstrating disagreement with their personnel policies, such as "trade where you can work", are not applicable. Both Federal and state organizations have a responsibility in the area of public utilities, and both have regulatory bodies to protest the public interest. They have not done so. In the Nashville area there are more than 23,000 telephones, 20,000 electric meters and 12,000 gas meters registered to Negro customers. These companies are reluctant and at times adamant toward employment of Negroes at any job other than building maintenance positions. The Civil Rights Commission hearings in Memphis portrayed this quite clearly. There are 1300 employees of Southern Bell in Memphis; 54 are Negroes.

When large firms are approached about Negro employment they frequently assert that there are no Negro applicants. Frequently this is true. Only a few determined souls will continue to make application at places where they have been unwelcome, or to take promotional examinations whereby they invite redicule. Sometime ago a Nashville postal employee, who was taking an examination to upgrade his position, was ridiculed by his superior who asked if the employee took these examinations for "your health or recreation".

Tennessee State University graduated 15 engineers in June 1962. Prior to graduation they all obtained positions, and all outside of Tennessee. According to the personnel office and the Engineering School, the Tennessee Highway Department has never attempted to recruit A&I graduate engineers. In 1962, 52 industries came to A&I seeking personnel with specialized training - chemists, physicists, etc.; not one of these companies was Tennessee based. One engineering graduate of A&I is working for TVA in Knoxville and another at Red Stone Arsenal in Alabama. It is believed that all other graduates are out of Tennessee and out of the South. The state is thereby making a generous contribution to the economy of the North and West, but this erosion of our "top soil" in human resources is one we can ill afford.

Perhaps even more serious than losing the investment made in these young people to the general economy of the state, is losing their services as incentive to young Negroes struggling with long division and logarithms. If youngsters could witness the utilization of Negroes on skilled jobs, it would serve as an effective motivation for their own preparation.

Technical training at the high school level is either non-existent, or so antiquated that it has little worth for the types of jobs which our economy will produce. In Chattanooga, the plan for desegregation of the schools, effective for the first three grades in 1962 does not become effective for the first year of high school until 1968. It appears that Kirkman Vocational School will not be open until 1969 to Negro students, and the School Board's post high school institution, Chattanooga Technical Institute, will not admit Negroes until that date. This delay will effectively eliminate Negroes from training programs which would prepare them for the current job market. A Negro child in Chattanooga entering school in September 1954 will graduate from high school without ever having an opportunity for training in areas of employment for which there is an increasing demand. Let me illustrate by comparing the vocational courses offered at these two schools:

KIRKMAN HIGH SCHOOL	HOWARD HIGH SCHOOL
automotive mechanics	auto mechanics
auto motors	auto motors
commercial arts	commercial arts
cosmetology	cosmetology drafting electricity
industrial chemistry

practical nursing	practical nursing

In Chattanooga, both the city and county restrict vocational offerings in Negro schools to those courses that train for jobs now open to Negroes in the Chattanooga area. This very effectively eliminates a Negro youth from competition for the burgeoning new jobs in Chattanooga, and guarantees his unpreparedness for the labor market elsewhere in the United States. The Superintendent of the Chattanooga City Schools defended the unequal educational advantages by saying that the school system "cannot regulate community employment practices." We would disagree. Their training programs are quite effective.

The administration of vocational education in Tennessee is a product of state, federal and local financing and regulations. The current interpretation and implication of these regulations is such that vocational education is inadequate and unequal throughout Tennessee.

Once you have provided training, and the incentive to obtain it, there must be a channel for the applicant to obtain a job. Not just any job, but the one for which he is trained, and by which he may make the greatest contribution to the economy. Segregated employment offices, and personnel of those offices who think in terms of racial classification of jobs can thwart all earlier efforts to improve employment practices. The state employment offices are the key. This is not a matter of long time strategy. A Commissioner of Employment Security who wanted to change these practices could do so immediately. These employment offices are supported by state and federal funds; they are amenable to change.

In summary, employment patterns depend on:

1. Vocational guidance, counseling and training in public schools.
2. Recruitment and referral for employment
3. Initial hiring
4. Employee on the job training
5. Upgrading and transfer
6. Lay off and termination policies.

The Tennessee Council on Human Relations sponsored a workshop in Johnson City in April 1962 to stimulate interest in broadened job opportunities for Negroes. The workshop, led by Dr. V. W. Henderson, drew both Negro and white citizens from the tri-cities and other East Tennessee towns. Practical proposals for obtaining employment were discussed with emphasis on Federal contract firms. It was noted that a Johnson City firm with nearly $5 million in Federal Government contracts employed no Negroes. The workshop, covering 3 sessions in 24 hours, sought to give practical information on job opportunities and to stimulate vocational training geared to the current job forecast. A similar workshop is planned for Jackson in August and will draw participants from several rural counties. It is a very small contribution toward a very large problem.

Our choice of employment as a major area of discrimination is in line with a statement in a recent Report of the United States Commission on Civil Rights:

> "Denial of employment because of the color of a person's skin, his faith, or his ancestry is a wrong of manifold dimensions. On the personal plane, it is a violation of the Constitution, of legislation, or of national policy. On the economic and social plane, discrimination may result in waste of human resources and an unnecessary burden to the community."

*1) In September 1959, Dr. Ewan Clague, Commissioner of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor made the following predictions on the occupational trends for the next decade:

> "Looking at the economy as a whole, the major chances appear to be long-term rapid growth of the so-called white collar group of occupations; a slower growth in the blue collar occupations accompanied by a continuing rise in the skill levels; a sharp decline in employment among farmer and farm laborers; and faster than average growth among service worker."

Some who profess to be in the know think the GOP's have more than an even chance to elect a man from their ranks come November. However, we can expec the Elephant boys to enter a tusker in the forthcoming hassle, and expect their entry to make whale of a good showing.

From the hoi pollios' perch however, it is against precedent for the GOP party to elect one of their number. But since the Demos scandal in their own camp, anything may happen - and it just might.

Lest Any Forget A Restatement Of Policy

The 780 Countdown takes this opportunity to restate its position. This redundancy seems unnecessary and perhaps it is; but lest any should forget or worse misconstrue, we venture it. As an organ of the National Association for the Promotion of Community Services, we do not consider sit-ins, stand-ins and freedom rides our area of competence, but as a newspaper supported by public endowment, we have both a public and a moral obligation to present news of relevance to our readers in the cold facts, whether they be pleasant or not.

We are however very concerned about one consideration of ultimate if not immediate import. The 780 Countdown is satisfied from its own investigation that the minority group on whose behalf this struggle has been waged possesses the economic strength within itself to build and operate a theater as good as or better than the Capitol. Moreover, a theater that would be open to all persons on an equal basis. Here is an opportunity then for real genuine leadership and a chance to advance their economic strength. One sees little point in fattening the Lion that is devouring you.

Lebanon Injustice Moves To Equal Albany Georgia

The City of Lebanon Tennessee has taken a mold from the now infamous pattern of injustice fashioned by Albany, Georgia.

Lebanon took the plunge Tuesday evening when its police department arrested six American citizens for picketing segregated policies of the management of the Capitol Theater.

The protesting citizens, all reportedly members of CORE, were arrested on the trumped-up charge of "breach of the peace" and thrown into Lebanon's jail.

The Albany Georgia pattern in this case is starkly clear:

The Lebanon police manhandled female members of the picket line.

The Lebanon policemen ramsackled personal effects of the female members of the picket line.

The Lebanon policemen used gruff, discourteous language and intimidating tactics in making arrest of the youthful Americans, the youngest of whom is 18 years old.

The Lebanon police failed to produce a warrant for the arrest of the young American citizens or to indicate who caused the issuance of such warrant.

The Lebanon teen-age tufts gathered menacingly to do bodily harm to the youthful Americans who had told the Lebanon police beforehand that their sole intention was to "demonstrate peacefully . . . ."

AND, WORST OF ALL, THE SO CALLED "GOOD" CITIZENS OF LEBANON - THE CHRISTIANS, CIVIC LEADERS AND ALL THE OTHERS - JUST LIKE THEIR COUNTERPARTS IN ALBANY GEORGIA . . . ARE SITTING DOING NOTHING . . . . . SILENT TO THE INJUSTICES THE LEBANON POLICE FORCE IS COMMITTING AGAINST YOUNG AMERICANS WHOSE ONLY OBJECT IS THE PRACTICE OF LIBERTIES GUARANTEED BY THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

What Nashville Leaders Are Saying

The following citizens had these statements to make:

Mrs. C. M. Hayes, President of Nashville Chapter of N.A.A.C.P.: "We are willing to help the demonstrators in whatever way we can be of most benefit."

. Rev. Andrew White, Treasurer of The Nashville Christian Leadership Council: "I commend the demonstrators for their remarkable courage. I hope that they will not back down because of these temporary set-backs."

. Elder Henry Dozier, Pastor, Little Mt. Zion Primitive Baptist Church: "I detest it! Being unjustly arrested while fighting for their constitutional rights!"

. Rev. R. G. Elam, Pastor, Capers Memorial C. M. E. Church: "It's ridiculous! And from people living in a civilized society! All I can say is that, down through the ages, freedom has been at a cost; people have had to pay the price. Maybe eventually people will wake up and learn the similarity of our ways and differences."

. Mrs. Katherine C. Dandridge, Director of Nursing, Meharry Med. College: "If the situation was as it was reported to me, it is a disgrace that peaceful picketing cannot go on without resulting in arrest." (Note: the doubt suggested in Mrs. Dandridge's statement is out of her policy, she says, of never drawing conclusions on any issue without knowing that all involved elements are beyond reasonable doubt. Recently, due to the extremely early start of her workday, etc., she has little time to read her paper.)

. Mr. C. J. Brown, District Manager, Universal Life Insurance Co.: "If Lebanon troublemakers would come to Nashville and observe the peaceful operation of integrated theaters here, it shouldn't be hard for them to arrange a favorable negotiation; that is, if they really want to see the thing worked out in a nonviolent and democratic way. However, if they don't then nothing will remedy the real, basic problem."

. Dr. C. J. Walker

"The recent arrests (August 22nd) of six Negro youths of Lebanon, Tennessee for peaceful picketing the Capitol Theater in that city again points up the last rasping, dying efforts of some of the white community to maintain the so-called status quo, and the so-called "southern way of life". I say SOME of the white community because I feel certain that the more intelligent white leaders of the South have fully recognized the inevitability of change in the status quo and have accepted the fact that the medieval "southern way of life" is rapidly passing, never to return. It behooves, then the more rational whites of Lebanon and of the South-- to convey to their die-hard segregationist brethren that the old feudal illusion of the superior being met its demise with the downfall of Hitlerism. And may they be reminded, too, that never again in this South of ours will they see the passive, complacent Negro as envisioned by their own ego. For, as they arrest and abuse these six Negro youths, there will be six more, and six more, and six more, ad infinitum!"

N.M.A. Boost Medicare

By The Associated Negro Press

CHICAGO -- (ANP) -- In what was viewed as a revolt against its leaders, the House of Delegates of the National Medical Association at the organization's annual convention here voted overwhelmingly in favor of President Kennedy's medical care plan under social security.

The action took place in the NMA's final meeting Thursday in the Sherman House hotel in 106 to 71 vote. The resolution went on record supporting the principal of the medical care for the elderly through the Social Security plan, known as Medicare.

This was a switch from the position which the NMA took last year. Dr. Lionel Swan of Detroit, newly - elected speaker of the House of Delegates, said the NMA delegates in 1961 voted against the King - Anderson bill because it was inadequate.

An earlier proposal which suggested that the NMA set up its own medical plan for the aged was defeated at the convention.

Full membership in the American Medical Association, which opposed the Medicare plan, was a major consideration at the NMA meeting. While no direct action was taken on this matter, and no resolutions were submitted, Dr. John A. Kenny, Jr., of Washington and Cleveland, new president of the Association, was quoted as saying the NMA would step- up - efforts for full AMA membership in every state.

Dr. Kenny, an associate professor of dermatology at Howard university medical school, succeeds Dr. Vaughan Mason, New York City. Dr. Kenneth W. Clement of Cleveland, Ohio, was named president - elect and will be installed at the 68th annual convention next year in Los Angeles.

Approximately 3,000 doctors attended the 67th annual meeting, here.

While the doctors differed on the approach to fighting discrimination in hospitals, the issue of racial discrimination was a major consideration of the NMA. Action is being considered to bring about full integration in hospital staff throughout the country.

The body also approved the Reference committee's recommendation that the NMA support for Cook County (Ill.) association in its lawsuit against discrimination of Negro physicians and patients in hospitals and evidence such support with a contribution of $5,000.

Dr. W. Montague Cobb's resolution asking the NMA to commend President Kennedy for his

BENEATH THE ATOM BOMB
By William Henry Huff

Beneath the dread of "H" bombs
That's how we live these days
We hope the thing will never fall
And yet the old dread stays
We wake up nights from horrid dreams
And think we hear the sound
Of pity and of distant screams
Where peace does not abound.

The Whole Truth And Common Sense About The Church Split

(The Answer To Bishop M. L. Jewell)

This is a brief true story about the split in the Church Of The Living God, The Pillar and Ground Of The Truth, 1915 Heiman Street, Nashville, Tennessee. After this answer, Bishop Jewell may say what she pleases but God knows the truth and I want our friends and the people in Nashville, Tennessee, to know the truth.

First, common sense: How can anyone split from himself? Bishop F.E. Lewis, now present chief-overseer of the Church Of The Living God, The Pillar and Ground Of The Truth, and co-founder with his mother who deceased in 1930, and his brother who deceased in the early twenties.

Bishop F.E. Lewis stood true and loyal to his mother who was first cheif-overseer of the church until her death. He first spoke the name of the church and has ever struck with it and the church's faith. He wrote the by-laws and decree book of the church by the orders of his mother and it was approved by her and the General Assembly of the church.

Bishop F.E. Lewis has never then bought printing presses, files, desks, and other furniture. He also hired laborers to help in operating the publishing house for the church until jealousy and advantage crept in and cut-off the financial support.

Bishop M.L. Jewell ran over the orders of the Chancery Court, 1947-48, by adding to the buildings of the church's headquarters. The court plainly told her that if she improved or added to the place, it would be done at her own peril, as the property involved was not settled in court and that she could not hold the others responsible for what she did on the place, nor the use of it.

Bishop F.E. Lewis has never barred, occupied, nor hindered any of the other chief-overseers nor their followers from the use of the church's property and its facilities at any time. All of which, Bishop Jewell has done, plus destroying the printing presses, desks, and other church furniture, that was already in the building when she by false claims appealed to the Chancery Court, taking over for the twenty-one years that she mentioned in her statement in the August 6, 1962, issue of the 780 Countdown.

Last, but not the least, Bishop Jewell refers to her and her dominion improving the property. I am sure that she must have forgotten that it was the people of Bishop Lewis' dominion that financially helped her add to the building that was already on the place.

During the time that Bishop Lewis was on the place, all the members of the church slept, cooked, ate, used the rest-rooms and were free to any and all the church's facilities there on.

We all at one time held our General Assembly in the building on the place. Now since the District Court has ordered that we she helped fight against him for it.

Bishop White with the people that he was able to seduce to follow him had the original church (The Church of the Living God the Pillar and ground of the truth) doors locked, the windows barred down and even had some of the members put in jail and carried to court. After two years in court and the court finding that his claims were false, which are the same claims that Bishop Jewell is now using, the court in Florida ordered and decreed that Bishop A. H. White and his followers vacate immediately the Mother Church's Property, Temples and not even take a book, drum, tambourine or anyting that belonged to the Original Church, just as the court did Bishop

Bishop White went out and bought church property and built a Temple for himself and his followers. Bishop Jewell said Bishop Lewis caused this split, but this split was during the life of the founder Mother M. T. Tate.

He helped found and establish his church, wrote up its By-Laws and decree book, located and helped his mother to make the down payment on the church headquarters property at 1915 Heiman Street, helped to buy printing machinery, office furniture and operated the publishing house for the church in Nashville, Tenn. Until the devourers and advantage seekers came along who tried and are yet trying to destroy all the good he has ever done for the church, but as we read Psalm 37: 34-40, I Tim. 6: 3-10, Rev. e: 4-5, we are encouraged with the Lord. Our many friends of Nashville who knew our church rights were glad to see us back upon our church property.

The Whole Truth And Common Sense About The Church Split

(The Answer To Bishop M. L. Jewell)

This is a brief true story about the split in the Church Of The Living God, The Pillar and Ground Of The Truth, 1915 Heiman Street, Nashville, Tennessee. After this answer, Bishop Jewell may say what she pleases but God knows the truth and I want our friends and the people in Nashville, Tennessee, to know the truth.

First, common sense: How can anyone split from himself? Bishop F.E. Lewis, now present chief-overseer of the Church Of The Living God, The Pillar and Ground Of The Truth, and co-founder with his mother who deceased in 1930, and his brother who deceased in the early twenties.

Bishop F.E. Lewis stood true and loyal to his mother who was first cheif-overseer of the church until her death. He first spoke the name of the church and has ever struck with it and the church's faith. He wrote the by-laws and decree book of the church by the orders of his mother and it was approved by her and the General Assembly of the church.

Bishop F.E. Lewis has never varied from its laws, etc. He was annointed and approved twice by the whole General Assembly of the church as one of the three dominion's chief-overseer. After the death of his mother and as to yet he has been the only one of the three chief-overseers set up in the church that has stuck with the whole General Assembly dominion's rule, et cetera.

Each chief-overseer was given a dominion of sixteen states a piece to preside over as chief-overseer and they were not to invade or meddle anyway, shape, form, or fashion into each other's dominion. This law has never been respected, nor obeyed by the other chief-overseers-thank God for the late Bishop M.F.L. Keith's last testimony in court, 1961, that "when she and Bishop Jewell called themselves putting Bishop Lewis out of the church, we did not know what we were doing. He is as much chief-overseer as any one of us."

In the state of Florida, which is one of the states in Bishop Lewis' dominion, Bishop M. L. Jewell invaded, having the windows barred down and the doors locked of the church temple from the use of Bishop Lewis' people; the same as she has done in Nashville, Tennessee. This caused a very bitter lawsuit in Florida, but after the court found her claims to be false, it ordered her to open the doors and buy property for herself and followers use, if for any reason they did not want to go along with the people of this particular and orginal church. This, Bishop Jewell did. Therefore, in the state of Florida she has her own church temples and we do not bother each other. We live as strangers and at peace with one another in that state.

Bishop F.E. Lewis, by the orders of his mother, located the church's headquarters in Nashville, Tennessee. He and his mother made the first down payment personally on the place. He then bought printing presses, files, desks, and other furniture. He also hired laborers to help in operating the publishing house for the church until jealousy and advantage crept in and cut-off the financial support.

Bishop M.L. Jewell ran over the orders of the Chancery Court, 1947-48, by adding to the buildings of the church's headquarters. The court plainly told her that if she improved or added to the place, it would be done at her own peril, as the property involved was not settled in court and that she could not hold the others responsible for what she did on the place, nor the use of it.

Bishop F.E. Lewis has never barred, occupied, nor hindered any of the other chief-overseers nor their followers from the use of the church's property and its facilities at any time. All of which, Bishop Jewell has done, plus destroying the printing presses, desks, and other church furniture, that was already in the building when she by false claims appealed to the Chancery Court, taking over for the twenty-one years that she mentioned in her statement in the August 6, 1962, issue of the 780 Countdown.

Last, but not the least, Bishop Jewell refers to her and her dominion improving the property. I am sure that she must have forgotten that it was the people of Bishop Lewis' dominion that financially helped her add to the building that was already on the place.

During the time that Bishop Lewis was on the place, all the members of the church slept, cooked, ate, used the rest-rooms and were free to any and all the church's facilities there on.

We all at one time held our General Assembly in the building on the place. Now since the District Court has ordered that we all return and at least hold our meetings on the place. She does not want us to use any of the church's facilities while she has destroyed the chairs, pianos, printing presses, desks, files, and refused the delegates to stay on the place in at least the building which was already on the place when she took over and added to it, in spite of the Chancery Court's orders.

H. M. LEWIS

Bishop Jewell stated in one paper article that she was for peace and did not mean to fight over material things. Now she says that, "if it is a fight, she will fight to the finish." We are not asking for a fight - we only ask for our just, honest, and fair rights of material things, if it is God's will that we have it. Many times, the right has had to suffer but victory awaits at the end, even if it is in glory. May God bless the readers of this article and may they believe the truth.

Bishop M. L. Jewell, stated in her article that Bishop Lewis caused Bishop White of Philadelphia, Pa., to leave the church in 1929. Now Bishop Jewell knows the truth. Bishop A. H. White came to Florida and he went to many other states trying the very same thing in the church that Bishop Jewell is now trying and she helped fight against him for it.

Bishop White with the people that he was able to seduce to follow him had the original church (The Church of the Living God the Pillar and ground of the truth) doors locked, the windows barred down and even had some of the members put in jail and carried to court. After two years in court and the court finding that his claims were false, which are the same claims that Bishop Jewell is now using, the court in Florida ordered and decreed that Bishop A. H. White and his followers vacate immediately the Mother Church's Property, Temples and not even take a book, drum, tambourine or anyting that belonged to the Original Church, just as the court did Bishop

Bishop White went out and bought church property and built a Temple for himself and his followers. Bishop Jewell said Bishop Lewis caused this split, but this split was during the life of the founder Mother M. T. Tate.

He helped found and establish his church, wrote up its By-Laws and decree book, located and helped his mother to make the down payment on the church headquarters property at 1915 Heiman Street, helped to buy printing machinery, office furniture and operated the publishing house for the church in Nashville, Tenn. Until the devourers and advantage seekers came along who tried and are yet trying to destroy all the good he has ever done for the church, but as we read Psalm 37: 34-40, I Tim. 6: 3-10, Rev. e: 4-5, we are encouraged with the Lord. Our many friends of Nashville who knew our church rights were glad to see us back upon our church property.

TO: Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights

FROM: Gideon Fryer, President
Nashville Community Relations Council

Determining priorities among civil rights issues seems to me to be largely a matter of strategy. All are important. Therefore, the issue suggested below was chosen not because there are defensible reasons why it should be considered as most important, but in the interest of presenting the Advisory Committee with some considerations which might not appear in other statements or testimony.

We submit that housing for Negroes is a crucial problem at the present time in Nashville and probably in other urban areas of Tennessee. Housing is used here in the broadest sense of access to decent shelter in pleasant and wholesome surroundings in which the necessary community facilities are available. Most of the housing occupied by or available to Negroes in Nashville could be said to be deficient on one or more of these points.

There has been no change in the pattern of designating the color of persons to whom property is offered for sale or rental. Thus Negroes continue to be deprived of the right to make the best housing investment that their resources will permit. This means that new construction, unless specifically built for Negroes, is not available for non-white occupancy. This is true in areas redeveloped through the use of Federal Urban Renewal and Redevelopment funds. Some attractive new housing is being offered for Negro purchase in the East Nashville Urban Renewal area and the urban renewal authorities are attempting to deal fairly in the matter of access to land and housing. However, the urban renewal agency has not required developers to pursue an open occupancy policy. The result is that there are areas of former Negro occupancy, which have been cleared and redeveloped for white occupancy. This has led to the widespread belief that urban renewal and redevelopment has worsened housing opportunities for Negroes and has contributed to overcrowding of established areas of Negro housing.

With the exception of two limited developments, suburbia is closed to Negroes. Available sites within the urban area on which housing for Negro occupancy may be built are generally in areas lacking such facilities as streets and sewers or near other land uses which make residence undesirable. The practice has developed of building multiple unit dwellings for Negro occupancy on small lots zoned commercial. These buildings do not meet usual standards for residences in such regards as set-back lines, open or play space, and space for parking and service areas. Since they are being built in commercial zones, they are frequently adjacent to commercial or industrial enterprises neither pleasant or wholesome.

The major way in which Negroes are forced to meet their expanding housing needs is the process sociologically termed "invasion". By this is meant the gradual expansion of the areas occupied by Negroes, house by house, block by block, into the adjacent areas occupied by whites. This process exacts a high price, not alone in profits to unscrupulous realtors but in the tensions and anxieties which arise when members of a community are driven to pursue the phantom of segregation.

Negroes have frequently been termed the most recent immigrants to American cities. However, unlike other immigrant groups, they have been barred from moving out of the concentrated non-white areas into the broader community. The speed-up of the integration of Negroes into the life of American communities has been labeled in a recent Fortune article as "the largest and most urgent piece of public business facing the United States today". Ordinances prohibiting racial designation in the sale or rental of housing and an executive order providing for open occupancy in federally aided housing would not bring a total solution to the problems of housing for Negroes. They would, however, serve as needed precedents and beginnings in the vital area of housing just as beginnings have been made in several other areas.

THE VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS . . .

THE COUNCIL . . . is a non-profit organization open to all people who believe that Southerners can—and will—work through their problems by constructive, cooperative action; works to bring understanding and acceptance of the legitimate aspirations of all of the people of Virginia, regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin; emphasizes the techniques of fact-finding, education, publicity, negotiation, and persuasion; has a membership of over 2,000 drawn from all the principal religious groups, from both major political parties, from various educational, economic, and social levels, and includes both public officials and private citizens; cooperates with the Southern Regional Council and with the Councils on Human Relations of the other Southern states in approaching South-wide problems on the same basis.

WE BELIEVE . . . that all men are entitled to equal respect, equal rights, and equal freedom in the enjoyment of all facilities which are offered for public use, and that laws and customs that deny these basic values to any group are an offense against God's law and against the ideals to which America is dedicated;

that free speech, free discussion, and freedom of association must at all costs be preserved, unhampered by any public policy or concerted private action that tends to intimidate individuals or to deprive people acting through lawful organizations of their civil and constitutional liberties; that the question of human relations becomes, in larger terms, the question of world peace; and that we cannot conscientiously or effectively advocate to the community of nations ideals which we are unable or unwilling to practice in our own communities.

WE SEEK . . . to create in Virginia an atmosphere in which independent citizens may meet, counsel, and work together toward overcoming the fears and the customs that stand in the way of a more humane and democratic America; to foster and maintain active communication among responsible members of various racial and other groups to the end that misunderstanding and ill-will shall be avoided and a sense of mutual trust and fair play shall be established and widely extended; to establish councils on human relations in our local communities as rallying points for all citizens who wish to approach our common problems in a spirit of reason and open-mindedness.

WE OFFER . . . opportunities to participate in the programs of eighteen local councils or cooperating groups throughout Virginia, and to support the state-wide program; practical assistance from professionally-trained leaders and from experienced consultants in the study of local problems, in the organization of new local councils, and in the planning of workshops and special programs;

We, therefore, now understand that we are eligible to receive $3,600.00 from Southern Regional Council as matching funds for 1962.

In addition to the above report, we have received a grant from the William C. Whitney Foundation in the amount of $3,500.00 for the years 1962-63-64. The Foundation has already advanced us $1,750.00 of the 1962 allocation, with the promise that the additional $1,750.00 will be sent shortly after July 1, 1962. This money has been set aside toward the employment of an Associate Director.

We operate on the calendar year as our fiscal year, and with the year one-half gone, we feel that the financial status of the VCHR is in excellent shape. We have a 1962 budget of $19,500.00, not including the Whitney Foundation grant or money received for New South subscriptions. Based on our fiscal year, we have received through June 1962	$ 9,397.40

Matching funds to be received from SRC	3,600.00
VCHR must yet raise on 1962 budget	4,552.60
Total	$19,500.00

II. Report of local councils:

A. New Councils-

Williamsburg is now an affiliated local council with VCHR. This action was taken at the meeting of the Executive Committee in Roanoke, Virginia, on April 14, in response to a request for affiliation from the co-operating Williamsburg group. This group was greatly strengthened because of our Annual Meeting being held at Colonial Williamsburg last November.

A new local council was organized in Danville, Virginia on Tuesday, June 19. The Executive Director spoke to a group of over thirty at the YWCA prior to the vote by the group to organize, elect officers and ask for affiliation with VCHR. This is the first new local council as a result of our program "Operation Extension". The Reverend Dr. Robert McCan, Pastor of the (White) First Baptist Church of Danville, was elected President, Mr. M. C. Martin, member of our Board of Directors, was elected Treasurer. Interest and enthusiasm of the Danville group was good, and plans are already being made for an active program to begin in September 1962.

B. Prospective New Councils:

Discussions are being carried on at the present for the purpose of organizing new councils at Hollins College, Hollins College, Virginia and in Lawrenceville, Virginia. "Operation Extension" has developed plans for seeking to develop councils in some fifteen new areas of Virginia within the next two years.

C. Reports on some local councils:

1. Richmond-Petersburg Area Council has developed the most significant program of any local council within our history. Copies of this have been mailed to SRC and to the entire state membership. Many other local councils are taking a clue from this program and are busy during the Summer to build a similar program for their respective local areas.

2. Fairfax County, Alexandria and Arlington Councils have developed the HURELCO Land & Development Corporation. Two copies are attached. This is a fascinating project and distribution of these brochures on HURELCO will be mailed the entire state membership with the next state newsletter.

3. The Norfolk Council has been re-activated. The Executive Director spoke to a good representation of this council on June 5, and plans were made and put into action to get new leadership and operate monthly programs for the next year, beginning in September. Dan Bowers has agreed to serve as council president if the Nominating Committee and council so desire his services in this capacity.

4. The Peninsula co-operating group has over-subscribed its quota toward our budget, and is very active in equal job opportunities. In fact, this group is the strongest co-operating group within the state, and efforts are being made to make this a strong and affiliated council.

5. Loudoun County Council had the Executive Director as their speaker on May 8. This is a stronger group than most recognize, and is serving a good and useful service within this area.

III. General reports around the State:

A. Prince Edward County - The Board of Supervisors have voted to keep the schools closed for the fourth school year. However, three White men and far more Negroes than ever before spoke out in an open hearing for the opening of schools there for next year. VCHR Board of Directors issued to the press a resolution deploring the action of the Board of Supervisors. The Richmond Times-Dispatch built a good story around our resolution and we have received much favorable support for this action.

Harry Boyte is living in Farmville as AFSC's representitive. He seems to have been able to discuss the situation with various leaders without drawing their fire and open condemnation.

Virginia Teacher's Association and a group of students from the New England Area are conducting two Crash Programs in Prince Edward County this Summer. In both instances these programs will attempt to give some instruction to the Negro school children of an academic nature.

Perhaps the most significant thing in P. E. County was the agreement of Mr. Barry Walls that public schools would open in September if the Courts would rule that in such case, the private school could once again receive tuition grants from the State. This promise or agreement was made to Benjamin Muse following an editorial in the Richmond News-Leader indicating that this could be the way out of the dilemma.

B. The Richmond City Council has adopted and is implementing a Fair Employment practice for hiring all city employees.

C. The Chief of Police of Arlington has distributed orders to pickets of the Northern Virginia Theatres that Senate Bill 185 would be enforced after July 1. Two copies of this Bill is attached which is aimed at prohibiting picketing and boycotting within Virginia. Both Northern Virginia and Petersburg are ready to test the law in the courts.

D. The County of Powhatan is threatening to close its public schools rather than admit Negroes who have made application to previously all-white schools. Being located close to Prince Edward County, this could be a real sore spot and become a real problem for Virginia.

E. Negro applicants have applied to formerely white schools in increasing numbers during this Spring. We have no way of knowing just how many have been accepted by the Pupil Placement Board as of now since they are in session and will be for some time. However, it seems that there will be far more Negro assignments to integrated schools than ever before with a large number of schools being integrated for the first time in September.

F. VCHR's Board of Directors endorsed a proposal by Dave Scull on June 15, in Charlottesville, for the pursuing of establishing an EQUAL OPPORTUNITY CONSULTING AND RECRUITING SERVICE for the state under the auspices of VCHR. Although extra copies are not available for this report, SRC has been consulted and is already familar with this project. This, plus HURFLCO, seem to indicate a third dimension of service of VCHR in addition to local council programs and committees for negotiation on specific problems.

G. We express our appreciation to SRC for allowing Mr. Paul Anthony and Dr. C. H. Parrish, from your staff to participate in the Bluefield, Community Development Workshop, which is to be held July 9-20. We also express our appreciation to SRC for its work in helping VCHR receive the grant from the William C. Whitney Foundation.

It seems, however, that SRC could help the state directors to be better informed by keeping us on an exhaustive mailing list of both materials coming from the office, and reports on The Voter Registration Project. Suggestions: Send carbon copies of any correspondence to anyone within Virginia on any matter of our work, to the Executive Director's Office.

IV. General Information:

A. The Executive Director has bought, and moved into, a home in Richmond, located at 3230 Hanes Avenue, Richmond 22, Virginia. Home phone 644-7733.

B. We hope to be able to report very soon the securing an Associate Director. Although it is not yet to the stage of any announcement, we feel that we may be able to secure for this position, Dr. A. C. Miller of Sedona, Arizona. Dr. Miller was for many years the Executive Director of the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

C. The Executive Director was influential in organizing an Inter-Agency Council in Richmond during this past Quarter. This organization is made up of the leaders of some forty-five different organizations interested to some degree with the general field of Human Relations. We have had three meetings as follows: First, Dr. Edward Haddock, Senator of Virginia, as speaker; two, Mr. John Feild, Executive Director of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunities, as speaker; and third, Mayor Claude Woodward of Richmond as speaker. We are pleased at the progress and general acceptance of this new group.

D. The VCHR office staff will be on vacation as follows: July 30-August 6, and August 20-September 3, 1962.

* Late Note-

VERY IMPORTANT AND SIGNIFICANT!!!

Judge Thomas J. Michie said Wednesday in Lynchburg, and I quote, "If requested to do so by Negro plantiffs, I'd have to declare the Virginia State law requiring segregation in publicly owned places unconstitutional. I have no doubt it is."

E. Enclosed are additional materials for your files in addition to those mentioned within this report.

Sincerely,

Heslip Lee

BIRMINGHAM

The Selective Buyers Campaign organized by students at Miles College last spring was for two or three weeks about 95% effective. During the summer there have been large numbers of Negroes shopping in the downtown area though enough Negroes are refusing to shop downtown to concern the merchants. Students at Miles College have in the last two weeks sent a letter to many businessmen stating that they believe the area of discrimination can be negotiated and that they have been waiting for one or more merchants to contact them. The letter indicates that they will be interested in making the Selective Buyers Campaign effective this fall. One Negro said that they would probably wait until the Christmas shopping season begins.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference is planning its annual national convention for Birmingham at the end of September and probably on September 25th. There are indications that the conference will be the beginning of demonstrations in Birmingham. It appears that SCLC will concentrate on Alabama beginning this fall with an establishment of a State Headquarters in Birmingham and will be operating in some ten or twelve cities in Alabama.

Birmingham Citizens for Progress is a newly organized committee to change the form of government of Birmingham. They hope to get rid of Eugene "Bull" Connor. Last Tuesday they got more than double the requested number of signatures on petitions calling for an election in November at which time the citizens of Birmingham would vote to decide whether to keep the present form of government or to have a Mayor-Council or a City Manager form of government.

Three Birmingham policemen were arraigned on August 29th after being indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on Civil Rights violations. It is to be hoped that justice will prevail. Two officers were charged with assaulting two Negroes in the same incident and a third officer is charged with attacking a white man while investigating an automobile wreck. Perhaps there will be some long sought release from police brutality in Birmingham and other parts of the South. All citizens of our country are deeply indebted tto all who have labored diligently to indict these policemen.

Two weeks ago I arrived at a laundry in Birmingham.shortly after three police officers beat up a Negro in the plant. The foreman had called the police when one of his employees refused to leave the plant because he was drunk. The foreman told me that he was sure that one of the police officers would have shot and killed the Negro while he was lying down if one of the employees had not thrown herself over him. A police officer told him that he was arresting him for interfering with an officer when he begged the police officer not to shoot the Negro. The charges were quickly dropped against the white foreman.

HUNTSVILLE

An unconfirmed report indicates that a Negro child will be enrolled in a public school in Huntsville. His parents live on the Army Installation of Redstone Arsenal. It has been stated that there will be at least two other public schools desegregated in Alabama this month under similiar circumstances.

NEWS from THE HOUSTON COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

HOUSTON 4, TEXAS
JACKSON 4-5084

JULY-AUGUST 1962

We suspect that Houston newspapers will soon begin to carry stories about the 1962 Interracial Action Institute which CORE has slated in Houston from August 13th to September 2nd. Some 40 young men and women will come here to undergo training in the techniques of nonviolent social action, and--what will undoubtedly excite the foes of Progressive Education--will learn to do by doing. In a word, the Interracial Action Institute, after exploring the philosophy of nonviolent social change, will try to put its philosophy into action and achieve some changes in Houston.

> "Learn nonviolence through using it in action" is the theme of the institute. To do this, institute members will take part in testing eating places and theatres. In cases where Negroes are refused service, the usual steps of negotiation and then peaceful direct action will be followed. The institute will cooperate with local citizens on actual protest projects, including sit-ins, which will illustrate principle and practice.

We might anticipate that the CORE Institute, especially when it moves into public action will create considerable excitement. While the Houston Council is not involved in the CORE Institute in any way, there should be little doubt that we are deeply concerned with what happens in the area of intergroup relations in Houston. We shall try to keep our membership advised of developments centering around the CORE Institute, and reactions to it.

BARBARA JORDAN, a member of our Board of Directors, attended the 19th Annual Institute of Race Relations at Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, the first week--June 25 to July 1, 1962. She has graciously prepared a report of the meeting and concludes as follows:

> "This Race Relations Institute provided me with a deeper and enlarged insight into the broad and sprawling problems encountered in the area of Human Rights. The solution to these problems is not immediate. No president, no citizen, no council, can successfully launch an attack upon the difficulties in this area. But through the concerted and dedicated efforts of all persons who will join a fellowship of concern, all people will one day live in peace, in freedom and dignity. The American dream can and will be realized. I highly recommend this institute for its quality, the perception of its participants and its committments."

THE CULTURAL COMMITTEE has prepared a listing of books in the field of Human Relations for your children's reading this next month and it is enclosed.

With this issue the YOUTH COMMITTEE is enclosing a summary of the Juvenile Delinquency Forum held last Fall.

MRS. GEORGE DUMBAULD will be absent from the city most of the month of August, but the office will be open each week day and Mrs. Lula Hayes will be "on the job." She is eager to assist you and will refer all matters which she cannot handle to Mrs. Shaw.

Biblicgraphy of Human Relations
Books for Children (Incomplete)
Cultural Committee Project, July 1962
THE HOUSTON COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

"BOOKS--particularly fiction, drama, and biography--can be used for many purposes and in many ways: for obtaining information, for enjoyment, for the cultivation of esthetic taste, and for the development of critical ability. In the modern school a new technique has been developed for using literature to expand human understanding and hence improve human relations between different groups." (From Reading Ladders for Human Relations by Hilda Taba)

To aid you in giving a better understanding of race relations to your children, we are listing a short bibliography of appropriate books which can be found in the Houston Public Library.

ALL ABOUT US by Eva Knox Evans (Grades 3-5)
Illustrates common origins of all men and need for interreligious and interracial understanding. 1947.

BARTO TAKES THE SUBWAY by Barbara Brenner (Grades 1-3)
A true-to-life experience of a child's subway ride--a thrilling adventure for children. The story is enjoyable and the photographs simply and artistically depict Puerto Rican youngsters in a situation with which any child can identify. 1961.

CHARIOT IN THE SKY by Arna Bontemps (Grades 6-8)
An account of the Jubilee Singers, a small band of Negro students who toured this country and Europe after the Civil War earning money to save their struggling school in Nashville, is woven into the story of a young runaway slave who became one of those singers. While still a slave Caleb Willows taught himself to read and write; when he became a freedman Caleb devoted his efforts to teaching his people, educating himself, and working for his school. 1951.

FLIGHT TO FREEDOM, The Story of the Underground Railroad
by Henrietta Buckmaster Henkle (Grades 5-7)
This is a story of almost unbelievable heroism and great daring, told with gusto and sincerity. It is told through the lives of courageous men and women--some of them known to us by name; most of them unknown. 1958.

FAMOUS AMERICAN NEGROES by Langston Hughes (Grades 6-up)
This is a well-written biographical sketch of 17 outstanding Negroes. Contents: Phillis Wheatley, Richard Allen, Ira Aldridge, Frederick Douglass, Harriet Tubman, Booker T. Washington, Daniel Hale Williams, Henry Ossawa Tanner, George Washington Carver, Robert S. Abbott, Paul Laurence Dunbar, W. C. Handy, Charles C. Spaulding, A. Philip Randolph, Ralph Bunche, Marian Anderson and Jackie Robinson.

FIRST BOOK OF NEGROES, THE by Langston Hughes (Grades 4-6)
Mr. Hughes has concentrated a vast subject into 69 pages of well-chosen topics, and he has done an excellent job. Terry learns about his people's contribution from his parents and his grandmother and their stories make up the book. The author deftly combines the past and the present, history and sociology and makes the result inviting to middleagers. An excellent book for introducing Negro history. 1952.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS, SLAVE-FIGHTER-FREEMAN by Arna Bontemps (Grades 4-6)
The periods covered are chiefly the boyhood and youth of the first great Negro Abolitionist (the events of his last 50 years are briefly sketched in the last two chapters) but it was these early years that were full of the drama of the awakening of a human spirit. The author has used great restraint in this account of the sufferings of those early years, but even so this is an exciting story of struggle against almost insurmountable odds and of triumph of human greatness. 1959.

IN HENRY'S BACKYARD by Ruth Benedict and Gene Weltfish (Grades 4-6)
Henry dreams that the whole world is living in his own backyard. Neighbors are white, yellow and black if you look at the outside and up pops their Green Devils. What happened to these Green Devils and to the people in whom they lurked make up the action of this amusing book by two scientists who used the universal language of pictures to tell a story that will be enjoyed by every reader in your house. 1948.

JENNIE'S MANDAN BOWL by Lyla Hoffine (Grades 4-6)
The story of a little Indian girl who learns about her people's contribution from her grandmother and she is able to share these contributions with others. 1960.

SAD-FACED BOY by Arna Bontemps (Grades 8-9)
Slumber is the appropriate name belonging to the harmonica-playing member of the trio of Alabama boys who beat their way to New York City. The varied experiences which Harlem affords includes the organization of a band. Sensitive humor and faithful characterizations are features of the book. 1937.

STORY OF THE NEGRO by Arna Bontemps (Grades 5-up)
Beginning with the Negro in Africa this is a history of the American Negro told for young people. The author attemps to trace their beginnings, how slavery came about, and what causes lie behind the present position of the Negro. Written with clarity, restraint and admirable perspective. This well-written book is important reading for young people of our time. 1955.

TWO IS A TEAM by Jerrold and Lorraine Beim (Grades 1-3)
Two little boys, Negro and white, cannot agree on how to build a coaster, but soon discover that working together is the best way. Race is shown in the soft attractive illustrations, but not mentioned in the text.

WORLD IN A CITY BLOCK, THE by Natalie Hall (Grades 4-6)
The story of a child at work meeting all kinds of people--Swiss, Chinese, Hungarian, Greek, French, and Puerto Ricans. These new friends and adventure are found in the world that was just around the corner in his own city block. 1960.

Honorable James O. Eastland, Chairman
Senate Judiciary Committee
United States Senate
Washington 25, D.C.

Dear Senator:

The Houston Council on Human Relations is a voluntary association of hundreds of Houstonians working to improve relations among the many different racial, religious and ethnic groups who live together in our community.

Undergirding the efforts of our organization is a profound faith in the Bill of Rights which has served our Nation and our people so magnificently for nearly two hundred years. It's unique genius is the bulwark of our Nation's strength and our individual freedom, and we would object as strongly as we know how to any effort to tamper with or to revise this fundamental document.

We believe, too, that the separation of power as between the legislative, the executive and the judicial branches of government must remain inviolate, and we would protest any effort to amend either the Constitution or the Bill of Rights in order to make one branch of government subordinate to any other.

In this, we, the members of the Executive Committee of The Houston Council on Human Relations believe we are expressing the views of most Americans, and we would urge that these views be given full consideration of the Senate Judiciary Committee when it begins hearings Thursday on proposed Constitutional amendments.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. E. Pliny Shaw

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
HOUSTON COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Tuesday, May 29, 1962, 11:15 A.M.

The Executive Committee of the Houston Council on Human Relations met Tuesday, May 29, 1962, at the South Central Y.M.C.A., 3531 Wheeler St., at 11:15 A.M.

Present: Walter Whitson, Rev. Charles Kelly, Mrs. Street Fulton, Leland Marsters, Jr., Charles Shaw, Mrs. Charles W. Pemberton, Joyce Shaw, and Ethel Dumbauld.

It was recommended that Howard Griffin, author of the book, BLACK LIKE ME, be secured for a meeting in January, 1963.

It was recommended that we sponsor a Human Rights Observance during December. (Human Rights Day, December 15th). Mrs. M. G. Gray will serve as chairman for the observance. It was suggested that this observance be in cooperation with other groups in the city interested in human rights, that the Mayor be asked to declare human rights week and that the churches and synagogues be asked to recognize the observance and announce it on the weekend. Mr. Marsters suggested that it would be appropriate if we could have someone like Marian Anderson for the program.

Membership Campaign - Mrs. Shaw announced that she and Mr. Adolph Susholtz will call on Mr. Donald Stone of Foley's this next week and ask him to serve on the membership campaign for 1962-63. It was suggested that the campaign be publicized through TV and newspapers (ad) this next year.

Annual Meeting - Mrs. Shaw announced that The Rev. Fred Holt would serve as chairman. Mrs. Pemberton's letter was read proposing Riverside Community Center of St. James Episcopal Church for the Annual Membership dinner. Dinner at $2.25 per person. The majority of those present felt that it would be better at either a downtown hotel or if in a church, that this time it be of a different denomination, i.e.,, Presbyterian, etc.

Mass Communications - Mrs. Shaw stated that a chairman is needed for this committee. Mr. Jerry Mize was proposed.

Youth Seminar Brochure - After lenghty discussion it was felt that a brochure not be used but that the meeting be reviewed in the newsletter and that a panel of the pictures with a caption similar to "HOUSTON CAN BE PROUD" be made up and displayed in the office.

Library - Mrs. Shaw stated that Mrs. Arthur Ginsbarg called about books on race being removed from the Children's section of the library. Mrs. Shaw requested Mrs. Pemberton to check on this matter with Mrs. Ginabarg and the library and get the complete story before any action is taken.

Adjournment at 12:05 for luncheon.

Business

Mrs. Dumbauld read correspondence from and to Mr. Wiley Branton, SRC., director of the Voter Education Project being sponsored by the SRC. We will cooperate with other groups working on this project and distribute materials.

International Relations Program - Mr. Groppe announced that a meeting was held with representatives from IIE Regional Office, Miss Alice Pratt, director and her assistant Miss Martha Mewhirter. Mr. Groppe explained the function and program of IIE. He then stated the two areas in which we could be active: (1) Foreign visitors from the new African nations and other countries under the auspices of the State Department. For the time being, the office of the IIE will work with our office through Mrs. Dumbauld in scheduling these visitors. Later on this would probably be done directly with families in our membership by the IIE office; (2) Student Program - host families will be needed to work with the international students at TSU (approximately 50). Mrs. Pratt emphasized that this would not be an instrument for dealing with integration problem.

Church and State - Mr. Glatstein desires the approval of program for Fall which is an intergroup relations problem--religion in public education.

Mr. Glatstein proposed a conference or workshop with religious leaders, educators, mass media, etc., where they could set down and discuss problems confronting minority groups and religion in public education. This would be primarily an educational program. If action is recommended this would be done through another group. Mr. Glatstein had read book by Dr. Littel of Perkins School of Theology and suggested him as a possible leader for such a conference.

Mrs. Jorjorian mentioned that a group is about to be born of approximately 20 clergy who will discuss this very problem.

VOTED on motion of Mr. Charles Shaw, seconded by Mr. Walter Whitson, that a committee be appointed to explore possibility of joint cooperation in sponsorship of a Church-State conference or workshop for the Fall with emphasis on religion in public education.

Mrs. Shaw appointed the following committee: Mr. Glatstein, chairman; Mrs. Armen Jorjorian, Rev. Charles Kelly and Rev. John Moore.

Adjournment was at 1:35 P.M.

HUMAN RELATIONS FORUM ON JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

(Mrs. Arthur Jay, Chairman (Youth Committee
(Houston Council on Human Relations

Mr. Don Rademacher, Consultant, Texas Citizens Committee, National Council on Crime and Delinquency, Austin, Texas, was the main speaker for the Forum on Juvenile Delinquency. He spoke to the proposed topic, "Roots of Delinquency," along with the following panelists: Mrs. Lou Breedlove, Houston Police Department, Juvenile Division, Houston; Miss Helen Mason, Community Planning Organization Associate, Community Council, Houston; Dr. John Codwell, Principal, Jack Yates Senior High School, Houston, and Dr. Irvin R. Kraft, Director, Houston State Psychiatric Institute.

Mr. Don Radebacher - One of the high points of Mr. Radebacher's introductory remarks concerning "roots" was made early in his discourse. He mentioned that one has a tendency to cut at the top when he wants to destroy something-especially Johnson grass. This is the wrong starting point. In order to eradicate Johnson grass in the yard or field, one must get under the roots and dig it up.

The above example is especially true regarding delinquents in our various communities. If we expect to eliminate delinquency in our communities, or even minimize it, according to Mr. Radebacher, we must start with the roots.

Mr. Radebacher asks the question, "What is a Delinquent?" He immediately points out that there are two views regarding delinqeuncy or delinquents:

The popular view suggests that any youth who does something that we do not like is a "delinquent." Perhaps we do not like his haircut, maybe he "hangs" around the corner drug store, or he might wear a jacket or boots that we do not like. We immediately condemn him as a delinquent. Mr. Radebacher says that none of the above characteristics are sufficient to label a boy as a delinquent. Therefore, they are more or less characteristics of this particular age group and should be accepted by all adults as such.

The legal view of a delinquent is the view that the speaker strongly suggests: "A child is not a delinquent until the courts find this child has violated a law that the state legislators have said is a delinquent act."

Finally, according to the speaker, delinquency is a symptom of social illness; and if one could look into the youth's home, he would probably find reasons for the child's behavior. Perhaps the child is from a broken home, or from a home whose income is so low that the parents are unable to buy the necessities of life. Maybe love does not exist in the home. Maybe the child feels that he is not wanted. All of these factors, and many others, contribute to the delinquency of our youth of today.

Therefore, one can conclude that "roots of delinquency" stem from the home, then the school, and into the communities of our great nations.

Mrs. Lou Breedlove - Mrs. Breedlove gave many interesting factors regarding delinquency and delinquents in the Houston area. She pointed out first, that the juvenile division is composed of fifty-five members, with many more in

PROGRAM REPORT FOR JUNE, JULY and AUGUST, 1962

1. Information-Education Mail Program

Our July Human Relations Bulletin, the first page being devoted to the progress of school desegregation in Charlotte, went to our entire mailing list of about two thousand.

No general mailings were made in June and August.

In August, however, two memos were sent to members of the Council in Charlotte urging them to write letters to the owners of Howard Johnson's Restaurants in or near Charlotte saying in their own words why they favored restaurants that were open to all members of the public. We believe that a good number of letters were written.

2. Raleigh Council

I met with several members of the Council in June. A delegation agreed to meet with the Mayor to suggest that he appoint a permanent community relations committee to work on racial problems. Other than this, no activity was planned for the summer.

3. Charlotte Council

The executive committee of the Charlotte Council had meetings in June and August. Committees are at work on plans for a fall program including public forums, merit employment, and the desegregation of hotels, restaurants and theaters.

The Council urged that letters be written and personal calls be made on managers of Howard Johnson's and other restaurants. One member reported her own and twenty-five letters of friends and church members.

A letter on Council stationery was sent to 27 of the leading downtown Charlotte restaurants offering our help on a planned program of desegregation. To date we have had responses from two owners who want to discuss the matter further.

My letter-to-the-editor pointing out that 28 states have laws against discrimination in places of public accommodation and quoting Justice Douglas of the U. S. Supreme Court was given a prominent place in both the Charlotte Observer and the Charlotte News. It was sent to other papers in the state but we do now know whether it was used.

4. Contacts with Governor Sanford

A delegation consisting of Mr. Ruark, Dr. Boulware, Dr. Duncan and Dr. Williams talked with Governor Sanford on July 5th. At that time the Governor stated that he had decided to assume the responsibility for calling a conference of business and government leaders to stimulate interest in equal opportunity in employment. He commented favorably on the outline for such a conference which we had prepared, and took under consideration some suggestions for participants in the conference, including Vice President Lyndon Johnson. He asked for any further suggestions we might have for the conference. Several members of the sub-committee have since written him letters containing suggestions. The conference is expected to be held in October.

5. Work in Monroe

Early in July I had a long talk with the Mayor and one of the city councilmen of Monroe and they expressed interest in an interracial community relations committee to try to deal constructively with racial problems in that city. Since then I have been interviewing potential members for such a committee and have almost completed a list of people to present to the Mayor.

I find a new attitude among white leaders in Monroe--a willingness to face the problem and to talk about necessary changes. Some outside groups, with ulterior motives, complicate the problem, but I believe there is a good chance of getting ahead of their groups by getting the City Council and the community leaders to agree to begin a program of desegregation in the city.

6. Institute at Fisk University

I attended the Institute of Race Relations at Fisk University in Nashville the week of July 2-7. Some of the topics for discussion were: The Southern Church and Race Relations, Housing Integration--Opportunities and Obstacles, Negro Employment 1962--Problems and Prospects, Analysis of the Sit-in Movement, Government Action on Equal Employment and Key Developments in the Legal Struggle for Equal Rights. The overall theme of the Institute was: Human Rights and the Public Interest.

This annual institute is very helpful in getting facts and information and in gaining perspective on work in race relations. I would like to urge now that members of our executive committee consider the possibility of attending this institute next year.

7. Membership and Finance

Through mail solicitations we have recruited twenty new members during the summer. Our paid membership now stands at 568.

I indicated in my last quarterly report that we would have sufficient funds to get through the summer without difficulty. We did--but with a balance of only $32.54 as of August 31st. A financial report is attached.

Some special fund-raising efforts will be necessary again this fall.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE STATE

On July 21 two Negroes, Rev. B. Elton Cox, state field secretary for the Congress on Racial Equality and Kelly Alexander, president, state conference of NAACP, approached the Howard Johnson Restaurant on Statesville Avenue in Charlotte, and were refused service. Thus began a series of efforts on the part of Negroes to enter highway restaurants in Charlotte, Statesville, Greensboro, Durham, Raleigh and perhaps other places.

Arrests for trespass were made in Charlotte, Statesville, Durham and Raleigh--more than 60 cases in all. Convictions resulted in 30 day sentences, suspended on payment of $25 fines. Many elected to serve the time. One young Negro in Raleigh staged a hunger strike for two weeks. Rallies in support of the demonstrations were held in Charlotte, Statesville, Durham and Raleigh.

One restaurant in Greensboro, the Hot Shoppe, agreed to desegregate. To date Howard Johnson restaurants have refused to change the policy. (Howard Johnson restaurants in Salisbury and Winston-Salem have been desegregated for some time.)

Governor Sanford announced on August 23 that he would name a committee that would attempt to work out the problem.

Token desegregation continued in the larger communities in North Carolina with the opening of schools. A few more Negro students were assigned to predominantly white schools, but tokenism remains the policy, with a few exceptions.

Geographical assignments to one school in Charlotte resulted in the assignment of 371 Negro and 61 white children. Last year it was a "white" school with 150 white and 15 Negro children. This year it is a "Negro" school with an all-Negro faculty. Of the 61 white children assigned, only 10 remain to date.

In another area in Charlotte, some 40 Negro children were given a choice of attending a "white" school, near by, or a "Negro" school farther away. Some 28 chose the "white" school.

Durham is supposed to have changed from a dual assignment system to one assignment map for all elementary school children in the city, but I do not know the result in assignments as yet.

At least three communities will have token integration for the first time this fall. In Salisbury, three Negro students have been assigned to "white" schools; four in Fayetteville and seven (Indians) in Lumberton.

Petitions for transfer of Negro children were turned down in Wilmington and Shelby. The latter case will be appealed.

A Negro principal and seven teachers in Charlotte who attended an integration workshop in New York City this summer, have stated that they will ask the school board to place both white and Negro teachers in selected schools.

A "white" city swimming pool and the "Negro" pool in Raleigh were both closed on August 7 after four Negro students managed to enter the "white" pool. The vote of the City Council was 5-2, one white councilman voting with John Winters, the Negro councilman.

Firestone Textiles of Gastonia has announced plans to put qualified Negroes on the production line. The company has signed a "Plan for Progress" with the Federal government.

Several white doctors in Charlotte, led by Dr. Raymond Wheeler, protested the expenditure of $1.1 million in an expansion and renovation program for Good Samaritan Hospital. They contended that $800,000 in bonds, voted a year ago, were for the purpose of renovating Good Samaritan for use only until the city (Memorial) hospital could take the Negro patient load. Beds are now available at Memorial. However, the City Council approved the $1.1 million expenditure which includes a new building in addition to renovation.

Later, as a result of a letter sent to them by Dr. R. A. Hawkins, U. S. Public Health officials came to Charlotte to investigate charges of discrimination in violation of agreements made when the Hospital Authority received Hill-Burton funds. The report of these officials has not yet been made public.

Respectfully submitted,

Dear Mr. Lee:

President Boyd, Vice President Carper and I have discussed the proposal to establish a pilot project for the purpose of familiarizing responsible persons and groups with the developing move to provide equal job opportunities for all races.

It is our belief that such a project as you have outlined to us would be very beneficial to all segments of our Virginia society; therefore, we would be willing to commend the use of such a service to our affiliates for educational purposes.

A RESOLUTION—No. 62-SR28-27

(Adopted May 28, 1962)

Concerning the employment and promotion of persons in the City's service and amendment of rules of the Personnel Board in relation thereto.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF RICHMOND:

That the Council hereby declares it to be a policy of the City of Richmond that applicants for employment by the City should be employed, and employees of the City should be promoted, solely on the basis of merit and fitness for the particular position for which they are employed.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF RICHMOND:

That the Council favors the adoption of a rule by the Personnel Board to the effect that the employment of applicants for positions in the City's service and the promotion of employees shall not be refused solely on the basis of race, creed, color or arbitrary maximum age limits. That the City Manager is hereby directed to cause to be submitted to the Personnel Board for adoption in form of a rule the foregoing provisions of this resolution.

It is the further opinion of the Council that the Personnel Board should adopt the rule as submitted.

Prince Edward School Decision Held 'Appalling'

By Allan Jones

The board of directors of the Virginia Council on Human Relations expressed regret yesterday at the refusal of the Prince Edward county board of supervisors to reopen schools next year.

The board asked "appropriate officials" of the state and county "to reconsider the action" taken by the supervisors "and to take the initiative to reopen public schools in Prince Edward county and to cooperate in good faith with any court order to that effect."

The request was included in a resolution adopted late Friday and made public yesterday. The 65-member board said, "We trust this unfortunate situation will not long persist."

The directors said the supervisors' decision is "appalling to large numbers of concerned Virginians who want to see compliance with the constitutional provisions of the Commonwealth, with public educaiton offered every child of every county within our state."

The council, a bi-racial organization, seeks to foster and maintain active communication between responsible leaders of the races to the end that mutual trust and fair play will be more widely established and extended.

In a related development, the Virginia Teachers Association (VTA) said yesterday it will sponsor a crash remedial program again this summer for the Negro children of Prince Edward county.

The program was organized last year to help the youngsters in such basic skills as reading, writing and arithmetic. The Negroes of Prince Edward have had no formal education since public schools were closed in 1959

The board of supervisors elected at a meeting Friday not to provide public school funds for the fourth consecutive year.

Public Hearing

The business session followed a one-hour public hearing in the circut court room at the county courthouse.

Whites and Negroes sat together on one side of the courtroom. Both opponents and proponents of reopening the schools resisted the pleading of Board Chairman W. W. Vaughan to express their opinions on the proposed county budget for the year beginning July 1.

The board and the audience faced each other, and they sat and stared at one another for three and four minutes after each speaker finished what he had to say. Finally, someone else would get up to discuss the school issue.

Southern Regional Council for the Period Ending Sept. 30, 1962

PDV
Return to MM

The Executive Director of the Florida Council on Human Relations having left during the month of June, the Council was without a Director until July 28th, when the Executive Committee, meeting in Daytona Beach, appointed Dr. Ralph Mason Dreger of Jacksonville as Acting Director until such time as a new Executive Director can be employed. The recommendation of Mr. Paul Rilling, SRC Field Representative, that the Florida Council seek to have at least three thousand dollars in the bank before considering inviting a new Director was deemed wise. Dr. Dreger served, and continues to serve, without salary, with the hope that sufficient funds may be accumulated to meet the suggested goal.

It was agreed at the July 28th meeting that Dr. H. Franklin Williams would examine materials held by the Florida Council in Miami and forward the most urgent ones to Jacksonville for use by the interim Director. After approximately a month of waiting, a box of cards with what seemed to be a not entirely up-to-date membership arrived. Because no financial records or other necessary data were included with the card file, the Acting Director made a trip to Miami where at the instigation of Dr. Williams the Reverend Edward Graham had gathered most of the earthly belongings of the Council in one place. These were sifted by the Acting Director and his wife, the most pertinent and useful data and equipment being transported to Jacksonville. The remainder of the materials are located at the Mt. Zion Baptist Church in Miami.

The financial records for 1961 and the first half of 1962 are still missing. Thus far the Acting Director has not been able to obtain possession of these records. The Reverend William Williams, former Director, replied to an inquiry that these books must be with Miss Ginn, as did the auditor who audited the 1961 and 1962 six-months' books. A letter from Mr. Williams and from the Acting Director has not produced any response. Telephone operators cannot locate Miss Ginn. A registered letter is going out at this time to Miss Ginn, for although the situation was frustrating before it is impossible now. The Director of Internal Revenue has sent warning that the Form 990 which should have been filed in the spring has not been received. Without the records the form cannot be filled out. There are no doubt entirely reasonable explanations for the extreme difficulty the Acting Director has had in endeavoring to track down the financial records. To say the least, however, the situation has been frustrating.

There has been no attempt to promote a program in the state. Efforts have been devoted to bringing the membership and mailing lists up to date and in keeping contact with local Councils by correspondence. An appeal for funds to support the Florida Council, in accord with a directive of the Executive Committe, brought response from four local Councils. It is not certain that the Florida Council has the latest lists of local Council officers, for most of the personal letters to local Council Presidents or Chairmen have brought no reply.

All the news of human relations activities with which the Acting Director is acquainted is contained in the Newsletter appended to this report, with the exception of the activities of the Northeast Florida Council on Human Relations of which the Acting Director happens to be Chairman this year. Mr. Jack Minnis of the SRC Voter Education Project addressed the local Council on the background of race relations in Mississippi as a guide to understanding the University of Mississippi difficulties. A so-called Continuing Committe about which the former Director must have informed SRC endeavored to carry out several forms of preparation for school desegregation. In conjunction with one or two members of the clergy representing the Ministerial Alliance, this Continuing Committee seemed to dissipate its efforts, and apparently itself, for it finally came down to one member who was trying to amass materials by himself. At this point the Unitarian pastor, the Reverend Charles McGehee, was approached by the one member to see if there were not someone who could assume leadership in undertaking the task of getting a handbook prepared for discussion leaders. This pastor, a member of the local Council Board of Directors, in consultation with the Acting Director's wife, brought the matter before the Board of Directors which took the project under its wing, assigning it to the Community Relations Committee. This Committee has carried out the task with considerable despatch. Its work has continued into the fourth quarter, and will bear fruit in the coming beginning of desegregation.

A financial report will be forthcoming just as soon as possible.

Respectfully submitted

QUARTERLY REPORT

JUNE 1962 - AUGUST 1962

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

June 1962 - August 1962

Staff Enlargement

Freddie Williams, president-elect of the Morris College Student Body and of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations for 1962-63, was added to the staff for a summer project from June through September 15. The project was financed by a special gift of $100 from a SRC discretionary fund allotted through Paul Rilling, by the $300 additional SRC matching grant, and by a small balance in the Swartzhaupt grant made to SCCHR in 1960.

Gil Rowland, formerly with the Greenville News, began work with SCCHR on July first under a two-year grant from the Field Foundation.

Summer Training and Conferences

SCCHR sent six persons to the second week of the Fisk Race Relations Institute: the two new staff members, Mrs. T. J. Ledeen, program director employed part-time, (approximately 1/3rd time this quarter), the executive director, and two volunteer workers, one the program chairman for the Sumter Council on Human Relations and the other the chairman of the SCCHR Economics and Employment Committee.

Two staff members attended a five-day workshop on inter-group relations at Blue Ridge, N.C.

The program director was an instructor at the annual conference of the A.M.E.Z. Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, which was held at Clinton Junior College, Rock Hill, S.C. from July 7 - 13.

Plans are under way for the participation of two staff members in the second annual Presbyterian (US) Christian Action Conference at Montreat, N.C. over the Labor Day weekend.

Committee Meetings and Projected Program

Only three meetings of SCCHR program committees were scheduled during the summer, as follows:

The Education Committee projected plans to work in the following areas during the coming year: 1) the S.C. program on technical education, 2) the adult education programs conducted by the S.C. State Department of Education and by S.C.L.C. through its citizenship education program, respectively, 3) strengthening of school attendance and lessening of school drop-outs, and 4) preparation for school desegregation.

The plans of the Committee on the Church and Human Relations are summarized in an attached statement. Additional plans have been made in cooperation with Dr. John H. Marion to hold a conference of S.C. Churchmen to focus on the role of the church in preparation for desegregation in S.C.

The Citizenship Committee responded to a request from a representative of a Negro non-partisan political organization that SCCHR distribute information concerning the number of appointments the Governor of S.C. makes to each of the important state boards and commissions. A copy of the communication which was sent out jointly by three members of the staff to approximately 200 Negro leaders is attached.

The annual program workshop has been scheduled for September 29. This year the SCCHR board of directors and SCCHR members interested primarily in program will be invited to meet jointly. Dr. Leslie Dunbar has been asked to make the background speech.

Summer Project

Members of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations have indicated interest in establishing a more effective working relationship with community adult leaders and in making worthwhile contributions toward solving community problems. Higher educational institutions in S.C. focus primarily upon the academic, and graduates of the Negro private colleges are approximately 80% education majors.

The SCCHR executive director supervised the program of field work, interviews, study of resource use and community organization made by the student interne employed on the summer project. Personal interviews were held with key persons in most of the state governmental agencies and some of the voluntary agencies. Materials were gathered and evaluated for use in the colleges and in the SCSCHR during 1962-63.

All of the communities in which there are Negro colleges and some in which there are "white" colleges only were visited, college presidents and/or faculty members, students and community leaders were interviewed and often community meetings were attended in Columbia, Orangeburg, Denmark, Rock Hill, Sumter, Camden and Hartsville. Rapport and public relations were strengthened, and increased involvement in planning was realized.

Assistance was given Negro leaders in Florence in improving the coordination of Negro organizations and leaders through the recently formed Florence Committee on Negro Affairs. A contribution was made specifically in bridging the gap between Negro professional leadership and grass-roots organizations. Assistance was given to strengthening youth organizations in both Florence and Darlington. An intensive study of the total Florence community was made in cooperation with the FCNA and with the assistance of youth groups. Definite, though limited results have been achieved through confrontations of city officials and various municipal boards on specific issues. Guidance and assistance in using community resources will continue throughout the coming year.

The executive director accompanied the student interns on field trips to the following communities: Bishopville, Hartsville, Darlington, Florence, Mullins and Dillon. A primary interest is to discover ways to assist local leadership in the small towns. An effort was made to relate SCCHR members from small towns in the Florence trade area to the strengthened community organization represented by the FCNA. Time was too limited to permit the amount of promotion needed. However, persons from Mullins did attend a meeting of the FCNA at which the SCCHR chairman of the Economics and Employment committee discussed the relationship between membership in credit unions and economic independence.

The program director of SCCHR assisted in firming up plans for a meeting of the SCCHR steering committee to be held in September and in outlining program plans for the coming school year.

A comprehensive narrative report accompanied by numerous exhibits has been filed by Mr. Williams. He will make a brief oral report at the SCCHR meeting scheduled for September 29.

Project for Developing the "White Potential"

The first two months of the project have been used primarily in orientation to the state, its problems, its resources and its people, especially to white persons in wide and representative relationships.

The Field Foundation has summarized the project for its fourth coming annual report, as follows:

"The Council points out that there is a lot of untapped support for democratic progress in South Carolina's white population. In the current increasingly favorable climate for interracial progress, resources and allies may well be found in groups that as yet have remained inactive and inarticulate. The Council, as one part of its 'all-out effort to develop and strengthen the constructive forces in South Carolina' will seek support from such groups as federal and state employees, labor unions, social workers, educators, communications personnel, young business and industrial leaders, veterans organizations, and women's and youth groups."

The project director has travelled widely, collected pertinent data, held numerous interviews, attended significant meetings, made a few informal talks, assisted the Greenville Council on Human Relations and SCCHR, assembled and processed for distribution important information. Field trips have been made to Clemson, Seneca, Anderson, Greenwood, Newberry, Columbia, Orangeburg, Denmark, Walterboro, Beaufort, St. Helena Island, Charleston, Hartsville, Florence, Sumter, Kershaw, Spartanburg and Greenville. Meaningful contacts have been made in each of these places. Trips were made jointly to Florence, Orangeburg and Newberry with the SCCHR executive director.

Mr. Rowland reports that "Among the fairly consistent threads in the interviews (held by him) were indications that:

"1. Conservatives have nearly all the spokesmen, and those who welcome social change have almost none.

"2. Liberal people don't know each other in many instances.

"3. Liberal people feel very much alone and are in need of encouragement.

"4. Liberal people are poorly informed on social matters, largely because South Carolina newspapers minimize news of positive social change.

"5. Attitudes on social problems are improving in South Carolina, with fewer people threatening 'to close our schools' to avoid integration, for example."

The preparation and subsequent presentations of a talk built around South Carolina's needs and prospects for progress by the project director have proved valuable. He is also beginning to prepare a more comprehensive written report on the state's problems and potentials.

Experience so far has made Mr. Rowland increasingly aware of such needs as the following:

1. To improve techniques of interviewing.

2. To cultivate and, if possible, to involve persons higher up on the influence ladder.

3. To assemble, process and distribute more background information.

4. Tostep-up efforts at leadership recruitment and training at local levels— (the interest and concern of people to do something constructive can be organized and promoted if sufficient help can be made available, he believes.)

Two additional observations by Mr. Rowland have been recorded: 1) Fields of opportunities for Negroes are widening, but 2) Negroes need to increase their own efforts to use, make and seek enlarged opportunities, especially in the training and employment fields.

Membership and Finance Efforts

Growth, slow but sure, has resulted from the continuous efforts at increasing membership and raising funds which has taken place this quarter. A careful analysis of the 1962 membership will be made at the end of the last quarter.

The quarterly finance report is attached and will indicate that SCCHR has earned the SRC matching grant for 1962.

Dear Friend:

VIEWS OF CANDIDATES FOR GOVERNOR

Interest is being expressed in questioning candidates for Governor concerning their willingness to appoint qualified Negroes on Boards and Commissions, whose members are appointed by the Governor of South Carolina. Believing that you are committed to this type of democratic advance, we are adding for your possible use a list of several such Board and Commissions and the number of persons appointed to them by the Governor.

Please report fully to us any constructive use you may find it possible to make of this information.

GET-OUT-THE-VOTE

The number of persons who voted in the 1960 General Election was considerably less than the number who were registered. This suggests the need of an effective Get-Out-the-Vote effort. The following ideas for such an effort are offered:

1. Get as many ministers as will to designate June 10 as GET-OUT-THE-VOTE Sunday and observe the day by

   (1) Delivering a sermon on Christian Citizenship with specific recommendations on getting out the vote.
   (2) Making announcements in church bulletins and from the pulpit, urging participation in the June 12 PRIMARY election.
   (3) Stimulating officers of every adult organization in the church to assume responsibility for getting every member to vote on June 12

2. Establish a community organization committee, the function of which would be:

   (1) Setting up effective telephone committees to urge every registered adult to vote
   (2) Planning car pools to make transportation available to every one needing same to get to the polls
   (3) Contacting officers of every responsible adult organization in the community and asking them to assume responsibility for getting each of their members to vote on June 12.

Election returns will bear testimony to the effectiveness of your efforts!

Yours for a voting citizenry on June 12,

SUMMARY OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE CHURCH AND HUMAN RELATIONS DISCUSSIONS

South Carolina Council on Human Relations

The newly organized Committee on the Church and Human Relations of the SCCHR held two meetings during the spring, on April 4 and May 30, 1962. These sessions were attended by 17 church leaders and were in the nature of exploratory conversations concerning the role of the Church in Human Relations. This committee, based in Columbia, is in reality a state-wide committee, which eventually will add members to itself throughout the state. In the beginning some of the suggested projects will be carried out in Columbia, using this community as a pilot area.

In these discussion Christian concerns were voiced and the present situation in S. C. appraised. It was recognized that in South Carolina Ecumenical Church structure has not been developed which is inclusive of churchmen on a broad scale. It was agreed that the Church does have a great moral responsibility at the present time to use its influence to affect changes which will bring greater equality and acceptance of persons as persons, not primarily as members of a racial group. It was also agreed that the churches have too frequently been hesitant and timid in the face of the present demands and the leading of God's Spirit. There were members of the Committee who felt that individuals must work constantly, but quietly, in the area of race relations; there were others who felt that the Church should be active, in the forefront of the present struggle.

As we confronted our present situation, it was felt that there were several areas of work which this committee should undertake.

1. Discovering the "already concerned" and providing a channel for communication and work on common problems in a given community. It was suggested that there are many concerned Christians, especially in white churches in the state, who are frustrated and isolated because they feel that the church has abrogated its role at this crucial time. Such people do not know how to work--even in quiet ways--because of the opposition of much of the church to any basic changes in the present status quo. Names of such individuals may be secured from denominational leaders and from church committees on Christian social concerns or action. These should be contacted personally or through correspondence. Wide distribution of materials is highly desirable. The compilation of such a list has been begun.

2. Study Groups. It was noted that most of the major denominations share a common mission study emphasis during any given year. It was, therefore, proposed that a study group for women of the churches be set up in the fall for study and worship together. In conjunction with this discussion it was pointed out that there are now no channels whereby women of the churches may come together in Columbia. United Church Women in the city is not integrated in any phase of its program. A sub-committee of church women has been brought together and has set up a plan for beginning the study program. (Report from this committee on page 2.)

3. Meetings for Churchmen. Again it was noted that there are few opportunities for churchmen from all churches to come together in any interdenominational or ecumenical encounter. The desirability of sponsoring something in the nature of "Convocations for Churchmen" was discussed. It was hoped that outstanding leaders who annually are brought to Columbia by colleges and churches may be available to address such meetings.

4. Laymens and youth groups in Human Relations. At present the membership of this committee is composed largely of ministers and church women. The need to discover and bring together concerned laymen is urgent. As a beginning, it was suggested that each minister on this committee invite one to three laymen to serve as members of the committee.

The possible development of Youth Fellowships for older young people and High School groups was noted as one possible area of work for our committee. (The college work of the Council is now in its second year of a very active program.)

5. Preparation for Desegregation. The urgency of immediate preparation for school desegregation was stressed at our last meeting with the suggestion that thorough study of plans which have been used effectively in other communities be undertaken. What can the church do to bring about a climate of acceptance for orderly change.

REPORT FROM WOMEN'S COMMITTEE ON INTERDENOMINATIONAL STUDY GROUP

A committee of eight church women met on May 25 to plan for an Ecumenical Study Group. After full discussion of various possible plans, the following decisions were made:

1. A Study Group be started with an enrollment of 20-25 women, to begin on Friday, September 28,1962, at 10 a.m. The meeting place for the first session is to be the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA. (Date was later changed to October 5 because of conflict.)
2. The book selected for study was "The Nature and Mission of the Church" by Donald G. Miller. The Bible Study or Devotional at the beginning of the study session is to relate to the material to be studied at that particular time.
3. Frequency of meeting and number of sessions will be determined by the group itself.
4. Each member accepted the responsibility of inviting three to four women who would be interested in being a part of this inclusive type of study group.

First White Parent Blasts Prince Edward Policy

First White Parent Blasts Prince Edward Policy

By JOHN A. HAMILTON

Associate Editor, The News

FARMVILLE—"They barred my kids from school!"

With these words a fighting-mad career soldier opened fire on Prince Edward County's school policy this week and became the first white parent to defy community leaders in a prolonged integration dispute that stretches back across a decade of privation, tension and smouldering bitterness.

The soldier is Specialist-6 K. H. Latham, a big, burly man who speaks quickly, bluntly from beneath a thick mustache. For 20 years Latham has owned 35 acres and a four-room house tucked deep in this rural county's scrub pine. He is a 15-year veteran in the Army's Corps of Engineers, a roads and airfields specialist who has been gassed twice in the line of duty while working in laboratories. He is now stationed in Washington at Fort McNair and every weekend comes home to Prince Edward, to Doris, his reddish-blonde wife, to his four children.

They are Mary Alta, a winsome nine-year-old whose flaxen hair drops to her waist, Kenneth Jr., a husky eight-year-old who is the image of his dad, William a seven-year-old who has his mother's reddish hair, and Johnny, who is a tow-headed, friendly, apple-cheeked four.

THIS FAMILY and an undisclosed number of other white families now face the loss of educational opportunities in this historic southside Virginia county where, almost a century ago, General Lee fought the bloody Battle of Sayler's Creek, saw his troops cut to shreds, and stumbled on 14 more miles to Appomattox and surrender.

One of the original defendants in the suit which produced the 1954 Supreme Court desegregation decree, Prince Edward in 1959 became the only county in the nation to implement "massive resistance" and abandon all public schools. Since then, Negroes have been without formal educational opportunities and whites have attended a substitute, makeshift system of private classes, faithfully following leaders who repeatedly promised continued schooling for them all.

This year that promise proved hollow oak; it crashed suddenly.

After depriving Negroes for three years, county leaders this year shut out the poorer whites who were unable to meet last year's steep tuition charges. The children of farmers, of pulp mill hands, of factory workers and store clerks, as well as the children of enlisted man Latham, have been barred from the private school classes which began on September 4.

FROM THE START, county leaders have boastfully considered themselves "defenders of State sovereignty" and announced "unalterable opposition to an unconstitutional Supreme Court decree." And community opinion was such that only a few Negroes openly criticized this stand and only a college professor or two objected for the white side. No white parent directly involved dared challenge the leaders.

Then Latham exploded.

What does he think of the school policy?

"It is strictly secessionist."

What about the leaders?

"They are like horses with blinders. They see in only one direction. They have a narrow view. They must be made to realize that slave days are out of date."

As Latham spoke, he leaned against a rusting metal pole supporting his porch. He looked out over the fields of dancing goldenrod and fields of shocked corn, now dried and withered into brown wrapping paper crispness, and in the distance were clumps of black gum with leaves beginning to show some red and sycamores, some yellow and at his feet he pointed proudly to his driveway topped with sandstone that he had dug from his own quarry.

His children skipped around an old tin washtub loaded with brand-new, yellow, fuzz-ball chicks. In the cramped living room his wife ironed a khaki uniform that he would wear on the bus back to Richmond where he would get off and hitchhike the rest of the way into Washington and Fort McNair to resume his part in the defense of his country and its ideals.

BUT TODAY he stood in Prince Edward County and he spilled out his financial problems.

A flood of enthusiastic donations from all over the South had launched the private school for whites and buoyed it the first year; it had charged tuition the second year, but the charge had been met by public-backed grants; in the third year, which was last year, payment of these grants from tax funds was enjoined by court order and for the first time the full financial burden of a private school education bore down on the white parents. Tuition was fixed at $265 for high school, $240 for grammar school.

Latham's charge came to $720, which represents two months' pay. Most of the parents could not meet their full bills and donations were solicited for a scholarship fund. Latham was awarded a "scholarship" of $480 and told to pay $240.

"I couldn't pay this," he explained and ticked off a list of pressing bills, a mortgage on his place, a left-over $600 bill for aluminum siding to bolster paper-thin walls, a note on his car, a personal note, a $100 charge to fix a balky water pump. (He still has an outhouse toilet and an unpainted tin roof that curls up at one end like a dead beech leaf.)

LATHAM'S WIFE, Doris, related her part of the story. She called the private school offices when registration started.

"They told me not to come to registration until we paid our bill," she remembers. "I told them we couldn't pay. They told me they would arrange a note to the bank. I about blew up! As if we didn't have enough bills! I got mad and hung up."

She called back, as the opening of school approached. But again officials refused to register her children. For two weeks they were barred from school. Then Latham himself stormed into the offices of the local, semi-weekly newspaper which has fiercely advocated "massive resistance." He demanded an interview, saying that as a career soldier with service in French Morocco, Germany, Newfoundland and Greenland, he wanted to tell the people of the county what he thought of the school policy. He was denied an interview and the newspaper has never printed his story, but the next day, after he signed a lenient note to the school foundation not due until next July, his children were admitted to classes.

They go now. But Latham worries. He wonders how long they will be permitted to stay in school with new tuition charges about to be imposed for the current year. And he carries a burning anger.

"I think they're denying my children part of the Constitution." he complains. "I want free public schools for all. I want my children to get an education."

HE EMPHASIZED this, explaining that 37 years ago he was born in Charlottesville, in the shadow of Mr. Jefferson's University, that he had been an honor student, that he had liked school, that he had always wanted to attend college, but that before he finished the ninth grade, he had to quit and begin working for a living. In the Army he has taken an Engineer Orientation Extension Course and has completed 277 hours of a 308-hour block.

"I know the value of an education," he repeats. "I want my kids to have one. You need an education more than ever today."

His wife, Doris, nods agreement. She never completed the seventh grade and now gets up at 4:30 every morning to dress and feed the youngsters and drive them the mile or more down the rutted, red clay road to the paved highway where they catch a school bus "shortly after six;" then she swings by and picks up a Negro neighbor to stay with the four-year-old while she works as a hand-stitcher in the local shoe factory to help pay the bills.

"I want to retire here," Latham says. "I'd get $145 a month retirement pay at my present rank, $175 if I make another stripe. You can live cheap here."

But even at the risk of alienating county leaders and offending his white neighbors, Latham now wants to press his attack.

"The sooner this school thing is cleared up the better. We need more education for everybody. It cuts crime, it makes a community prosper. An educated citizen is a self-reliant citizen."

So far, Latham remains the only white parent to challenge the county's school policy. And he does so publicly for the first time in this interview. He hopes other whites will rally to his colors, but whether they do or not, the soldier intends to stick to his guns.

"I've had enemies before," he says.

'Oneness of Purpose'

As youngsters across the country began another school year—

● The U. S. Office of Education predicted a record enrollment of 51.3 million students in school.

● Testimony by Vice Admiral Rickover before the House Committee on Appropriations was released; he urged a greater emphasis on education.

● President Kennedy launched a fervent Labor Day appeal directly to American youth: "To you, the young people who have not completed your education...go back to your school desks...Go back and become prepared, so when your time comes to enter the labor force, you will be a more valuable asset to our nation."

● And private school officials in Prince Edward County grimly mailed out a stack of form letters to parents who had failed to meet last year's tuition charges; unless these charges were met, the letters warned, children would be barred from classes.

With the abandonment of all public schools in 1959, there came educational deprivation for Prince Edward's Negro children. But supporters of the substitute private school effort for white children insisted that no white child would similarly suffer. An early pamphlet soliciting outside donations asserted:

"Admission to the schools was not based on any contributions by the parents or guardians and a contribution was not required as a condition for the registration of any child in its private schools."

On the contrary, from the start, those behind the private schools emphasized that their purpose was to offer educational opportunities to every white child on a voluntary, segregated basis. Prince Edward County's "Story," a partisan history, began with this paragraph:

"The story of Prince Edward County, Virginia, is essentially the story of a determined, united people and their arduous but devoted labors to preserve, by every legal and honorable means, a cherished institution, the education of their children."

Even when these "united people" split over the issue of selling the closed public school buildings, a majority of the school board resigning rather than submit to pressures for such a sale, the goal of education for all white children remained. At this time E. Louis Dahl, treasurer of the private school foundation, could write a letter to the Richmond News Leader saying:

"May peace, tranquility, and oneness of purpose return to our midst! That oneness of purpose being to provide the very best education possible for all the children of our county who may be permitted the freedom of accepting such an education in racially-separate classrooms."

But what is the situation today?

If there is still a "oneness of purpose," it has changed from what was proclaimed in the heady, earlier days of the private school effort. Today the purpose is not to provide all children a racially-separate education. It is to provide a racially-separate education only for the white children and only for those white children whose parents can meet whatever tuition charges the private school executive board may set for them. Whether all parents will be able to meet these charges for last year remains uncertain.

On August 23, school officials said that only "a small handful—perhaps a dozen children" might not be readmitted. On September 2, the Richmond Times-Dispatch reported tha "parents crowded into" school offices to make their payments. On September 4, when classes opened for the new term, officials announced that no one was turned away because payments were still being checked, but that if records showed some parents still had not paid, their children would be expelled and told to "bring the payments before they come back."

Perhaps this is an idle threat. Perhaps additional scholarship funds can be found to supplement what derelict parents are able to pay. Last year more than half the families were on some form of charity grant; 376 families were able to meet the full tuition charges, but 371 were on "partial scholarships" and 32 were on "full scholarships," making a total of 403 families receiving some amount of charity.

We cannot gauge the sincerity of the threat. We do not know about the possibilities for still additional scholarship aid. But what is clear is that private school officials have had to resort to drastic tactics to get parents to meet tuition charges which must represent a considerable financial burden for them. And these same charges—or larger ones—will be imposed for the current school year.

So we come back to the contrast with which we began this little piece. As national statistics reveal ever swelling school enrollments, Prince Edward County continues to deny its Negro children any formal educational opportunities and now threatens to curtail opportunities which have been available to all white children; as Admiral Rickover urges greater educational efforts, Prince Edward private school officials consider limiting theirs; as President Kennedy appeals to all youngsters to return to school, these officials threaten to expel the children of some poorer white parents.

We wonder whether all residents of Prince Edward County share this new "oneness of purpose."

Will Prince Edward County Let All White Children Remain in School?

White children enter the new $400,000 Prince Edward Academy. This year they were threatened with expulsion if their parents did not meet past tuition charges.

Dear Mr. Lee:

President Boyd, Vice President Carper and I have discussed the proposal to establish a pilot project for the purpose of familiarizing responsible persons and groups with the developing move to provide equal job opportunities for all races.

It is our belief that such a project as you have outlined to us would be very beneficial to all segments of our Virginia society; therefore, we would be willing to commend the use of such a service to our affiliates for educational purposes.

Yours sincerely,

THE VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

114 B BROAD - GRACE ARCADE RICHMOND 19, VIRGINIA Phone MI. 9-0872

Heslip Lee, Executive Director

A council that seeks — through fact-finding, discussion and action — to attain equal opportunity for all people in Virginia.

Quarterly Report for July, August, September 1962

Duplicate copies:
To: Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Office:

A part-time additional office secretary has been employed, namely; Mrs. Sarah Miller, formerly secretary to Paul Rilling of SRC.

We are still looking for a full-time Associate Director. As of now, we have an application from Mr. Rev. Bobby Robinson. Rev. Robinson was formerly Director of Richmond's Urban League for two years, and is at present obtaining a Master's Degree in Social Work at Richmond Professional Institute. He would not be able to work full-time until June 10, 1963, however, he can work part-time until that date. It is the feeling of the Board of Directors that due to Summer slumps, it would be September 1963, before Rev. Robinson could assume such a role as to be effective. Therefore, we are still trying to locate or obtain someone who could begin work by January 1, 1963.

We have outgrown our office space, and expect to rent a large room adjacant to our present offices by January 1, 1963. This additional space is greatly needed, but our rent would increase from $65 to $100 per month. However, this would give us twice the room we now have and it is felt that this is a move we must make.

We have purchased two new office desks (auction sale for $50 each), and have also purchased a new Royfax - 100, Photocopier machine. We have now paid off a three-year lease on a Royal Typewriter (Electric) and made a one year note with the same Company (Royal McBee Corporation) for the Photocopier.

Negotiations:

During the past quarter several conferences were held between council members and other parties for the purpose of working out knotty problems within Virginia. A report on such meetings as fourteen persons from Prince Edward County, Federal persons and State leaders was given under a separate report earlier. However, this was a vital and successful beginning of a rapport between white persons within Prince Edward and influencial figures of this State and Nation. Other meetings were arranged with Neighborhood Theatres, Inc. and C. & P. Telephone Company with good results. Follow-up communication by letters and telephone have kept alive the points made by council representitives and we feel confident that VCHR has obtained some stature in this field of negotiations.

OFFICERS Dr. Thomas H. Henderson, President Dr. Frank Daniel, 1st Vice-President Mrs. George A. Eddy, 2nd Vice-President Dr. Harry Roberts, Secretary Dr. J. Rupert Picott, Treasurer

Local councils have carried on negotiations within their communities in Blacksburg, Charlottesville, Peninsula and Northern Virginia with good results.

New Councils:

A new council was organized in Danville, Virginia with Dr. Robert McCan as its president. This council attempted to reach the power structure immediately and ran head-on into a barrage of opposition which has all but crippled the local group. The local Newspaper and Radio led the fight against such an organization as the local council. At present the local group are evaluating their role in Danville and plan to operate regardless.

Councils revived:

Norfolk: At long last, Norfolk is on the move. A three dollar a plate dinner at the Golden Triangle Hotel in September saw some 125 persons present. David H. Scull was the speaker. Officers were elected and new memberships ran high. Reverend Daniel Bowers, former Executive Director of VCHR, was elected president, and Dan is on the ball. We expect this council to make strides this year.

Bluefield: Due to the leadership given this council by the Minister of the Methodist Church, the Bishop moved the Minister to Charleston, West Virginia. The local council took a nose-dive. I was able to schedule some Television programs during September and carry on a live conversation by T.V. and telephone with the community, and I feel, without a doubt, that this was a most useful technique. This council has a new president, Mr. William Sanders. He is a lawyer, and brings to four the number of lawyers now serving as local council presidents for this year. Things are moving again in Bluefield.

Peninsula: This co-operating group advised of its intent to ask for affiliation with VCHR last week. I have accepted an engagement to speak and lead this group to affiliate on October 18.

Charlottesville Junior Council: Due to graduation of its officers, this group had to get going again from scratch. I have visited with the group and elections were held and attendance good, so this group is strong enough to function for this school year.

Operation Extension:

Dr. Aubrey N. Brown is Chairman of this project to organize a local council in every community within Virginia. Several local councils have adopted as a project for this year the establishing of a new local council within their geographic area. Good prospects which are already in the making are: Hopewell, Powahtan, Lawrenceville, Culpeper and Leesburg. Also feelers have been placed in Radford, Pulaski County, Tazewell, Staunton and Martinsville. Dr. Brown is commited to the philosophy of VCHR, and it is my belief that Operation Extension will definitely pay dividends in 1963. Members of the VCHR Board of Directors have accepted the challenge to be contact persons for the initial meetings in these new areas, and local councils are responding to the challenge of making this a part of their 1963 goals and projects.

Council Activities:

Richmond-Petersburg Area Council continues to lead in programming. We wish to express appreciation for the help toward Dr. Ralph Bunche's Address, scheduled for the Mosque in Richmond, February 23, 1963. All local councils will bring bus loads and we expect this meeting to be the largest integrated gathering ever held in the Old Dominion. Berl Bernhard has been added to the program for December 7 of the Richmond-Petersburg speakers.

Fredericksburg has adopted a twelve-months program which covers most of the subjects in Human Relations. Speakers will include Dean Gordon Moss of Farmville, John Feild of Washington and Ambassador Oumar Sow of Mali, Africa. One of the most dynamic leaders in Fredericksburg is Dr. Alan Pierce, Professor at Mary Washington College and also recently elected by a write-in vote to the City Council.

Charlottesville, Blacksburg, Fairfax County and Alexandria have all worked out a yearly schedule of fine programs, and Arlington has a new president in Mr. Stuart Broad, a lawyer of Catholic Church relations, and all kinds of special committees have been appointed to bring Arlington into the camp with Alexandria and Fairfax County in our State work.

Financing:

We have had the best year financially in the history of VCHR.

An appeal has been made to both the Old Dominion Foundation and the Field Foundation for financial support of a new project entitled "The Virginia Equal Job Opportunity Consulting Project". (Copies of this project are self-explanatory and are attached). (Also attached are copies of letters from the A.F.L.- C.I.O. regarding this project). We are greatly encouraged by the ramifications and far-reaching possibilities of this project. We also appreciate the cooperation which Southern Regional Council has rendered, and continues to give, concerning this project.

Auditing of books:

We have just had our financial records audited for the year 1961. Copies of this audit will be sent SRC as soon as these are received from the auditor. Since our fiscal year is now the calendar year, we felt that we would have the audit cover 1961, with another audit to be made following December 31, 1962.

Annual Meeting:

Our 1962 Annual Meeting will be held on November 23, 24, 1962 in the Hotel Roanoke in Roanoke, Virginia. The Roanoke, Lynchburg and Blacksburg local councils will serve as tri-hosts to this meeting. Girls from our co-operating group on Hollins College Campus will assist in registration and as usherettes. We expect around three hundred persons to be in attendance.

Entertaining Foreign Guests:

At the request of the U. S. State Department, we have acted as hosts to the following groups:

1. Mr. Oumar Sow, Ambassador to the U. S. from Mali, Africa, Mrs. Sow, and the wife of the Minister, were entertained in our home recently. The Governor of Virginia refused to cooperate with the State Department, therefore we were asked. We invited in several couples (one from Prince Edward County), and a nice time was had by all.

2. Also at the request of the U.S. Information Agency, I acted as host to seven Television Executives from Japan recently. I set up several scheduled filmings of programs which will be shown in Japan next Spring. Among these were: A program featuring our Junior (High School) Councils and our College Council; Filming of Richmond's integrated schools, including class-room and sports program; and a two-hour filming of representitives from five Colleges within the Richmond Area. We feel that at last, we have sold Japan something about Virginia other than Prince Edward County.

Inter-Agency Council:

I have called two meetings of the forty agencies who are cooperating with this new project. The Executives from Japanese Television were our guests on the first occasion and two spoke briefly. The second meeting featured as our speaker Mr. James McBride Dabbs, and this was a terrific meeting. Dr. Dabbs had substituted for me with an address in Powhatan County the day before. We wish to express appreciation to Paul Rilling for obtaining Dr. Dabbs for this occasion. Dr. Dabbs spent the night in our home and we all profited in Virginia by having him visit with us.

Workshops:

During this past quarter, we helped sponsor a workshop at Bluefield State College in Bluefield, West Virginia. Although it was poorly attended, the over-all measure of success was great. We appreciate SRC's help in allowing Paul Anthony and Dr. C. H. Parrish to participate in this event. I, personally, learned a great deal about workshops from this experience, and we expect to be in a much better position to sponsor and implement future projects along these lines to a much better degree.

Special Committee:

Dr. J. Kenneth Morland and I have agreed to serve on a special committee, under the auspicies of the State Advisory Committee of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. This special committee would make a study and report to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission within six months of the results to the social, economic, political and moral life of Prince Edward County as a result of the closing of public schools there for four years.

Prince Edward County:

Judge Oren Lewis has said that the State of Virginia cannot operate public schools anywhere in the State unless it does so everywhere. However, once again he delayed issuing a restraining order witholding all school funds until appeals can be made of his decision. Thus, the Courts continue to avoid a show-down on this issue.

Conditions within the County are restless. Some White children have been denied schooling this year because of failure to pay last year's tuition. This has brought forth the first real open attacks upon the local powers.(Enclosed are some materials which show some of the reaction.)

I spoke to the Prince Edward County NAACP Freedom Rally within Prince Edward on Labor Day. There were about 250 present. The press carried this across Virginia, and it was also carried in Farmville's Newspaper with no apparant reaction. (Enclosed are some material on VCHR's Board of Directors adopted resolution on P.E. situation).

Comments in General:

We are pushing the sale of Sarah Patton Boyle's book, THE DESEGREGATED HEART, which is just off the press. These books may be purchased for $3.00 each in lots of fifties, with five dollars per fifty for handling charges, by ordering directly from the Virginia Council on Human Relations. Allow three weeks for delivery.

We continue to be in the dark as to what is happening within Virginia in conjunction with SRC's activities in the Voter Registration Project. We haven't yet been able to know what we as SRC's affiliate can, or are supposed, to do. Copies of correspondence sent anywhere in Virginia would help.

We would be interested in knowing what became of the report on VCHR which was in the making, either as a New South or an L report.

I would appreciate any help in locating an Associate Director. We have decided to take the $10,500 grant from Wm. C. Whitney and make a two year project of it. This would mean we could pay $5,250 per year with the hopes that this could yet be supplemented some. I simply must let some things go unless help can be obtained.

Other pieces of material enclosed are simply for your information.

Sincerely,

Heslip Lee

THE VIRGINIA EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITY CONSULTING PROJECT

SUMMARY OF PROPOSAL

It is proposed to establish in Virginia, under professional direction, a non-profit consulting service for employers who are prepared to adopt or to implement a personnel policy based on equal opportunity without regard to race or color. It is expected that this project would become self-sustaining within a short time, but contributed funds are being sought to launch it. A responsible established organization, the Virginia Council on Human Relations (contributions to which are tax exempt) is prepared to sponsor this project and to provide general supervision with the assistance of an advisory committee of businessmen and others. Preliminary talks with a few key Virginia businessmen give reason to believe that the time is right for such a development.

THE NEED

Due in considerable part to the pressures being brought to bear by the Federal Government in requiring its contractors to adhere to a policy of non-discrimination, a large and steadily increasing number of employers are having to examine and revise nearly all aspects of their recruitment, training and promotion policies. There are in Virginia at least 175 prime contractors to the U.S. Government with establishments in 215 or more locations, each of these having a minimum of 50 employees and $50,000 in Government contracts. Some of these are the local installations of national firms which have adopted an overall policy of non-discrimination. In addition there are some firms taking similar steps as a result of local community initiative (especially in retail and service establishments and public utilities) and some as a result of the socially advanced position taken by their owners or executives. The proposed consulting service is being designed with the needs of all these categories in mind. It is expected that it would also prove useful to some other institutions and organizations, as noted later.

The President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity (of which Vice-President Lyndon Johnson is Chairman, and John Feild is Executive Director) has central responsibility for implementing Federal policy, though it works as far as possible through the contracting agencies of the Government. It can and does insist that an employer not only stop discriminatory practices but that he also take some positive steps to demonstrate his newly-adopted policy. The employer, however, may well ask in good faith questions which a Government agency is not equipped to answer, or may request assistance beyond what is appropriate for the Federal Government to give. "How can I find out what other employers have done and how they have brought about the changes you are asking me to make?" "Where can I get help with problems within my plant or in the local community which come up as a result of this new policy?" "Where can I turn to locate qualified Negro applicants for jobs which open up?" The employer is accustomed to turning to a professional or trade association or to a management service in connection with similar problems, and he is accustomed to paying for the assistance he receives. Following this pattern familiar to business firms, the proposed project would offer three basic services.

PROPOSED SERVICES

1. CONFERENCES. It would arrange an annual state-wide conference at which employers within Virginia could discuss problems and new developments confidentially and off-the-record. The gathering would compare in appeal to conferences such as those arranged by the American Management Association, running for 2 or 3 days at a suitable center such as Colonial Williamsburg. A group of men and women with practical and professional experience in the field of inter-group relations, especially in employment matters, would be available for consultation. A large firm might send several officers concerned with personnel and industrial relations; the head of a smaller business might attend himself. Some employers from other states would be invited because of their success in handling certain kinds of problems under conditions relevant to Virginia. Representatives of Federal and state agencies, colleges, labor unions, and other organizations might be invited as appropriate. Registration fees would be charged sufficient to cover all conference costs including the preliminary work of arranging the program. The state-wide conference might be supplemented by regional meetings within the state, or by conferences arranged for employers in certain industries or with certain common problems.

2. CONSULTING SERVICES. A business would be able to call upon the director of the project, a professionally qualified person, to spend one or more days at a time in the plant or in the local community as a consultant. The project organization would be adequately compensated for his time and reimbursed for his expenses. His work on such an assignment might include: reviewing personnel policies with top officials from the standpoint of their racial implications; training employment interviewers on conducting interviews so as to give no cause for complaint; leading a discussion with shop foremen or office supervisors on what happens when a Negro occupies a skilled or supervisory position for the first time; sitting down with community leaders - mayor, chamber of commerce president, banker, etc. - for a frank discussion of all the questions anyone wants to bring up. Although it may be possible as need arises to bring in additional qualified persons as consultants, it is obvious that the success of the program will depend in large part on the caliber of the person engaged as director. The right people are in demand and are already employed. It would not be desirable to bring the names of specific candidates into the discussion until the project is able to consider making a definite offer.

3. RECRUITING OF NEGROES. The third and perhaps in the long run the most valuable service involved in this project would be to have a staff person engaged in identifying Negro candidates at schools, colleges, and other locations and referring them to potential employers. In so doing he would be representing a cooperating group of such employers who would be sharing the cost of his salary and travel. Good faith compliance with a non-discrimination order is normally held to require some positive action toward the Negro job-seeking community, but it would clearly be impractical for each one of hundreds of companies to employ a qualified recruiter to beat the same bushes for the same prospects, who for many occupations are quite limited in number. Moreover if the flow of Negroes into new kinds of jobs is to be increased, there is a real need for educational, training and placement institutions which serve Negroes to have a better idea of what skills are in potential demand. Channelling a significant part of this information through one man or agency on a state-wide basis (of course working in cooperation with the Richmond Urban League, the State Employment Service, and other agencies) could bring about better utilization of the trained people now available, and could also be the means of stimulating the oncoming generation to demand, and the institutions to offer, training in new fields. Fees for supporting this service would be based on the size of the cooperating company, and possibly on other factors as well. This activity should be self-supporting, and in fact would not be launched until the subscriptions came fairly close to equalling the budgeted costs. The person in charge of this work would in all probability be a Negro with experience in vocational guidance or psychology.

These same services, or extensions of them, are likely to prove useful to additional groups: labor unions, with an interest in the education of their own members and officials; Federal and state agencies, needing assistance with respect to their own civil service employment situations; educational institutions, looking for help in placing their graduates and improving their offerings; out-of-state companies which may want frank advice on the problems to be anticipated in opening a Virginia location; companies in near-by states with similar problems. As long as the primary objective of service to Virginia business is not lost sight of, any of these other groups could be served as well.

EVALUATION AND POTENTIAL EXPANSION

Professional assistance would be sought in keeping the workings of the project under continuing observation and evaluation. If the project is successful in Virginia, the experience would be shared with other states and it would very likely become a prototype for the whole Southern region. If it encounters unexpected difficulties, the history of the project would still be studied in order to make the experience as broadly useful as possible.

SPONSORSHIP

The experience of the Virginia Council on Human Relations gives support to the idea that Virginia is the logical Southern state to initiate this experiement. Founded in 1955, the VCHR is dedicated to applying the methods of fact-finding, education, and persuasion to the elimination of discrimination and the enhancement of opportunity for all people. It is one of eleven such councils in the South associated historically and through common purpose with the Southern Regional Council. Because of the more favorable social climate, the council in Virginia has been able to develop the largest and most active local membership, the largest number of affiliated local councils and the greatest amount of financial support of all the southern councils. Its Board of Directors includes distinguished clergymen, businessmen, educators, and civic leaders. The present project was initially proposed by a businessman who operates his own firm with a completely integrated staff and who serves as Finance Chairman for the VCHR.

Several prominent industrial leaders have been interviewed to determine their reaction to this project, with very favorable results. Among those who have authorized the use of their names for private circulation in this connection are Mr. Stuart Saunders, Roanoke, President of the Norfolk & Western Railway and Dr. Arthur W. Sloan, Alexandria, Executive Vice President of Atlantic Research, Inc.

Based on preliminary contacts it appears likely that there will be financial support for the organization, utilization of the services, and willingness of a representative group to serve on an advisory committee which would keep in close touch with the staff. The Board of Directors of the VCHR would have legal responsibility for the operation. The Executive Director of the VCHR, a full-time employee, would supervise the Director of the project.

In the development of this project the VCHR has had the advice of a number of experienced and key individuals including:

Harold Fleming, Executive Vice President, the Potomac Institute

Leslie W. Dunbar, Executive Director, Southern Regional Council

Frederick Routh, Executive Vice President, National Association of Inter-group Relations Officials

John Feild, Executive Director, President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity

With reference to the latter's participation, it should be stressed that what is proposed is a private operation not connected with the Federal or state government, and there has been no official approval by any government agency. On the other hand, this makes a logical and necessary private supplement to government activity and we have every reason to believe that there would be the best possible cooperation between the public and private efforts in this field.

BUDGET

A full year's operation would operate on a budget about as follows:

Director (consultant)	$14,000
Director's travel	3,000
Office & Secretarial	5,000
Conference expense, printing	1,000
Recruiting representative	6,000
Recruiting representative travel	2,000
	$31,000

The first year, an outside contribution of $15,000 should make it possible to get started, with subscriptions and consultant fees making up the difference. The first step would be the preparation for the initial conference and informal discussions with a wide selection of business leaders all over the state, other phases coming into operation as needed and as support developed. Payments for services rendered would be expected to increase the second and third years and make the operation entirely self-supporting the fourth year. On this basis a total of $30,000 is being sought to start the project:

First year	$15,000
Second year	10,000
Third year	5,000
	$30,000

That the Council hereby declares it to be a policy of the City of Richmond that applicants for employment by the City should be employed, and employees of the City should be promoted, solely on the basis of merit and fitness for the particular position for which they are employed.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF RICHMOND:

That the City Manager is hereby directed to cause to be submitted to the Personnel Board for adoption in form of a rule the foregoing provisions of this resolution.

Prince Edward School Decision Held 'Appalling'

By Allan Jones

The board of directors of the Virginia Council on Human Relations expressed regret yesterday at the refusal of the Prince Edward county board of supervisors to reopen schools next year.

The board asked "appropriate officials" of the state and county "to reconsider the action" taken by the supervisors "and to take the initiative to reopen public schools in Prince Edward county and to cooperate in good faith with any court order to that effect."

The request was included in a resolution adopted late Friday and made public yesterday. The 65-member board said, "We trust this unfortunate situation will not long persist."

The directors said the supervisors' decision is "appalling to large numbers of concerned Virginians who want to see compliance with the constitutional provisions of the Commonwealth, with public educaiton offered every child of every county within our state."

The council, a bi-racial organization, seeks to foster and maintain active communication between responsible leaders of the races to the end that mutual trust and fair play will be more widely established and extended.

In a related development, the Virginia Teachers Association (VTA) said yesterday it will sponsor a crash remedial program again this summer for the Negro children of Prince Edward county.

The program was organized last year to help the youngsters in such basic skills as reading, writing and arithmetic. The Negroes of Prince Edward have had no formal education since public schools were closed in 1959.

The board of supervisors elected at a meeting Friday not to provide public school funds for the fourth consecutive year.

Public Hearing

The business session followed a one-hour public hearing in the circut court room at the county courthouse.

Whites and Negroes sat together on one side of the courtroom. Both opponents and proponents of reopening the schools resisted the pleading of Board Chairman W. W. Vaughan to express their opinions on the proposed county budget for the year beginning July 1.

The board and the audience faced each other, and they sat and stared at one another for three and four minutes after each speaker finished what he had to say. Finally, someone else would get up to discuss the school issue.

Quarterly Report for July, August, September 1962

Duplicate copies:
To: Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Office:

A part-time additional office secretary has been employed, namely; Mrs. Sarah Miller, formerly secretary to Paul Rilling of SRC.

We are still looking for a full-time Associate Director. As of now, we have an application from Mr. Rev. Bobby Robinson. Rev. Robinson was formerly Director of Richmond's Urban League for two years, and is at present obtaining a Master's Degree in Social Work at Richmond Professional Institute. He would not be able to work full-time until June 10, 1963, however, he can work part-time until that date. It is the feeling of the Board of Directors that due to Summer slumps, it would be September 1963, before Rev. Robinson could assume such a role as to be effective. Therefore, we are still trying to locate or obtain someone who could begin work by January 1, 1963.

We have outgrown our office space, and expect to rent a large room adjacant to our present offices by January 1, 1963. This additional space is greatly needed, but our rent would increase from $65 to $100 per month. However, this would give us twice the room we now have and it is felt that this is a move we must make.

We have purchased two new office desks (auction sale for $50 each), and have also purchased a new Royfax - 100, Photocopier machine. We have now paid off a three-year lease on a Royal Typewriter (Electric) and made a one year note with the same Company (Royal McBee Corporation) for the Photocopier.

Negotiations:

During the past quarter several conferences were held between council members and other parties for the purpose of working out knotty problems within Virginia. A report on such meetings as fourteen persons from Prince Edward County, Federal persons and State leaders was given under a separate report earlier. However, this was a vital and successful beginning of a rapport between white persons within Prince Edward and influencial figures of this State and Nation. Other meetings were arranged with Neighborhood Theatres, Inc. and C. & P. Telephone Company with good results. Follow-up communication by letters and telephone have kept alive the points made by council representitives and we feel confident that VCHR has obtained some stature in this field of negotiations.

Local councils have carried on negotiations within their communities in Blacksburg, Charlottesville, Peninsula and Northern Virginia with good results.

New Councils:

A new council was organized in Danville, Virginia with Dr. Robert McCan as its president. This council attempted to reach the power structure immediately and ran head-on into a barrage of opposition which has all but crippled the local group. The local Newspaper and Radio led the fight against such an organization as the local council. At present the local group are evaluating their role in Danville and plan to operate regardless.

Councils revived:

Norfolk: At long last, Norfolk is on the move. A three dollar a plate dinner at the Golden Triangle Hotel in September saw some 125 persons present. David H. Scull was the speaker. Officers were elected and new memberships ran high. Reverend Daniel Bowers, former Executive Director of VCHR, was elected president, and Dan is on the ball. We expect this council to make strides this year.

Bluefield: Due to the leadership given this council by the Minister of the Methodist Church, the Bishop moved the Minister to Charleston, West Virginia. The local council took a nose-dive. I was able to schedule some Television programs during September and carry on a live conversation by T.V. and telephone with the community, and I feel, without a doubt, that this was a most useful technique. This council has a new president, Mr. William Sanders. He is a lawyer, and brings to four the number of lawyers now serving as local council presidents for this year. Things are moving again in Bluefield.

Peninsula: This co-operating group advised of its intent to ask for affiliation with VCHR last week. I have accepted an engagement to speak and lead this group to affiliate on October 18.

Charlottesville Junior Council: Due to graduation of its officers, this group had to get going again from scratch. I have visited with the group and elections were held and attendance good, so this group is strong enough to function for this school year.

Operation Extension:

Dr. Aubrey N. Brown is Chairman of this project to organize a local council in every community within Virginia. Several local councils have adopted as a project for this year the establishing of a new local council within their geographic area. Good prospects which are already in the making are: Hopewell, Powahtan, Lawrenceville, Culpeper and Leesburg. Also feelers have been placed in Radford, Pulaski County, Tazewell, Staunton and Martinsville. Dr. Brown is commited to the philosophy of VCHR, and it is my belief that Operation Extension will definitely pay dividends in 1963. Members of the VCHR Board of Directors have accepted the challenge to be contact persons for the initial meetings in these new areas, and local councils are responding to the challenge of making this a part of their 1963 goals and projects.

Council Activities:

Richmond-Petersburg Area Council continues to lead in programming. We wish to express appreciation for the help toward Dr. Ralph Bunche's Address, scheduled for the Mosque in Richmond, February 23, 1963. All local councils will bring bus loads and we expect this meeting to be the largest integrated gathering ever held in the Old Dominion. Berl Bernhard has been added to the program for December 7 of the Richmond-Petersburg speakers.

Fredericksburg has adopted a twelve-months program which covers most of the subjects in Human Relations. Speakers will include Dean Gordon Moss of Farmville, John Feild of Washington and Ambassadon Oumar Sow of Mali, Africa. One of the most dynamic leaders in Fredericksburg is Dr. Alan Pierce, Professor at Mary Washington College and also recently elected by a write-in vote to the City Council.

Charlottesville, Blacksburg, Fairfax County and Alexandria have all worked out a yearly schedule of fine programs, and Arlington has a new president in Mr. Stuart Broad a lawyer of Catholic Church relations, and all kinds of special committees have been appointed to bring Arlington into the camp with Alexandria and Fairfax County in our State work.

Financing:

We have had the best year financially in the history of VCHR.

An appeal has been made to both the Old Dominion Foundation and the Field Foundation for financial support of a new project entitled "The Virginia Equal Job Opportunity Consulting Project". (Copies of this project are self-explanatory and are attached). (Also attached are copies of letters from the A.F.L.- C.I.O. regarding this project). We are greatly encouraged by the ramifications and far-reaching possibilities of this project. We also appreciate the cooperation which Southern Regional Council has rendered, and continues to give, concerning this project.

Auditing of books:

We have just had our financial records audited for the year 1961. Copies of this audit will be sent SRC as soon as these are received from the auditor. Since our fiscal year is now the calendar year, we felt that we would have the audit cover 1961, with another audit to be made following December 31, 1962.

Annual Meeting:

Our 1962 Annual Meeting will be held on November 23, 24, 1962 in the Hotel Roanoke in Roanoke, Virginia. The Roanoke, Lynchburg and Blacksburg local councils will serve as tri-hosts to this meeting. Girls from our co-operating group on Hollins College Campus will assist in registration and as usherettes. We expect around three hundred persons to be in attendance.

Entertaining Foreign Guests:

At the request of the U. S. State Department, we have acted as hosts to the following groups:

1. Mr. Oumar Sow, Ambassador to the U. S. from Mali, Africa, Mrs. Sow, and the wife of the Minister, were entertained in our home recently. The Governor of Virginia refused to cooperate with the State Department, therefore we were asked. We invited in several couples (one from Prince Edward County), and a nice time was had by all.

2. Also at the request of the U.S. Information Agency, I acted as host to seven Television Executives from Japan recently. I set up several scheduled filmings of programs which will be shown in Japan next Spring. Among these were: A program featuring our Junior (High School) Councils and our College Council; Filming of Richmond's integrated schools, including class-room and sports program; and a two-hour filming of representitives from five Colleges within the Richmond Area. We feel that at last, we have sold Japan something about Virginia other than Prince Edward County.

Inter-Agency Council:

I have called two meetings of the forty agencies who are cooperating with this new project. The Executives from Japanese Television were our guests on the first occasion and two spoke briefly. The second meeting featured as our speaker Dr. James McBride Dabbs, and this was a terrific meeting. Dr. Dabbs had substituted for me with an address in Powhatan County the day before. We wish to express appreciation to Paul Rilling for obtaining Dr. Dabbs for this occasion. Dr. Dabbs spent the night in our home and we all profited in Virginia by having him visit with us.

Workshops:

During this past quarter, we helped sponsor a workshop at Bluefield State College in Bluefield, West Virginia. Although it was poorly attended, the over-all measure of success was great. We appreciate SRC's help in allowing Paul Anthony and Dr. C. H. Parrish to participate in this event. I, personally, learned a great deal about workshops from this experience, and we expect to be in a much better position to sponsor and implement future projects along these lines to a much better degree.

Special Committee:

Dr. J. Kenneth Morland and I have agreed to serve on a special committee, under the auspicies of the State Advisory Committee of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. This special committee would make a study and report to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission within six months of the results to the social, economic, political and moral life of Prince Edward County as a result of the closing of public schools there for four years.

Prince Edward County:

Judge Oren Lewis has said that the State of Virginia cannot operate public schools anywhere in the State unless it does so everywhere. However, once again he delayed issuing a restraining order witholding all school funds until appeals can be made of his decision. Thus, the Courts continue to avoid a show-down on this issue.

Conditions within the County are restless. Some White children have been denied schooling this year because of failure to pay last year's tuition. This has brought forth the first real open attacks upon the local powers.(Enclosed are some materials which show some of the reaction.)

I spoke to the Prince Edward County NAACP Freedom Rally within Prince Edward on Labor Day. There were about 250 present. The press carried this across Virginia, and it was also carried in Farmville's Newspaper with no apparant reaction. (Enclosed are some material on VCHR's Board of Directors adopted resolution on P.E. situation).

Comments in General:

We are pushing the sale of Sarah Patton Boyle's book, THE DESEGREGATED HEART, which is just off the press. These books may be purchased for $3.00 each in lots of fifties, with five dollars per fifty for handling charges, by ordering directly from the Virginia Council on Human Relations. Allow three weeks for delivery.

We continue to be in the dark as to what is happening within Virginia in conjunction with SNC's activities in the Voter Registration Project. We haven't yet been able to know what we as SRC's affiliate can, or are supposed, to do. Copies of correspondence sent anywhere in Virginia would help.

We would be interested in knowing what became of the report on VCHR which was in the making, either as a New South or an L report.

I would appreciate any help in locating an Associate Director. We have decided to take the $10,500 grant from Wm. C. Whitney and make a two year project of it. This would mean we could pay $5,250 per year with the hopes that this could yet be supplemented some. I simply must let some things go unless help can be obtained.

Other pieces of material enclosed are simply for your information.

Sincerely,

Heslip M. Lee

THE VIRGINIA EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITY CONSULTING PROJECT

SUMMARY OF PROPOSAL

It is proposed to establish in Virginia, under professional direction, a non-profit consulting service for employers who are prepared to adopt or to implement a personnel policy based on equal opportunity without regard to race or color. It is expected that this project would become self-sustaining within a short time, but contributed funds are being sought to launch it. A responsible established organization, the Virginia Council on Human Relations (contributions to which are tax exempt) is prepared to sponsor this project and to provide general supervision with the assistance of an advisory committee of businessmen and others. Preliminary talks with a few key Virginia businessmen give reason to believe that the time is right for such a development.

THE NEED

Due in considerable part to the pressures being brought to bear by the Federal Government in requiring its contractors to adhere to a policy of non-discrimination, a large and steadily increasing number of employers are having to examine and revise nearly all aspects of their recruitment, training and promotion policies. There are in Virginia at least 175 prime contractors to the U.S. Government with establishments in 215 or more locations, each of these having a minimum of 50 employees and $50,000 in Government contracts. Some of these are the local installations of national firms which have adopted an overall policy of non-discrimination. In addition there are some firms taking similar steps as a result of local community initiative (especially in retail and service establishments and public utilities) and some as a result of the socially advanced position taken by their owners or executives. The proposed consulting service is being designed with the needs of all these categories in mind. It is expected that it would also prove useful to some other institutions and organizations, as noted later.

The President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity (of which Vice-President Lyndon Johnson is Chairman, and John Feild is Executive Director) has central responsibility for implementing Federal policy, though it works as far as possible through the contracting agencies of the Government. It can and does insist that an employer not only stop discriminatory practices but that he also take some positive steps to demonstrate his newly-adopted policy. The employer, however, may well ask in good faith questions which a Government agency is not equipped to answer, or may request assistance beyond what is appropriate for the Federal Government to give. "How can I find out what other employers have done and how they have brought about the changes you are asking me to make?" "Where can I get help with problems within my plant or in the local community which come up as a result of this new policy?" "Where can I turn to locate qualified Negro applicants for jobs which open up?" The employer is accustomed to turning to a professional or trade association or to a management service in connection with similar problems, and he is accustomed to paying for the assistance he receives. Following this pattern familiar to business firms, the proposed project would offer three basic services.

PROPOSED SERVICES

1. CONFERENCES. It would arrange an annual state-wide conference at which employers within Virginia could discuss problems and new developments confidentially and off-the-record. The gathering would compare in appeal to conferences such as those arranged by the American Management Association, running for 2 or 3 days at a suitable center such as Colonial Williamsburg. A group of men and women with practical and professional experience in the field of inter-group relations, especially in employment matters, would be available for consultation. A large firm might send several officers concerned with personnel and industrial relations; the head of a smaller business might attend himself. Some employers from other states would be invited because of their success in handling certain kinds of problems under conditions relevant to Virginia. Representatives of Federal and state agencies, colleges, labor unions, and other organizations might be invited as appropriate. Registration fees would be charged sufficient to cover all conference costs including the preliminary work of arranging the program. The state-wide conference might be supplemented by regional meetings within the state, or by conferences arranged for employers in certain industries or with certain common problems.

2. CONSULTING SERVICES. A business would be able to call upon the director of the project, a professionally qualified person, to spend one or more days at a time in the plant or in the local community as a consultant. The project organization would be adequately compensated for his time and reimbursed for his expenses. His work on such an assignment might include: reviewing personnel policies with top officials from the standpoint of their racial implications; training employment interviewers on conducting interviews so as to give no cause for complaint; leading a discussion with shop foremen or office supervisors on what happens when a Negro occupies a skilled or supervisory position for the first time; sitting down with community leaders - mayor, chamber of commerce president, banker, etc. - for a frank discussion of all the questions anyone wants to bring up. Although it may be possible as need arises to bring in additional qualified persons as consultants, it is obvious that the success of the program will depend in large part on the caliber of the person engaged as director. The right people are in demand and are already employed. It would not be desirable to bring the names of specific candidates into the discussion until the project is able to consider making a definite offer.

3. RECRUITING OF NEGROES. The third and perhaps in the long run the most valuable service involved in this project would be to have a staff person engaged in identifying Negro candidates at schools, colleges, and other locations and referring them to potential employers. In so doing he would be representing a cooperating group of such employers who would be sharing the cost of his salary and travel. Good faith compliance with a non-discrimination order is normally held to require some positive action toward the Negro job-seeking community, but it would clearly be impractical for each one of hundreds of companies to employ a qualified recruiter to beat the same bushes for the same prospects, who for many occupations are quite limited in number. Moreover if the flow of Negroes into new kinds of jobs is to be increased, there is a real need for educational, training and placement institutions which serve Negroes to have a better idea of what skills are in potential demand. Channelling a significant part of this information through one man or agency on a state-wide basis (of course working in cooperation with the Richmond Urban League, the State Employment Service, and other agencies) could bring about better utilization of the trained people now available, and could also be the means of stimulating the oncoming generation to demand, and the institutions to offer, training in new fields. Fees for supporting this service would be based on the size of the cooperating company, and possibly on other factors as well. This activity should be self-supporting, and in fact would not be launched until the subscriptions came fairly close to equalling the budgeted costs. The person in charge of this work would in all probability be a Negro with experience in vocational guidance or psychology.

These same services, or extensions of them, are likely to prove useful to additional groups: labor unions, with an interest in the education of their own members and officials; Federal and state agencies, needing assistance with respect to their own civil service employment situations; educational institutions, looking for help in placing their graduates and improving their offerings; out-of-state companies which may want frank advice on the problems to be anticipated in opening a Virginia location; companies in near-by states with similar problems. As long as the primary objective of service to Virginia business is not lost sight of, any of these other groups could be served as well.

EVALUATION AND POTENTIAL EXPANSION

Professional assistance would be sought in keeping the workings of the project under continuing observation and evaluation. If the project is successful in Virginia, the experience would be shared with other states and it would very likely become a prototype for the whole Southern region. If it encounters unexpected difficulties, the history of the project would still be studied in order to make the experience as broadly useful as possible.

SPONSORSHIP

The experience of the Virginia Council on Human Relations gives support to the idea that Virginia is the logical Southern state to initiate this experiement. Founded in 1955, the VCHR is dedicated to applying the methods of fact-finding, education, and persuasion to the elimination of discrimination and the enhancement of opportunity for all people. It is one of eleven such councils in the South associated historically and through common purpose with the Southern Regional Council. Because of the more favorable social climate, the council in Virginia has been able to develop the largest and most active local membership, the largest number of affiliated local councils and the greatest amount of financial support of all the southern councils. Its Board of Directors includes distinguished clergymen, businessmen, educators, and civic leaders. The present project was initially proposed by a businessman who operates his own firm with a completely integrated staff and who serves as Finance Chairman for the VCHR.

Several prominent industrial leaders have been interviewed to determine their reaction to this project, with very favorable results. Among those who have authorized the use of their names for private circulation in this connection are Mr. Stuart Saunders, Roanoke, President of the Norfolk & Western Railway and Dr. Arthur W. Sloan, Alexandria, Executive Vice President of Atlantic Research, Inc.

Based on preliminary contacts it appears likely that there will be financial support for the organization, utilization of the services, and willingness of a representative group to serve on an advisory committee which would keep in close touch with the staff. The Board of Directors of the VCHR would have legal responsibility for the operation. The Executive Director of the VCHR, a full-time employee, would supervise the Director of the project.

In the development of this project the VCHR has had the advice of a number of experienced and key individuals including:

Harold Fleming, Executive Vice President, the Potomac Institute

Leslie W. Dunbar, Executive Director, Southern Regional Council

John Feild, Executive Director, President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity

With reference to the latter's participation, it should be stressed that what is proposed is a private operation not connected with the Federal or state government, and there has been no official approval by any government agency. On the other hand, this makes a logical and necessary private supplement to government activity and we have every reason to believe that there would be the best possible cooperation between the public and private efforts in this field.

BUDGET

A full year's operation would operate on a budget about as follows:

Director (consultant)	$14,000
Director's travel	3,000
Office & Secretarial	5,000
Conference expense, printing	1,000
Recruiting representative	6,000
Recruiting representative travel	2,000
	$31,000

The first year, an outside contribution of $15,000 should make it possible to get started, with subscriptions and consultant fees making up the difference. The first step would be the preparation for the initial conference and informal discussions with a wide selection of business leaders all over the state, other phases coming into operation as needed and as support developed. Payments for services rendered would be expected to increase the second and third years and make the operation entirely self-supporting the fourth year. On this basis a total of $30,000 is being sought to start the project:

First year	$15,000
Second year	10,000
Third year	5,000
	$30,000

Quarterly Narrative Report
July-September 1962

I. Significant Events

A. In the Schools

1. In registration for Dollarway District first-graders, no Negroes applied. Sarah Howard, tenth grade, daughter of NAACP attorney George Howard, asked for transfer from Townsend Park to Dollarway. The School Board rejected Sarah's request, thus leaving four Negro children eligible to attend, two in each of the third and second grades.

2. Two new districts voluntarily opened formerly white schools to Negro students - Mansfield with 14 Negro students among 700 whites of all grades and Gosnell with 12 students among 1400. Mansfield made the decision for economy reasons, saving a net of $5000. It at the same time integrated its football team. Gosnell student body comes largely from the Air Force Base near Blytheville. The threat of loss of federal funds caused the change.

3. Jacksonville, also an impacted military area, for the first time have Negroes ~~for~~ from the Air Force Base in its Junior and Senior high schools.

4. At Hot Springs the school board received from Negro parents letters requesting admission of four children to the elementary school. By registered letters the Board rejected the requests, stating it "was not in the public interest" to grant the requests at this time so near the opening of the schools. (See ACHR Activities, below)

B. In Politics

1. The reelection of Governor Faubus on July 31 was close. The final count gave him 52% of the total vote; but the Governor was so unsure of the outcome that he withheld his "victory statement" until August 1. (Or did he just want to sleep!) Those following the campaign from the angle of racial issues were not surprised at his statement's claim, "This vote indicates that the people do not wish to wander in the thickets of extremism, either to the right or to the left."

   In twenty-eight counties he did not receive a majority over his five opponents. In most counties there was a noticeable shift from Faubus as compared with the 1960 vote. The majority given him in Crittenden and Mississippi counties (Eastern Arkansas) account for his margin of victory. Mississippi County counted 2000 more votes than were counted in 1960. Sid McMath and Congressman Alford decided against contesting votes in certain counties.

   The leading candidate from the business world, Marvin Melton, withdrew early. Most pbservers make this the decisive factor in the results. The race issue was not a major issue in the campaign.

2. In the run-off primary Frank Mackey, Little Rock School Board member, defeated L. C. Young for sheriff of Pulaski County. Mr. Mackey's term on the Board expires in December.

3. On September 19 Ted Lamb, Little Rock School Board member, gave a cocktail party for "liberals" to meet Senator Fulbright who is campaigning for reelection. The Senator indicated to Mr. Lamb that many "liberals" were unhappy with him and he wished to meet with them face-to-face.

4. The Republican opponent of Fulbright is Dr. Ken Jones, local physician, who is "to the right of Marie Antoinette" to use ~~the~~ Harry Golden's phrase.

5. Little Rock will elect three members to its Board of Directors on November 6 and two members of its School Board on December 4. Dr. William H. Townsend, a Negro optometrist, backed by the substantial group, Council on Community Affairs, is standing for a position on the Board of Directors. The same group plans to have a Negro candidate for the School Board in December.

6. The Capitol Citizens Council abandoned Faubus in separate statements from its leaders, Amis Guthridge and Dr. Malcolm Taylor. They charged him with being a political opportunist and insincere in his support of segregation. They termed the Governor a "toothless tiger." Mr. Faubus replied by saying this proved that he had never been captive of any group, that "defending a position of reason and logic in the controversy" he was under attack from both the extreme segregationists and integrationists.

C. In the Courts.

1. On July 10, Municipal Judge Glover in Little Rock passed for the eighth time the cases of the six sit-in students charged under Arkansas Act 226. The Arkansas Supreme Court first received the case in the summer of 1960 and has not ruled on the constitutionality of ACt 226.

2. Attorney George Howard went back into Federal District Court in the Dollarway case. He asked for the transfer of Sarah Howard, his daughter, to the tenth grade and that the faculty at Dollarway be chosen without regard to race. The court refused to hear on its merit the matter of faculty discrimination, but will hear the case of the student transfer.

Judge Hensley raised again the question as to whether Dollarway needs a plan for controlling integration since there was no pressure for admission from Negro students. The Board asked for a continuance of its present plan.

3. On May 22 Wiley Branton, attorney for the Negro plaintiffs at Little Rock, announced he would go back into court and ask for relief from the discrimination by the school officials in the assignments, in time for the new school year. He has not carried out this announcement. No relief has been asked.

D. In the Communities

1. At its September meeting the Board of the Little Rock's Women's Emergency Committee for Education voted to "encourage" two candidates to run for the school board, Dr. John Harrell and Mrs. Sarah Murphy, against incumbents Everett Tucker and Frank Mackey. It was reported that the August meeting of the WEC had discussed fully the candidacy of Dr. Harrel, some members thinking the group endorsed his candidacy at that time. It seems these members felt the organization committed itself to support the doctor when he agreed to withdraw from the race in 1961.

Discussions in taking the above action had included consideration of the probability of a Negro candidate for the position proposed for Dr. Harrell. A number of the leaders of WEC had since 1959 professed their approval of a Negro candidate. In 1959 they persuaded and cajolled Dr. Jackson, Negro physician, not to stand for election "at this time."

This "corner" into which some WEC officials boxed themselves has resulted in highly organized behind the scene strategy as well as direct power pressure to prevent the candidacy of Dr. Jackson. There is open disagreement among WEC leaders in this matter. The Committee for Community Affairs definitely plans to have Dr. Jackson stand even against Dr. Harrell. Negro leaders seem strongly united behind his candidacy and that of Dr. Townsend for City Director.

2. The monthly meeting of Little Rock ministers for conversation resumed in September with Reverend William Gentry as chairman. This is the interracial group which has met regularly since the fall of 1960.

3. Negro leaders of Hot Springs have established monthly luncheon meetings to discuss issues and action in that city.

II. Activities of ACHR

A. In Relation to the Schools

1. Project "Bridges across the Barriers" has been launched again this year, a "bridge" consisting of linking a white family of Little Rock with one or two colored families who have children in formerly white schools. On September 14 the first get-to-gether of all involved was held at Dunbar Center with some 150 persons joining enthusiastically. In circles, by schools, the students recounted favorable and unfavorable experiences of the opening week. More than thirty white families from many community groups are participating. The Citizens Committee for Better Education, composed of colored patrons and students, are cooperating in the Bridges Project.

2. In regard to the rejection of the applicants for white schools in Hot Springs the staff of ACHR has been in touch with the school attorney and Negro leaders. The attorney disclosed that he was not consulted by the Board, but that it went to Little Rock and got the services of Mr. Friday and his firm which is retained by the Little Rock and Dollarway school boards. The attorney posed the question: Has the State Board of Education advised the school superintendents to use this firm exclusively? A knowledgeable newspaper reporter is undertaking to answer this question which has added significance since the State Board has funds to aid school districts in litigation over segregation.

3. At the request of the Institute of the Potomac in August the Director of ACHR sent letters to Arkansas school superintendents telling them of the new service by the U. S. Office of Education, making available printed materials and consultants to any school officials planning for desegregation.

4. At the request of Board members at Fayetteville ACHR sent the names of Negro students known to be enrolled at the university there on September 6.

4-a. In conversations across the "bridges" in September one issue recurred over and over: denial to Negro students opportunities to join in school activities - band, drill squads, athletics, clubs. Since ACHR through committees and individual members had "promising" conferences with Mr. Parsons, the Superintendent, last Spring, to follow up this matter seemed in order. Our plan was to wait until Negro parents could complain to Mr. Parsons and then seek a conference with a committee. The Citizens for Better Education drafted a letter to the School Board. We felt going directly to the Superintendent would be more fruitful. To check on this point Mrs. Arnold, program assistant, called Mr. Parsons with the following results:

a. Mr. Parsons has abandoned his privately stated educational principle that Negro children should participate fully in all "educational activities" which he interpreted to mean band, athletics, chorus, clubs.

b. Contrary to his sentiment of last Spring, Mr. Parsons was ready to join his Board and principals in defending the exclusion of Negro students from band and the other activities.

c. He concurred that legal action alone held promise for the students.

This "retreat" was one factor used in encouraging Attorney Wiley Branton to move immediately to the Court again. He has written the Board's attorney asking for a reply which will include plans for completing school desegregation.

5. ACHR became involved in a strange case at Jonesboro. The school officials there, intimidated by anonymous calls, seriously were considering rejection of a first grade child on the ground that she had Negro blood. The child, Angela Walker, and her mother are active members of a small Methodist church (white) and had complete acceptance. Her mother has Indian blood. Her father, divorced from the mother, was Indian. Strong protest and threat of a damage suit by a lawyer friend of ACHR in Jonesboro, beefing up the courage of the Methodist minister through his district superintendent, and consultation on the issue involved with the Secretary of the Arkansas Educational Association seemed to have helped swing the officials to accept the child with good grace on September 5.

B. In the Communities

1. The Associate Director gave much time for six weeks in August and September to the Greater Little Rock Voter Registration Campaign, a joint project with the Urban League. A separate report of the details of this is being sent.

2. The Associate Director with a committee from the Council for Community Affairs had conferences with executive committees of the Chamber of Commerce and the Little Rock Housing Authority, on August 16 and September 10. Subject of the conference with C. of C. was opening downtown facilities. With the Housing officials it was Negro representation on the Housing Commission. They learned from the Chamber that it had a committee "working" on the matter of desegregating facilities. (This information ACHR had from one of its members.) Personnel of this committee are unknown even to the members of the Chamber Board!

C. Mass Media and Public Relations

1. Efforts were made to alert influential business men and leaders to the serious threat to Little Rock of events like those at Albany if it continues the practice of refusal to deal voluntarily and affirmatively with the legitimate requests of Negro citizens, the certainty of "testing" in Little Rock by regional or national organizations unless something is done. Two business men helped in this effort. The publisher of the Gazette was consulted on the need for editorial comment on Albany pointing out consequences of failure of officials to confer with Negro leaders.

2. Materials were given to Gazette reporter Roy Reed on the trend in court decisions and actions by other school districts clearly indicating that assignment of students to schools must be made initially solely on the basis of residence. The intent is for a depth article on this topic at an appropriate time.

D. Organizational

1. On the strength of new doors for activities opening to ACHR an application was made to the Field Foundation for supplementary grant of funds on July 23.

2. The committee on revision of the constitution of ACHR reported its recommendations, September 13. The Executive Committee acted on the recommendations and authorized staff to redraft the constitution including the changes.

III. Interpretations

1. Failure of Arkansas Supreme Court to act on the sit-in cases testing Act 226, leaves the students convicted with the threat by the municipal and county court of contempt of court if the students join in sit-ins. If the students have ~~the~~ constitutional right of this kind of protest, then failure of the state Supreme Court to act makes it a party to violation of the civil rights of the students. Could this not furnish a legal basis for forcing the case into a federal court for action?

2. In Little Rock as well as across the South securing civil rights by litigation is at a new stage. In many areas - education, public facilities, voting, jury service - the law now is clear. This seems to satisfy many civil rights attorneys. This leads the general public and officials to complacency: "the rights have been secured." But the privileges made plain in law are not extended to the masses of disadvantaged Negro citizens. The questions are these: Could massive legal aid secure the opportunities for these citizens? How can it be provided? Or, does the remedy lie in national legislation, such as that in Title III of the 1957 Civil Rights Bill, or that requiring each school district to submit a plan, or that providing substantial financial aid to districts desegregating? Do these kind of questions now pressing justify a high level conference inspired by SRC?

3. While Governor Faubus won without a run-off, the vote was close county by county and represented drastic shifts in most counties. One can but wish contests had been instituted in certain counties, although likely it would not have altered the decision and undoubted would have led to such scandals and hassles as no politician would be a party to.

   The fact that Governor Faubus passed as a "moderate" gives Thomas Pettigrew a new juicy datum for his thesis "The Myth of the Moderates."

4. In Little Rock the repetition of the protests of "liberals" against a Negro candidate illustrates how far the liberals have to go, how limited is the interracial experience and resulting knowledge.

Quarterly Report: June, July, August 1962

Council Board and Administration

There have been no board or executive committee meetings during this quarter. There was a plan to have an executive committee meeting concurrent with the local council presidents on the first Saturday after Labor Day, and invitations were issued to local councils. However, President Barrett became so involved with the vote fraud situation in Nashville that it was impossible to continue with plans. We tried later to have this meeting of local councils and the executive committee on September 15, but due to the short notice and an unbelievable number of personal disasters for executive committee members, we had representatives from only three local council groups, and less than a quorum of the executive committee. Our own by-laws, requiring 30 days notice for executive committee meetings, were ignored in the call.

With a local election (metropolitan government referendum) in Nashville and state-wide races for Congressional seats, governon, and state legislators, it seemed that all council members were busily engaged in promoting some political candidate or measure. The Nashville referendum was held on June 28, and the general election on August 2. With the vote fraud situation, this meant we had no access to the Council president until September. The Council staff engaged in a number of minor matters, but was not able to work toward some of the widely representative membership matters. We did start working on the annual meeting, but could not get Chattanooga leadership responsibility pinned down until September, and therefore the entire push for the annual meeting is coming a month late. Board meeting will follow the annual meeting, according to our by-laws, and board members have been so notified, via the NEWSLETTER.

Both Mrs. Webster and I have felt the frustration of lack of access to the elected leadership this summer. I was on vacation for nearly three weeks in this quarter, and Mrs. Webster was away one week.

The Council and Finances

We came to the September deadline for matching funds lacking $1,000.00 for our matching funds, and considerably in debt. Now, in late September we are still short about $450.00, but I think we will now reach it. This is largely due to the lethargy in Nashville and Memphis, where during the last year there has not been any continued program.

State Parks

The one state wide accomplishment during the summer was the opening of the state parks. Although this was a state wide activity, the actual negotiation was carried out by Nashville people, recruited by the staff. This was an undertaking which grew out of the 1961 annual meeting. There were many delays in obtaining an appointment, and then getting substitutes for the original negotiating team for the Council. The team of three who finally went did not include any of the original Council team. Although the Commissioner and other members of his staff were suspicious at first, if not openly hostile, they evidently mellowed considerably during the discussion. The end result was the full and immediate use of the parks except for swimming. There was the usual reluctance about swimming, although not mentioned, plus a practical reason. The parks do not have a police compliment, and depend on the local sheriff for law enforcement. The Commissioner felt that they could not depend on this protection if there were an incident in the water or on the beaches. If the sheriff does not have adequate assistance he can call on state troopers, but they cannot go into provide protection unless first requested by the sheriff. I think they probably can go if so ordered by the Governor. The second restriction was that no public announcement would be made, but we were free to spread the news around, provided we did not make a broadside announcement. This precluded a straightforward announcement in the NEWSLETTER, although we tried to indicate a change in policy, and invited inquiry. Our team felt this was as good an agreement as we could obtain this summer, although some of our council members were dissatisfied with the restriction on swimming. It seemed to me that the strategy was to use the parks enough so that when the new administration took office in January 1963, we could go back to them and ask for the end of all restrictions and designations on literature, maps, place mats, etc. We did not try to restrict members from swimming, since this was their decision, but said that we could not protest bad faith if they were refused. When we used Montgomery Bell State Park in September, we were cordially received in the dining room, lodge, etc. One of the waiters said we were the first interracial group using the dining room. We know that there had been some interracial picnicing there, and at several other state parks. Except for swimming there has been no resistence, as far as we know.

Memphis

The Commission on Civil Rights met in Memphis on June 25 and 26. Prior to this time, I was in Memphis to assist in working out a plan for some recognition of their visit. The local council president was wholly engaged in managing the Congressional campaign of Ross Prichard, and with Mr. Lane's approval, the planning for a reception was left to other members of the local executive committee. Although the Civil Rights group was to be housed at a Holiday Inn, this motel was literally without accommodations for any entertainment, and the efforts of the manager there were unsuccessful in obtaining space at any of the other Holiday Inns. None of the hotels would take us except the King Cotton, a respectable hotel encrusted with tradition. Because of other committments, the Civil Rights Commission could make available to us only the hours of 6:30 to 8:00 p.m. This was a fine cocktail hour, but this is a dry state, so we agreed to settle for a fruit punch. A series of cliff hanger incidents followed: the Commission could not decide whether to come or not since the King Cotton had not been willing to accept them as guests of the hotel. (They had made their own arrangements, and we did not know this.) The Commission's staff was waiting to see what the Commissioners did, and were unwilling to commit themselves whether they would attend. We did not know until their arrival whether they would appear. Several hours before the reception there was a threat of a boycott by Negroes because the reception was at the King Cotton, but we later learned that there was no agreement on this, although undoubtedly some of this had filtered to the Commissioners. Invitations had gone from Nashville to a number of Memphis city officials and business people (names supplied by Memphis members) and the Memphis Council had notified their own members, except that they had changed the time to read from 8 to 10 p.m. This was discovered only a few hours before the reception. In consequence, several of us spent the remainder of the afternoon and early evening trying to reach members by telephone. How the whole matter came off as well as it did, I will never understand. Commissioners Hannah and Mr. Robinson did not come; the other Commissioners were there, with the staff remaining divided on attendance.

I could recognize the Commission's wanting to be consistent about their actions, but I could hardly understand their reasoning about the hotel. They were housed at a motel at which some of them would not be accommodated if they appeared there as tourists the following week. The accommodations which we had arranged were little different from the motel situation. As far as Memphis was concerned, it was the first time that any mid-town Memphis hotel had been available for a non-quota group, and in this case for a reception for a group to whom the Mayor was openly hostile. I believe we had about 80 people, and it was surprisingly gay and pleasant, despite the strained appearance of a number of the persons who were intimately concerned.

The Memphis council had a good meeting last spring on clerical and business training opportunities in Memphis, pointing up the poor training available to Negro youth, and the complete lack of it for adults. Unfortunately the workshop which Dr. Henderson was to lead soon afterwards could not be arranged for that time. It is now firmly set for October 19 and 20. All of this means that Memphis has had almost no program during the past year.

Nashville

The Council sponsored an arts and crafts class for 15 eight year old girls of all races and religions. This project grew out of concern for interracial understanding and association among children of this age and cultural level who have least opportunity for association. The class met once per week for 1½ hours. These sessions, six in all, were held to determine the effectiveness, and to give us some ideas for planning of future participation or sponsorship of such projects.

Miss Frances Thompson, Professor of Art, Tennessee A&I State University, conducted this class and was most effective in preparing for and working with the group. We are in agreement with replies to an evaluation survey sent to parents of participants which revealed that too little time was alotted for group participation and personal communication of the children. We will recognize this need in preparing for future children's projects.

The American Friends Service sponsored a 10 weeks' summer project in Nashville for "Internes in Community Service". This included 8 college age young people who worked throughout the city in social service agencies, and returned at night to an interracial living arrangement in a white neighborhood. The leadership was good, and the group had good experiences together, and in their work assignment. It was originally intended that the group be somewhat larger, but some last minute drop-outs, plus the decision of one member to leave after about two weeks meant that there were only 8 there full time. There was no community reaction as far as I know until the newspaper article of September 9 appeared. This was after the group had disbanded. Following the publication of this article there was some rather violent protest to the United Givers Fund, since some of their receiving agencies had been sponsors. There were accusations that they had sponsored a Communist group, etc. Whether this will have any real effect on the funds campaign this fall is not determined, although there have been threats.

Jackson

The Voter Registration Unit in Jackson was an altogether different kind of group. It was evident from the first that this group did not have adequate leadership. K. Jones and D. Webster both visited with this group at different times. When K. Jones saw them in late June, they were an entirely white group, all northerners - good Brooklyn accents abounded - all somewhat older than the Nashville group, and all of strong personal conviction. I never was sure what these convictions were but it was obvious that they were strong. They had only a month to stimulate registrations for voting before the registration books closed preparatory to the August primary election. They set about getting Negroes registered with great enthusiasm, and counted it a day lost if they could not report a large number of scalps by nightfall. To their dismay, and frequent exasperation, they discovered that on checking back some of the citizens who had promised to register had not done so. When I talked with them, I proposed that they go at it more slowly and stay longer with the person to indicate some personal concern and interest in him. I was also concerned that this registration of persons without any voter education could well lead to domination by old-line political machines. The students were not sure they had time to talk to people - their job was to just get them registered. One girl frankly said that she "couldn't care less" about some of these citizens individually. Throughout the discussion there was no indication of leadership from the appointed leaders. The group was highly critical of all members of the white community, even over the protest of Mr. Albert Porter of Lane College who tried to point out that they were not in a position to judge from their limited knowledge. From reports that I received later, the group made a positive contribution in the Negro community, were well accepted, and undoubtedly did increase the number of registered Negro voters. After the registration books were closed, they participated in some voter registration workshops. I do not know any way to assess what contribution they made to the voting strength in Madison county. In the August primary, Mr. Z. Alexander Looby, respected Negro Nashville attorney ran as an independent for Judge of the Court of Appeals. Two white nominees were Democratic candidates. They (together) received 20,000 votes in Madison county, and Mr. Looby received 3,322. It can be assumed that very few of the Looby votes came from white persons in Madison county.

Just prior to the August primary this group attended a rally for one of the candidates for Governor. They had recruited to their group a number of Lane College students, and at the rally there was some display of interracial dating. Soon after this the group notified a white minister that they were coming to his church the following Sunday. When they arrived, in an interracial group they were seated, and the minister recognized the group. Evidently some of the congregation spoke of them warmly afterwards. However, there was deep reaction on the part of many of the very vocal members. As a result, both the minister and the usher who seated them (he has been active in the council) have come in for severe criticism and resentment. The usher is a physician and has lost a number of patients. As a result of this, the official boards of a number of churches have adopted some policy about seating guests, From reports I have from Jackson, the incident at the political rally and the church attendance coming so closely together were more than Jackson was prepared to swallow. The feeling was such that the Jackson Community Relations Council cancelled a proposed meeting with the Voter Registration group. The Council, feeling that it had goals and aims which extended beyond the summer and that it might get thoroughly engolfed in the controversy about the actions of the voter group. The Voter Registration group added fuel to the flame by condeming the council, and effected some breach between the Negro and white community. Ray Allen as chairman of the Council did go out and meet with them, and they evidently were bitterly critical of him. At this time things are calm within the Council, but some distrust has been built up which it will be hard to overcome.

Jackson did finally get an agreement to open the lunch counter at Woolworths, and by agreement the control period started in early September. It went smoothly. However, the white citizens council found out about it, so that currently they are picketing Woolworth's, carrying placards protesting the integration of the lunch counters.

Several children in primary grades are going to Alexandria School for the first time. Two of the three Negro children are back in the Jr. High school. The third child has moved out of the county. The school system, (at least one or more of the teachers at Tigrett Jr. High) has been counselling the white children against friendliness toward the Negro students. However, several of the Council members know this now, and are attempting to deal with the school about it. The Alexandria School children are well received.

Vivian Henderson conducted another workshop on employment in Jackson the first week-end in August. This was done in the same effective manner in which all other employment workshops have been handled under his guidance and supervision. This is the second one conducted in Tennessee. Participants from Jackson, Bolivar and Sommerville gained the necessary knowledge about the President's Committee on Equal Employment and the Executive Order 10925. One complaint was reported from Bolivar and has been filed with the Committee.

Knoxville

I really don't know what has happened to the Knox Area Council. I can get no replies from the president there, and when I was in Knoxville in August most of our members I tried to reach were out of the city. The hospital committee has been unsuccessful in getting the church related hospitals to accept Negro patients. The hospitals have resisted efforts of the Mayor and citizen groups. Picketing is planned, if this new effort of the Mayor is unsuccessful. By pure grapevine, I hear that the Knox Area Council is torn by dissention, and only rallies when another group attempts to move in. There is both acceptance and suspicion of the Highlander Center there.

Knoxville Vocational School has an open policy this year.

Other East Tennessee Areas

We have been in correspondence with Bristol which is trying to start a local council. The general problem there is apathy. Their schools desegregated voluntarily in lower grades this year, but not in reality, since no Negroes asked to enroll in previously white schools. The new council is starting out with some survey of the curriculum of the Negro high school in Bristol, Tennessee and Va. since neither of them is accredited by the Southern Association, and the curriculum is inadequate for college preparation. The leader in Johnson City has moved out of the state. Kingsport has evidently taken no group action. Maryville has an informal group with whom I met in August. They are working toward integration of the schools. (See August NEWSLETTER). It is these small beginning groups we especially want to get in on a state-wide meeting of local council leaders.

Lebanon

In July, CORE responded to the repeated requests of Lebanon Negroes for assistance by sending Miss Mary Hamilton to Lebanon. Miss Hamilton, 25 years old, originally from Colorado, former teacher in Los Angeles, veteran of the Mississippi freedom rides and the Hines County jail, has been involved in a number of activities sponsored by CORE. She is making her home in Lebanon, although at the present time she is in New York. She is expected back in Lebanon by Mid October. Miss Hamilton is an attractive, bright competent young person with great zeal for the whole freedom movement. She believes that one of Lebanon's basic needs is to train the Negro citizens for leadership. This involves teaching some clerical skills such as operating a mimeograph machine, organizing and following through on demonstrations, etc. She feels they are not ready for negotiating, and will be easily overpowered by skillful white power structure persons. However, she has been cooperative with our efforts to enlist concern on the part of white citizens. Numerous trips have been made to Lebanon but with little success. (See August NEWSLETTER). Miss Hamilton and others from Lebanon CORE met with Dr. Hightower, leader in the Wilson County Youth Commission, the organization which is apparently endorsed by the U. S. Children's Bureau. Dr. Hightower asked their help in ascertaining juvenile delinquency information about Negroes, but did not promise any place on the Commission for Negroes in the policy making areas. The Negroes refused, and have written the U. S. Children's Bureau. While there are a few white persons with whom I can talk frankly, they are not really part of the power structure, and feel completely incapable of bringing about change. Although coverage in the Nashville TENNESSEAN has been requested, there has been no consistent news coverage. Two crosses were burned in Negro neighborhoods in Lebanon. On a smaller scale, this is the same situation as in Albany, Georgia. The two teachers who were fired last summer did not get their jobs back. One has left Tennessee, and the other is unemployed, although when school started this fall, one of the classrooms was without a teacher. The school superintendent would give no reason for the discharge of the teachers, and was technically protected in this because they did not have permanent status. The six Negro pickets who were arrested after 10 minutes in front of the one Lebanon movie house, stayed in jail two nights, and then went to trial where charges were dropped. It has been difficult to recruit Negroes for demonstrations, and there is undoubtedly fear of retailation from white employers. Lebanon also has several prosperous Negro citizens who have been considered the leaders by the white community, but are discredited by the protest group, and who are not helping in the current struggle. As far as can be discovered, there is no firm with federal contracts in Lebanon which also advertises itself as a non-union town. If there is one thing that Lebanon fears more than the Negro protest movement it is labor unions. The night the pickets were in jail I attended the rally of Negro citizens which was the largest they had been able to get out this summer. After the meeting, about 20 of the Negroes quietly went to the jail, sang one song and prayed, but were not molested by the police who quickly converged near the jail. Led by CORE, a group of Lebanon Negroes were refused admission to the swimming facilities of Cedars of Lebanon State Park but used the other facilities there without trouble.

Integration of Schools

Little additional comment is necessary about the schools. Southern School News gives an adequate account of desegregation this fall. One Negro student was admitted in the Murfreesboro schools. This county is adjacent to counties in which Lebanon and Nashville are located, and this token desegregation was voluntary, as was true in Williamson County which began a grade-a-year plan. Some of the most serious situations of inequality are in the eastern half of the state where the Negro population is small, and Negroes travel long distances by school buses to attend segregated schools. In Cookeville, Negroes come from nearby counties to attend the high school there. The Cookeville High School teachers are resistive toward desegregation for fear they would lose their jobs.

As nearly as I can determine, they probably would, because their preparation is such that they would not be incorporated into a desegregated school set-up.

When I was in East Tennessee in August I stopped and visited a number of our members in remote areas. In Cumberland County, there are no Negroes in the entire county, and there is a determination that there will not be. While the state park is open there, it has evidently not been used, and there was some uneasiness about any use which might be made of it. One of our members was sure that the local people would be hostile.

Annual Meeting

The Fifth Annual Meeting is set for Chattanooga on October 11 and 12. Since this is in the middle of the week, we recognize this will interfere with our attendance. Mrs. Ernest Silver of Oak Ridge is program chairman, and has worked diligently in the little time that she has had. Chattanooga board members invited the Council to Chattanooga for this meeting, but the most enthusiastic one then left Tennessee and it was difficult to get any commitments from them in regard to plans. We recognized that they were all so involved in the desegregation of the schools that they could not think ahead. We were prepared to move the meeting to Oak Ridge in the event the school desegregation caused too much tension. We were indeed grateful to Harold Fleming for accepting our invitiation to speak at the dinner meeting. No first class motel or hotel would take our council for housing, and all channels were pursued, including the Chamber of Commerce Convention Bureau. We settled for meetings at the Hotel Patten, with the conference motel being the Rosetta, a Negro motel, which will accommodate all members as far as there is room.

The Board meeting will follow the close of the annual meeting, and it is hoped that this meeting will cope realistically with the future of the Council, both in program and financing.

PARTICIPANTS IN THE PANEL DISCUSSION SET
FOR ANNUAL MEETING, CHATTANOOGA, OCTOBER 12,'62

TRENDS IN MANPOWER DEMANDS AND COMMUNITY PREPARATION

Reorganization of the southern region from an economy highly dependent upon rural agriculture to one oriented toward an industrial-urban base has, in general been part of total change, expansion and growth in the national economy. The consequence has been a movement of the South away from its traditional economic backwardness toward closer conformity with the rest of the economy in terms of income, employment, urbanization and industrial structure.

Change in manpower demands has been one of the major developments in the national economy and it has become one of the significant outcomes of southern economic reorganization.

The purpose of this brief discussion is to reflect upon such changes, both current and projected, and to consider what significance these changes have in terms of community preparation and equal employment opportunity for all citizens.

II

Three changes in manpower requirements stand out:

1) Basically jobs in the economy have been shifting from the goods producing industries to the service industries. This means an expansion in manpower demands for services such as banking, insurance, real estate, public utilities, wholesale and retail trade and government services, including Federal, state and local governments. Meanwhile, in terms of the number of available jobs, manpower demands in agriculture and mining continue to decline, and the number of jobs in manufacturing and construction remain about the same.

2) On the other hand, the kinds of manpower needed by manufacturing, construction and the services have dramatically shifted to technically trained, skilled and semi-skilled persons with competency in basic and specialized skills obtained through basic education and technical training.

3) Within heavy manufacturing and industry, there has been a substantial shift of employment from plant to office, from blue collar to white collar jobs. For example, in 1962 manufacturing industries accounted for 1/3 of the total employees in non-agricultural establishments. This amounts to about 15 million persons, the same number of persons employed by these industries in 1947. However, there was a decline in the number of production workers utilized by manufacturers well in excess of one million. This decline in production workers was offset by a substantial increase in office workers in clerical, preprofessional and technical jobs.

III

All indications point to a continuance of these three trends throughout the current decade. Likewise indication suggest that these shifts are of particular significance to Negroes currently in the labor force, and those entering the labor market over the next several years.

In the first place, Negroes have traditionally been employed in the goods producing industries, particularly agriculture in the South. When Negroes moved out of agriculture they went into mining, manufacturing, and construction - all of which were expanding industries during World War II and the immediate post-war period. Indeed, the significant improvement in the economic status between 1940 and 1957 was the result of the movement of Negroes into these areas of employment, and out of agriculture. But with the failure of these industries to increase their demand for employees during the past five years, with the demand of these industries for technically trained and skilled personnel; and with the shift of employment increase from plant to office, Negroes plagued by a persistent lag in manpower development face particularly troublesome problems relative to absorption into the mainstream of urban employment. Thus, community programs directed toward equal employment opportunities must face realistically the necessity for community action to meet this aspect of the problem. For example, the high employment rate among Negroes arises in great part from the three changes in manpower demand previously noted.

The point to be made is that not only must the problem of racial stratification and discrimination in employment be under constant attack at the community level but also specific programs directed toward stepping up the flow of manpower to meet urban job requirements must be recognized as part of the community's responsibility.

Thus community programs directed toward school board policy that perpetuates weak guidance and counselling in the schools and poor vocational and technical training programs must be stepped up. Community programs must insist that high school and college students take Federal service entrance examinations, and that programs directed toward increasing the flow of Negro applicants into Federal, local and state government agencies and firms holding contracts with the Federal government are at work in every school. (For a full discussion on these points see: Vivian W. Henderson's "Economic Opportunity and Negro Education", The American Teacher's Association Bulletin, March 1962).

Community involvement in manpower preparation and development is almost as essential as community involvement in opening the doors of employment opportunity. Churches, social agencies, Parent Teacher Associations, Civic clubs and action groups have excellent opportunity to become involved in this vital area. For example, "drop-outs" is a serious problem among high school youth today. Combined community efforts are necessary if this problem does not become more serious as time passes. Retraining programs sponsored by the Federal government are available and adult education programs and evening courses can meet the needs of persons who quit school because of early marriage.

The lesson for the present and the future is that a necessary qualification for a better job in the community is a good education for the young entering the labor force, and retraining and acquisition of new skills for the older workers.

IV

The future demand for skilled labor in Tennessee over the next few years appears as follows:

	Per cent increase or decrease
Clerical worker	25.6 - 30
Skilled worker	30 - 35.2
Semi-skilled worker	14 - 19.8
Professional and Managerial	21 - 27.3
Unskilled	-12.4 to -16.3 (decline)

Among the skilled occupations, the five categories with the largest anticipated increase in number of jobs are:

Skilled Occupational Category	Rate of Increase (Estimated)
Metal trades and Welding	61 per cent
Service (finance, real estate, banking)	52 " "
Skilled Crafts in Construction (air conditioning, refrigeration)	48 " "
Electricity	47 " "
Printing trades	25 " "

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

To: Paul Rilling

From: Katherine Jones

Quarterly Report: June, July, August 1962

Council Board and Administration

There have been no board or executive committee meetings during this quarter. There was a plan to have an executive committee meeting concurrent with the local council presidents on the first Saturday after Labor Day, and invitations were issued to local councils. However, President Barrett became so involved with the vote fraud situation in Nashville that it was impossible to continue with plans. We tried later to have this meeting of local councils and the executive committee on September 15, but due to the short notice and an unbelievable number of personal disasters for executive committee members, we had representatives from only three local council groups, and less than a quorum of the executive committee. Our own by-laws, requiring 30 days notice for executive committee meetings, were ignored in the call.

With a local election (metropolitan government referendum) in Nashville and state-wide races for Congressional seats, governon, and state legislators, it seemed that all council members were busily engaged in promoting some political candidate or measure. The Nashville referendum was held on June 28, and the general election on August 2. With the vote fraud situation, this meant we had no access to the Council president until September. The Council staff engaged in a number of minor matters, but was not able to work toward some of the widely representative membership matters. We did start working on the annual meeting, but could not get Chattanooga leadership responsibility pinned down until September, and therefore the entire push for the annual meeting is coming a month late. Board meeting will follow the annual meeting, according to our by-laws, and board members have been so notified, via the NEWSLETTER.

Both Mrs. Webster and I have felt the frustration of lack of access to the elected leadership this summer. I was on vacation for nearly three weeks in this quarter, and Mrs. Webster was away one week.

The Council and Finances

We came to the September deadline for matching funds lacking $1,000.00 for our matching funds, and considerably in debt. Now, in late September we are still short about $450.00, but I think we will now reach it. This is largely due to the lethargy in Nashville and Memphis, where during the last year there has not been any continued program.

State Parks

The one state wide accomplishment during the summer was the opening of the state parks. Although this was a state wide activity, the actual negotiation was carried out by Nashville people, recruited by the staff. This was an undertaking which grew out of the 1961 annual meeting. There were many delays in obtaining an appointment, and then getting substitutes for the original negotiating team for the Council. The team of three who finally went did not include any of the original Council team. Although the Commissioner and other members of his staff were suspicious at first, if not openly hostile, they evidently mellowed considerably during the discussion. The end result was the full and immediate use of the parks except for swimming. There was the usual reluctance about swimming, although not mentioned, plus a practical reason. The parks do not have a police compliment, and depend on the local sheriff for law enforcement. The Commissioner felt that they could not depend on this protection if there were an incident in the water or on the beaches. If the sheriff does not have adequate assistance he can call on state troopers, but they cannot go into provide protection unless first requested by the sheriff. I think they probably can go if so ordered by the Governor. The second restriction was that no public announcement would be made, but we were free to spread the news around, provided we did not make a broadside announcement. This precluded a straightforward announcement in the NEWSLETTER, although we tried to indicate a change in policy, and invited inquiry. Our team felt this was as good an agreement as we could obtain this summer, although some of our council members were dissatisfied with the restriction on swimming. It seemed to me that the strategy was to use the parks enough so that when the new administration took office in January 1963, we could go back to them and ask for the end of all restrictions and designations on literature, maps, place mats, etc. We did not try to restrict members from swimming, since this was their decision, but said that we could not protest bad faith if they were refused. When we used Montgomery Bell State Park in September, we were cordially received in the dining room, lodge, etc. One of the waiters said we were the first interracial group using the dining room. We know that there had been some interracial picnicing there, and at several other state parks. Except for swimming there has been no resistence, as far as we know.

Memphis

The Commission on Civil Rights met in Memphis on June 25 and 26. Prior to this time, I was in Memphis to assist in working out a plan for some recognition of their visit. The local council president was wholly engaged in managing the Congressional campaign of Ross Prichard, and with Mr. Lane's approval, the planning for a reception was left to other members of the local executive committee. Although the Civil Rights group was to be housed at a Holiday Inn, this motel was literally without accommodations for any entertainment, and the efforts of the manager there were unsuccessful in obtaining space at any of the other Holiday Inns. None of the hotels would take us except the King Cotton, a respectable hotel encrusted with tradition. Because of other committments, the Civil Rights Commission could make available to us only the hours of 6:30 to 8:00 p.m. This was a fine cocktail hour, but this is a dry state, so we agreed to settle for a fruit punch. A series of cliff hanger incidents followed: the Commission could not decide whether to come or not since the King Cotton had not been willing to accept them as guests of the hotel. (They had made their own arrangements, and we did not know this.) The Commission's staff was waiting to see what the Commissioners did, and were unwilling to commit themselves whether they would attend. We did not know until their arrival whether they would appear. Several hours before the reception there was a threat of a boycott by Negroes because the reception was at the King Cotton, but we later learned that there was no agreement on this, although undoubtedly some of this had filtered to the Commissioners. Invitations had gone from Nashville to a number of Memphis city officials and business people (names supplied by Memphis members) and the Memphis Council had notified their own members, except that they had changed the time to read from 8 to 10 p.m. This was discovered only a few hours before the reception. In consequence, several of us spent the remainder of the afternoon and early evening trying to reach members by telephone. How the whole matter came off as well as it did, I will never understand. Commissioners Hannah and Mr. Robinson did not come; the other Commissioners were there, with the staff remaining divided on attendance.

I could recognize the Commission's wanting to be consistent about their actions, but I could hardly understand their reasoning about the hotel. They were housed at a motel at which some of them would not be accommodated if they appeared there as tourists the following week. The accommodations which we had arranged were little different from the motel situation. As far as Memphis was concerned, it was the first time that any mid-town Memphis hotel had been available for a non-quota group, and in this case for a reception for a group to whom the Mayor was openly hostile. I believe we had about 80 people, and it was surprisingly gay and pleasant, despite the strained appearance of a number of the persons who were intimately concerned.

The Memphis council had a good meeting last spring on clerical and business training opportunities in Memphis, pointing up the poor training available to Negro youth, and the complete lack of it for adults. Unfortunately the workshop which Dr. Henderson was to lead soon afterwards could not be arranged for that time. It is now firmly set for October 19 and 20. All of this means that Memphis has had almost no program during the past year.

Nashville

The Council sponsored an arts and crafts class for 15 eight year old girls of all races and religions. This project grew out of concern for interracial understanding and association among children of this age and cultural level who have least opportunity for association. The class met once per week for 1½ hours. These sessions, six in all, were held to determine the effectiveness, and to give us some ideas for planning of future participation or sponsorship of such projects.

Miss Frances Thompson, Professor of Art, Tennessee A&I State University, conducted this class and was most effective in preparing for and working with the group. We are in agreement with replies to an evaluation survey sent to parents of participants which revealed that too little time was alotted for group participation and personal communication of the children. We will recognize this need in preparing for future children's projects.

The American Friends Service sponsored a 10 weeks' summer project in Nashville for "Internes in Community Service". This included 8 college age young people who worked throughout the city in social service agencies, and returned at night to an interracial living arrangement in a white neighborhood. The leadership was good, and the group had good experiences together, and in their work assignment. It was originally intended that the group be somewhat larger, but some last minute drop-outs, plus the decision of one member to leave after about two weeks meant that there were only 8 there full time. There was no community reaction as far as I know until the newspaper article of September 9 appeared. This was after the group had disbanded. Following the publication of this article there was some rather violent protest to the United Givers Fund, since some of their receiving agencies had been sponsors. There were accusations that they had sponsored a Communist group, etc. Whether this will have any real effect on the funds campaign this fall is not determined, although there have been threats.

Jackson

The Voter Registration Unit in Jackson was an altogether different kind of group. It was evident from the first that this group did not have adequate leadership. K. Jones and D. Webster both visited with this group at different times. When K. Jones saw them in late June, they were an entirely white group, all northerners - good Brooklyn accents abounded - all somewhat older than the Nashville group, and all of strong personal conviction. I never was sure what these convictions were but it was obvious that they were strong. They had only a month to stimulate registrations for voting before the registration books closed preparatory to the August primary election. They set about getting Negroes registered with great enthusiasm, and counted it a day lost if they could not report a large number of scalps by nightfall. To their dismay, and frequent exasperation, they discovered that on checking back some of the citizens who had promised to register had not done so. When I talked with them, I proposed that they go at it more slowly and stay longer with the person to indicate some personal concern and interest in him. I was also concerned that this registration of persons without any voter education could well lead to domination by old-line political machines. The students were not sure they had time to talk to people - their job was to just get them registered. One girl frankly said that she "couldn't care less" about some of these citizens individually. Throughout the discussion there was no indication of leadership from the appointed leaders. The group was highly critical of all members of the white community, even over the protest of Mr. Albert Porter of Lane College who tried to point out that they were not in a position to judge from their limited knowledge. From reports that I received later, the group made a positive contribution in the Negro community, were well accepted, and undoubtedly did increase the number of registered Negro voters. After the registration books were closed, they participated in some voter registration workshops. I do not know any way to assess what contribution they made to the voting strength in Madison county. In the August primary, Mr. Z. Alexander Looby, respected Negro Nashville attorney ran as an independent for Judge of the Court of Appeals. Two white nominees were Democratic candidates. They (together) received 20,000 votes in Madison county, and Mr. Looby received 3,322. It can be assumed that very few of the Looby votes came from white persons in Madison county.

Just prior to the August primary this group attended a rally for one of the candidates for Governor. They had recruited to their group a number of Lane College students, and at the rally there was some display of interracial dating. Soon after this the group notified a white minister that they were coming to his church the following Sunday. When they arrived, in an interracial group they were seated, and the minister recognized the group. Evidently some of the congregation spoke of them warmly afterwards. However, there was deep reaction on the part of many of the very vocal members. As a result, both the minister and the usher who seated them (he has been active in the council) have come in for severe criticism and resentment. The usher is a physician and has lost a number of patients. As a result of this, the official boards of a number of churches have adopted some policy about seating guests, From reports I have from Jackson, the incident at the political rally and the church attendance coming so closely together were more than Jackson was prepared to swallow. The feeling was such that the Jackson Community Relations Council cancelled a proposed meeting with the Voter Registration group. The Council, feeling that it had goals and aims which extended beyond the summer and that it might get thoroughly engolfed in the controversy about the actions of the voter group. The Voter Registration group added fuel to the flame by condeming the council, and effected some breach between the Negro and white community. Ray Allen as chairman of the Council did go out and meet with them, and they evidently were bitterly critical of him. At this time things are calm within the Council, but some distrust has been built up which it will be hard to overcome.

Jackson did finally get an agreement to open the lunch counter at Woolworths, and by agreement the control period started in early September. It went smoothly. However, the white citizens council found out about it, so that currently they are picketing Woolworth's, carrying placards protesting the integration of the lunch counters.

Several children in primary grades are going to Alexandria School for the first time. Two of the three Negro children are back in the Jr. High school. The third child has moved out of the county. The school system, (at least one or more of the teachers at Tigrett Jr. High) has been counselling the white children against friendliness toward the Negro students. However, several of the Council members know this now, and are attempting to deal with the school about it. The Alexandria School children are well received.

Vivian Henderson conducted another workshop on employment in Jackson the first week-end in August. This was done in the same effective manner in which all other employment workshops have been handled under his guidance and supervision. This is the second one conducted in Tennessee. Participants from Jackson, Bolivar and Sommerville gained the necessary knowledge about the President's Committee on Equal Employment and the Executive Order 10925. One complaint was reported from Bolivar and has been filed with the Committee.

Knoxville

I really don't know what has happened to the Knox Area Council. I can get no replies from the president there, and when I was in Knoxville in August most of our members I tried to reach were out of the city. The hospital committee has been unsuccessful in getting the church related hospitals to accept Negro patients. The hospitals have resisted efforts of the Mayor and citizen groups. Picketing is planned, if this new effort of the Mayor is unsuccessful. By pure grapevine, I hear that the Knox Area Council is torn by dissention, and only rallies when another group attempts to move in. There is both acceptance and suspicion of the Highlander Center there.

Knoxville Vocational School has an open policy this year.

Other East Tennessee Areas

We have been in correspondence with Bristol which is trying to start a local council. The general problem there is apathy. Their schools desegregated voluntarily in lower grades this year, but not in reality, since no Negroes asked to enroll in previously white schools. The new council is starting out with some survey of the curriculum of the Negro high school in Bristol, Tennessee and Va. since neither of them is accredited by the Southern Association, and the curriculum is inadequate for college preparation. The leader in Johnson City has moved out of the state. Kingsport has evidently taken no group action. Maryville has an informal group with whom I met in August. They are working toward integration of the schools. (See August NEWSLETTER). It is these small beginning groups we especially want to get in on a state-wide meeting of local council leaders.

Lebanon

In July, CORE responded to the repeated requests of Lebanon Negroes for assistance by sending Miss Mary Hamilton to Lebanon. Miss Hamilton, 25 years old, originally from Colorado, former teacher in Los Angeles, veteran of the Mississippi freedom rides and the Hines County jail, has been involved in a number of activities sponsored by CORE. She is making her home in Lebanon, although at the present time she is in New York. She is expected back in Lebanon by Mid October. Miss Hamilton is an attractive, bright competent young person with great zeal for the whole freedom movement. She believes that one of Lebanon's basic needs is to train the Negro citizens for leadership. This involves teaching some clerical skills such as operating a mimeograph machine, organizing and following through on demonstrations, etc. She feels they are not ready for negotiating, and will be easily overpowered by skillful white power structure persons. However, she has been cooperative with our efforts to enlist concern on the part of white citizens. Numerous trips have been made to Lebanon but with little success. (See August NEWSLETTER). Miss Hamilton and others from Lebanon CORE met with Dr. Hightower, leader in the Wilson County Youth Commission, the organization which is apparently endorsed by the U. S. Children's Bureau. Dr. Hightower asked their help in ascertaining juvenile delinquency information about Negroes, but did not promise any place on the Commission for Negroes in the policy making areas. The Negroes refused, and have written the U. S. Children's Bureau. While there are a few white persons with whom I can talk frankly, they are not really part of the power structure, and feel completely incapable of bringing about change. Although coverage in the Nashville TENNESSEAN has been requested, there has been no consistent news coverage. Two crosses were burned in Negro neighborhoods in Lebanon. On a smaller scale, this is the same situation as in Albany, Georgia. The two teachers who were fired last summer did not get their jobs back. One has left Tennessee, and the other is unemployed, although when school started this fall, one of the classrooms was without a teacher. The school superintendent would give no reason for the discharge of the teachers, and was technically protected in this because they did not have permanent status. The six Negro pickets who were arrested after 10 minutes in front of the one Lebanon movie house, stayed in jail two nights, and then went to trial where charges were dropped. It has been difficult to recruit Negroes for demonstrations, and there is undoubtedly fear of retailation from white employers. Lebanon also has several prosperous Negro citizens who have been considered the leaders by the white community, but are discredited by the protest group, and who are not helping in the current struggle. As far as can be discovered, there is no firm with federal contracts in Lebanon which also advertises itself as a non-union town. If there is one thing that Lebanon fears more than the Negro protest movement it is labor unions. The night the pickets were in jail I attended the rally of Negro citizens which was the largest they had been able to get out this summer. After the meeting, about 20 of the Negroes quietly went to the jail, sang one song and prayed, but were not molested by the police who quickly converged near the jail. Led by CORE, a group of Lebanon Negroes were refused admission to the swimming facilities of Cedars of Lebanon State Park but used the other facilities there without trouble.

Integration of Schools

Little additional comment is necessary about the schools. Southern School News gives an adequate account of desegregation this fall. One Negro student was admitted in the Murfreesboro schools. This county is adjacent to counties in which Lebanon and Nashville are located, and this token desegregation was voluntary, as was true in Williamson County which began a grade-a-year plan. Some of the most serious situations of inequality are in the eastern half of the state where the Negro population is small, and Negroes travel long distances by school buses to attend segregated schools. In Cookeville, Negroes come from nearby counties to attend the high school there. The Cookeville High School teachers are resistive toward desegregation for fear they would lose their jobs.

As nearly as I can determine, they probably would, because their preparation is such that they would not be incorporated into a desegregated school set-up.

When I was in East Tennessee in August I stopped and visited a number of our members in remote areas. In Cumberland County, there are no Negroes in the entire county, and there is a determination that there will not be. While the state park is open there, it has evidently hot been used, and there was some uneasiness about any use which might be made of it. One of our members was sure that the local people would be hostile.

Annual Meeting

The Fifth Annual Meeting is set for Chattanooga on October 11 and 12. Since this is in the middle of the week, we recognize this will interfere with our attendance. Mrs. Ernest Silver of Oak Ridge is program chairman, and has worked diligently in the little time that she has had. Chattanooga board members invited the Council to Chattanooga for this meeting, but the most enthusiastic one then left Tennessee and it was difficult to get any commitments from them in regard to plans. We recognized that they were all so involved in the desegregation of the schools that they could not think ahead. We were prepared to move the meeting to Oak Ridge in the event the school desegregation caused too much tension. We were indeed grateful to Harold Fleming for accepting our invitiation to speak at the dinner meeting. No first class motel or hotel would take our council for housing, and all channels were pursued, including the Chamber of Commerce Convention Bureau. We settled for meetings at the Hotel Patten, with the conference motel being the Rosetta, a Negro motel, which will accommodate all members as far as there is room.

The Board meeting will follow the close of the annual meeting, and it is hoped that this meeting will cope realistically with the future of the Council, both in program and financing.

PROGRAM REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER, OCTOBER, NOVEMBER, 1962

1. Information-Education Mail Program

Our September Human Relations Bulletin was mailed to 1290 people, including members and VIPs.

In October preparations were made to mail the Raleigh Council statement to mayors in the state but this was postponed until the executive committee could discuss the matter in January.

Our November Bulletin was mailed to members and contributors, and a selected VIP list - total 660. (We did not have the funds for a large mailing).

2. Raleigh Council

The statement referred to above was presented to the Raleigh City Council on October 15. It received full publicity in both Raleigh newspapers, and editorial support from one of them. In November the Raleigh Ministerial Association came out with a statement of their own, asking for desegregation of all public facilities. The mayor has agreed to appoint an interracial advisory committee to deal with the problem.

3. Charlotte Council

Two public forums were planned for October and November. In October Dr. Howard Zinn spoke at a dinner meeting on Albany, Georgia. Fifty people were present.

In November, by way of contrast, we were to hear Dr. Thomas Henderson speak on racial progress in Richmond, Virginia. Unfortunately, Dr. Henderson had to cancel his appearance at the last moment due to the sudden death of a faculty member at Virginia Union University. It is hoped that he can fill the engagement in January.

The forum topic for November was changed to "Recent Developments in Race Relations," and reports were given on Oxford, Albany and Durham.

In October word was received from John Wheeler that Vice President Lyndon Johnson wanted to speak to a group of Charlotte businessmen on equal opportunity in employment during his visit to Charlotte for a political rally. I got in touch with Charles M. Lowe, the chairman of the Mayor's sub-committee on employment, and he and the Mayor and I put together a list of 50 key persons to be invited and we were ready to get out the invitations for the Mayor. Unfortunately, the Vice President's office never did clear the matter with the local committee in charge of Johnson's itinerary, so the meeting was never held. However, we hope to catch the Vice President sometime later when he is in the area or passing through, and set up another meeting.

In September a letter was sent from the Charlotte Council to thirty leading restaurants in Charlotte offering to help on a planned program of desegregation. Two replies were received. One owner, who operates a combination drive-in and inside restaurant, offered to help persuade drive-in people to desegregate. Twelve drive-in operators were contacted and ten of them agreed to come to a meeting to discuss the matter. However only four showed up at the meeting. It was agreed that we would ask the Mayor's committee to ask all the operators of drive-in restaurants to another meeting.

The chairman of the Mayor's sub-committee on restaurants contended that downtown restaurants and hotels should desegregate first, and he agreed to call a meeting of these operators in mid-November. The latest word is that this meeting is now set for sometime after Christmas.

4. Monroe

During September and October I had several talks with the Mayor of Monroe about his appointing an interracial advisory committee. I also talked with the Monroe ministers on the subject. Research

The advisory committee consisting of four whites andfour Negroes was appointed in November. I was invited to this first meeting and heard the Mayor tell the committee that discrimination and segregation must be done away with. I suggested that the committee needed both a long-range and a short-range program; that some constructive changes need to be made now if the committee was to have the confidence and support of the Negro community.

I had recommended a larger committee and the Mayor said that he would leave this matter up to the committee itself. It was agreed that other members would be added. The committee agreed to have one meeting in December, and in January to begin meeting every other week.

5. Contacts with Governor

I have contacted the Governor's office once a month and talked with Joel Fleishman, his assistant who is working on plans for the Governor's conference on employment. The Governor has called in the head of the School of Business Administration at UNC for talks about the conference, and he has conferred with a number of Negro leaders. However, the date of the conference has not yet been announced. I presume it will be set for sometime in January.

6. Greensboro Dinner

A dinner meeting, at $5 per plate, was held at the Holiday Inn in Greensboro on November 12, with Harry Golden as speaker. It drew 75 people and was a very enjoyable occasion for all present. It netted the Council about $200.

7. NAIRO Conference

I attended the annual conference of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials which met in Washington, D. C., Nov. 28-Dec. 1.

This organization of professional intergroup relations personnel now has over a thousand members, and about half of them were in attendance at the conference. Most of these people are employed by official intergroup or anti-discrimination agencies of local, state of the federal government.

Some of the topics discussed were: The Changing Characters of Intergroup Relations Practice; Utilizing Power for Civil Rights Tools; The New Housing Order; Urban Planning and Intergroup Relations; and Southern Voter Registration. Two of the main speakers were from North Carolina: Marion Wright of Linville Falls and John H. Wheeler of Durham.

8. Membership and Finance

No special efforts were made in membership recruitment during the quarter, but 14 new members were added to our rolls.

The deficit of $81.45 shown on our financial sheet is not a true picture for salaries and travel expenses amounting to $441.42 were unpaid at the end of the month.

Several possible sources of income have failed to materialize, including the Charlotte Council which is $420 in arrears in their pledge.

Thirteen executive committee members have sent in contributions amounting to $435 during the quarter. This has been a big help.

We borrowed $500 from SRC on November 1st but remember that on October 1st we had to pay back $450 borrowed from SRC last year.

If the Charlotte Council comes through with what they owe us this month, we will be able to get by without borrowing more money at least another month.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE STATE

Perhaps the most significant development in the state was the ruling of the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Durham case. It was reported in our November Bulletin.

September saw a round of picketing with many arrests in Howard Johnson restaurants in Charlotte, Statesville and Durham, and in cafeterias in Greensboro. Picketing was resumed in Greensboro in October, and again in November. Sixty-seven pickets were arrested on Thanksgiving Day.

An attempt was made to organize a Citizens Council in Charlotte in September. About 175 people, many of them curiosity seekers, heard Dr. Medford Evans read a long and boring speech about race and communism. An organizing meeting was to have been held within a month, but nothing more has been heard of the group.

About 60 Negroes walked out of the Unity High School in Statesville when Governor Sanford began to speak on September 26. About 600 remained. The walk-out was said to be in protest against segregated schools.

Memorial Hospital has a Negro doctor on its medical staff for the first time. He is Dr. Warren Williams. Williams was censored last May by the all-Negro Charlotte Medical Society for accepting a limited "scientific" membership in the North Carolina Medical Society. Research

An anti-picketing ordinance in Edenton was reported in our November Bulletin. Negroes have continued to defy the ordinance and on November 27 that part of the ordinance which required a $10 fee for picketing was declared unconstitutional by Superior Judge William J. Bundy. However, picketing and arrests continue as Negroes continue to test the remaining portion of the ordinance which requires 24 hours notice, walking more than five feet from the curb and carrying a sign less than 2 feet square.

A group of Negro parents in Reidsville have brought suit in the U. S. Middle District Court asking that all public schools in Reidsville be desegregated. They claim that the school assignment act has been used to maintain segregation.

Federal Judge Stanley has ruled in Greensboro that local hospitals receiving Hill-Burton funds are not required to integrate their facilities. The case was instituted last spring by nine Negro doctors and dentists. It will be appealed and the final decision will be an important one in the South.

Governor Sanford announced plans in September to appoint a "Good Neighbor Council" to work in the field of race relations and economic opportunities. As of this date, no further word has been heard about this council.

Respectfully submitted

October 1962

INTRODUCTION

On October 15, 1962, a group of Raleigh citizens, representing the Raleigh Council on Human Relations, appeared before the City Council of Raleigh to make a plea for an orderly plan or program to achieve the goal of equal justice and human dignity for all of its citizens.

The statement of the Raleigh group would apply equally well to many other communities in North Carolina. It is an unusually clear and concise statement of the problems facing these communities, and a call for positive action to meet these problems.

We present below the full text of the Raleigh Council statement.

A RECOMMENDATION TO THE RALEIGH CITY COUNCIL

The Raleigh Council on Human Relations is an inter-racial, non-political group of Raleigh citizens working toward the effective solution of community problems of human relations of all sorts.

The Steering Committee of the Raleigh Council on Human Relations takes this opportunity to express its concern over the series of events occurring in Raleigh this past summer connected with efforts to desegregate certain publicly owned and privately owned facilities.

Although the closing of the pools at Pullen Park and at Chavis Park is, in our judgment, a denial of the rights of Raleigh citizens, our major concerns are the long-range implications of the effort of Negro citizens to achieve justice in areas of basic human dignity. Raleigh must make an accurate and sound judgment of this movement and plan the conduct of our community affairs accordingly, before incidents arise, or we may find ourselves in serious difficulty.

For many years Negro citizens in Raleigh patiently waited for equal rights and opportunities in all fields. Those rights and opportunities were not forthcoming until the Negroes themselves took affirmative action to secure them. Their struggle has been long and difficult and their progress slow. In almost every instance Raleigh Negroes have approached their objective with restraint and consideration. The position of the community has been initially resistant in almost every case--in school desegregation, in lunch counters, in employment opportunity, and now in the desegregation of public swimming pools, access to restaurants, hotels, motels, and motion picture theaters.

While patient restraint has been the pattern among Negroes in the past, Raleigh cannot expect it to remain so indefinitely. As Negro citizens have carried on their fight for equal citizenship, they have gained confidence and strength. Negroes are firmly convinced of the moral and legal rightness of their position. Raleigh can expect their patience to grow shorter and their demands to increase as younger leadership emerges. Raleigh cannot expect Negroes to continue, as they have in the past, to accept patiently the injustice of segregation and racial discrimination.

It should be the function of the government of Raleigh to secure the rights of its citizens, white and Negro alike. While it may be unwise in the face of history and custom to call for immediate and total desegregation, the time has certainly come for the development of an orderly plan or program in Raleigh which will achieve the goal of equal justice and human dignity for all citizens with deliberate speed and with consideration for the attitudes of all citizens.

One of the fundamental problems in race relations in the City of Raleigh is the apparent assumption by the white community and the city government that the rights sought by Negroes are theirs to grant and for the Negroes to beg. On the basis of law and moral consideration, this is a false assumption which has made it necessary for Negroes always to be placed in the inferior position. By all basic American principles the right of equal access to public facilities is inherent in the citizen and is not subject to granting or withholding by any part of the community.

With due respect the Raleigh Council on Human Relations recommends the formation of a Mayor's Committee on Human Relations to advise and assist the Mayor and the City Council on the event of incidents such as those occurring recently and in the implementation of the following proposals in the field of publicly owned facilities and public employment:

1. That the City of Raleigh reopen its swimming pools next summer and in addition prepare a plan for the desegregation of all publicly owned facilities which will result in their continued usage, not in their being closed.

2. That the City Council enforce its announced policy of non-discrimination in the hiring of City employees, securing an amendment to the City Charter, if necessary.

In the field of privately owned facilities serving the public, while recognizing that there is no legal right to be served in such places under North Carolina law, the Council is nevertheless deeply concerned about the lack of public eating and lodging accommodations for our Negro citizens. in Raleigh, and about the blatant injustice of refusing a person service solely because of his color. This concern is intensified by our observation of the ease with which such facilities in our neighboring cities of Richmond, Norfolk, Charlotte and Greensboro have been desegregated.

We further recognize the understandable fear of owners of such facilities that desegregation of their place of business alone, without corresponding desegregation by their competitors, might result in a loss of customers and profits.

The Council therefore recommends that the Mayor's Committee seek a voluntary agreement among restaurant and lodging establishments that each will accept or reject prospective customers on the basis of individual appearance and demeanor rather than on a basis of race.

We further urge the citizens of Raleigh and the City Council in particular to adopt the role of defender and advancer of the rights and dignity of all individual citizens. We believe that such a process must begin now and that the steps outlined above will lead to a more effective and equitable solution of racial and human problems in our City.

Confidential Report to Southern Regional Council
Quarter-Sept., Oct., Nov., 1962

September 1st found us still struggling with the Albany trouble. Vacations had been interrupted and both Mr. Holmes and I had spent long hot days to no avail. The KKK was meeting in the cow pasture, political activities surrounding the governor's race were at their heighth. Fear had increased in many areas in the state.

With the election of Mr. Sanders, things began to get back to normal and our councils began to get underway with fall programs.

The Annual Meeting was held October 27th. The list of new Board members is attached. It was exciting in many ways. The three newest councils, Brunswick, Rome and Albany were there with reports that were amazing. It is gratifying to know that our methods of work are being effective. The Brunswick progress shows how much it means when our organization works closely with other organizations in the field. The NAACP and the Brunswick Council have cooperated from the beginning. The staff members of the two groups have coordinated efforts at all times. We have received the maximum success from the minimum effort.

In some places this has not been possible. In Rome we are the only organization working. There is no local MOVEMENT and no NAACP. Work here is going on in a fine way. The Council sent a group to the City Commission expressing the grievances. The Chamber of Commerce has invited the same group to meet with them and discuss these grievances. There are no professional Negroes except school teachers in Rome. There is no experience in crossing the gulf of segregation and having real conversation between races. The Negro has no trust in the white man's word - the white merchants are afraid of outside agitators. But a beginning has been made. One of the local projects is trying to desegregate the new trade school that opened this fall for white's only. About 20 Negroes have tried to register. We believe a court case will be necessary to break this pattern. Since so many new segregated schools are being built all over the state, we hope some action will be taken. Although the NAACP has offered full advice and support, no Negroes (in Rome) have been willing to undertake legal action. There is too much sympathy among the leadership of Negro teachers for seperate but equal. They are so afraid of token integration and see the need for the schools before employment can improve.

Albany is still a question mark. We have had successful monthly meetings of the council. Successful in that we met without harrassment with white and Negroes present. There is still no sound program under way. But there are indications that we may get off the ground with a decent program soon. We are working on employment and education. Our personal harrassment from the area has ceased.

On one recent trip the program committee, not being able to get any information from Turner Air Force Base concerning civilian employees, asked me to contact the Deputy Employment Service Officer. I really did not believe that it was impossible to get the information. I found the Negroes were correct - in fact ~~they had~~ so called no information concerning what jobs were available or when and where applications could be made. Although I knew there were at least 500 civilian jobs on that post. Washington has promised a thorough investigation.

There is so much distrust in the whole community --- between Negro and Negro --- Negro and white. We still think it not a waste of time and money to continue working in Albany. Martin Luther King and the NAACP are all out. A few SNCC kids are still there. Charlie Jones is still in Mexico - we're happy to report. It means much to the local Negroes and the concerned whites that we are willing to continue to struggle with them.

It was amazing recently to find that the atmosphere had not penetrated too deeply into the surrounding areas. We answered a call to Tifton. The Negroes were organizing and making some demonstrations. We found several very fine white people and some sound Negro leadership. Those people had never met. We hope through getting them together some solution to the local problems will be made. We also hope to organize a small Council before summer. The strange thing was the seemingly absence of fear in a community so close to Albany where fear has been rampant.

Savannah, our oldest 'new' council is at a slight stand still after a strenuous program. We hope to help them overcome their discouragement and move ahead.

Columbus and Augusta likewise could use new life. Both need new white members. Macon is working at top speed at the moment. They are very thrilled and delighted with the employment campaign. The Council has been working in close cooperation with the local NAACP and other local Negro leaders. Much of the same leadership is in various groups - ours included. Between three to four hundred Negroes will have jobs of checkers and sales clerks in downtown stores by January 1st - 1963.

Both Mr. Holmes and I attended the NAIRO meeting in Washington. We found this very helpful and stimulating. Even though many of the problems discussed were more germane to Northern cities, much of the conference gave us new information and ideas.

I spent one week in October in Washington and New York looking for money. Although we found friends and made contacts which we believe will be useful in the future, we have received to date only two rather small donations from the trip. But we do have at least one more very good prospect.

We have been running a hand to mouth existence financially all fall. We received a grant of $2500 this month from the Norman Foundation which gave us new courage and a temporary relief from the strain. We plan to make some careful plans for fund raising during the first three months of the year so that we will be able to concentrate on program for the other nine months.

We are particularly interested in helping local councils have a more successful program in Employment. It is such a very complicated field - so difficult to break the circle --- no job --- no incentive --- poor training --- no job. We also hope to have influence with the new state administration. Several indications point that way. We have the cooperation of the new Democratic Chairman, Mr. Fuqua. We are trying to have Vandiver remove the discriminatory signs as a parting gift. There is tension about the new Senator --- whether he will or will not attend the social functions of the governor. Peter Zack says he plans to be a gentleman. But --- . We hope any open policy in the gallery will be the policy of the new government and have some reason to believe it will --- Mr. Sanders feels he has a mandate from the people to avoid trouble --- even at the cost of giving in to the inevitable. Mr. Fuqua also believes in a large and inclusive registration list.

Southwest Georgia is the big problem. We are going to give at least one of Baker, Terrell or Lee a try and see what we can do. Give us any advice as to methods. Granny Fauley may just blunder on in and talk with a few people --- so get the bail money ready.

Quarterly Program Report to Southern Regional Council from Alabama Council on Human Relations. For the Months, September, October and November, 1962.

Springhill College, a Catholic Institution, remains the only desegregated school in the State of Alabama. As schools opened in Alabama, there were attempts in two cities to desegregate public schools. The 26 Negroes were turned away from the all white Gadsden high school. City School Superintendant I. J. Browder said that Negroes were told that classes were filled and that they should return to the all Negro Carver High School. Mr. Browder stated that the Negroes said they were acting on their own and were not attempting to integrate on behalf of any group. Mr/ Browder said that this was apparently a publicity stunt. A Negro minister in Gadsden told the Executive Director that the students had talked with adults prior to going to the school and that they were very much in earnest in trying to desegregate the public schools. On September 4th Mrs. Marvin Burnette, wife of an army sargeant stationed at Redstone Arsenal, sought to enroll herdaughter in an all white elementary school. The Madison Pike School referred Mrs. Barnette to Dr. Richard Christian, the Superintendant of Schools of Huntsville. He told her on September 4th that there would be a hearing before the School Board of Huntsville within thirty days. The hearing was held on September 27th. The Executive Director met with Dr. Christian before the hearing and was invited by the Board to attend the hearing (September 27, 1962). At this hearing Mrs. Burnette stated that the school that her daughter was assigned to was outside of the school district and that her daughter would have to leave home a half hour earlier every morning and return home a half hour later each afternoon in order to attend the all Negro school. She also stated too the School Board that they had made a statement that no child would receive credits for any work done in a school outside of their own school district and pointed out that this decision was in conflict with their decision to transfer her daughter to Carver School. The Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations wrote letters to the Honorable Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of Defense; Burke Marshall, Assistant Attorney General, and Mr. Gerhard A. Gessell of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in the Armed Forces and to the U. S. Commissioner on Civil Rights. Mrs. Burnette had told Mr. Jimerson that her husband, Sgt. Burnette, had been called in by his superiors and told that he would be unwise to try to enter his daughter in a white school because they feared for his daughter's safety and added that the Army should not be involved in local politics or put the Army in an embarrassing position. This was reported to U. S. Commission on Civil Rights. Later a letter was received from the Commission on Civil Rights stating that the Army had conducted an investigation, that a hearing conducted in Huntsville and it was stated that Mr. and Mrs. Burnette denied that the Army or anyone in the Army had attempted to influence them not to attempt to enroll their daughter in a white school.

Events outside of the State of Mississippi have had an influence on Alabama in this quarter. The Birmingham News on Friday, September 14th, pointed out that Carl Sanders' victory over former Governor Marvin Griffin for Governor of Georgia indicated that the Georgians have not become integrationists but that they have decided to put rabid racism behind them. The Birmingham News continued to point out that Alabama should be able to profit from the lesson that racism was no longer politically popular to the voters in Georgia. The Birmingham News also pointed out that the race issue was kept out of a hot senatorial-gubernatorial campaign a few months before in South Carolina and that race was no issue in "recent Tennessee voting", also pointed out that race was played down in Arkansas. There have been some indications that people in Alabama have realized the futility of actions by the segregationists in Albany, Georgia, and businessmen in Alabama have said that they would hope there would be no "Albany" in Alabama.

Events in Oxford, Mississippi, including the calling out of U. S. Army to enroll Meredith at the University of Mississippi has had a sobering effect on many people in Alabama. Governor Patterson and other politicians in Alabama were supporting Barnett in his resistance and have since declared that he was right. However, it is to be noted that industrialists have been speaking out for law and order in Alabama. Many groups in various parts of the state have been making pleas for law and order including Southern Baptist Ministers Association of Montgomery, the President of the Alabama Baptist Association, the Birmingham Ministerial Association. Newspapers who had supported Wallace in his campaign for governor have since been editorializing for law and order and urging Governor-Elect George Wallace to maintain law and order. Incoming Lt. Governor James B. Allen has said that violence which attended entrance of a Negro to the University of Mississippi "must not be allowed to happen in Alabama. Also Richmond Flowers, incoming State Attorney General, has made pleas for law and order. The response of Governor-Elect George Wallace is that these pleas for law and order being sent to him are going to the wrong people. They should be sent to "Ben Bella, Castro, Martin Luther King, and that crowd in Washington rather than him because if there is any breakdown in law and order it will not be caused by Alabamians but from thoses outside our state".

Need in stuff to Sylvan Meyer

On October 8th Norman C. Jimerson, Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations was in State Circuit Court in Talladega to resist efforts of the State Attorney General to gain a permanent injunction against him. On April 28th State Attorney General MacDonald Gallion had issued an injunction against the students of Talladega College, the President of the College, Dean of the Chapel, two reporters and Norman C. Jimerson. In April, Mr. Jimerson had goneto Talladega to encourage local people to support the Mayor's suggestion that there be a bi-racial committee in Talladega to discuss the greivances discussed by Negroes in their demonstrations. The trial went at a snail's pace and after four days there were only 4 witnesses called by the state out of some 60 that they planned to call. The trials was postponed until October 22nd and continued for 4 days and then was postponed until February 5th of 1963.

Very important indication that the climate is changing in Alabama is the fact that the campaign to change the form of city government of Birmingham was successful. Mr. Eugene Connor, police commissioner of Birmingham, made it very clear that a vote for changing form of city government would be a vote against him personally and a vote for integration. By a narrow margin of 700 votes the people of Birmingham voted against the commission form of government and for the Mayor-Council Plan. Since November 6th many of the leading citizens of Birmingham have been attempting to develop a strong slate of candidates for Mayor and councilmen. At the present time Attorney Tom King, Commissioner Eugene Connor and Albert Boutwell have decided to run for Mayor. In the first primary in May of 1961, Attorney Tom King received more votes than the other candidates for Mayor of Birmingham. He was defeated in the run-off by Arthur Hanes who had the support of Bull Connor. It is to be remembered that the run-off was held two weeks after the riots at the bus station in Birmingham. Albert Boutwell has had many years of political activity in the state and has been Lt. Governor. He was running for Governor last May but withdrew from the campaign because of ill health. In August many of the power structure of Birmingham became aware of the fact that Martin Luther King was planning to come to Birmingham on September 25th for the annual convention of Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Early in September they had organized what is now known as the Senior Citizens Committee. Eighty people were controlling 80% of the wealth and 80% of the jobs in Birmingham decided that they had to take some positive actions in order to forestall demonstrations during the SCLS Convention. The sub-committee of this group had discussions with Negro leaders. They were encouraging merchants to remove discriminatory signs at drinking fountains and restrooms, seeking to correct abusives on buses and claimed to be interested in promoting employment opportunities for Negroes. It is most likely that they talked about employment was the result of action by the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity to investigate complaints that had been filed at Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, Hayes Aircraft Company and Southern Research Institute, all in Birmingham. Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, President of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights was included in some of these bi-racials meetings because it was realized that he was the one who would decided whether there would be demonstrations in Birmingham during the SCLC Conference in September. Since then the Senior Citizens Committee has apparently slowed down and Negroes have assumed that they did not keep their promises. At this point students at Miles College have been attempting to reactivate Selective Buying Campaign that was started last spring. At this point the Selective Buying Campaign is only partially successful in keeping Negroes out of downtown stores. Hearing of suits to desegregate Birmingham schools began October 3rd in the U. S. District Court in Birmingham and the case has been continued until the first of the year, 1963. It is anticipated that this spring there will be a decision by the courts that Birmingham must have a plan for desegregation to be put into effect by September of 1963.

Gadsden was again the scene of Negro activity on October 25th when 25 Negro teenagers were arrested after refusing a police officer's request to leave City Hall. The Birmingham News reports "the police said the group entered City Hall with a request for a tour of the building. They were told that all tours had to be arranged in advance and these Negroes were asked to leave and when they failed to do so they were arrested". On October 24th three Negroes were arrested and jailed when they tried twice to get service in City Hall Coffee Shop.

Alabama is in a state of flux. According to Alabama standards, things are relatively quiet now. Between now and March 5th will be a hot political campaign in Birmingham to elect a Mayor. Several Negroes have applied for admission to the University of Alabama. Some of these have withdrawn their applications. On December 4th President Rose of the University of Alabama announced that all applications for the Spring semester which had not been completed would not be considered. This move would mean that no Negro would be admitted for the spring semester to the University. Governor-Elect George Wallace has said that he will put more resistance than Barnett and on one occasion in November the newspapers quoted Mr. Wallace as saying that he would seek to organize a state militia to prevent desegregation of any schools in Alabama. In September Ku Klux Klan had meetings in Tuscaloosa and the White Citizens Council had a big rally in Montgomery. Governor's Wallace's unbending attitude and his pronouncements that there will be no desegregation in Alabama is arrousing responsible people throughout the state calling for law and order. The administration of the University of Alabama, the Board of Trustees, the faculty, businessmen in Tuscaloosa, ministerial association in Huntsville, newspapers which had supported Governor Wallace in his campaign for governor are all urging law and order. It has just been learned recently that the Rubber Workers Union in Tuscaloosa, a hotbed of the Klan, has issued a statement for law and order. Judge Mayhall, State Democratic Chairman, has stated that as far as he is concerned people in Alabama must abide by court decisions and that if Negroes who qualify apply for admission to the University of Alabama "they're already in as far as I'm concerned". He made this statement to the Young Men's Business Club. Mr. Frank Mizzell, Montgomery attorney and a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee,

The Alabama Council on Human Relations is actively engaged in promoting communications and has a very important role in assisting responsible people in the state to meet the challenges that face us with realism and responsible constructive action.

Respectfully submitted,

Norman C. Jimerson (Rev.)
Executive Director

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

QUARTERLY REPORT

SEPTEMBER 1962 - NOVEMBER 1962

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
Quarterly Report
September 1962 - November 1962

Student-Staff Project Ended September 15

Freddie Williams completed his internship with SCCHR after a unique and valuable service of three and a half months. During this period, he made direct and personal contacts with all of the most significant programs being conducted at the state and federal levels which are designed to raise the economic level of South Carolinians. Further, he established rapport with numerous individuals who function at the state level in all of the major areas of interest with which SCCHR concerns itself.

Visits and key contacts were made with administrative and faculty staff at all of the Negro colleges in South Carolina, and with outstanding Negro leaders in the communities where these colleges are located. An effort was made to get suggestions as to what projects students might undertake in 1962-63 which would have value for the respective colleges and communities.

Since Mr. Williams' home is in Florence and that city is the trade center for Congressional District VI, an informal study of community resources, potential allies, and attitudes toward the status of Negro citizens was undertaken there with some success. Organizational efforts centered on youth groups in Darlington and Florence, and on the Florence Committee on Negro Affairs. Mr. Williams was helpful in drawing into membership in the Committee numerous persons from "grass roots" groups such as the labor movement.

Information was disseminated widely concerning available resources, and persons from five counties were recruited for attendance at the Citizenship Education Teacher Training Workshops at Dorchester Center, McIntosh, Georgia.

Considerable time was spent in Columbia, after the lunch counters were voluntarily desegregated there, in encouraging Negroes to make use of the newly opened services.

The experience and training which Mr. Williams received are proving to be valuable, not only to him as the president of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations, but also in a project being conducted by Morris College just outside the Sumter city limits. A SCCHR Board member, who is also a member of the Sumter Council on Human Relations, is helping with this project. Efforts are being made to assist members of the community in self-help.

Lunch Counters in Columbia Voluntarily Desegregated

Student sit-ins in Columbia seemed to end in a degree of frustration after the mass arrests which followed the March 15, 1961 march around the State House. Numerous student and adult contacts with the merchants and with the Mayor and members of the city council were also discouraging. However, in the spring of 1962 a more unified approach to the Mayor was made by Negro leaders. As a result, a plan was worked out whereby all variety stores, drug stores and the like agreed to try-out providing desegregated service for a period of two weeks. Shopping centers as well as the down-town area were included in the plan. In the effort to make the plan work, all of the SCCHR staff assisted. One merchant threatened to withdraw. Mrs. Charlotte Hickman, more than anyone else, is believed to have been responsible for securing enough customers for his store to have changed his mind. Almost daily contacts were had by the staff with all of the merchants, so that a mutually helpful relationship was established. Excellent cooperation by officers, members and friends was given also.

Program Workshop and Board Meeting, September 29

Approximately 90 persons participated in the annual program workshop which was held at the Esso Community Center in Columbia. A keynote address was presented by Dr. Leslie Dunbar, director of the Southern Regional Council. Much interest centered around recent events in Mississippi and an appraisal of responses by public figures in South Carolina.

The program committees brought reports of recent happenings in South Carolina, of study and action programs developed in response by the respective committees, and secured further suggestions and advice from the workshop participants.

Committees

The Citizenship committee has stimulated interest in expressing opinions to mayors, editors, the governor and governor-elect concerning positions taken by them on current issues of vital concern. A letter-writing campaign was conducted in Greenville to Donald Russell concerning his negative position on the University of Mississippi tragedy; similarly, letters have been written to him and to other key figures from throughout South Carolina but on a less organized basis. This committee has met once this quarter and is being assisted by Gil Rowland and others in assembling materials for a report which will be presented to Donald Russell soon after he takes office as Governor of South Carolina in January 1963.

The project conducted by Ira Kaye, chairman of the Citizenship Committee, under the direction of the SRC research staff has been completed and hopefully will show the effect of economic and other factors upon the registration and voting habits of farmers in nine of the twenty-three counties of S.C. which have been declared eligible for area redevelopment.

A report on registration and votins in the 1958, 1960, and 1962 elections has been prepared by the staff and given wide distribution at the program workshop, in local council on human relations and numerous other meetings, through the mails, and in other ways.

The Community Affairs committee has distributed materials designed to step up efforts to desegregate libraries and parks. Information on the status of the court case against the State of South Carolina concerning use of state parks was prepared by Gil Rowland.

The committee continues to work closely through its chairman, Mrs. T.B. Stackhouse and the SCCHR executive director with the S.C. Federation of Women's Clubs which is focussing on community projects of a sound and practical nature. Assistance was given by Mrs. Stackhouse in the publication of THE PALMETTOEAN, an outstanding organ of the Federation. Both Mrs. Stackhouse and the executive director of SCCHR have participated in some of the district conferences held by the Federation.

The committee on Education and the Schools has distributed timely information on such matters as school drop-outs, the technical education program of S.C., amount of illiteracy existing in each county in S.C., status of school cases before the courts, etc.

It plans to focus on assisting in the desegregation of Clemson and of public schools which may be ordered to do so by the courts.

The committee on Economics and Employment is trying to keep in touch with the steps being taken to comply with the President's exacutive order against discrimination in employment in government and in firms having government contracts. Progress is being made but all too slowly. The Social Security office has recently employed a Mr. Robinson who taught political science at Claflin College last year. The technical education program trained Negro and white workers together in Orangeburg, as operators, and they are working together in a new plant there.

The SCCHR staff keeps in close touch with all of the offices, state and federal, which have to do with programs designed to advance training and other aspects of economic development. Negro leaders in several of the communities where technical education centers are being built are also alerted and active. The Greenville Council on Human Relations has been very active in following through on at least two significant applications, one for admission to the T.E. Center, which has opened there and the other for work at the local post office. Results to date are uncertain.

In line with the committee's concern for development of economically backward areas of South Carolina, the executive director has worked closely with the National Sharecroppers Fund and along with the chairman of the SCCHR economics and employment committees gave leadership to the recent conference held on A Better Life for Farm Families on November 14-16 at Franklinton Center, Bricks, N.C. Approximately 20 persons from S.C. attended the conference, who set in motion a committee to plan and hold a similar conference in South Carolina on February 13-15. SCCHR, Penn Center, the United Presbyterian Church and CORE will work jointly in setting up the conference.

On October 6, the chairman of the economics and employment committee, the president of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations and the executive director gave joint leadership to an all-day conference at Kingstree for leaders from throughout Williamsburg County. Of major interest were citizenship, and economics--in specific terms.

Mr. Gil Rowland, employed through the Field Foundation grant, has added much to the work in this area of concern and has collected specific information especially concerning workers being employed by industries over the state. Also, he attended the important conference called by the National Council of Churches on the Church and Economic Life which was held in Pittsburg November 8-10.

A summary of the work of the committee on The Church and Human Relations was attached to the report last quarter. It has continued to move forward as follows:

Womens Interdenominational Study Group, set-up and planned by this committee began its study program on October 5 and continued weekly for six sessions, using as the basis for study "The Nature and Mission of the Church." The Committee considered this as a pilot project for the Columbia area, which can be recommended to other communities in the state. The study met with enthusiastic response on the part of the 35 women who participated. The group is planning to continue on a permanent basis and hopefully set up additional small groups for in various areas in the city for study, worship and work together.

This group met a definite need since there are no ecumenical channels in the city and few in the state which bring church people together across denominational or racial lines.

Two other sub-committees have met and are now in process of projecting "the ecumenical encounter" on a broader base. One of these is setting up open meetings for Churchmen and is to begin by inviting lay leaders to meet with a group of ministers for conversation on pressing problems of concern to Christian leaders in the state. Again Columbia will be used as the pilot project area for these meetings.

A state-wide committee has held one meeting and will hold another planning session on January 3 to set up a state conference for churchmen. The focus in this conference will be "The Role of the Church in Human Relations."

A request has come from high school students for an interracial youth group in the community. The Committee acted favorably on this request and is now in the process of securing adult advisors to work with such a high school group.

During this quarter the Student Program of the Council has received major emphasis and a large block of time from staff members. The situation in the colleges is maturing rapidly in S.C. and there is general belief that a legal break-through is immanent. Most knowledgeable persons in the state agree that a court order will come in time for Harvey Gantt, the first Negro applicant to pursue his case through the courts, to be admitted to Clemson College for second semester.

With this fact in mind and after the tragic events in Mississippi there was a new sense of urgency in the colleges, among both faculty and students. This has meant that interest in the program of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations, the only bi-racial student group in S.C., has increased. Communication and close contact between the Council, faculty, and students has been maintained during the fall months, especially at Clemson College and the University of S.C.

The Student Steering Committee of the SCSCHR, meeting in Columbia on September 23 set up plans for a week-end Student Conference. During this quarter the more detailed planning for this meeting has been carried out and publicity and conference promotion are complete. The Conference, which is to be held December 7-9 at Penn Center, will focus on "The Student's Involvement in the Crisis of the South." The three areas of involvement for special workshop discussions will be academic freedom, preparation for desegregation, and politics and community affairs. The initial response to this meeting has been excellent. It is hoped that this will be a significant and meaningful meeting at this crucial time in the colleges.

The Committee on Student Relationships has corresponded with students from each college and has encouraged exchange programs, campus visitations and deputations. Regular visits between Clemson and Claflin Colleges are continuing. An accelerated program with the Columbia Intercollegiate Group this fall has increased opportunities for honest communication.

We are not unaware of the forces of reaction at work nor of the potentially explosive situations which may possibly develop during this transition period. There are, however, at present encouraging positive factors. Mong these is the attitude of a small but influential minority among the Clemson students, who welcome the possible desegregation of the college as right and good, a move which is long overdue. Many of these students have participated actively in our student program for two years and have, as long ago as last summer, been in communication, personally and by correspondence, with Mr. Gantt. This should mean that Clemson may be able soon to move beyond mere legal desegregation.

This meeting was held at Benedict College, Columbia, S.C., November 8 from 9:30 - 4:30, was well attended and enthusiastically participated in.

The morning session focused on reports and discussion of new patterns for achieving human relations goals. The panel which made the presentation was composed of Dr. J. Sherrard Rice, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbia; George Butler, President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity; William Marsh, Director of Urban Rehabilitation, Columbia; Charles Dixon, Public Relations officer, S.C. State Development Board; Matthew Perry, NAACP attorney for the Harvey Gantt case; assisted by Mrs. T. J. Ledeen and Gil Rowland of the SCCHR staff and moderated by the executive director. Representatives of the local councils on human relations formed a reactor pabel. Paul Rilling summarized.

Addresses were brought in the afternoon by Margaret McCulloch, human and community relations consultant of Memphis, and by Vernon Jordan, NAACP executive director for Georgia.

Other Conferences Attended

Two members of the staff attended the second conference on Social Action held by the Presbyterians at Montreat over the Labor Day weekend.

The executive director participated in the annual conference of the Adult Education Association of the USA held in Detroit, Michigan, October 30 - November 1, and she and Gil Rowland attended the NAIRO conference in Washington, November 28 - December 1.

Field Trips and Local Councils

Clemson, Aiken, Florence, Sumter, Beaufort, Frogmore, Orangeburg, Rock Hill, Greenville, Dorchester Center, Kingstree, Denmark and Anderson are places visited by the staff during this quarter. Gil Rowland has enriched and enlivened the programs of several of the local councils with encouraging reports of the progress he has discovered that South Carolinians are making quietly, though slowly, in adapting to the demands for changes which confront them. Besides speaking at local councils, he has assisted with a Christian Action Workshop on Public Morals, spoken before the Aiken Unitarian Fellowship and the AAUP at Clemson.

Rowland Up-grades and Up-dates the News

With the skilled selectivity of the newsman, Gil Rowland has issued to a sizeable mailing list reprints of encouraging editorials which are appearing in S.C. dailies, weeklies and in the college student press. See enclosed copy of PROGRESS.

Omission from Last Report

SCCHR recruited Gwendolyn Sellers for participation in the 1962 Encampment for Citizenship in New York, where the staff reports she did well.

QUARTERLY REPORT: September, October, November 1962

Council Administration

On November 26, the run-off election for city council in Nashville was held. The newly elected metropolitan government council will take office in April 1963. The newly elected state government will be sworn in during January while the Legislature is in session. It is devoutly hoped by TCHR staff that no political campaigns will engage our officers and members within the coming year. In Nashville, the population has been under seige of political campaigns since early last spring. While the heightened interest in political issues and representation reflect the increased political sophistication of Negro citizens, political candidates, and our membership, it has resulted in reduced council program.

Our state president, George Barrett, has returned to the Council after more than 6 months in the political arena, and we look forward to having his enthusiastic leadership again. We need some real shakedown in goals and program. President Barrett has appointed a strong committee to consider long-time goals of the Council, and its method of operation. This was announced at the Annual Meeting in Chattanooga but appointments were not made until this week. They are: Herman Long, Chairman; Will Campbell; Lewis Sinclair (vice-president of TCHR and TVA employee of Knoxville); William Willis (president-elect of TCHR and Nashville attorney); Mrs. Tom Ragland, Nashville; and Dr. Charlotte Allen, college professor of Murfreesboro. We do not yet know whether they will serve.

Although we eventually made our goal for matching funds ($4600), we lost the additional $200 since we did not have it in the extended time allotted. Perhaps this has had a saluatory effect since the president is already working on the financial drive for 1963, and Jack May, board member of Nashville has agreed to serve.

Annual Meeting - Chattanooga, October 11 and 12

The October NEWSLETTER (copy enclosed), carried a full account of the general sessions of the meeting. The sessions moved along on schedule throughout October 11, but started late on October 12, because of tardy food service at motel where most of us stayed. The membership meeting and board meeting were somewhat disorganized due to inadequate planning. The full planning of the conference fell to the staff and Mrs. Silver as program chairman. Chattanooga, although it began late, did an excellent job of local arrangements. One hundred person registered for the full conference; 130 attended the dinner and 200 participated in one or more sessions. No city or date was designated for the 1963 meeting; this is usually determined at spring Board meeting.

Memphis

The long delayed Employment Opportunity Workshop was held in Memphis on October 19 and 20, and led by Dr. V. W. Henderson. Lindsley Hall on the University of Tennessee Medical School campus was used for all three sessions. The enclosed minutes describes the meeting and were sent to participants. An additional 50 copies were sent to Memphis for distribution to vocational guidance counsellors and others. The Memphis Chapter was disappointed with the attendance which averaged about 30 persons per session, but incompassed some 65 participants. K. Jones attended from TCHR staff and considered the participation as expected. There was noted disappointment that vocational guidance counsellors had not attended and some frank resentment at this absence. This may be a good thing, and produce more critical judgment of their performance. Mrs. Coe, school board member attended, and noted their absence.

The leadership representation, mentioned in closing paragraphs, has since decided to work through the Memphis Community Relations Council, an ~~affirmative~~ power structure group which is persuasive. Carl Carson, member of that group and our Council is a highly effective person, and should be able to carry this off; Hunter Lane, our chapter president is now being requested to work with the MCRC. Plans for workshop were made by Memphis members with one day-long visit from me on October 1. This was at the time of the Mississippi crisis, and while there was interest in hourly broadcasts from Oxford, the Memphis Community was generally going about business as usual. Memphis State University president had issued an ultimatum to students promising expulsion if they went to Oxford, only 80 miles away. Memphis editorials were positive in proclaiming for law and order.

Bristol

A Bristol (Tennessee) Council on Human Relations has been organized and has voted to affiliate as a chapter of TCHR on January 1. I have been invited to their January meeting. Sidney Berman, social worker and former member of Nashville Community Relations Council, is president. Bristol is bisected by the Tennessee-Virginia state line, and chapter includes members residing in both states, but is affiliating with Tennessee. Heslip Lee has been informed by TCHR of development.

Jackson

The Jackson Community Relations Council had an open meeting on December 6 in Jackson City Hall, with Paul Rilling as speaker. Paul gave excellent and forthright address which was enthusiastically received. Meeting was preceeded by newspaper advertisement, which ran twice, and news story. Speech was taped for radio broadcast following night. One hundred persons attended - about 75 Negroes and 25 whites. Conflicts of date and hour included Republican meeting and reception for Senator Kefauver. The desire for publicity was inspired by Citizens Council which has used open meeting and radio broadcasts. Jackson Community Relations Council picked up 19 new members that evening. Jackson Negro citizens are daily requesting food service at Jackson Hospital cafeteria. Hospital cares for Negro patients, but refuses food service to guests. No attempts made to sit-in. Picket has been removed from Woolworth's. This was the picket who was hired by Citizens Council to protest integrated service at the lunch counter.

Nashville Community Relations Council

NCRC held its annual membership meeting on December 4 at Albert Pick Motel, with Mr. Donald Gunn as speaker. Mr. Gunn is an excellent speaker and should be persuasive with business groups. He is practicing attorney, former president of St. Louis Board of Aldermen, and leading Catholic layman. He was instrumental in bringing about St. Louis' public accommodations ordinance, and this was subject of his address - newly elected vice mayor introduced him and 6 city councilmen elect were in attendance as guests of NCRC. Total of 135 attended. The Nashville Christian Leadership Council continues to work for public accommodations by ordinance, negotiation and demonstration. There has been a recurrance of sit-ins for past 3 week-ends - beginning when SNCC was here over Thanksgiving. News coverage has improved, but no success yet in restaurants which are targets of demonstrators. While students have been arrested along with their hecklers, they have not been fined. Hoodlums persist in heckling and attacking demonstrators but adults are likely to voice dympathetic statements.

Other Activity

TCHR organized delegation to see Governor Ellington on November 5 in regard to education for Negro blind. Negro division school did not open in September because girls' dormitory termed unsafe trap by Fire Marshall. Delegation represented United Church Women, Council of Negro Women, National Council of Jewish Women, American Association of University Women and TCHR. Governor promised (1) reopening in January, recommendation to new Governor and 1963 Legislature of funds for new dormitory on white campus for integration of both divisions and (2) admittance of 6 Negro girls to white campus within two weeks. Only 3 were admitted by December 3, but they are now enrolled as boarding students with plans for them to remain even when other school reopens. In line with Governor Ellington's other steps, he insisted that this be done quietly without any publicity. The six vacancies to which he referred are all that exist on white campus at present.

Local arrangements for the consultation sponsored by SRC and Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, December 27 and 29, have been made by this office. Separation of living and meeting facilities is regrettable, but unavoidable. K. Jones will be here for meeting; D. Webster will be away from Nashville.

Council has made several arrangements for integrated housing in motels, and state parks not previously so used. We assisted local National Student Association to lease Montgomery-Bell State Park for their November 2 day meeting. Accommodations at Holiday Inn obtained for John Hope II and staff. This is same motel which will be used for December Consultation.

We have not been successful in organizing local councils in small towns in Tennessee, with a few exceptions. Some of these towns and counties have accomplished desegregation of schools without violence, but we have no real access to communities and are not informed about real communication across racial lines. Citizens of other towns, where inquiry has been made, have not desired assistance, preferring to accomplish their school changes by power structure prestige or personal negotiation.

The State Advisory Committee to U. S. Commission on Civil Rights has continued to meet, with TCHR furnishing clerical services.

Participation in Tennessee Council of Churches meeting, November 26 and 27. A strong statement on church responsibility for inclusiveness was drawn up by subcommittee, but rejected by larger group who felt it would not be helpful in bringing local congregation to desegregate.

Respectfully submitted,

Katherine Jones

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY WORKSHOP
Jackson, Tennessee, August 3 and 4, 1962

SPONSOR: Tennessee Council on Human Relations

Leader: Dr. Vivian W. Henderson, Economist

HOST: Jackson Community Relations Council

FRIDAY NIGHT ADDRESS - DR. HENDERSON

This is a workshop designed to develop a systematic program for bringing about change by action.

In 1939, Negro maleshad an income that was 37 per cent of the average income of the rest of the nation. That is, for every $1 others earned, the Negro earned 37 cents. Eighty per cent of the Negroes lived in the South; eighty per cent of them were in agriculture.

In 1958, Negroes were 58 per cent as well off as the rest of the nation. In the meantime, World War II had set off an economic expansion. Migration from south to north and from rural to urban areas had started in full measure. Occupational changes - materials handler had become operator instead of a laborer.

Since 1958, the trend has reversed due to automation and technology. Negro function has not changed so much as technology has changed things. There is a 40 per income gap for Negroes in the south and the nation as a whole.

Southern states are concerned about a program to attract industry and are beginning to do something about this. The South recognizes what poor race relations can do to the total economy. The incentive to move from rural to urban and from south to north is an outgrowth of new job opportunity created by national economic expansion. The whole area of job opportunity and employment has become a major concern to all.

Then, the question arises - How can a community organize to attack the problem of employment?

1. Guidance and counselling programs in the high schools. Too often counsellors are concerned with the wrong approach; how many scholarships do we have for students? Instead, concern should be - how much advantages are these students taking of the Federal Service Entrance Examination or Civil Service Examination. Counsellors should get acquainted with the President's Executive Order 10925 and explain to students. Let them in on what's happening in the area of employment.

2. Organize and execute action programs.

3. Develop specifics.

We should concern ourselves with:
1. Know-how
2. Manual and mental ability
3. Negotiation and influence
4. Fear of failure

For effective change:
1. Executive Order 10925
   Equal Employment Opportunity
2. Advancement of Negroes in politics
   Voting, etc.
3. Economic status
   Negro purchasing power in 1935 -$ 3 billion and in 1961 - $28 billion
4. Education
   (the Negro's average years in school: 8.3)

SATURDAY WORKSHOP

Firms with Federal Contracts

Jackson, Tennessee-Consolidated Aluminum: 6/8/62-$39,525 Government Contract

President's Order #10925

Structure of committee is important because federal money is spent by a number of Federal Departments whose heads are represented on the committee. They include Secretary of Defense McNamara; Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Celebreeze; Secretary of Labor Wirtz. There are 18 million government contracts.

Teams from local communities where contractors operate must compile evidence and get complaints started. (Some examples distributed). President's Order affects not only large contractors, but sub-contractors and suppliers to government facilities as well; such as, V. A. Hospitals, bread company, soft drink distributor. Order provides for cancellation of contracts (Part III, Section 6), and for publication of names of contractors of unions (Subject D, Section 312) who fail to comply.

For notice of Government contracts in your area, request Tennessee Industrial Development News, Cordell Hull Building, Nashville 3. In addition, the Tennessee Council on Human Relations will assist you in obtaining information.

Local Group Action

Push for two-year vocational school open to all applicants. None are planned in the state at present. Press for upgrading vocational training for employment with a future. Basic education plus general knowledge in science more important than specific training for a particular job. Encourage high school students to take all Civil Service examinations for which they can qualify.

Bring this whole matter to the attention of the community by use of films, mimeographing significant documents and explanatory sessions.

The community must have some definite organizational plans. Interracial groups should get together to map out plans to visit firms and federal installations to determine opportunities in employment. Exchange information monthly or at other specific times.

Questions for Local Group Discussion

1. What organization or structure do you already have organized?

2. What can you do to strengthen it?

3. Who can do fact-finding?

4. What help or follow-up can Tennessee Council on Human Relations give to further employment opportunities?

It was unanimously adopted by all present that the Jackson area would work extremely hard to carry out the points discussed in this workshop.

The Tennessee Council on Human Relations appreciates the opportunity to hold this workshop in the Jackson area. We have confidence that these services in fostering improved human relations will be helpful.

I am asking you to serve as a select committee to determine the aims, objectives and future structure of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations. In light of current developments in Tennessee, what should be the role of the Council? Are there long-term objectives which can be established? What is the best structure for accomplishing these matters?

State Councils throughout the south have varying structures tailored to meet the needs and practical operation for the individual state. Should the Tennessee Council continue to operate, and how should it be financed?

The Council has funds to pay for travel and overnight accommodations as needed. Arrangements for a meeting can be made in our office or elsewhere in accordance with your suggestions. I suggest that you may wish to set this early in the month of January. A week-end, Saturday or Sunday, may be preferable to a mid-week date.

Will you please let me know if you can serve, and the date that is most convenient for you.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Address by Dr. Henderson

There is a sense of urgency about current situation of employment for Negroes. Council of Economic Advisors to President Kennedy reported that $15 billion was lost in national income because of discrimination in employment of Negroes. National economic expansion accounts for growth of Gross National Product for $100 billion in 1940 to $520 billion in 1962, and a labor force of 45 million people in 1940 to 75 million people in 1962. Can our economy generate employment for this growing labor force?

There has been a continuing revolution in the character, economy and social structure of the nation. Race relations is not just a matter of violence or no violence; tension or no tension. "It involves all elements of human behavior and movement of people among other people; in this situation, working together side by side."

Forward and Retreat

Negroes receive (current estimate) 6 per cent of the nation's income, in some cities it goes up to 23 per cent. This is worth competing for by business. The expanded ecomony of the war years and defense industry shortage in manpower brought changes. Those forces are not operative in today's society.

Today's technological changes are working to the disadvantage of Negroes - Negro traditionally, and at present, a materials handler in the labor force. For example, brick layer, construction worker, automobile assembly line, etc.

In 1940 Negroes were 37 per cent as well off as whites
1955 Negroes were 51 per cent as well off as whites
1962 Whites are increasing their income position so that gap between Negro and white income is widening. Detroit currently wants one million jobs for Negroes. Because of technology and racial discrimination, there are 3½ Negroes to every white unemployed. Technological changes so swift that requirements and skills of painters in automobile factories are not the same as they were one year ago. In the South, the average income is only 73 per cent of the national income. The South's ability to close that gap depends on better utilization of Negroes.

In 1960 66 per cent of all Negro women employed in unskilled jobs
23 per cent of all white women employed in unskilled jobs
18 per cent of all Negro employed women in technical, clerical and professional jobs (Mostly in Washington, D. C.)
61 per cent of all white employed women in technical, clerical and professional jobs.

Economics as a force has, of itself, played a great role in shaping human behavior. In the South, we have not yet seen the positive impact of race relations. The businessman is no longer oblivious to the economic consequences of poor race relations. He has learned that poor race relations and economic development are no longer compatible.

In the South, during the past two decades we have changed from an economy oriented toward agriculture to one oriented toward industry. At present, 51 per cent of the Negro population live in the South, with continuing movement of urban areas. Events have drawn Negroes into the economic life of the community, and the influence of mass communications media.

Strategy for Progress

1) Community must give leadership in approaching school boards about guidance and counselling personnel. Must be knowledgeable of technological changes in employment. Career days serve as a public relations device for the school, but are no substitute for year 'round guidance program, especially for non-college bound student. Ninety-two per cent of white youth and 95 per cent of Negro youth will not go to college.

2) Develop criteria for judging effectiveness of guidance and counselling, not how many college scholarships won by students. How many students take the Federal Entrance Examination? How many pass? How many obtain jobs in industry? How many in retail trades?

3) Vocational programs of schools still geared to agriculture which has not served the whole south, Negro or white to advantage. School boards and educators must face responsibilities of economic implications of poor use of Negro manpower.

4) Remove stigma of vocational and technical education, which has equated it with slow learners. Students need training in operating IBM data processing machines, and ability to "read, write and make responsible decisions."

5) Interracial groups, in interest of entire community should embark on program of non-discriminatory employment. (Thereby lessening need for public welfare assistance and other subsidies). Current inequities of education and training are obvious in schools, apprenticeship and industry training and in unions.

6) Human Relations Councils should remind business leaders to employ Negroes on merit and in better paying jobs. It is bad for business to force Negro boycott to gain economic advantage.

SATURDAY MORNING

Panel: Employment Opportunities in Memphis

Miss Lois Holloman, Director of E. H. Crump School of Nursing (RN Program)

Employment of Negro R. N. not a problem because of shortage of nurses. Pressure will result in use of Negro nurses in Memphis hospitals. Problem is lack of qualifications of nursing student applicants. Best qualified candidates come from Memphis. Rural area candidates frequently have such poor educational background cannot be considered; sometime with only 7 high school credits in basic subjects. Nursing school requirement include 4 years of English plus credits in mathematics and science.

Mrs. Jeanette Spann, Medical Technology:

Wide range of specialty for technology applicants. Physician's office assistant especially suitable for high school graduate with some knowledge of science. There are 7 grades in technology specialty. Medical technologist requires 3 years of college. Write to Miss Sarah Grace Richmond, University of Tennessee Medical School.

Mrs. Gladys Dempster, Medical Records Librarian, John Gaston Hospital:

Required for entrance to medical science in an approved hospital - 60 college semester hours or RN diploma. Accuracy and detail are important, plus team work, leadership and initiative. Excellent salary prospects. Closest school at St. Louis University. Medical record technician requires background of LPN or high school graduation. Madison College (Seventh Day Adventist) near Nashville only Tennessee training available. Salary starts at $290.00.

Rev. J. A. McDaniel, Urban League:

Mallory Air Force Base, next to Post Office had best record for Negro employment. Kennedy General Hospital employs Negroes only at lowest grades - Other Federal agencies have made no change. Part of problem is getting Negroes to take examinations. Negro youth need motivation and inspiration. Their families are frequently unable to provide it, and therefore teachers must do this. In building trades only 1 per cent of carpenters, brick layers, and sheet metal workers in Memphis are Negro. There is 1 Negro apprentice. No Negro painters, steamfitters and electricians. Large number of Negro laborers in Memphis area who will not qualify for training for skilled jobs.

Mr. W. A. McGinnis, Director of Vocational Education, Memphis City Schools:

"Occupational Outlook Handbook published by Federal Government" should be in hands of all counsellors.

Practical Nursing - two months in classroom, 11 months more in hospital. Computer Program is open to Memphis Negro students (in segregated schools) but only 3 applied and one qualified.

Mr. Fred Sain, Deputy Employment Officer, U. S. Post Office:

Federal Civil Service now requires combining civil service registers for men and women and all races - 2000 clerk carrier applicants took recent exam; 500 passed. Those who passed are registered in numerical order including their V.A. preference points. Department head must document reason for passing over an applicant whose name is among three top he must consider. Memphis Post Office has 2100 employees; 700 are Negro. Problem in Post Office is upgrading.

Mrs. Vasco Smith, Memphis Branch NAACP:

Receive numerous complaints about refusal to upgrade Negro employees at Firestone, International Harvester, etc. Negroes usually start with different job classifications and there is limit to progressive advancement. Negro employees frequently train whites who are later advanced. Retail trades - merchants have not complied with agreement for employment opportunities. In meeting with Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph, Negro negotiators were told that Negroes would not be considered for jobs beyond maintenance. Tennessee Employment Security Office - following complaint and investigation, offices are currently organized by job classification, rather than by race. Negroes are still shuttled to former Negro office on Main Street where many of the better jobs are not listed. Unless Negro applicant makes determined effort, his application will not be accepted at Poplar Avenue Office.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Employment Opportunities: Industrial firms with government contracts
Federal Agencies in Memphis
City and County Government
State Government
Distributive trades, such as milk and soft drink routes
Wholesale and retail trades
Public utilities

Pressures may be exerted: Economic leverage
Political power
Executive Order 10925
Personal negotiation

Areas of special need: Education and vocational training
Promotion on merit
Labor union acceptance and recognition of merit progress

There was recognition that Federal agencies had not made satisfactory progress in "affirmative action" as called for in Executive Order. School programs in vocational training leave it to students to decide on vocational courses they wish. "Why should students be final authority any more than deciding whether they will have English or history courses?" Students are without knowledge of future employment opportunities and lack parental support for changed curricula.

Focus: Urgency of employment opportunities
Need for specialized and systematic community action.
Education and training responsibilities; motivation and guidance.

Action: It was informal consensus of those present at closing session that: Jesse Turner, NAACP; Carl Carson, MCRC; J. A. McDaniel, Urban League; and Hunter Lane, Jr., TCHR, meet to form a coordinating group for work in this area. Each agency to keep own identity. Hunter Lane will convene group. Later, teams to be formed to work with specific firms in listed areas above, a follow-up on this meeting with emphasis on techniques for negotiation, etc. should be planned. Dr. Herman Long suggested as leader. Regret was expressed that guidance counsellors from the schools were invited but none participated.

The Tennessee Council on Human Relations appreciates the opportunity to present this workshop in Memphis and hopes its effects will be far-reaching. We are grateful to Dr. Diggs and the University of Tennessee for the very pleasant accommodations.

ANNUAL MEETING, CHATTANOOGA, OCTOBER 11 and 12

Panel members at the opening session, "Round-Up Across the State", spilled off both ends of the platform. It was a long, platform, but Bristol and Memphis representatives are separated by 534 highly diverse miles. Mrs. Ernest Silver, program chairman asked two questions: What important human relations advances have taken place during the past year? What are the major problems facing your community?

MEMPHIS - Hunter Lane, Jr.

The second year of school integration has started without violence; 44 Negro children enrolled in seven formerly white schools. Taxicabs voluntarily serve all. Lunch counters desegregated. Court decree opened muncipal auditorium for all public functions. Negotiations under way for movies. Hearings in June conducted by U. S. Commission on Civil Rights made some impact. Workshop to be led by Dr. V. W. Henderson on employment opportunity slated for October 19 and 20. Some uneasiness in Memphis area which is less that 100 miles from Oxford, Mississippi.

JACKSON - Mrs. Ray Allen

Jackson's council is two years old, and first year developed ground work and improved communication. Voluntary, but token, desegregation in junior high school and one elementary school plus parochial school. Lunch counter in variety store reopened and desegregated without incident. One existing industry agreed to hire on merit. Jackson anticipates three new industries with merit policy on employment. Negro poll watchers during August primary. American Friends Service Committee had internes working with Voter Registration project resulting in 900 Negroes being added to registration rolls. Problem remains merit employment with improvements in hospital service.

LEBANON - Mary Hamilton

Population of 13,000 with 2,000 Negroes, averaging 3rd and 4th grade education. Dissatisfied with token desegregation in Wilson county schools and resent insulting interrogation of Negro parents who attempt to register their children. Negroes are paid at lower wage scale than whites. CORE Chapter seeking to develop local leadership and canvass every Negro home for educational program; major drive set for Thanksgiving. Need is for white support in Lebanon and across the state.

CLEVELAND - Harriet Smith

Working through the United Church Women, an integrated ministerial group has been formed and this group is working toward an integrated Thanksgiving program at Lee College. Up-grading of employment is the important thing.

CHATTANOOGA - Mrs. Seamour Shavin

School desegregation, county and city, achieved without incident in September with enrollment of 45 Negro pupils in formerly white schools. Preparation was effective. School staff and Citizens Committee did admirable job, while being apologetic for it. Beginning to look into facets of human relations in community. Some employment of clerks in grocery stores in Negro residential areas. Retail merchants have begun study of upgrading.

Problems - Employment - expecting assistance from Tennessee Advisory Commission of U. S. Civil Rights Commission. Theatre desegregation. "Are we ready to tackle integrated housing or must we continue to work on inadequacy of housing?" Negroes are not participants in policy making decisions in Chattanooga. Therefore, local Council listens to Negro leadership and tries to convey this to power structure.

BRISTOL - Rev. Dogan Williams

In process of organizing a Council to include residents of both Virginia and Tennessee. Negro community is complacent and forms less than 10 per cent of population. Elementary schools desegregated this year, but school zones resulted in eligibility of only four Negro children for white schools. Parents in low economic bracket are afraid of economic retaliation. No school integration achieved. Five Negroes at Sperry Plant, with government contract, placed in "on the job training", personnel and purchasing. Three church related colleges are segregated. Negroes serve on Urban Renewal Committee. Need is employment and preparation for jobs as they become available.

KNOXVILLE - Rev. W. T. Crutcher

Twenty-six eating places open to all, in addition to cafeterias on University of Tennessee campus. Four Negroes elected to membership in Chamber of Commerce. Mayor is member of TCHR. Bus company has agreed to employ Negro drivers. Negotiations with hospitals continue. Two movie theatres open; three downtown segregated. New Coliseum and golf course open to all. Negro employed in office of county trustee, registrar of deeds.

OAK RIDGE - William Ramsay

Job opportunities are for trained only. No estimate available on numbers handicapped by lack of opportunity for equal education. Oak Ridge schools open to all for seven years, but residential patterns restrict inclusiveness. One house in white neighborhood occupied by Negro family without incident, but not without comment. Theatres open. Bowling alleys open to teams but not individual Negroes. Automatic laundries segregated. City goverment integrated. Negro public health nurse serves all. Mayor has appointed Committee on Human Relations which is discussing housing and legislation. Oak Ridge recognizing that it will lose programs if cannot accommodate all participants. Need and hope is for change in general climate.

NASHVILLE - Gideon Fryer

Local Council has completed first year as a chapter after five years of independent organization. Fewer members but equal amount of income. A committee for an "Open City" has been organized with representatives from seven organizations. Pre-Christmas employment was available to Negroes last year, but has not continued throughout year. Many changes awaiting outcome of metropolitan election contest. Candidates more inclined to recognize importance of human relations. Day long, three session, workshop in housing held in May. Summer crafts group for 7 and 8 year old girls recruited across racial and religious lines met during summer. American Friends Service internes in community service brought interracial living to Nashville last summer.

FAYETTE COUNTY - Lewis W. Jones (not present; written report)

The West Tennessee Development Corporation announced from its headquarters in Somerville that stock would soon go on sale to raise $50,000, ten per cent of the capital needed to finance an industrial plant that will locate in Fayette County.

The successful negotiations for the location of the plant in this area where employment is desperately needed by tenants displaced from farms were discussed at a mass meeting at Somerville, October 5th. Speaking at the mass meeting were representatives of the Area Redevelopment Administration, Rural Areas Development, The National Sharecroppers Fund, and the Memphis Urban League who had worked with the directors of the West Tennessee Development Corporation to bring the plant to Fayette County. A requirement to be met in order to secure federal funds is that ten per cent of the capital be raised in the local area which will require a vigorous effort in West Tennessee.

GREENEVILLE - Georgia Farnsworth (not present; written report)

Magnavox Company, with two plants in Greeneville, employed no Negroes until last February when four Negro women were employed. Local complaints had resulted in threat to lift government contract. An additional 10 Negro women now employed. Two large restaurants serve interracial groups. Hotel refuses any service. Problem: Employment with adequate wages, especially for Negro men who are currently dependent on janitorial and domestic employment.

THE STATE - George Barrett

All state parks are open to all with exception of waterfront activities. All candidates for Governor met with Negroes; agreed to State Commission on Human Relations. Voluntary school desegregation in Henry, Williamson, Dickson and several other counties. Humphreys County has 78 Negro students in desegregated schools, representing grades 1 through 12; no incidents. All state supported colleges except TPI have Negroes enrolled.

THE SOUTH - Paul Rilling

There is a growing diversity within the South. Mississippi is not typical of the South in 1962. Business and civic leadership have learned that they have a stake in stability and compliance with the law. The silent moderate of 1954-56 left leadership vacuum and irresponsible stepped in. This has changed. Change itself is becoming routine. End of extremists is in sight except in Alabama and Mississippi. Executive branch of Federal Government has given constructive leadership new power in President's Committee on Equal Employment. Negro voting is important.

Problems - Bring Mississippi and Alabama back into the main stream of the south. Comparatively few Negroes are voting as yet even in Atlanta. Employment needs a stronger federal order. Housing - as long as housing remains segregated, the use of facilities will not be fully enjoyed. After facilities are opened with effort, the free use of these falls off. This pattern must be reversed, and we must discover the way to make the symbolic change real and meaningful to the average Negro of the South. Most of the South has avoided defiance of the law and followed the minimum letter of the law. There are more paper gains than real gains. The lives of most Negroes have not been touched. There are fewer resources and allies to broaden the change than there are to avoid closing schools and other facilities. We must go beyond what the court requires and give support to the less dramatic, we must make change more significant for the average Negro.

EMPLOYMENT IN THE SIXTIES

Under the able guidance of Mr. Philip Winkfield, Director of Student Employment and Graduate Placement, Fisk University, this was a practical session dealing with employment patterns, potentials and problems. A film excerpt pointed up the pattern of employment practices set by industrial leadership. Dr. V. W. Henderson, economist, then traced the rise of employment during the past two decades, and the recent decline related to industrial change and automation. Based on statistical data, and broad knowledge, he proposed that communities and human relations councils consider:

1) Need of education (especially Negro) to meet current manpower challenge. Science, Mathematics, industrial chemistry, computing machine operation and special skills. "We need stimulation of "Future Chemists of America, rather than future farmers". School boards must comprehend current opportunities (i.e. Executive Order 10925) and future manpower needs (service and technical expansion).

2) School guidance and councelling evaluation of success must be based on extent of success on civil service examinations, local employment placement in urban industrial and commercial jobs, local and state government positions. Career Day not substitute for year 'round competent counselling. Number of college scholarships not criteria for success when 95 per cent of Negroes and 90 per cent of white do not attend college.

3) Community concern for drop-outs, adult retraining in evening schools. Removal of stigma from non-professional employment. Labor unions frequently exclude Negroes despite national organization statements. Demand trade school courses geared to need. Human relations councils should re-enforce other organizations - publish facts to increase community awareness.

Employment projections through 1970 are: professional and technical - 40 per cent expansion; clerical 28 per cent expansion; skilled trades, 20 per cent expansion; semi-skilled, 10 per cent expansion. In unskilled jobs no expansion, and in laborer classification a decline.

Panel members: Hunter Lane, Jr. of Memphis; Mrs. James Todd, Nashville; Rev. M. J. Jones, Chattanooga; and Lewis Sinclair, Knoxville. To consume space, their statements are summarized without individual credit:

1) Resist tokenism in employment. Retail stores believe Negroes will be satisfied with one or two clerks.

2) Courtesy has replaced rudeness in meeting with groups but has not overcome resistence to merit employment.

3) Guidance now mostly in area of problem solving.

4) Create incentive to make use of opportunities.

5) In up-grading jobs insist on appropriate visual immage; regular business clothes and classification.

6) In building trades whites are taking jobs formerly held by Negroes, such as carpenters. Unions frequently segregated. Apprenticeships for Negroes rare.

7) Government contractors ask what Negro applicant can do, rather than offering training-on-the-job.

8) Segregated employment offices - totally or partially result in lack of full opportunity for Negroes. Jobs frequently sorted into Negro or white employment. Memphis has private employment agency as source of qualified Negroes for pilot jobs.

9) Guidance counselling should be extended to junior high school before drop-outs occur.

10) Determine real amount of vocational training in a school, excluding home economics, agriculture and shop courses, need for wide training for mobile population.

11) Let Federal offices in Washington know about any segregated practices in your local employment office.

12) Create awareness of over-all community loss of changes in employment patterns not forthcoming. Compile documented facts to present employer. Try to get employers to initiate equal employment simultaneously, removing individual treat of retaliation.

MEMBERSHIP AND BOARD MEETING

The by-laws were revised in accordance with the changes proposed in the September NEWSLETTER, providing for a vice president who will be president-elect. Albert Porter nominated William Willis, Nashville attorney, for this position. Willis and the slate of officers and board members already proposed by the Nominating Committee were elected. George Barrett was unanimously chosen to serve another term as president. Next NEWSLETTER will carry full roster of officers and board. ---- Treasurer's report shows we are $236 in debt; some checks have been drawn but not cashed in order to prevent an overdraft at the bank. ---- President Barrett forcefully reminded membership of necessity for state council support if it is to continue. Budget of $11,600 adopted; this is $3,000 less than last year's budget, but $1,500 less than currently anticipated income for 1962. Treasurer's report and budget will be forwarded on request.

Resolution adopted, requesting Governor Ellington to provide education for Negro blind children, currently without state supported facilities since the Nashville School for the Blind, Colored Division, did not reopen in September. Membership voted to send messages of support to James Meredith and to President Kennedy for Federal assistance in the Mississippi crisis. Letters affirming their stand would also go to an Oxford clergyman and the student editor at Ole Miss.

Board meeting asked nominating committee to propose board members for executive committee. Six members were nominated from the floor for the three positions, and the resultant parliamentary tangle became so severe that all were withdrawn! ---- Meeting welcomed back Louise Young who had just returned that week from six months in Europe. ---- Acknowledged superb leadership given by Mrs. Ernest Silver of Oak Ridge who lined up excellent program for annual meeting in less than two months. She does not recommend this time-table to her successor. ---- Our thanks to Reg Stagmaier and all the Chattanooga people who served so competently. Next NEWSLETTER will carry the workshop reports and the general session on "A State Commission on Human Relations". We are grateful to Galen Martin, executive director of the Kentucky Commission for giving us pointers from his highly successful experience.

Turn the page for the last report for this issue of the NEWSLETTER. It is an all too brief condensation of Harold Fleming excellent address at the dinner meeting.

"Southern Politics and National Policy"

Harold Fleming, as dinner speaker, stressed the need for minority groups to make themselves heard throughout the nation if equal opportunities are to be achieved by positive action. He proposed the following ways in which councils may assist minority groups in achieving their goals:

1) Rapid action on situations about to change, advance preparation, through research and study leads to awareness of impending change.

2) Develop better communication techniques to reach the mass media.

3) Develop better methods of gaining access to decision makers.

Problems related to desegregation and equal opportunity have become a vicious circle. "It is as if a totally illiterate man is given the opportunity of going to a public library to look at books he cannot read." Education, equal job opportunity, and better housing have reached a point where they are achievable by law but not in reality. "Equal opportunity is offered by an employer to those qualified by education. Better housing is offered to those who have the money. But how can a man who has not the properly paying job afford a better house? And so the dilemma of racial improvement goes."

Mr. Seamour Shavin, president of the Chattanooga Community Relations Council, welcomed the Tennessee Council members from across the state in behalf of the sizable Chattanooga attendance. One hundred thirty persons attended the dinner meeting at the Patten Hotel which cordially accommodated the conference. In closing, Mr. Fleming urged the Council not to fix blame on one or a few individuals. All of us are culpable.

SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND - NASHVILLE

State supported education for blind children is provided at the Tennessee School for the Blind in Nashville. The school for white children is located in Donelson, a Nashville suburb, in a modern plant constructed about ten years ago. The school serving Negro blind children is located on Hermitage Avenue in the buildings formerly used by the white school. This property is now in an urban renewal area, is heavily industrialized and is adjacent to the new inter-state highway, and other main traffic arteries. In August 1962, the State Fire Marshall reported that the girls' dormitory was unsafe, and the gasoline storage tanks located on the adjoining lot increased the hazard, especially for blind children. Therefore, the school was not reopened in September 1962, although the teachers remain under contract. School was scheduled to reopen on October 1st. It is still closed.

At the instigation of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations, a group of Nashville citizens representing the American Association of University Women, the National Council of Negro Women, United Church Women, National Council of Jewish Women, and TCHR met with Governor Ellington to inquire about education for Negro blind children. They were told that temporary repairs are under way on the present school buildings, and the school will reopen in January 1963. It was recognized that the present location is entirely unsuitable for a boarding school, especially for 48 visually handicapped children.

The only reasonable solution is additional dormitory facilities on the Donalson campus, and integration of faculties and students there. A Legislative appropriation will be required for the necessary additional buildings, as the Donalson school is operating at near capacity. If you wish to see the state assume its responsibility for the education of this especially handicapped group, get in touch immediately with your legislators and advise them of the need for additional dormitories at the school located on Stewart's Ferry Pike, Donelson (Nashville 14, Tennessee). Also write to Governor-Elect Clement advising him of your concern.

We're Cooperating----

no third class mail be posted from

This Newsletter is being written

BRISTOL

The Bristol Council on Human Relations is underway with a program geared to broadened employment opportunities, and support and encouragement of school integration. While Bristol schools are technically desegregated, subtle pressures and redistricting have resulted in no actual desegregation of the schools.

The Bristol Council has voted to become a chapter of the Tennessee Council in January 1963. We extend a warm welcome to this newest member of the family! The Bristol Council's address is P. O. Box 51, Bristol, Tennessee; Sidney A. Berman is Chairman; Rev. Dogan Williams is vice chairman. Katherine Jones will be going to Bristol to meet with the Council on January 21; if you have missions for her in East Tennessee following the Bristol meeting, let her know.

JACKSON

Preceded by newspaper advertisements and a news story in the local press, the Jackson Community Relations Council held an open meeting on December 6 in the auditorium of the Jackson City Hall. Paul Rilling spoke on "The Changing South" to more than 100 persons who attended despite of two contending and concurrent political meetings. Mr. Rilling's address was taped for broadcast the following evening over a Jackson radio station.

Tracing the reactions in the South since 1954, Mr. Rilling reviewed the early years of massive resistence and the silence of the moderates. This was followed (1959-62) by "token adjustment and creeping realism." He asked, "Are we changing from open and frank segregation to one of subtle and gentle segregation but of equal strength?" Avoidance of violence does not necessarily mean that progress is taking place; "court decisions do not of themselves eliminate discrimination, but they make it possible." Business leadership which has accepted some change to avoid violence is likely to resist further change for fear of breaking the calm.

The Jackson Council is especially grateful to Mr. Rilling for filling this engagement on the eve of his departure for a new position. On December 10 he became Director, Commissioner's Council on Human Relations, government of the District of Columbia.

NASHVILLE

The Nashville Community Relations Council held its annual membership meeting on December 4 with a dinner at the Albert Pick Motel. Mr. Donald Gunn, practicing attorney and past president of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen, addressed the meeting, describing the St. Louis Public Accommodations Ordinance which became effective on July 1, 1962. Mr. Gunn, an effective and persuasive speaker, stated that "our basic freedoms did not come from government, but from God."

He said that the St. Louis law has been artfully drafted to stress efforts at obtaining compliance rather than punishment for noncompliance. Enforcement makes use of the Council on Human Relations, an official body of the city which was also created by city ordinance. Compliance begins with an informal conference between the alleged violator and a council staff member; if this is unsuccessful, a hearing by the council takes place, followed by a cease and desist order. Next step is a formal court charge with maximum penalty of $500 fine. Of the 90 complaints filed, all but 5 per cent have been fully resolved through the conference procedure.

The Nashville Council's meeting was attended by 135 persons including six city councilmen-elect; the vice-mayor-elect who will head Nashville's new metropolitan city government introduced Mr. Gunn.

POST-SCRIPTS FROM THE STATE MEETING

In our October NEWSLETTER, we promised you a digest of the three brief workshop sessions, omitted then because of space limitations. Here they are:

HOUSING - Segregated housing contributes to segregated education, and social and cultural activities. Minority groups are usually restricted to less desirable areas and are limited in choice of housing and choice of location. Builders and property owners are beset by fears of loss of property values, loss of social status and violence if Negroes buy in predominantly white neighborhoods. Solution lies in federal housing order, neighborhood organizations to overcome fears and prejudices, and local church leadership in line with already stated national pronouncements. Community action is required to prevent urban renewal projects from increasing segregated housing patterns.

HEALTH AND HOSPITALS - Many Tennessee hospitals have been erected, enlarged and remodeled by the use of Hill-Burton funds from the Federal Government. Federal administrators have, until the present, accepted "separate but equal terms"; a court suit is now pending. However, many hospitals have not provided even separate facilities. In seeking hospital inclusiveness, do so in name of serving all of our citizens rather than a special request to accept Negroes. Hospitals in Cleveland, Oak Ridge, Bristol and Jefferson City are totally desegregated. Church related hospitals, although requesting funds from voluntary and government sources seem the most reluctant to provide integrated service. Pediatrics frequently first department integrated.

Knoxville has worked toward full service in local hospitals since 1957, and Knoxville Council members are especially knowledgeable about problems involved and can give sound advice. This workshop recommended that the State Council accept as part of its state program the desegregation of hospital facilities - staff, patients, services, and the recruitment of Negro medical students for the state university.

EDUCATION - Local school board is major key to intelligent and constructive desegregation. Board should be responsive to educational and cultural needs of all children and should have Negro representation on it. School curriculum should be re-examined in terms of meeting minority group needs. Culturally deprived children, regardless of race, require special attention if education is to be effective for them. Remedial reading is essential ingredient of educational program. Vocational courses and enrichment programs frequently not offered to Negro students. When desegregation is attempted, include review of school administrative procedures and rezoning. Chattanooga's present transfer provision for students thwarts integration. Recommended that all local councils examine their school programs and propose revisions and solutions to school board.

If you have made it this far through the NEWSLETTER, you know that Paul Rilling, our very able consultant from Southern Regional Council is now coping with problems in the District of Columbia.

We are pleased to let you know that Paul Anthony is the new director of Field Activities for SRC, and we are looking forward to his visits to Tennessee. Mr. Anthony is an old hand with SRC, having served as Executive Assistant. He has met with the Oak Ridge Council, and was a panel participant at a teachers' meeting in Nashville two years ago. In our best royalist (though unfamiliar) manner we say, "The King is dead; long live the King."

TIME TO RENEW YOUR MEMBERSHIP FOR 1963

The fiscal year of the Council follows the calendar year, so your annual dues are due and payable as of now. The exception is for members who joined for the first time in September, October, November or December 1962, and are thereby considered fully paid members for the following calendar year.

The Southern Regional Council is again offering us partial support. We will receive from them $3800 as a basic grant, in four quarterly installments. SRC will, in addition, match funds raised locally by our council after we reach $2300; for the next $2500 they will match dollar for dollar until we reach $4800. We have until June 1, 1963 to meet this matching quota of $4800. This is such a cheerful prospect, we know that members will want to meet this challenge and opportunity right away. This will also save us considerable money in time and postage if you use this blank for your renewal:

THE PROBLEM OF SEGREGATED RESTAURANTS

There is a problem on both sides. Traveling Negroes are hard-pressed to find convenient and suitable places to sleep and eat. Private businesses fear the loss of white patronage and hesitate to knock down established practices.

It is not, however, a problem the businesses are going to solve by locking their doors in the hope that it will go away. This seems a time for calm, undramatic transition to a policy of equal treatment of all patrons who conduct themselves in an orderly manner.

We are convinced there would be far fewer problems involved than these businesses seem to fear.

TENNESSEE ADVISORY COMMITTEE

TO THE U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

Minutes of Meeting held on November 18, 1962

The meeting was called to order on the 18th of November, 1962 at Gatlinburg, Tennessee at 9:30 a.m. Present were: Chairman Forgy, Mrs. Martha Ragland, Mr. Seamour Shavin, Mr. John R. Jones, Dr. Vivian Henderson, Senator Hobart Atkins, Secretary George Barrett and Mr. Philip Hammer from the Civil Rights Commission in Washington.

Minutes from the previous meeting were read and approved. The Chairman read the resignation of Mr. William Henry who was appointed as a member of the Federal Communications Commission. He announced that the Commission was considering the appointment of another person who was recommended by Mr. Henry.

The Chairman appointed Mr. George Barrett, Dr. Vivian Henderson and Mrs. Martha Ragland to make appropriate plans for the celebration of the Emancipation Proclamation on January 1, 1963.

Mr. Forgy reported on the questionnaire which was proposed at the last meeting and which was subsequently submitted to the Civil Rights Commission. The Bureau of the Budget in Washington refused to approve the questionnaire since it was the same as the one being submitted by the President's Committee to Contractors under the Executive Order 10925. Mr. Hammer reported on a meeting between the Civil Rights Commission and the President's Committee dealing with the proposed questionnaire.

Mr. Henderson questioned as to whether or not the President's Committee would make known to the S.A.C. government contractors in the area and their status in relation to Executive Order 10925.

Discussion followed as to the use of federal funds in Tennessee and various facets of their use. Dr. Henderson reported that the NAACP was making a survey of state employment and would have the report ready in December. Such would be available to the State Advisory Committee if desired.

Mrs. Ragland reported on the heavy use of federal funds by state agencies in Tennessee, and in particular in such agencies as vocational rehabilitation, welfare, public health, mental health, etc., and the practice of discrimination of such agencies and the use of such funds in employment, etc.

Discussion followed. Dr. Henderson proposed that the existing subcommittee, Mr. Shavin, Dr. Henderson and Mr. Lynch, meet for the purpose of developing a prospectus for the study of education and employment in Tennessee. Mrs. Ragland moved the adoption of the same and Senator Atkins seconded; vote was unanimous. Dr. Henderson promised to provide a curriculum of such within three weeks.

The Chairman requested that Mr. Barrett secure from the federal government the study of the civil service done by the federal agencies in the State of Tennessee at the request of the President's Committee in accordance with Executive Order 10925.

Dr. Henderson reported on the meeting in Chattanooga with Mr. Lynch and Mr. Shavin wherein they agreed that they would have a meeting with the employers of the Chattanooga areas; this has not yet taken place.

Dr. Henderson queried the advisability of both meetings in both cities being included in the prospectus.

Discussion followed as to the meeting and to the various programs. Mr. Barrett raised the question of the Clear Channel Broadcasting Company's request for an increase in their broadcasting power from 50,000 watts to 750,000 now pending before the FCC. His interest was the news coverage given civil rights matters and the employment practice of these stations.

Dr. Henderson moved that Mr. Barrett be directed to draft a letter to the Civil Rights Commission raising these questions and asking the Commission to query the FCC as to the policies of these broadcasting companies. Mrs. Ragland seconded, vote unanimous.

ADJOURNED FOR LUNCH

Following lunch, Senator Atkins reported on the administration of justice in Tennessee and promised to provide a written report which will be made part of the minutes. His report dealt with the State Legislature and reapportionment. Dr. Henderson moved that the report of Senator Atkins be accepted as a part of the minutes. Mrs. Ragland seconded, the vote unanimous.

Mr. Barrett questioned Senator Atkins about the possibility of formation of a State Commission on Human Relations, whether it would be advisable to effectuate such by legislation act or under Executive Order. Mr. Atkins said he felt that an Executive Order would be the best means of creating such a committee which could possibly put under the Department of Welfare.

Discussion followed with Mr. Hammer suggesting Tennessee Advisory Committee's report pointed out that there was no legal structure in Tennessee for such a committee at this time.

Mr. Forgy raised the possibility of the extension of Executive Order 10925 to cover Interstate Commerce, i.e., and FEPC, and the possibility of recommendation of such by the Tennessee State Advisory Committee to Congress for action in this field. It was framed in the following questions: "Is there a means of reaching business where no government contracts exists, but where such business uses interstate commerce, so as to eliminate discriminatory practices?" Discussion followed with no conclusion.

It was moved that the next meeting be held in Nashville, Tennessee, possibly on December 15 or 17 at which time an attempt would be made to secure an appointment with the Governor and ask him to proclaim January 1, 1963 as Emancipation Proclamation Day in the observance of the 100th anniversary of the effectiveness of the Emancipation Proclamation by President Lincoln.

Mr. Barrett was to contact the Governor's office to see if an appointment could be made and to notify the members of the committee when such appointment could be made.

The meeting stood adjourned at 2:00 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

George E. Barrett, Secretary

TENNESSEE ADVISORY COMMITTEE

TO THE U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

Minutes of Meeting held on September 16, 1962

The meeting was called to order by the Chairman, Mr. H. O. Forgy, on September 16, 1962, at the Holiday Inn in Nashville, Tennessee.

Present were Chairman Forgy, Mr. Seamour Shavin, Dr. David Rogers, Mr. Courtney Siceloff, Mrs. Martha Ragland, Mr. Russell Sugarman, Dr. Vivian Henderson, Mr. Mathew Lynch and George Barrett, Secretary.

Mr. Forgy read a request from the U. S. Commission in Washington that it desired copies of the minutes to be sent to the Washington office, and to Mr. Siceloff in South Carolina.

The agenda proposed by Mr. Forgy was: 1) presentation of reports previously called for; 2) U. S. Commission's request for participation in Emancipation Proclamation Celebrations; 3) participation in a survey of hospital facilities and civil rights; 4) report of the Chairman, request from S.A.C. an inquiry of college participation in N. D. E. A. i.e., language and guidance counsel; 5) a proposed survey on the impact of Executive Order 10925 on Tennessee Industry; and 6) news releases and news coverage of the S.A.C.

Dr. Henderson raised a question of the alleged vote fraud in the Second Ward and that any report of the 1962-63 S.A.C. should take note of such.

Mr. Forgy called for the following reports:

Mr. Sugarman on voting in 1961. Mr. Sugarman asked to be able to report at the following meeting.

Mrs. Ragland, education 1961. Mrs. Ragland said all data needed could be obtained from the Southern School Reporting Service, and that as a group, we could make observations and practical recommendations.

She felt that no one touched on the use of Federal monies in the field of education and that perhaps the State Advisory Committee should make a recommendation to the U. S. Commission that it study the utilization of Federal funds in the field of education. Mr. Forgy pointed out to Mrs. Ragland the existence of a handbook of Federal Agencies Aid for Communities.

Mrs. Ragland suggested that S. A. C. look into the federal grants to the local agencies to see if all of them are being administered on a non-discriminatory basis.

Mr. Forgy asked Mrs. Ragland to look into the use of federal funds in Tennessee and possible procedure for the State Advisory Committee.

Dr. Rogers suggested that the areas using federal subsidies would be a good place to begin an inquiry.

Mr. Barrett raised the question of the treatment of racial news by television and radio and that it was impossible to get information from the stations in regards to their policy in handling such news.

Dr. Henderson stated that the whole question of housing and the use of FHA and urban renewal funds causing to be created by the use of federal funds. The whole housing question was a question of continuous violation of civil rights by urban renewal programs.

Mr. Forgy suggested the idea of a public meeting in Oak Ridge with the possibility of appointing a sub-committee to study such.

Discussion followed on housing with the suggestion that the SAC use this as a major field of emphasis for the following year with the possibility of securing funds for such study from foundations.

Dr. Henderson was called upon to report on employment. He suggested a fact finding study based on the following: 1) vocational and technical training in Tennessee because of manpower needs and desegregation plans in the state on a grade-a-year basis which would include (a) the curriculum; (b) enrollment; (c) the role of the union; (d) funds from sources and etc.; 2) registered apprenticeship training programs with the U. S. Department of Labor, make up Advisory Board, etc., and recruiting aspect of the program; 3) vocational rehabilitation program with training and re-training of the handicapped; 4) placement and job referrals of the Department of Employment Security; 5) a re-training program in A.R.A. and depressed areas; 6) training in federal agencies; 7) impact of the unions on employment which would include i.e., membership data in craft unions, seniority, grievances, officers of unions, racial representation on negotiating committees; and 8) public utilities, i.e., Southern Bell, etc.

Such provided a basis for discussion and a possible basis for study on a state-wide basis. A general discussion followed with Mr. Shavin suggestion that Chattanooga had shown some success with the Council for Cooperative Action and possibility of a sub-committee of the State Advisory Committee coming to Chattanooga to interview employees, etc.

Discussion followed as to the method of approach; either that suggested by Dr. Henderson in his outline above or that of Mr. Shavin as noted above, that is going into an area and talking with employers.

Mr. Shavin moved the State Advisory Committee send a sub-committee to Chattanooga for the purpose of obtaining information on the civil rights implications as complied to employment opportunities. Seconded by Dr. Henderson. Discussion followed. The vote was unanimous.

Dr. Henderson moved that we proceed with development of procedure to implement a state-wide fact finding along the lines previously suggested as outlined above. Seconded by Mr. Lynch. Vote unanimous.

Mr. Forgy read a communication from the Commission on the Emancipation Proclamation.

Mr. Barrett moves that the Chairman appoint a sub-committee to draw a resolution on the Emancipation Proclamation and seek an appointment with the Vovernor asking him to declare January 1, 1963 as Emancipation Proclamation Day. Seconded by Dr. Henderson. Vote unanimous.

All committee members were asked to check on the observance of the Emancipation Proclamation in their respective areas.

The Chairman read a memorandum from Mr. Courtney Nelson, staff member of the Commission in Washington, proposing a survey of hospital facilities. Mr. Barrett moved that a hospital study of civil rights commission be done as per their request.

Mr. Henderson seconded. Discussion followed. The vote was unanimous.

Mr. Forgy read a letter from Mr. Phil Hammer, an attorney for the State Advisory Committee of the Commission in Washington, advising of the National Defense Educational Act and Language Guidance Counseling Institutes as available under the Act, and further advised that the Civil Rights Commission staff was studying the use of funds and facilities under this Act. The letter requested that the State Advisory Committee write the University of Tennessee and Vanderbilt asking information as to the operation of such institutions. Mr. Forgy said he wrote the two schools earlier in September, 1962 and has not received a reply.

Mr. Forgy suggested a direct mail survey of Tennessee industries along the lines of the questions distributed to all members.

Discussion followed as to the merits of the questionnaires and whether or not two sets of questionnaires sent out, (one for those having contracts with the government and one for those not) would be valuable. Discussion followed wherein Mr. Forgy inquired as to whether or not the State Labor Council or Tennessee Manufactures Associations would be interested in such.

Mrs. Ragland moved to authorize the Chairman to pursue the question and seek approval of the Civil Rights Commission, Mr. Sugarman seconded and the vote was unanimous.

Mr. Shavin suggested that the employment sub-committee meet in Chattanooga and talk with those who made the employment study and discuss the same.

The question of news releases was raised by Mr. Forgy, Mrs. Ragland suggested the Chairman to to the publishers of the newspapers in city before we meet.

Mrs. Ragland moved that Dr. Henderson be given the authority to bring in a proposition on housing, possible field of study for the State Advisory Committee. Mr. Shavin seconded, it passed unanimous.

Discussion then assumed around the October meeting and it was moved that the October meeting be held on October 21st at Gatlinburg. Senator Atkins would be asked to make arrangements.

The meeting adjourned at 2:50 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

George E. Barrett, Secretary

Field Activities

Arkansas Council on Human Relations

Quarterly Narrative Report
October-December 15, 1962

I. Significant Events

A. In the Communities

1. In Little Rock three organizations of Negro citizens bent on increasing opportunities and participation continued to function: (a) the Committee for Better Education, principally patrons involved in desegregation of schools; (b) the Council on Community Affairs (COCA), avowedly an action group; (c) Informational Fellowship, more inclusive of college and public school administrators.

2. Activities of (a) above resulted in a protest letter from Attorney Wiley Branton to the School Board attorney on October 15 asking about participation of Negro students in non-academic school activities and about the Board's plan for completing desegregation.

3. Activities of group (b) above included active sponsorship of Negro candidates, Dr. W. H. Townsend for the City Manager Board and Dr. M. A. Jackson for the School Board. This group also served as the nucleus of support for the negotiations of the protesting students. Also a member of this group, with inside information, prompted the Urban League to request and secure complete hospitality at the Marion Hotel for its dinner speaker on November 27.

4. On November 7, the day after the General Election, local students began a sit-in demonstration at Woolworth's lunch counter. No arrests were made during the three days following. The willingness of the business leaders to negotiate desegregation of downtown facilities was relayed to the student leaders over the week-end. The negotiating committee of two students and two Negro adults of their selection with a like number of strong business men met first on November 14.

Because the white members of this committee were either unwilling or not empowered to negotiate "early dates" the students sat-in at Walgreen's November 28. The counter was closed "in the interest of public safety." When two student leaders returned to the closed counter and sat the manager asked for their arrest under Arkansas Act #14 of 1959, refusal to leave a place of business when requested to do so by the management.

The student accepted bail on November 30 made by individuals in the Council on Community Affairs. After considerable delay (see below II) negotiations began again on December 12 with real promise of a happy conclusion by January 2.

5. Little Rock was host to the famous Schola Cantorum, singing group of the University of Arkansas, on November 16 in the municipal auditorium. The Chamber of Commerce joined in the sponsorship. Tickets were sold to all without distinction. Other years this group has had Negro vocalists in it.

6. Local reactions to events at the University of Mississippi were interesting. Hall High School, Little Rock, according to student reports from class discussions, was solid in condemning the action of Governor Barnett and the racists, "If any one agreed with them he was too timid to say so." Central High School, on the other hand, had sympathy demonstrations by some one hundred students.

State political figures agreed with the stand of the Mississippians. Governor Faubus, freshly returned from being elected chairman of the Southern Governors Conference, expressed sympathy for Barnett and castigated the federal administration. He did say he doubted that Barnett "could get away with it."

School officials and business leaders in Little Rock took the occasion for self-congratulation for the "solution" Little Rock found. Mr. Bowen of the Chamber of Commerce in a prepared statement said, "we find ourselves with this social revolution largely surmounted..."

B. Events in the Schools

1. In response to a letter from Attorney Wiley Branton to Herschel Friday, attorney for the Little Rock School Board, Superintendent of Schools Parsons' reply to the press was only that the Board would discuss the matter of Negro students participating in school athletics, clubs, etc. He indicated the school had no official policy on this matter but might have to establish one.

2. A news story (Arkansas Gazette, December 16) on projected enrollment figures for the Little Rock schools as related to building needs gives Superintendent Parsons as the authority for this part of the story: "The trend is toward empty classrooms in the white schools (in certain areas) and overcrowded classrooms in the Negro schools. The Board probably will be faced with three solutions, according to Parsons. It can build more Negro schools and let the white classrooms remain empty, increase integration, or consolidate some of the enrollment and convert more white schools to Negro use. The chances are the answer will be a combination of more schools for the Negroes and the conversion of traditionally white schools (to Negro use), though there is no official position."

3. Related to item #2 above was the announcement by Little Rock school officials of progress on the "J. R. Booker Junior High School" building in the estreme eastern section of the city to cost 1¼ million dollars. J. R. Booker is a recently deceased Negro attorney of Little Rock.

4. Arkansas school authorities and eleven school districts received letters in November from the federal government reminding them of the policy that segregated schools will not be accepted as a basis of receiving federal aid for educating children living on federal installations beginning in 1963. The Arkansas Department of Education said that only three Arkansas schools were in a position to be affected by the new policy and that all three had already desegregated. The department did not explain how the other eight schools happen not to come under the new policy.

5. Two of the four Negro children in Dollarway School withdrew in November because of change of residence.

C. In the Courts

1. Little Rock municipal judge postponed until January 17 hearing for William Hansen and Worth Long arrested in sit-in demonstrations.

2. Federal District Court of Little Rock (Henley's) ordered the Dollarway School District to admit Sarah Howard to the tenth grade. Sarah is the daughter of Attorney George Howard, President of Arkansas Conference of NAACP. Previously Dollarway has admitted only those in the first grades.

Judge Henley again posed the question as to the need for a plan of desegregation at Dollarway in the absence of any real demand for admission by Negro students. However, he granted the School Board's request for another year's use of its plan.

D. In Politics

1. Dr. William H. Townsend on November 6 ran second in a three-man race for Director of the City Manager Board. He received a total of 5,800 votes which was 31% of the total. The race issue was at no time injected in the campaign. He conducted an aggressive campaign with newspaper advertisements and public appearances.

2. On December 4 Dr. M. A. Jackson ran ~~1st~~ second in a three man race for membership on the Little Rock School Board, receiving around 4000 votes out of a 12700 total cast. He received actually 31% of the votes cast. Negro electors constitute about 18 % of the qualified electors. While the Negro vote disappointed Dr. Jackson and his supporters, approximately 44% of the qualified Negro electors voted while only 28% of all qualified electors voted.

On November 27th all candidates for the school board appeared together at a meeting sponsored by the Pulaski Heights Junior High and Elementary School P.T.A's. Dr. Jackson made a very favorable impression. An educated guess is that Dr. Jackson received a total of 500 "white" votes. The Women's Emergency Committee endorsed his white opponent while trying to swing all Negro voters to their other candidate, Mrs. Sara Murphy. Mrs. Murphy lost to Everett Tucker, President of the School Board. With this natural and contrived confusion the Negro voters split almost equally between Mrs. Murphy and Mr. Tucker. See clippings attached.

3. Senator J. William Fulbright won handily in his race against the Republican candidate, Dr. Kenneth Jones. Mr. Fulbright in his campaign criticized the Supreme Court's decision of 1954 saying in several speeches that the court had "usurped the powers of the legislative branch." Again he said the court acted "with power but without right." In reviewing the Mississippi furor he said the first mistake was made by the Supreme Court.

4. The Faubus sponsored Amendment #51, the segregated education amendment, lost in the General Election by a narrow margin.

E. In Organizations

1. On November 27 the Urban League held its Equal Opportunity Dinner with a capacity attendance.

2. On November 17-18 the Arkansas Conference of NAACP held its annual meeting at Pine Bluff with Attorney Jack Greenberg as ~~XXXXX~~ chief speaker. The conference endorsed the proposal of a law suit to desegregate schools in Pine Bluff. No case has been filed.

3. The annual convention of Arkansas Council of Churches was held on November 5 in North Little Rock with Mr. Robert Fudge of Hot Springs as special speaker.

4. The Arkansas Civil Rights Advisory Committee met and organized into committees for inquiries into the following areas: education, housing, employment, law, and agricultural programs.

II. ACHR Activities Related to Events

A. In the Communities

1. ACHR and some of its members were certain last Spring that the dinner for high school honor society seniors this year would include those from Horace Mann School (Negro). A news item on October 1 announced that the Chamber of Commerce of Little Rock would sponsor a luncheon on November 5 for the honor students of Hall, Central, Mount St. Mary's, and Catholic High. The staff called concerned persons. The Director wrote a letter of concern to the Chamber. A member of the luncheon committee Dr. Norton) and the Chamber President-elect (Mr. Will Mitchell) called at ACHR office to "explain" their problem. They proposed to have the luncheon for the whites and to present certificates to Horace Mann students at a special assembly at their school. The latter proposal was refused by Horace Mann's administrator and advisors. The lunch was held without Horace Mann. The next day the Executive Committee of ACHR issued a statement of criticism. (copy attached)

2. On October 2 the Director wired President Kennedy of support in his role of "defender of minority against the majority" in Mississippi.

   He also took the occasion to write the Attorney General commending his efforts at "solution in a frame of sanity" and at the same time trying to point up how Mississippi illustrated the nature of resistance in the whole South and the nature of the federal help (legal and legislative) needed.

3. On October 1 Dr. William H. Townsend phoned ACHR office that he had received tickets for the concerts of the Community Concert Association of Little Rock. This meant that nine memberships sold to Negro patrons for the orchestra and mezzanine last March by the Director of ACHR had been honored and that for these events Robinson Auditorium was desegregated.

4. A number of calls for assistance have been answered during the quarter.

   Mrs. Velma Powell, former secretary for ACHR, a secretary to the Dean at A & M College called and asked for "simple steps" for desegregating a college community. This called for a letter showing ideas and experiences from other situations.

   The Reverend Donald Campbell of Little Rock, Board member of ACHR, asked the directors for Negro nominees for members of the Board of Family Services. As a member of the nominating committee of that agency an opening to desegregate the Board had come. The directors submitted three names on October 12 and one has now been elected.

The directors were invited to participate in the luncheon meeting for the organization of a Hot Springs Community Relations Council on October 10. Some twenty-three local leaders voted to perfect an organization.

5. The monthly meeting of ministers (breakfast first; coffee, next) is meeting now for lunch as guests of Philander Smith's cafeteria and student union. The Director has been asked to act as secretary. Discussions have pursued the line set forth by a visiting person who is involved in efforts for extension of opportunities to Negro citizens. Persons invited include students, parents, school principals, associate director of ACHR.

6. ACHR's office and staff have been involved at interpretation of the sit-ins in Little Rock and in negotiating solutions. These activities, in brief, have included the following:

   a. Asking concerned white ministers to act as observers of the demonstrations.

   b. Explaining the nature of the demonstrations and what or who is behind them to a well-placed downtown attorney who phoned the Director.

   c. Calling Georgia Council to get name of the manager of Richie's for reference to the manager of a local department store.

   d. Interpreting to Negro leaders their relation to the student protestors and bringing them together.

   e. Serving as a member of the negotiating team named by the students (the associate director).

   f. Getting negotiation resumed after it had broken down by direct contact with the white head of the committee who asked and received from the Director concrete suggestions about the process of desegregating facilities.

   The net results of all events working together during November and December promise now to be much more desegregation downtown than anyone thought possible.

7. Through Mr. Harry Fleischmann of AJC, beginning November 21, the Director has been in touch with Actors' Equity in regard to the devious ways by which New York dramatic productions sponsored by the Little Rock Junior League are in fact being kept segregated although the contract calls for no discrimination.

B. Mass Media

1. The Executive Committee authorized wide distribution of reprints of Gerald Walker's article in November Redbook, "Little Rock - Five Years Later."

2. The Director has continued to seek and get the counsel of the publisher of the Arkansas Gazette in re news treatment of Negro candidates, student protests, and desegregating facilities.

3. Mrs. Gertrude Samuels of the New York Times spent several days in Little Rock in November and early December. She seemed to be making a study in depth of progress and regress in desegregation. She spent some time with ACHR Director on December 1.

C. Miscellaneous

1. The Director conferred with Jack Greenberg in Little Rock on November 18 in regard to the need for legal aid to enforce clear interpretation of school desegregation laws in Little Rock and across the South in order to realize the benefits of victories won for Negro youth.

2. ACHR received and answered two confidential requests about hotel hospitality in Little Rock for Negroes (from John Lassoe and Rev. John Morris). The answers given in early November were revised on December 4 to say that the leading hotels are open.

3. ACHR still served as sponsor for guests from other countries, particularly those in the employ of U.S.I.A. The program officer of U.S.I.A., Miss Charlotte Loris, visited Little Rock on December 3 and was honor guest at a dinner sponsored by ACHR with Little Rockians who have helped in this program of international hospitality.

4. The committee of the Arkansas Civil Rights Advisory Committee for the study of education is headed by Mrs. Elaine McNeil of Fayetteville, a member of ACHR's Executive Committee.

   She has the help of Mrs. Ruth Arnold of ACHR's staff in the inquiry as to denial of the rights of Negro students in certain school districts, the costs and the educational waste. Mrs. Arnold has involved persons in Arkansas Teachers Association staff, in the Arkansas Department of Education, in the Arkansas Education Association.

5. Mr. Carnes, Professor of Law at the University of Arkansas, has made two trips to ACHR for materials on school desegregation. He is a fellow in a south-wide study of what has happened as a part of and a result of litigation. The study is being sponsored by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Quarterly Report to the
the Period Ending December 31, 1962

In this period the primary work of the Florida Council on Human Relations has been continuation of the work undertaken by the Acting Executive Director in the previous quarter, that is, the consolidation of membership and financial records and the promotion of the Council among its constituents.

Membership rolls have been updated by means of several mailings with postage-free return envelopes. NEW SOUTH rolls were generously provided by Mr. Paul Rilling and the NEW SOUTH staff, so that mailings included subscribers who might presumably be interested in the Florida Council. (A number proved to be, and a few proved definitely not to be.) A system of recording and bookkeeping on memberships and contributions was instituted by the Acting Director's wife, utilizing a Kardex file which happened to be in the possession of the Acting Executive Director. This file and two others are being donated to the Florida Council, an act of seeming generosity which is not as great as it appears, seeing that these files had been a gift in the first place. The system which has been adopted can be taken over with a minimum of effort by the new Executive Director when he is employed.

During October the financial records were finally secured so that the financial situation of the Council could be clarified. Form 990-A was completed and sent to the Internal Revenue Service. It is almost certain that this form was filled out by the former Executive Director, for there was a pencilled form in the records which must have been a rough draft. No chance was taken, however, in that the new form was sent in. The covering letter did explain that it appeared that a form had already been submitted, the unexpressed hope being that the IRS would make a search for the first form. Form 941 was also submitted, though no wages or salaries had been paid; both preceding quarters had been reported, so the year's tax returns will be complete when the last quarter is reported this month.

Promotion of the Florida Council has resulted in the receipt of a fair amount of money, as will be seen from the financial report which will be forthcoming when the audit is completed for the latter half of 1962. The books have been balanced for the period in which the Acting Executive Director has held responsibility. It needs to be stated that the latter cannot assume responsibility for the time preceding his administration, other than a reasonable effort to determine what the financial situation was during the period since the audit of the first half of 1962.

The Executive Committee of the Florida Council met on December 15th, and were joined by Mr. Paul Anthony of the Southern Regional Council. A very rough budget was drawn up with the expectation that significant amounts of money can be raised both at the Annual Meeting and by the efforts of the Acting Executive Director. The decision to employ an Executive Director at the earliest possible moment was made. On the recommendation of Mr. Anthony who himself made further investigation, tentative approval was given to considering the Reverend Louis L. Mitchell, Jr., as a primary candidate. Mr. Anthony reported to the Acting Executive Director, according to agreement, that his own impressions of Mr. Mitchell coincided with those of two other members of the SRC staff. Accordingly, Mr. Mitchell was invited to attend the Annual Meeting of the Council and to meet with the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors to explore possibilities of working out a mutually satisfactory relation. Without the generous offers of assistance of the Southern Regional Council consideration of employing a full-time Director would be impossible at this time.

Activities in the state Councils and in the human relations picture in Florida, insofar as it can be ascertained from correspondence, are reported in the appended Newsletter. The latest news in the Jacksonville situation Council-wise is that Mr. Ennest E. Lent, Jr., arrived for a meeting of the Board of the Northeast Florida Council this week. It is not known just when a ruling on the appeal of the Board of Public Instruction in re the school desegregation suit in Duval County will take place, but the Unitarian Service Committee felt that the imminence of school desegregation required haste in placing Mr. Lent in the community.

The financial report for the Fourth quarter will be incorporated in the auditor's report for the year 1962, with the four months since the Acting Executive Director took over regarded as a quarter period.

QUARTERLY REPORT: September, October, November 1962

Council Administration

On November 26, the run-off election for city council in Nashville was held. The newly elected metropolitan government council will take office in April 1963. The newly elected state government will be sworn in during January while the Legislature is in session. It is devoutly hoped by TCHR staff that no political campaigns will engage our officers and members within the coming year. In Nashville, the population has been under seige of political campaigns since early last spring. While the heightened interest in political issues and representation reflect the increased political sophistication of Negro citizens, political candidates, and our membership, it has resulted in reduced council program.

Our state president, George Barrett, has returned to the Council after more than 6 months in the political arena, and we look forward to having his enthusiastic leadership again. We need some real shakedown in goals and program. President Barrett has appointed a strong committee to consider long-time goals of the Council, and its method of operation. This was announced at the Annual Meeting in Chattanooga but appointments were not made until this week. They are: Herman Long, Chairman; Will Campbell; Lewis Sinclair (vice-president of TCHR and TVA employee of Knoxville); William Willis (president-elect of TCHR and Nashville attorney); Mrs. Tom Ragland, Nashville; and Dr. Charlotte Allen, college professor of Murfreesboro. We do not yet know whether they will serve.

Although we eventually made our goal for matching funds ($4600), we lost the additional $200 since we did not have it in the extended time allotted. Perhaps this has had a saluatory effect since the president is already working on the financial drive for 1963, and Jack May, board member of Nashville, has agreed to serve.

Annual Meeting - Chattanooga, October 11 and 12

The October NEWSLETTER (copy enclosed), carried a full account of the general sessions of the meeting. The sessions moved along on schedule throughout October 11, but started late on October 12, because of tardy food service at motel where most of us stayed. The membership meeting and board meeting were somewhat disorganized due to inadequate planning. The full planning of the conference fell to the staff and Mrs. Silver as program chairman. Chattanooga, although it began late, did an excellent job of local arrangements. One hundred person registered for the full conference; 130 attended the dinner and 200 participated in one or more sessions. No city or date was designated for the 1963 meeting; this is usually determined at spring Board meeting.

Memphis

The long delayed Employment Opportunity Workshop was held in Memphis on October 19 and 20, and led by Dr. V. W. Henderson. Lindsley Hall on the University of Tennessee Medical School campus was used for all three sessions. The enclosed minutes describes the meeting and were sent to participants. An additional 50 copies were sent to Memphis for distribution to vocational guidance counsellors and others. The Memphis Chapter was disappointed with the attendance which averaged about 30 persons per session, but incompassed some 65 participants. K. Jones attended from TCHR staff and considered the participation as expected. There was noted disappointment that vocational guidance counsellors had not attended and some frank resentment at this absence. This may be a good thing, and produce more critical judgment of their performance. Mrs. Coe, school board member attended, and noted their absence.

The leadership representation, mentioned in closing paragraphs, has since decided to work through the Memphis Community Relations Council, an ~~affirmative~~ power structure group which is persuasive. Carl Carson, member of that group and our Council is a highly effective person, and should be able to carry this off; Hunter Lane, our chapter president is now being requested to work with the MCRC. Plans for workshop were made by Memphis members with one day-long visit from me on October 1. This was at the time of the Mississippi crisis, and while there was interest in hourly broadcasts from Oxford, the Memphis Community was generally going about business as usual. Memphis State University president had issued an ultimatum to students promising expulsion if they went to Oxford, only 80 miles away. Memphis editorials were positive in proclaiming for law and order.

Bristol

A Bristol (Tennessee) Council on Human Relations has been organized and has voted to affiliate as a chapter of TCHR on January 1. I have been invited to their January meeting. Sidney Berman, social worker and former member of Nashville Community Relations Council, is president. Bristol is bisected by the Tennessee-Virginia state line, and chapter includes members residing in both states, but is affiliating with Tennessee. Heslip Lee has been informed by TCHR of development.

Jackson

The Jackson Community Relations Council had an open meeting on December 6 in Jackson City Hall, with Paul Rilling as speaker. Paul gave excellent and forthright address which was enthusiastically received. Meeting was preceeded by newspaper advertisement, which ran twice, and news story. Speech was taped for radio broadcast following night. One hundred persons attended - about 75 Negroes and 25 whites. Conflicts of date and hour included Republican meeting and reception for Senator Kefauver. The desire for publicity was inspired by Citizens Council which has used open meeting and radio broadcasts. Jackson Community Relations Council picked up 19 new members that evening. Jackson Negro citizens are daily requesting food service at Jackson Hospital cafeteria. Hospital cares for Negro patients, but refuses food service to guests. No attempts made to sit-in. Picket has been removed from Woolworth's. This was the picket who was hired by Citizens Council to protest integrated service at the lunch counter.

Nashville Community Relations Council

NCRC held its annual membership meeting on December 4 at Albert Pick Motel, with Mr. Donald Gunn as speaker. Mr. Gunn is an excellent speaker and should be persuasive with business groups. He is practicing attorney, former president of St. Louis Board of Aldermen, and leading Catholic layman. He was instrumental in bringing about St. Louis' public accommodations ordinance, and this was subject of his address - newly elected vice mayor introduced him and 6 city councilmen elect were in attendance as guests of NCRC. Total of 135 attended. The Nashville Christian Leadership Council continues to work for public accommodations by ordinance, negotiation and demonstration. There has been a recurrance of sit-ins for past 3 week-ends - beginning when SNCC was here over Thanksgiving. News coverage has improved, but no success yet in restaurants which are targets of demonstrators. While students have been arrested along with their hecklers, they have not been fined. Hoodlums persist in heckling and attacking demonstrators but adults are likely to voice dympathetic statements.

Other Activity

TCHR organized delegation to see Governor Ellington on November 5 in regard to education for Negro blind. Negro division school did not open in September because girls' dormitory termed unsafe trap by Fire Marshall. Delegation represented United Church Women, Council of Negro Women, National Council of Jewish Women, American Association of University Women and TCHR. Governor promised (1) reopening in January, recommendation to new Governor and 1963 Legislature of funds for new dormitory on white campus for integration of both divisions and (2) admittance of 6 Negro girls to white campus within two weeks. Only 3 were admitted by December 3, but they are now enrolled as boarding students with plans for them to remain even when other school reopens. In line with Governor Ellington's other steps, he insisted that this be done quietly without any publicity. The six vacancies to which he referred are all that exist on white campus at present.

Local arrangements for the consultation sponsored by SRC and Fellowship of Southern Churchmen, December 27 and 29, have been made by this office. Separation of living and meeting facilities is regrettable, but unavoidable. K. Jones will be here for meeting; D. Webster will be away from Nashville.

Council has made several arrangements for integrated housing in motels, and state parks not previously so used. We assisted local National Student Association to lease Montgomery-Bell State Park for their November 2 day meeting. Accommodations at Holiday Inn obtained for John Hope II and staff. This is same motel which will be used for December Consultation.

We have not been successful in organizing local councils in small towns in Tennessee, with a few exceptions. Some of these towns and counties have accomplished desegregation of schools without violence, but we have no real access to communities and are not informed about real communication across racial lines. Citizens of other towns, where inquiry has been made, have not desired assistance, preferring to accomplish their school changes by power structure prestige or personal negotiation.

The State Advisory Committee to U. S. Commission on Civil Rights has continued to meet, with TCHR furnishing clerical services.

Participation in Tennessee Council of Churches meeting, November 26 and 27. A strong statement on church responsibility for inclusiveness was drawn up by subcommittee, but rejected by larger group who felt it would not be helpful in bringing local congregation to desegregate.

Respectfully submitted,

Katherine Jones

To Members of the State VCHR Board:

This memorandum is being sent to all Board members, both those who attended our Roanoke meeting and those who were unable to be there.

First, let me thank all of you for your responsive encouragement and your support of the steps suggested there. I feel that we have great resources in our Board and I am eager for us, all busy people, to find the best ways of relating our concern and our available time to the vital issues before us.

The Board has authorized a far-reaching committee structure for the year and appointments as they appear on the enclosed sheet.

This note goes to you for one specific purpose:

--To urge every one of you to place the material relating to your committee assignment in a spot (or file) where it can be readily available and to ask you to give some thought to the possibilities which are outlined on the sheets of suggestions. Then, write or confer with your chairman, offering your suggestions. Let us be prepared for effective use of the available time when we have our next Board meeting; or, if any committees or portions can meet before that time, so much the better.

Executive Director's Quarterly Report for October, November and December, 1962

To: Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Georgia

Duplicate copies furnished

Office and Staff:

During the past quarter we have doubled our office staff. Mr. Ocie Lee Smith from Natchitoches, Louisianna, became Associate Director of VCHR on December 1, 1962. The Executive Committee decided to take the three year grant from William C. Whitney Foundation of $10,500.00, and make a two year project of Associate Director. (Included in the 1963 budget enclosed are plans for a reserve fund which would build to the point of continuing this staff member beyond the initial two years).

We have rearranged our Secretarial help as follows: Mrs. Laura Lee will be Office and Financial Secretary on a twenty hour work week basis beginning January 1, 1963. Mrs. Elsie Adams (Negro) assumed the position as personal Secretary to the Executive Director as of January 1, 1963 on a twenty hour work week basis.

We have moved into new offices located at 17 East Cary Street. We are located on the second floor over our landlady who owns the building. She, Mrs. Edna H. Bailey, is a real estate Agency, specializing in woodland and farms. We occupy six offices plus a bathroom and large storage room at a rate of $135 per month rent. The Richmond-Petersburg Area Council has agreed to pay $35 per month of this rent and will be allowed to use the office equipment for the promotion of its program.

State Officers and Board Members

Enclosed is a list of the newly elected State Officers and Board Members. Dr Aubrey N. Brown, Jr. is certainly full of new ideas and this will be an entirely new year for us with his contribution. Five minutes after his election in Roanoke, the members of the Board knew there was new and vigorous leadership. Dr. Brown had prepared an arm full of materials and announced the appointment of several important committees, the Executive Committee plus a suggestive work sheet for each committee (See enclosure of these). I predict that there are new ideas and projects to come from this new board. You will notice the election of several new members to the Board and that several were dropped. In every such case the replacements are energetic persons replacing those who had contributed little to our work.

State Council Leadership (local level)

All of the local councils seem to have good leadership for 1963. For the purpose of SRC's use in mailings, etc. I would like to include the names and addresses of local council presidents:

Alexandria: Mrs. George A. Eddy, 5151 Polk Avenue, Alexandria, Va.
Arlington: (Lawyer) Stuart Broads, 1608 Osage Street, Alexandria, Va.

(For mailing purposes, enclosed is a list of State Officers and Board Members)

Finance

A Financial report is included in this report for October, November and December. This report is self explanatory, thus no further comments on the report.

However, we wish to express our sincere appreciation to The Southern Regional Council for your help in developing and securing through the request, a grant for $30,000.00 from the Field Foundation. This project is in the capable hands of Mr. David H. Scull and his committee. Very shortly we expect to make a public announcement of this grant along with the names of several State Businessmen who will serve on an Advisory Committee in this project. We look forward to the implementation of this Equal Job Opportunity Service for the State of Virginia, and will keep you informed of the developments.

Our State Financial report which is enclosed will show that we are expecting to support our 1963 budget through assigned local council quotas plus the help from SRC's quarterly gifts and matching funds. We expect to be the first State to reach our matching fund quota in spite of the increased base which has been assigned us by SRC's Board.

Although the quarterly financial report included shows our operating funds to be $483.68 short, we expect January's gifts plus the $975 SRC quarterly gift to put us well on our way toward a good year financially.

Council Activities

Most of our local councils could be doing far more than they are at present, however, many are very active. Some are concentrating on programs, some on employment, while others are concentrating on housing. Among those doing the better jobs are: Alexandria, Blacksburg, Peninsula, Fairfax County, Charlottesville and Richmond. Improvements have been shown in Roanoke, Lynchburg and Arlington, with the most improved council being Norfolk.

Around the State

Everyone is standing by for an announcement of the January 9 Court's decision on Prince Edward School Closing. There is an air of optimism (400th time) that at long last some new development is in the making for the opening of the schools.

New rulings which place Negroes in formerely all-white schools have now become a regular part of Virginia's life. These rulings do not make headlines any longer, and in most cases counties carry out the Court's orders. Powhatan County has obtained a stay in their case, but the Judge ruled that Powhatan County could not close its schools to avoid his order.

Sit-in demonstrations have been going on by both White and Negroes of Richmond for several weeks against The White Tower Eating establishments. Five arrests were made January 8 and a hearing is set for next week.

Many public facilities are desegregated almost weekly. These include Hotels, and eating establishments primarily. It is a rare case for any Negro to be denied services at any Hotel in Richmond these days.

Some degree of Merit employment is being followed, but this is very little yet, and we expect our new project to supplement this phase of development greatly.

General Comments

We would appreciate SRC and its Staff to feel out or recommend persons whom you might feel qualified as Special Industrial Person for our new Equal Job Opportunities Project.

Concerning the Annual Meeting of State Directors, I, personally, would prefer the dates March 5-6 over February 12-13, however, should the latter be chosen, I feel that I could attend. I shall prepare and send to Mr. Anthony some suggestions for an agenda for that meeting.

Being the Executive Director of the Virginia Council on Human Relations has taken on an entirely new dimension during 1962. We have had an over-all good year, and our work is cut out for us for 1963. Wheras I spemt my first year at public speaking trying to sell an image of our Council, I now am developing an entirely new format for my role in 1963. I would expect that before I am able to completely decide on my role for 1963 that 1964 will be here. Nonetheless, we face the new year with much encouragement and energy.

Since my last two reports asked for a closer line of communication between this office and SRC, I wish to say that I have been impressed with some signs that this is improving.

State Projects for 1963

1. Implementing the "Equal Job Opportunity Project", through the Field Grant.
2. Promoting "Operation Extension" through the Whitney Grant and Associate Director.
3. Activating Board Members through eight committees as spelled out in enclosures.
4. Developing Scholarship Funds for exceptional Negro students in five Va. Communities.
5. Developing a series of consultations and special projects for people of Virginia who are opinion makers, namely, Scholars, Clergymen, Classroom Teachers, Press Radio and T.V., Social Workers, High School and College Editors and Student Government Leaders.

An illustration of such a special project would be.... A comparison of news coverage by specific Virginia newspapers in comparison with one or two nationally known dailies to determine what and how much news is being kept from Virginians in the area of advances in better race relations in other parts of the country. Spot checks of this indicate that much news is blacked-out, but a detailed study is needed.

6. Developing ways and means of issuing statements in support of constructive action throughout the State, and voicing disappointment when negative statements or action is taken by Virginians.
7. Establishing a State-wide Workshop Annually within Virginia covering the entire field of Human Relations.
8. Promoting a campaign to have businesses, especially eating establishments and Hotels, display signs or plaques stating "WE SERVE THE PUBLIC EQUALLY".

Help needed from SRC

1. Copies of any newsworthy articles or developments in any and all fields of Human Relations. Especially copies of correspondence carried on with any persons within Virginia. Examples - Ben Muse, H. H. Brewbaker, etc. etc., Any group participating in Voter Education Project, and especially the procurement or employment of any Virginians in any special project or work.
2. Your continued support in assisting us in obtaining special grants for the development of an enlarged service within our State.
3. Any suggestions or advice on any matter or project in which we are engaged at any time.
4. An occasional visit from any department, and a notice of such a visit to any part of Virginia.
5. Notices of any outstanding persons whom you might know to be planning a visit to Virginia, in order that we might take advantage of the contribution these persons might be able to give to our work.

Again, many thanks for your interest and support!

Sincerely,

Heslip Lee

VCHR HAS NEW PRESIDENT

Dr. Aubrey N. Brown, Jr., of Richmond was elected president of the VCHR Board of Directors at the annual meeting in Roanoke, November 23-24.

Dr. Brown is a graduate of Davidson College and Union Theological Seminary in Virginia, and holds honorary degrees from Southwestern at Memphis and Maryville College in Tennessee. He has been Editor, since 1943, of the Presbyterian Outlook of Richmond; and since its origin in 1946 of the annual Going-to-College Handbook. Prior to that time he was a pastor for eleven years in West Virginia, and Moderator of the Presbyterian, U. S., Synod of West Virginia in 1946.

Dr. Brown was the first president of the Richmond-Petersburg Area Council on Human Relations, and has been very active in all phases of this Council's work. He is a member of the Department of Racial and Cultural Relations of the National Council of Churches, and Moderator of the "Any Questions?" radio program on the current Presbyterian Hour over WLEE, Richmond.

He is former president of the Richmond Torch Club and the Richmond Presbyterian Ministers' Association. Among his honors are the Associated Church Press citation in 1952 for "eminence" in editorial writing, and recipient in 1962 of the Sixth Baptist (Richmond) Citizenship and Brotherhood Award. His wife is the former Miss Sarah Hill of Richmond. They have eight children, ranging from a three-year-old to a Peace Corps son in Nigeria.

Other officers elected for 1963 include: Mr. W. R. Walker of Warwick, First Vice-president; Dr. Harry Roberts, Petersburg, Secretary and Dr. J. Rupert Picott, Richmond, Treasurer. Other Vice Presidents elected were: Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss, Farmville; Dr. E. B. Henderson, Falls Church, and the Right Reverend William H. Marmion, Roanoke.

PRESIDENT APPOINTS NEW EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

VCHR's new president appointed the 1963 Executive Committee immediately following his election at Roanoke on November 23. Each member of the committee will serve as chairman of a committee as follows: Mrs. George A. Eddy, Alexandria, Finance Committee; Dr. Ed. C. Kollman, Newport-News, Student Program Committee; Dr. E. B. Henderson, Falls Church, Public Facilities Committee; Mrs. George E. Mattus, Blacksburg, Extension and Public Relations Committee; Mr. David H. Scull, Annandale, Equal Job Opportunities Committee; Dr. J. Rupert Picott, Richmond, Council Programs Committee; Reverend Hubert Beckwith, Fairfax, International Friendship Committee; and Mr. Harold O. DeWitt, Williamsburg, Nominating Committee. All officers will serve on the Executive Committee which will meet at least four times during 1963.

THREE RESOLUTIONS APPROVED AT ANNUAL MEETING

Resolution on Prince Edward Schools: We are appalled at the continued scandal of public schools closed for the fourth year in Prince Edward County. Action is urgently needed for the future of the children out of school and for the sake of the reputation of our State. We call upon all thoughtful citizens and public officials, including the Governor of Virginia, to bring their influence and authority to bear to correct this intolerable situation, which is unparalled in the Nation.

Resolution on Housing: We commend President Kennedy for signing the executive order banning discrimination in Federally-assisted housing. We believe the order to be an important step in reducing the real hardships caused by lack of suitable housing for minority groups. We are confident it will provide benefits to the economy through stabilizing economic values and providing a substantial additional market for housing. To the extent this action reduces segregation and discrimination among citizens of this democracy, it will work to reduce racial tensions and misunderstandings, and hence will improve human relations. We look forward to effective and skillful enforcement, and to extension of coverage to additional types of housing.

Resolution on Voting Registration: We commend the General Assembly and people of Virginia for approving the constitutional amendment removing the restrictive voting registration provision. We believe this action provides additional desirable opportunity for greater citizen participation in State and local government.

WE HAVE AN ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR

The personnel committee announces the employment of Mr. Ocie Lee Smith of Natchitoches, Louisiana, as Associate Director of VCHR, effective December 1, 1963. Mr. Smith will reside at 2929 Montrose Avenue, Richmond, and will work out of the state offices at 17 East Cary Street in Richmond.

Mr. Smith holds both B. S. and M. S. degrees, the latter in the field of Sociology and Economics. He has worked for the United States Department of Agriculture, assigned to the states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas. He has also taught Sociology in both high school and on college campuses.

His voluntary services have included membership on the Urban League's Executive Board; President of the Board of Directors of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations for five years; and, prior to the about-face of the Governor, he served as a member of Governor Faubus' Council on Children and Youth.

We welcome Mr. Ocie Lee Smith to Virginia and into the work of VCHR gladly.

A WORD FROM Mrs. George A. Eddy, Chairman of 1963 Finance Committee

Too few people in Virginia have the conviction, the nerve and the ability to carry on the work of VCHR. There's no use pretending otherwise. Either we do it or it won't be done. I ask you very seriously to make a pledge for 1963 to the VCHR budget. The 1962 VCHR income, based on pledges, has been the most satisfactory in our seven year life. If 250 people would make a pledge of $5.00 per month, we can provide: 1. matching funds for Southern Regional Council grants; 2. meet our local quotas as suggested by the finance committee; 3. free both our state staff and ourselves of financial worry for 1963. Use the enclosed pledge form and mail today!!!!

Sincerely, Mrs. George A. Eddy

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR

C O U N C I L M E E T I N G S

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/or recommended to looal chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Plan well ahead for annual meeting.

2. Consider the possibility of other patterns -- possibly using more of two days (study Nashville and Tenn. Patterns). Could a larger and longer meeting involve delegated groups from chapters to engage in serious study or workshops? Overnight entertainment might be provided in homes of local members, thereby offering added fellowship opportunities.

3. Encourage local councils to send delegation to annual meeting.

4. Assist in selection of date and place of annual meeting; Board of Directors meeting and Executive Committee meetings.

5. Note suggestions on sheet applying to all committees.

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR

INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/or recommended to local chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Encourage local chapters to cooperate fith federal departments in WAshington in entertaining delegations and individuals from abroad.

2. Disseminate information about Operation Amigo People-to-People plans and similar procedures.

3. Encourage student weekends in communities for international students enrolled here.

4. Local all-out observance of International Student Day in the fall in communities where there are students from abroad.

5. Look at the possibility of involving other state HR councils and VCHR in overseas trips under the American Travel Association or other Auspices.

6. Note suggestions on sheet applying to all committees.

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR

N O M I N A T I N G

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/ or recommended to local chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Study the entire list of officers and directors, giving inactive members the opportunity to be replaced at the end of each year -- unless in some cases an individual's obvious influence and use of his name may overbalance non-performance in other ways.

2. Recommend necessary replacements during the year effective only until the annual meeting.

3. Keep alert for strong leaders across the state who may be considered for board membership.

4. See that each local conuncil selects their representations to Board as specified in by-laws.

5. See that each local council, as well as other areas of state,are represented on Board.

6. Note suggestions on sheet applying to all committees.

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR STUDENT PROGRAM

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/or recommended to local chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Seek to have established in every educational community in the state a student chapter of the VCHR. Work with adult (permanent?) campus contacts in order to assure best possible continuity -- sympathetic professors, etc.

2. Consider the possibility of an annual statewide student HR convocation under outstanding leadership.

3. Quarterly newsletter for students, for the widest possible campus distribution.

4. YWCA has received a grant from Field Foundation to establish such college councils. Seek information and work with YWCA where possible.

5. Note suggestions on sheet applying to all committees.

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR

EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITIES

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/or recommended to local chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Supervise VCHR Consulation Service.

2. Note suggestions on sheet applying to all committees.

Some more or less obvious suggestions or reminders for all VCHR committees . . . .

Some casual considerations of committee work in general . . .

Is one test of good committee work not simply how much and how efficiently the committee members do their work individually and collectively, but also how many others they are able to enlist in fulfilling our agreed-upon objectives across the state, since our primary objective is involvement of people at the local level where the issues are joined?

Where other organizations or groups are doing something in our field it is important (1) to make common cause where possible, and/or (2) to encourage these other groups to move forward, thereby releasing us for other needed activities.

Committee chairmen are members of the executive committee, thereby providing channels and liaison.

If other outstanding individuals who are not Board members might be considered as possible additions to committees because of their special qualifications, this may be arranged by application to the Board's executive committee. (Particularly important to keep former Board members related to us in this or other ways.)

And, in particular . . .

It is proposed that committees can get their work done in some of these ways:

- -- during the first 1 or 1½ hours of regular Board meeting time;
- -- sitting together at lunch at these Board meetings;
- -- by correspondence (possibly by telephone);
- -- by occasional informal meetings of some members who live near each other;
- -- when necessary by a called meeting of the committee.

It will be helpful if matters related to the area of a committee's responsibility can be dealt with by the committee before Board meetings so that reports and recommendations can go to the Board against the background of committee reflection and judgment.

NEWSLETTER . . .

The VCHR Newsletter offers opportunity for reporting or soliciting information. Please consider that this is an opportunity and, in some respects, a responsibility.

If you learn of printed matter: books, pamphlets, reprints, etc., which should be called to the attention of our constituency, please send this information to the Newsletter, particularly if it pertains to your committee assignment; but in other cases too.

Also, give the Newsletter information about audio-visual aids which are found to be useful.

Give the Newsletter information about meetings of other organizations, study and workshop opportunities, and the like, where VCHR members can attend with profit -- and if the enterprise is related to your committee's responsibility, make a special effort to have committee members attend.

VCHR SUGGESTED PROCEDURES FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

Please study these suggestions and others from all sources to discover the most needed and workable procedures to be sponsored by the VCHR and/or recommended to local chapters, remembering our primary objective of involving increasing numbers of concerned and able people at the community level.

1. Investigate areas where next advances in opening up facilities for all should be made, with recommendations to local chapters.

2. Survey successful techniques of change in Virginia and other areas where significant advances have been made and share information with local chapters.

3. Where needed and desirable request (through executive committee) studies or analyses by qualified scholars.

4. With Extension Committee plan workshops, particularly in areas without HR chapters, on such topics as: Ministers and Effective Teaching of Good Human Relations: also in turn for Parents and Public School Teachers. Or: Churches and Good Human Relations: How to Teach Them. Or: The Church Teaching Good Human Relations.

5. One-day men's conference of 25 each of the topmost Negro and white leaders in the state to consider "What remains to be done to abolish second class citizenship in Virginia?" Possibly, similar procedure to be recommended in cities. And, 25 women at state and city levels, on same topic.

6. If permitted by charter, inquire of candidates for public office their attitudes on key issues, providing this information to the state membership.

7. Seek to have maintained up-to-date information on all litigation within the state dealing with the opening up of public facilities without discrimination.

8. Consider the possibilities of encouraging, in cooperation with other Virginia Organizations, a legislative reporting service during the General Assembly Session which would provide an analyses of current legislation and status reports, picking up a wide variety of bills of general human relations, welfare, consumer, educational and other interest. Board members might help.

9. Call attention to significant studies within and without Virginia dealing with this area of concern.

10. Consider the possibility of periodic statewide meetings of allied and congenial groups working or concerned with

A council that seeks—through fact-finding, discussion and action—to attain equal opportunity for all people in Virginia.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Dear Friend:

Like all of us, you are doubtless wondering what you can do to make a constructive contribution in the midst of the tensions and anxieties of our day.

There is one organization which you may not have considered which provides a meeting-ground and a bridge of understanding between white and Negro persons who are together seeking constructive ways of promoting the common welfare.

This organization is the Virginia Council on Human Relations. It is related to the Southern Regional Council. The president of the Richmond Area Chapter is Edward Meeks Gregory, curate at St. Marks and a lifetime resident of Richmond.

We believe you will find our activities interesting and highly stimulating. Our meetings bring a deeper understanding of ways and means to contribute effectively to some of the opportunities of the present hour. Our national leaders seem to be of one mind in calling us to make the most constructive efforts possible in this area of urgent need.

Annual dues are only $5 and provide, if desired, the valuable and informative magazine, New South, published by the Southern Regional Council, and the Council Newsletter.

A card is enclosed, offering an opportunity to register your interest in this helpful program. You will be notified of the next meeting where we hope to be able to welcome you into our fellowship.

Sincerely,

Aubrey N. Brown, Jr.

WHAT THEY SAY . . . about the Council on Human Relations. What do you say?

FATHER RICHARD J. BURKE, Roman Catholic Diocesan Superintendent of Schools-- To use the talents God gave me in order to serve my fellowman is a distinct privilege I have as a human being. The Council on Human Relations gives me this wonderful opportunity for which I am most grateful.

MRS. J. L. BLAIR BUCK, Former President, General Federation of Women's Clubs of the U. S. A. -- The work of this Council is highly important for Richmond -- for Virginia. Many more of our citizens should be participating in it.

J. RUPERT PICOTT, Executive Secretary, Virginia Teachers' Association -- Effective communication between people is the great need of our times. The Richmond area Council deserves hearty congratulations for fulfilling this role.

BOOKER T. BRADSHAW, President, Virginia Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. -- The program and objectives of the Council on Human Relations are highly commendable. They deserve the wholehearted support and encouragement of every patriotic American in this community.

*MRS. MARSHALL C. DENDY, Book Reviewer, Travel Tour Conductor -- Richmond is fortunate in having an active Council on Human Relations. When men and women of different racial backgrounds can discuss their problems in an atmosphere of mutual respect and concern, those problems are well on the way to being solved.

THEODORE F. ADAMS, Pastor, First Baptist Church of Richmond -- I am sure that many are grateful for any worthy means of promoting understanding and brotherhood across the lines of color and creed. The Council on Human Relations provides just such a channel for many men and women of goodwill.

*HOLMES ROLSTON, Editor-in-Chief, Presbyterian, U. S., Board of Christian Education -- To me, the work of the various Councils on Human Relations within our state is highly significant because it gives to those involved opportunities to meet representative leaders from other races. I have opportunity to know the Negro ministers of the city through the Richmond Ministerial Association, but apart from my contacts with the Richmond-Petersburg Council on Human Relations I have almost no opportunity to get to know in terms of personal friendship the Negro leaders in the educational and professional life of our city.

ROBERT P. DANIEL, President, Virginia State College, Petersburg -- The Council on Human Relations makes a significant contribution to the cultivation of wholesome attitudes necessary for the solution of the racial issues involved in community problems. Tensions and misunderstandings can be removed, indeed prevented, by the cooperative efforts of people of mutual respect and goodwill.

Member, State Board of Directors. *Member, Richmond-Petersburg Board.

Miss Marge Manderson
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Miss Manderson:

Is my face ever red! I feel sure that Mr. Rilling has been replaced, but I cannot for the life of me locate the correspondence where I thought I read it. Will you please offer my apologies and set me straight. Done

I know that my letters to you are long overdue. I was out of the office from December 18 through December 31st. We had employed someone on a part time basis, but there was illness in the family and she had to go to Alabama, so I am still catching up, but never hope to clear things up much. Ha!

Also, will you give me Paul Rillings complete address. I received a season's greeting from him, but no address. Done

I am enclosing the past three month's financial statements, which total $1,601.75 (outside of dinners). So far this month I have banked $665.00 in memberships and memorials. We are away off from our goal, but are really just getting off the ground. What we need badly now is a new brochure. I have an appointment now to meet with two of our men who are working on one. I am again enclosing a copy of our campaign budget. We are reorganizing our campaign. We have four divisions: Memberships (smaller), Big Gifts, Businesses and foundations (some of this will be same as Big Gifts) and the fourth section is Student Memberships.

I am attaching the 1962-63 Program Plans and also a listing for the months of October, November and Dcecember, the activities. In a separate letter I am requesting some information for our Health Chairman and would you see that it gets to the correct person.

Our Annual meeting with Mr. Dabbs was fine, our meeting with Ralph McGill in December excellent--this gave us a little prestige and reached some status people; our meeting last week with John H. Griffin was most successful and we are going to reach new people through the contacts we made that day.

For the future--We are in the tentative or rather planning stages for our Employment Workshop which is scheduled for February 23rd; and also our Youth Seminars for the latter part of March.

Please write and let me know if I have given you all the information which you desire.

Actually, the picture here is about the same. More Negroes are being employed with the demand greater than the supply. Several groups are hard at work to get poll taxes paid. As a group we are not in on this as so many of our members are working actively in this through other groups they represent. Enclosing a clipping about two Negroes being hired in Austin. We still are not able to set up the dialogue that we would like to with minorities in this community, but will work toward this end.

I shall try to write more often.

Sincerely yours,

Ethel

JOHN HOWARD GRIFFIN is an internationally-known novelist, reporter, humanitarian, musicologist and student of primitive culture. Mr. Griffin is a native Texan. He served with the French forces in World War II and later with the American Army in the Pacific, where he was severely wounded. In 1947, with total loss of vision, he returned to America to attend schools for the blind. He then moved to Mansfield, Texas, and divided his time between raising pure-bred livestock and writing books. He has written: "The Devil Rides Outside," "Nuni," "Land of the High Sky." "Black Like Me" is the story of this daring and skillful reporter's travels through four Southern states that began as a scientific research study of the Negro and the South, but ended as a journal of his experiences living as a Negro. His latest book, "The Scattered Shadows" an autobiography, was published in the fall of 1962 and tells of ten years of blindness and sight recovery. He is married and has three children.

NEWSLETTER OF THE FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

ALL! roads lead to

Daytona Beach and the

ANNUAL MEETING

January 26th

Starting: 10:00 a.m.

Bethune-Cookman College

BRING YOUR FAMILY

Lunch: $1.25 adults
$1.00 children

THIS IS THE BIG MEETING OF THE YEAR. Fill your car with members and friends of the Florida Council on Human Relations and hie your way to Daytona Beach on Saturday, January 26th.

Just to get together with others vitally concerned about the same things you are will be sufficient reward for coming. But the program will be memorable, one in which you will want to participate yourself and to share with others.

The piece de resistance will be Wiley A. Branton, Director of the VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT of the Southern Regional Council. Attorney Branton was cited by LIFE magazine as one of the 100 most important young men and women in the United States, in its Sept. 14 issue. For his outstanding record in civil rights cases he has received citations and awards from various political and civil rights organizations. He is a native Southerner, a family man (six children), a 32nd degree Mason, a Baptist, a World War II veteran, a member of bar associations, and now Director of one of the most significant citizenship projects in the country.

Other features will be a panel of Floridians, headed by Mrs. Lilburn B. Moseley, taking up the human relations situation in Florida; a period of Council sharing where the local Councils tell what is happening in their communities; a luncheon with fellowship, food, fun, and fund raising; and the annual business meeting where the membership has its say.

For the fund raising time be sure to figure your budget and come prepared to help the Florida Council raise its. Local Councils, organizations, and individuals may all participate in this part. If we expect to have enough to employ a full-time Director for the FCHR, our giving cannot be peanuts. If you cannot give a big amount at one time, make your giving monthly in smaller amounts.

Remember the date: January 26th. Come and bring others.

YOU ARE THE FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS. COME TO YOUR MEETING.

Ole Miss

Have you read the sad story of how a Governor sold his soul for a mess at Old Miss in LOOK, Dec 31 issue? It is euphemistically entitled, "How a Secret Deal Prevented a Massacre at Ole Miss."

Southern Student Reactions

SRC has compiled editorials from Southern colleges expressing reactions against Gov. Barnett's actions. Everything from satire to sorrow. Write FCHR headquarters for a copy.

SRC Makes Generous Grant and Offer

The Southern Regional Council, our parent body, has made available for 1963 a possible $7400 to the FCHR when we secure $3500 in the bank and a full-time professional Director. We get just $1700 if we do not meet these conditions, so the moral is obvious. For either the $1700 or $7400 the FCHR is grateful but if our giving is greater, we shall have more for which to be grateful. All giving to all affiliated local councils counts to help match SRC grant--so report all funds even if used entirely locally.

Board Member Ludd Spivey Dies

Dr. Ludd M. Spivey, formerly President of Florida Southern College and longtime member of the Florida Council on Human Relations, passed away on Dec. 27. Among Dr. Spivey's many interests were those having to do with bettering human relations, including besides the FCHR the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the AAUN. He upheld his principles during many years when it was more difficult to espouse them than today.

Educational Unopportunity in Brevard

Central Brevard Council reports that the upshot of a Sunday afternoon public meeting on equal educational opportunities beyond high school was this: "No qualified Negro student will be able to take courses at Brevard Jr. College (white) even when those courses are not available at Carver Jr. College (colored - with one (1) full time teacher - rest of faculty high school teachers." Participating in the panel were President J. Bruce Wilson of Brevard Jr. College, Dr. Bradley Baker, Assistant County School Superintendent, and Mr. James Greene, President of Carver Jr. College. Mrs. Marvin Olsen sent in the report.

Contrast at Chattanooga

The October issue of the ADL (Anti-Defamation League) Bulletin tells how through the offices of the ADL and the determination of public officials to maintain decency and order the schools of Chattanooga desegregated without untoward incident. The ADL Bulletin subhead reads: "A month before the violence at Oxford, Chattanooga's public schools desegregated peacefully, without headlines."

Call for Desegregation in Entire Community

At the recent meeting of the Upper Pinellas County Branch of FCHR panelists urged non-discrimination in housing, employment, recreation, welfare, and church membership, as well as in education. The extension of the religious principles of brotherhood, recognition of the dignity and worth of the individual, equal interest and responsibility of all groups, and the reeducation of both white and Negro citizens to new cultural patterns were stressed in the discussion. Panelists were the Reverend Donald Airey, Mrs. Vivian Henry, Mrs. S. D. Mullins, and the Reverend Mac James Williams.

Send news from YOUR community!

Flash! Lent Comes Early to Northeast Florida

In the negotiation stage for about a year, an agreement has been reached between the Unitarian Service Committee and the Northeast Florida Council on Human Relations for securing Executive Secretary for the NEFCHR. The local group provides an office for the E.S. while the USC pays his other expenses. This is the same type of arrangements which has worked so successfully in Knoxville and Atlanta. The USC felt that Jacksonville is the next strategic location for this program. Indeed, so important does the Unitarian group feel the Gateway City is they are placing the Director of the Department of Community Services in the position. His name? Ernest E. Lent, Jr. (Hence the headline.) He and his family plan to arrive in town about February 1.

Okaloosa and Bay Counties to Lose Federal Funds

Unless Okaloosa and Bay Counties desegregate their schools, Federal funds will be withheld from construction and operation of schools in these counties. Notice was received by Attorney General Richard Ervin and Okaloosa's School Superintendent Lance Richbourg, according to a Jacksonville Times-Union AP article. The ruling was made by former Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Abraham Ribicoff.

Organizations May Become Institutional Members of FCHR

Sunday School classes, clubs, youth groups, or any group which the Board of Directors of the FCHR agrees is suitable may become institutional members of the Florida Council on Human Relations. By joining, the group expresses its belief in the principles of justice and equality of opportunity for which FCHR stands, in a very practical, tangible way, including dues. Write to the Acting Executive Director, Dr. Ralph Mason Dreger, P.O. Box 8292, Jacksonville 11, Florida, for details concerning your group. Do it now so that an application can reach the Board of Directors prior to the Annual Meeting on January 26.

Gainesville CHR to Hold Annual Institute

President James M. Dabbs, of the Southern Regional Council, will address the Annual Institute on Human Relations held by the GCHR in Gainesville on February 15 and 16. Consultant to the Institute will be Miss Mary L. Divers of Bethune-Cookman College.

Executive Committee Seeks New State Executive Director

Active negotiations are under way for securing a full-time FCHR Executive Director. One outstanding prospect has accepted invitation to attend our Annual Meeting in Daytona on January 26. Be there to meet him, and to tell him about human relations progress and problems in your area.

Fort Pierce Scores Communication Triumph

Under the auspices of the Fort Pierce Community Association, an institutional affiliate of FCHR, two forums brought together city officials, the newspaper, and citizens in a free interchange concerning conditions--bad ones--in neighborhoods where Negroes live. The Reverend James Howard who submitted the report expressed belief that better understandings grew out of the discussions. The Fort Pierce CA is also seeking to secure a Negro Home Demonstration agent; in doing so contacts were made with the County Commission.

No More "Soft Spots"?

At the fall meeting of Southern Interagency Conference Les Dunbar, SRC Executive Director, suggested that we may be running out of the "soft spots" which involve peaceful change. Breakdown of law enforcement in several recent desegregation attempts indicates there may be a period ahead when more of the same will be found. Mr. Dunbar urged agencies dealing with intergroup relations to prepare for this kind of new crisis.

Anthony Steps in to Rilling's Post

Paul Anthony has been appointed Director of Field Activities of Southern Regional Council, filling the position held until recently by Paul Rilling. Mr. Rilling takes up the job of Director of the Commissioners' Council on Human Relations of the District of Columbia. Paul Anthony hopes to be present for the Annual Meeting of FCHR on January 26th.

Jax "Private Golf Courses" Agents of City--Must Desegregate

Two Jacksonville golf courses which had been sold by the City in order to avoid desegregation are being required to desegregate under court orders. Appeals were made by the new owners as far as the U. S. Supreme Court, which refused to review the lower appelate court's ruling that a reverter clause made the owners City agents.

Race and Housing

Bill Williams (former FCHR Executive Director now in Illinois) reports an extensive study on Race and Housing showing conclusively that nonwhite entry into previously all-white neighborhoods consisting of single family residences rarely causes property values to decline and often brings about rise in price. Available are a book (by Luigi Laurenti, Property Values and Race, $6.00) and shorter report (Where Shall We Live? Report of the Commission on Race and Housing, $1.50). Order from your bookstore or from the publisher: University of California Press, Berkeley 4, Calif.

Why Pledge to Give to FCHR?

In the Methodist "Adult Student" for December a bit of ironical writing suggests that if people did business as they give to the church, they would tell the electric company, the telephone company, the daily paper, and the government that, of course, they think the services provided are essential, but to promise to give regularly to these institutions--why, no, they wouldn't think of it. They will pay when and if they feel able to. But as the writer points out, companies and Uncle Sam don't operate that way, and neither can the church. The same is true of the Florida Council on Human Relations. It cannot operate on hit-or-miss giving. It must have contributions, however large or small, that are given regularly. If you pledge to pay, you will pay, 99 times out of a hundred. If you do not pledge, in 90 cases out of a hundred you won't pay, regardless of good intentions.

As of December 31, 145 persons had already paid 1963 dues to the FCHR, and a number of others contributed or made pledges toward the 1963 budget. We need more--We need YOU. Join a going, growing group!

FCHR dues are payable for the calendar year. If you have not paid yours, please do so now. You may pay through your local Council treasurer or directly to FCHR headquarters (in which case appropriate refund is made to the local Council).

1963 Dues Due -- Please DO!

Are you "Dead Wood"?

Please, if a separate sheet and envelope are enclosed with this Newsletter, check your mailing address and return it in the postage-free envelope--that is, if you wish to receive future FCHR Newsletters. Volunteer clerical helpers are checking the hundreds of addresses on our mailing list--but if the FCHR state office has not heard from you since moving to Jacksonville in early September, these workers have nothing by which to know of your continuing interest. Should you not return your sheet--or not have other correspondence with FCHR headquarters right away--all they can do is conclude that for the Newsletter file you are "dead wood"!

Do you know others who may wish to receive FCHR Newsletter? Send their names and addresses to the state office: P. O. Box 8292, Jacksonville 11, Fla.

Swimming Pool

In October a new swimming pool for Negroes was inaugurated in Winter Park. Mr. and Mrs. David Eddy who report this event state that it is "better than none."

Book: The Martian Chronicles

You wouldn't expect a gripping chapter on human relations in science fiction--but read "'Way in the Middle of the Air" in Ray Bradbury's book named above.

Ideas for YOUth

Throughout the South several human relations councils have been working with college and high school youth....In South Carolina there is a Junior CHR....In Virginia, a campus chapter of VCHR at Univ. of Va., and high school chapters in Charlottesville and Fairfax County. ...There is a Youth CHR in Atlanta. ...In New Orleans last summer an interracial group of first and second grade children held discussions and field trips around the city in preparation for desegregation experiences in school....In Nashville a crafts workshop was conducted by the Tennessee Council for elementary school children....The Atlanta Council held several meetings of transfer students going into formerly all white high schools. The group plans other occasional meetings during the school year.... In Little Rock, the Negro children involved and their parents have created their own organization which is growing in size and influence as desegregation moves to the Junior High School level. The group meets monthly to share experiences and meet with resource persons in the community....The Northeast Florida CHR (Jacksonville) held a picnic and a Christmas "sing" and social in which children of both races had fun and made friends.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

December 1962 - February 1963

Program Highlights

A report of the annual fall conference of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations held at Penn Center, December 7 - 9, 1962, prepared by Mrs. Elizabeth C. Ledeen, program director, is attached.

A summary of the Conference for Rural South Carolinians held at Penn Center, February 13 - 15, 1963, prepared by L. S. James, field representative for SCCHR and NSF, is attached also.

These excellent conferences were the outstanding state-wide program offerings this quarter.

The Conference for Rural South Carolinians initiated a new and expanded SCCHR program projected in March, 1962. Funds from a Field Foundation grant and financial assistance from the National Sharecroppers Fund made possible the full-time employment of L. S. James on February 1, 1963. See attached announcement: SCCHR EMPLOYS FIELD REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. James' work will be a pioneer effort to raise economic and social levels of low-income rural families, to up-grade the training, employment, and cultural opportunities of Negroes through the assistance of governmental employees, at minicipal, county, state and federal levels, and through the involvement of leaders of voluntary agencies also.

To develop mutually beneficial working relationships with government agencies and opinion-forming lay organizations, the entire SCCHR professional staff will coordinate its efforts.

A growing public recognition of South Carolina's educational and economic plight and challenge may spotlight the unique role of SCCHR's communication between the races, its importance in making a frontal attack on problems and in making the progress called for in both the valedictory address of then Governor Ernest F. Hollings and the inaugural address of the present Governor Donald S. Russell!

Gil Rowland, who worked with SCCHR on a full-time basis from Jyly, 1962 through November, 1962, primarily interviewing individuals, collecting, preparing and distributing pertinent facts about areas of general concern, especially areas in which changes in racial relations must occur, and speaking to various groups, will continue to issue occasional reports called PROGRESS and hopefully to accept special project assignments.

In February, he prepared an issue of PROGRESS which reprinted editorials and excerpts from magazine and newspaper articles which indicate the effect the peaceful admission of Harvey Gantt to Clemson had in creating a "new image" of South Carolina. Five thousand copies have been widely distributed by mail and by hand.

Committee Programs and Projects

The Citizenship Committee met in December, 1962, to give further consideration to a document being prepared for presentation to the incoming Governor Donald S. Russell, who was inaugurated in January, 1963. The Southern Regional Council will prepare final draft.

The Economics and Employment Committee, enlarged by addition of Courtney Siceloff, Penn Center; the Rev. Harry Shaw, Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.; and representatives of CORE, planned the Conference for Rural South Carolinians held at Penn Center February 13 - 15, 1963. Two meetings of the committee were held.

The Education Committee has held one meeting during this quarter. A consultant in Adult Education from the State Department of Education met with the committee for a discussion of functional illiteracy in the state. South Carolina ranks 49th in the number of illiterates. The need for a broad program to reach the persons who need basic education was pointed out. The function of this committee in relation to this phase of adult education is two-fold: 1) to become informed, 2) to arouse citizen support for a broad program of adult education. The committee also will attempt to secure on the part of citizens wide support for the restoration of a compulsory school attendance law in S.C. This measure has recently been introduced in the House of Representatives.

The Committee on the Church and Human Relations has continued to expand its program, using Columbia as a pilot area for setting up new phases of work.

On February 5 an evening Conference for Churchmen, sponsored by thie committee, brought together some 80 persons from Columbia and the surrounding area for a consideration of the role of the Christian in Time of Racial Change. A panel of four outstanding church leaders spoke on the theme after which the conference divided into small discussion groups for honest confrontation and discussion. The significance of this meeting, as stated by one of the discussion leaders, lay primarily in the fact that this was the first meeting, open to all churchmen, held in the Columbia area. Since there are no normal ecumenical channels in SC such as councils of churches at the state or local level, this committee serves in a significant way to bring concerned Christians together to think and work on problems of mutual concern.

At the request of a few white high school students this committee accepted the responsibility of setting up a group for high school students in Columbia. The group was set up with two advisors the first of the year and has been meeting on a semi-monthly basis since that time. As public school desegregation moves a step nearer in SC it was felt that preparation, especially of white students, was of paramount importance.

This group of some 30 high school students is the first high school group of the Council and it is hoped that it may serve as a pilot project for other communities in the state. At the present time this group is at the discussion level and is attempting to develop as a group before moving into community projects.

The Student Steering Committee met on February 2. At this time the Political Study and Action Committee made a decision to focus on a study of the Private School Tuition Grant bill recommended by Governor Russell and now pending in the legislature. Information on this bill will be disseminated among students. A study of the political structure in South Carolina has also been begun.

At the Student Steering Committee meeting on February 2 plans were also set up for holding a spring conference on April 19 - 21 at Penn Center. During February the staff and students have moved ahead with these plans.

Student committees for visitation and recruiting in the high schools have been set up at Clemson and USC and conferences have been held with some of the Guidance Counselors in the larger high schools.

The Women's Interdenominational Group, which was set up by the Church Committee in the fall, is continuing on a permanent basis. In December the group began a study of the book "The Bible and Race." It is hoped that members from this group will encourage the use of such materials as this in their groups in local churches.

The Executive Committee meet in January to appoint chairmen of standing committees to serve for 1963 and to lay plans for membership and finance efforts.

Board of Directors Meetings

Two meetings were held this quarter, in December and in February. Interest is running high in developments in South Carolina and in planning to increase the tempo and scope of constructive change. Plans for increasing SCCHR's public relations efforts, for follow-up of the February Conference for Rural South Carolinians and development of work in rural areas and small towns, and for projecting a state-wide conference on urban affairs were made.

Outreach Continues to Widen

In preparation for the February Conference for Rural South Carolinians, measurable progress was made in involving persons and organizations in SCCHR's program. In addition to the government employees who appeared on the Conference program, others from the Rural Electric Co-ops (REA), Forestry Service, Farmers Home Administration (employed in S.C.), The State Board of Health, et al., participated.

Interviews with educational and economic leaders further indicate an increasingly favorable climate of leadership opinion.

Confidentially, an SCCHR Board member in Greenville is finding considerable "readiness" among that city's leaders. The Greenville County Technical Education Committee is reportedly favorable to opening the new T.E. Center there to all qualified applicants.

A visit in February from Mr. Richard Ramsey of the college program of American Friend Service Committee explored possibilities with students and staff members for future projects in S.C. and set up a one day Work Camp for Columbia which is being sponsored jointly by the Columbia Student Council, a local Negro church and by the ASCF.

Information concerning creative summer opportunities for students, such as the Encampment for Citizenship has been sent to social science faculty, chaplains, college administrators and students.

The program director attended the Christian Action Seminar February 22 - 24, an Interdenominational Student Conference for students from the white colleges in the state, with special emphasis upon Christian Social concerns.

Field Trips

Mr. L.S. James made field trips in February to secure participants for the Conference for Rural South Carolinians to the annual conference of Negro assistant farm agents held at S.C. State College, Orangeburg, to Kershaw and to Lancaster Counties. He recruited also in Richland, Sumter, Charleston and Lee Counties by phone and by letter.

Mrs. Spearman did recruiting for the Conference on field trips to Mullins (where she spoke at a monthly meeting of the Marion County Ministerial Association, also), Sumter, Darlington and Hartsville.

Other field trips were made by the executive director during the quarter to Orangeburg, where she was a program participant in honoring the Rev. M.D. McCollom as Man-of-the-Year, to Hartsville and to Florence. She also worked with a group of SCCHR members and interested friends in Aiken, who would like to organize a local Council there.

The entire SCCHR professional staff attended an outstanding conference at Voorhees Junior College in February.

The program director and the executive director participated in the annual meeting of the South Carolina Council of United Church Women.

The executive director spoke at a state-wide NAACP meeting in Columbia on February 24, which honored Harvey Gantt and his parents.

Officers, members and staff of SCCHR attended a conference on Integration at Nashville, Tenn., December 27 - 29, which was called jointly by the Southern Regional Council (SRC) and the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen (FSC).

REPORT
SOUTH CAROLINA STUDENT COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS CONFERENCE

December 7 - 9, 1967

This quarter has been a very significant one in the life of the SCCHR. There was a new sense of urgency and historic involvement as the students met for their first semester conference. This meeting brought together 82 students, faculty members and campus religious workers for an outstanding program centering around the theme, "The Student's Involvement in the Crisis of the South." The Rev. Harry Smith, Presbyterian University Pastor at the University of North Carolina gave the opening address on the theme of the conference. Workshops focused on three areas: Preparation for Desegregation, Academic Freedom, Politics and Community Affairs.

Growing out of the general discussion and receiving priority in program emphases for the Student Movement of the Council were the following:

1. Continue work on Preparation for Desegregation in the colleges, especially in local situations at Clemson, Winthrop and the University of S.C.
2. Set up a Political Study and Action Committee to make a study of the political structure of South Carolina, to follow legislative proposals and to recommend action concerning these to our members. It was also urged that capable candidates sought and encouraged to offer for public office, to campaign on important issues focusing on needs, problems and possible solutions to some of the pressing problems in our state.

3. Form a recruiting or public relations committee from the members of the Council at Clemson and USC to visit in Negro High Schools, to confer with individual students, guidance counselors, faculty members or parents concerning the possibility of applying to these state supported colleges. At present this would be done quietly, without publicity.
4. Urge student members in the various colleges to assume a greater degree of responsible participation for students in the life of the college, thus assuring a larger measure of academic freedom.
5. Relate students more effectively to meaningful community projects to meet needs at many levels.

Mr. Harvey Gantt attended a part of the student conference at Penn Center in December. At that time his case was pending in the U.S. District Court. During the time of litigation of Mr. Gantt's case in the courts, student members of the Council from Clemson, the Baptist Student Director from Clemson and members of the staff of the Council have kept in close touch with Mr. Gantt and with Mr. Matthew Perry, legal counsel for NAACP in S.C. It was gratifying indeed that desegregation at Clemson took place quietly and with dignity on January 28. It is felt that the climate of student opinion in the college was definitely influenced by key students who have worked with the student program of the Council since its inception. This group welcomed desegregation of the college as right and good, a move which was long overdue. These students are close personal friends of Harvey Gantt and are continuing to be instrumental in gaining among many a genuine acceptance of him as a person. Great credit must also go to Mr. Gantt himself, whose genuine friendliness, "relaxed affability" and serious purpose as a student have brought praise from many quarters.

SUMMARY OF THE CONFERENCE FOR RURAL SOUTH CAROLINIANS

Sponsored by the Penn Community Center and the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, this conference was concerned with training programs and jobs for rural South Carolinians. The purpose was to present all of the Federal and State programs that provide training and job opportunities for rural people. The underlying theme that was clearly evident all through the conference program was that all the programs, Federal and State, are subject to local initiative, self help, cooperation, and leadership.

The programs from which rural people can get assistance were carefully discussed. Leading officials from the Federal and South Carolina state government were present to interpret the programs which were most significant for the help of the citizens of South Carolina and especially for the under-employed and unemployed.

The Rural Area Development (RAD) program was explained as follows:

I. GOAL - To involve all of the people of an area so as to use all available public and private facilities to promote better utilization of human and natural resources, especially in rural areas. This program may be provided to all areas but is emphasized in areas where under-employment and unemployment are most prevalent.

A. RAD coordinates the work of all departmental agencies, which can contribute to rural areas development.
B. Federal Extension Service (FES) does the organizational and educational work.

II. Method and Aim of RAD.

1. Organizing local committees, including all interest groups.
2. Encouraging these committees.
3. Assisting them to formulate economic development programs and implement such programs.
4. Aim is to establish:
   a. Efficient, profitable farms
   b. Rural industries and business
   c. Training and retraining for those not needed in agriculture.
   d. Adequate rural public facilities.
   e. Expansion of recreational facilities for both rural and urban people.

Area Redevelopment Administration (ARA) has declared that in the State of South Carolina there are 24 counties which are eligible for ARA aid. Five types of assistance are provided, as follows:

1. Loans for industrial and commercial projects.
2. Loans and grants for public facilities.
3. Technical assistance.
4. Occupational training.
5. Retraining subsistence payments.

These counties are eligible for Accelerated Public Works Act assistance. Cherokee County has been added for assistance under P.W.A. too. This Act provides mostly for water and sewage in the towns and small cities of these 25 counties. It was emphasized by local State officials that much has been accomplished already under ARA in South Carolina. All eligible counties have organized Overall Economic Development Program Committees with guiding help from Agricultural Extension Service. However, the motivation and leadership came from the local people. Many government agencies were involved in helping the local people identify and resolve their problems. Training and retraining are going on under this Act here to reduce under-employment and unemployment. Area Redevelopment Assistance to the amount of $398,311.00 has already been received in this State. These four projects created 309 new jobs. Three applications for industrial loans are being processed now for South Carolina, amounting to $9 million to employ 700 people. It was announced that very shortly all of the counties in South Carolina will have fully organized and functioning RAD committees.

National Defense Act (Title VIII). This Act provides aid for educational and scientific training.

Technical Education Centers. These centers being set up under the Technical Education Committee of South Carolina, will furnish opportunity for training on the assistant engineering level.

Manpower Development & Training Act (MDTA), Passed in 1962, this Act is administered in South Carolina by The South Carolina Employment Service, with the assistance of the Vocational Education Division of the South Carolina State Department of Education; provides training for the unemployed when employment opportunity is available.

The workshops provided information and interpretation of specific topics to interested groups on the following subjects: Cooperatives, Rural Housing Loans, Credit Unions, County Agricultural Committees, and Community Services. There was very high interest in the discussions of credit unions and of the county agricultural committees. County committees under Farmers Home Administration (FHA) control the issuance of loans to all farmers but they are composed of "white" people only. A recent study by Mr. Ira Kaye, Sumter, S.C., shows these committees discriminate against Negro farmers in the nine counties of South Carolina.

Mr. John A. Baker, Assistant Secretary, USDA, sent his address, which was read by Dr. L.P. Potts, special assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture. His subject was "Rural Area Development for all the People." He emphasized the need of local initiative by all the people for the progress of all. "We are convinced that a prosperous rural America can and must be built by the people and for the people who live in rural America." He emphasized this statement with many practical examples of different rural communities working together in harmony with all races represented. He said also - "What must be done in rural America can only be done through local leadership and local initiative. The full team must play if we are to win the pennant in this effort.... we are deeply concerned because Negroes are not getting a chance to contribute their ideas fully right from the beginning of the discussions of rural areas development." Negroes in rural South Carolina have not been included in any of the Overall Economic Development Programs Committees except in one or two counties. Even Mr. Kaye said in his study of Negro Farmers in South Carolina: "Area Redevelopment programs which do not from the outset provide for equal job opportunities for Negroes will only strengthen and perpetuate the present system of inequalities. It is ironic that Negro unemployment and under-employment is counted to determine area eligibility for area redevelopment assistance, while the resulting projects exclude Negroes from any direct job benefits."

Results of The Conference for Rural South Carolinians for the 213 persons in attendance from 22 different counties of South Carolina are believed to have been as follows:

1. Secured information for the first time about rights, opportunities and responsibilities for training programs and jobs.

2. Were inspired to impart what they learned to those who did not attend so that local initiative could be stimulated.

3. Learned that in order to receive benefits from Federal and State programs that organized local initiative based on the attitude of self-help is a definite requirement.

4. Learned also that people who are unemployed or under-employed have a right to apply for training and for employment with the South Carolina Employment Service or to seek aid from any other State agency receiving Federal grants-in-aid.

5. Are asking for additional information from their county committees and seeking the services and assistance of Mr. L.S. James, Field Representative of SCCHR and NSF.

Paul - We are continuing our work with officials in state government - Hope it will have some good results - We have been to see various people & talked over various problems! - - - - F.P.

Quarter - Dec., 1962., Jan., Feb., 1963

Financial

We started off this quarter in a deep depression with $-275 in the bank. But December brought us about $3,000 in new donations which gave us a tremendous sense of relief and a chance to concentrate our work in the field, since $2,400 had been earmarked for work in South Georgia.

New Territory

We have made contacts and visited in the following new places -

Waycross 1 trip
McRae 2 trips
Valdosta 1 trip
Tifton 4 trips
Cordele 2 trips
Perry 1 trip
Dawson 2 trips
Griffin 3 trips

These were useful trips. We are beginning to get acquainted, to interest some few people in our work. But it will be a long time before we see growth in this area of the state. The fear is unbelieveable except when you hear the truth of the practices in these places. But it is far from hopeless. There are fine people who do have courage. It takes time to find them.

The atmosphere is alike in all towns.
"We don't want another Albany."
"We'll give in when we have to."
"We want no outsiders." (I pretend this doesn't mean me.)
"We want no publicity."
The general attitude of the whites is to give in as little and as late as possible. Many Negroes are still extremely hopeless and afraid.

Griffin

Griffin is the one exception. They are well on the way to having a going organization. 30 people attended the first meeting. However, they are not real sure they wish to affiliate with a state wide group. But they are asking for help and we believe they will decide to affiliate. We certainly need their memberships.

We must praise the Episcopal clergy. They have spearheaded the Griffin organization and have been most helpful in many places. In Tifton and Dawson they have offered us meeting places. The one bright spot we have found in Terrell County is the Episcopal Church. It is doubtful whether it can survive. It is struggling for existence.

Membership

Our membership is 868. We do have a new Membership Committee and we hope to have some work in this area that will bear some fruit. We will have to hit harder in the organized areas to make up for the lack in the new territory. We still hope for a decent increase this year.

Although we have less than 100 new members during the first five months. But --- South Georgia is very very rough --- one members there is as costly in time and money as 100 in the cities. We hope to see an increase in memberships from Columbus. Several trips there are beginning to pay off with new members and new enthusiam. We have a couple of new eager beaver white people who are trying to get more white people. We had reached the place where Mrs. Dimon and the Rabbi were the only white members. The Negro leadership is terrific, but they were discouraged over the failure of the whites.

Student Activity

There is activity among the students in many places. These are mostly high school students in towns where there are no colleges.

MACON: A group tested the Greyhound station at Griffin --- one arrest.
TIFTON: This group has been active all winter. They had their first arrest when their leader (Mr. Ludden) refused to move to the colored window to be served at the Dairy Queen.
ROME: The high school students sat in at the lunch counters for several days. Negotiations are now under way -- looking toward a solution.
ATLANTA: The college students have started working on the hotels.
BRUNSWICK: The young people have constantly pushed their elders in Brunswick.

Libraries

Library Boards are secretely deciding to serve Negroes if and when they come to the library. (This is the result of the Albany library situation where the general white public have demanded the reopening of the library, even though desegregated. Tables and chairs are removed, but the library is serving everyone.) This is true in Griffin, Valdosta, and probably several others. We would like to get some accurate information about libraries all over the state, but haven't figured a way when the general policy is secrecy. Libraries are open in every major city with the exception of Columbus where it is tied to the school board.

Employment

MACON: You have the Macon employment report. It is terrific and continuing.
ALBANY: In Albany we feel sure there are more valid complaints than we have been able to report. It is hard to get the forms filled in within the time limit. It is impossible to find if the white person employed has a higher or lower rating than the Negro not hired. There are complaints of discrimination on the job, but while the man is still on the job, he hesitates to complain. And so it goes.
ATLANTA: Mr. Holmes has also been working with the ministers in "Operation Bread Basket" which has been successful -- 59 new jobs opened to Negroes.

Education

ATLANTA: Mr. Holmes has been working with the Atlanta Council on hunting possible transfers for the public schools in DeKalb County. No luck yet.

There is excitement in the impacted areas where Uncle Sam has threatened concerning the schools. We are trying to push a bit a Warner Robins.

Education

No luck much yet. Columbus is jittery. Brunswick is talking of voluntary action. Savannah still has a suit.

Trade Schools

We are still working on getting people who will try to enter the various trade schools. We have not been successful except in Atlanta. It takes great perserverance. Mr. Holmes worked with Mr. Scott for 4 months before he was admitted --- all sorts of visits, letter, etc. We have good reason to believe some state officials will help us if we can get good applicants. We have had about 12 applicants in Rome. Some of these may be able to follow through.

University of Georgia

Rome is working on applicants for the University Center Night School.

Parks

We are still working on Jekyll. If Mr. Holmes doesn't have a golf game there soon, we'll have to dig his grave! Our interview with the Authority was unsuccessful - members were highly defensive and nervous and, we might add, offensive.

Mr. Holmes is working on getting various Negro groups who live near the 30 white parks to please go and picnic. (There are 6 Negro state parks)

We have asked some 25 nice people to call on the new Park Director to try to convince him. But --- he is a hard guy. Horace Caldwell, the new Director, is from Albany.

Albany

Except for the opening of the library there is nothing new in Albany. The white people have proven their diabolical duplicity again and again and again. Our Council is rather sad, but maybe it will live. We'll hope. Mr. Holmes is going down to spend several days working on employment with them. We can't give them up. There are a few hopeful signs, but not many. One of the "better" whites, the Executive of the YMCA recently said the white people of the South will never give in. The Juvenile Court Judge said - "The trouble is they told those young Negroes they were as good as anybody so many times they believe it!" We will not quote from the extremist. But they are many.

Future

We have no idea --- could be calm --- could be very rough --- depends on how fast the Negroes get organized in how many towns --- as the mass meetings progress, the indignation increases and then action comes. We hope we have action and we pray for strength.

Board Problem

We are unable to build a responsible Board. Lately a monthly letter has been helpful. Two whole years and we see little improvement. What do you think of trying some sort of self-evaluation with you, Paul, leading it? How can we attack it and not end in the usual Atlanta vs. state argument where Atlanta always wins? That squabble nearly wrecked us in more ways than just dollars. People are sick of it...perhaps it is better to wait until Fall when we have our Annual Meeting and have a Board Workshop for the new Board. Maybe some private conferences between you, Paul and say - Oliver, Dr. Newsom, Charles Demeré might help. We need some fresh approach. Any suggestions gratefully received. Could Elmer Jean visit Dr. Graves at Dawson?

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

From: Katherine Jones

QUARTERLY REPORT: December, January, February 1962-63

State Issues

State Commission on Human Relations - In a meeting with the Governor a delegation from the Council asked for the formation of a state commission by executive order. The Governor readily agreed to do this following the adjournment of the legislature, now in session. It was acknowledged that the present Legislature would not act favorably on this request which would be described as another attempt of the cities to dominate. The Legislature is faced with reapportionment at this session, and while they are going to continue representation on a basis which will probably not be acceptable to the Federal Courts, the rural legislators are suspicious of any seemingly progressive measure. We are now obtaining information to draft an order for the Governor. It is probable that the Tennessee Voters League (Negro group) is also submitting a draft proposal, as this was part of their program endorsed by Governor Clement when they supported him last summer.

School for the Blind - Former report detailed this conference with the Commissioner of Education and the outcome. It is probable that the school will be integrated in 1964, or as soon as additional dormitory space becomes available. Meantime, the three first grade girls continue on the white campus, although the Negro division is now reopened, and in operation. We intend to continue our interest in this state facility, and expand our concern to other state schools and hospitals.

State Parks - In February a delegation from the Council talked with the new Commissioner of Conservation in whose department the parks operate. The delegation found Commissioner McSween relaxed, frank and anxious to take some progressive steps. They also found him unknowing about this department which he had only been recently appointed to head. In addition to requesting full and free access to the parks, the Council representatives asked for the removal of all racial designations on place mats, road signs, brochures, state park folders, etc. We will need to follow up on this as soon as the Legislature adjourns.

Members of the Council are particularly concerned at this time with abolition of capital punishment, ratification of abolition of the poll tax, and getting the Legislators out of town before they think up additional new taxes.

Local Issues

Since the last quarterly report covered the first part of December, these developments will not be repeated. In February, I made an eight day trip to the Eastern part of the state. Much of the progress there is detailed in the last NEWSLETTER, copy attached. Some additional comments are probably in order. East Tennessee's Negro population by county varies from zero to 9%, which is Knoxville. The 6% county is Hamblen, seat of Morristown College, a junior Negro college under auspicies of the Methodist Church. All other counties have 5% or less Negro population. There is little outright demand for change, although there is dissatisfaction. In some of the counties there is practically no professional or business leadership in the Negro community. In others, as Johnson City, there is a very knowledgeable Negro family, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Kilgore. He is a dentist, and about 75% of his patronage is white. The Negro teachers, who have long provided the leadership and communication with the white power structure are not part of the leadership for school integration or other civil rights programs. Their reluctance is economic, and concerned with fear of losing their jobs. My own feeling is that it also involves their investment in segregation, whether recognized or not. They have long been accustomed to going along with the white community, of "getting along", and they are fearful of anything which might lead to upheavel, and a new relationship. I do not think they are satisfied, but are fearful of change and the uncertainties which may come about with it. For instance, in Johnson City, the Negro school principal is a long time resident of John City, well thought of locally, and operates her school without interference. However, when the trade school, built for white students, adopted an open policy, it is reported that the principal and the vocational teacher have discouraged transfers there, convincing the prospective students that there are no courses which they do not offer. This is untrue. It is possible that there are subtle pressures on them which are unknown to the Johnson City Council on Community Converns with which the teachers have not affiliated.

School boundary lines were recently changed, and there is a charge of gerrymandering to exclude Negro children. The county and city adopted a voluntary grade-a-year plan, but there are only about 8 first graders eligible under new school districts. Some of them have transferred to all Negro schools, on the basis of teacher's statement that "the child was not happy". The Kilgores tell me that they feel sure the new Science Hill High School (white) could be desegregated with the mere threat of a lawsuit, but they are unable to get a petitioner, because of economic fear and overly cautious advice.

In Bristol, Tennesse, which has just voluntarily desegregated this year, there was also a redrawing of school district lines so that most of the Negro students were excluded from formerly white schools. One of the projects of the newly formed Bristol Council is to encourage parents of Negro children to send their children to white schools. In Bristol, as in Johnson City, you don't get the school people working with the Council.

Cookeville and Sparta

See January-February NEWSLETTER. The Negro school in Cookeville (grades 1-12) burned completely (including records) in early January. Our office was notified by our board member in Cookeville, who thought this an advantageous time to press for integration of the schools. The following day, accompanied by Rev. Metz Rollins (Social Education & Action Regional Office, Presbyterian Church, USA), I went to Cookeville, where we talked with several Darwin supporters and Dr. Raper, our board member who is on the faculty of Tennessee Tech. Later, I attended the Board of Education meeting where the future of Darwin was discussed. I have made several trips since then, and more recently, the NAACP branch president has visited there. Darwin is currently operating in three churches.

In summary, the situation is one in which the County Judge and County School Superintendent are pushing for desegregation. The majority of the Negro community, led by the Darwin principal and faculty are resisting which requesting the rebuilding of Darwin School. The school has enrolled high school students from three neighboring counties in order to meet minimum enrollment standards. At present, it seems assured that the high school will not be rebuilt, and that other counties will need to provide education for the students who have been transported to Cookeville. The grammar school is in doubt. None of us have been able to persuade the Negro teachers, especially ones with tenure, to inform the school board of their desire to continue teaching in the system. By devious means, I learned that the school board had recognized that if these teachers sought jobs, it would be the Board's responsibility to "take care of them". The teachers have long been the leadership group in the Negro community, and the school has operated as a community center. There is only one local resident Negro minister, of limited educational background. The students are uneasy about desegregation and parrot warnings from teachers about lack of social life if they go to integrated schools. Negroes make up only 2% of the population, but are not a subservient group and are able to speak frankly, even bluntly, to school board and others.

Four former Darwin students are now attending two white high schools. On orders from the superintendent and school board, they were cordially received. The first one enrolled was introduced to other students by the president of the student body who also shared his locker with the new student. The integrated Little League team which has existed for several years was helpful in preparing for this transition. This freshman student says he prefers Central High School to Darwin. We do not know what kinds of subtle economic pressures are being applied to the Darwin teachers, or what their anxieties are about an integrated school.

Sparta, 16 miles south and in adjoining county, has transported 30 high school students to Darwin School. After Darwin School burned, parents of the students living in White County (Sparta) met together to determine whether to ask for immediate integration or continue the students at the temporary quarters of Darwin School. They agreed to continue at Darwin this year. They recognize that integration at Sparta is probable for September 1963, but are not enthusiastic about it. I spoke at the Methodist Negro Church in Sparta, on invitation of the minister, on February 24, urging them to ask for the addition of a Negro teacher at White County high school next year. A community meeting for further discussion was planned for the following night. Decision unknown.

Denominational Colleges

King's College in Bristol is supported by Presbyterian Church USA and serves about 300 students. It has the appearance of prosperity. Has not accepted any Negro student, although it has rejected applications from day students. This was one of the colleges I visited, and talked with administrative personnel. They are uneasy about this, and defensive about policy of discrimination. (They are unwilling to agree that it is discriminatory.) There is a large building program under way, and again this may be tied in with economics, and a conservative board. Academic standards are reported to be high with most of male students going on to advanced academic work.

Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City is under auspicies of the Baptist denomination, and its physical appearance does not indicate such prosperity. It has about 600 students. One of our members there told me that there is little sentiment to desegregate, but the general atmosphere has changed to the place where he can frankly talk about the issues in class and out. There was a time when this was just not possible.

I have tried at these colleges and others to bring to their attention the changes taking place in the upper south, and elsewhere with regard to inclusive admission, and wondered if they might unwittingly become the haven of students and their parents who were arch conservatives, and unable to think freely about social issues. What will this do to the encouragement of free inquiry among the student body?

Nashville

For more than a year, the protest movement has been moribund. There have been occasional sporadic sit-ins with little support from white or Negro community. With the push for opening the YMCA for food and lodging, there was some push forward. The trial and conviction of eight students who sought service at a local cafeteria, and their harsh sentence has stirred some community feeling. See enclosed clippings. Whether this will arouse the community to fervent action is not yet known. Proposal is for economic withdrawal before Easter. Representatives of several organizations in the civil rights field recently met with the editor of the TENNESSEAN to exchange views and build better communication. Another meeting with the editorial writers is planned.

The Nashville Community Relations Council is planning a large community meeting for Thursday night, May 2 under the general title "Six Years of Desegregation". The review of accomplishments will be distributed, in printed form, ahead of time. Hopefully, the meeting will concentrate on the future. I think Nashville is on the brink of some long-term decisions. It could settle into tokenism, or move out with leadership. The opposition is stubborn but not formidable. The Billy Joe Harges-General Walker meeting only attracted 350 people in an auditorium which will hold 1000. While a White Citizens Council was organized a year ago, it seems to have attracted few persons beyond its founders. In Federal court at this time is a suit asking for desegregation of Holiday Inn, located in an urban renewal area on land redeveloped from a Negro slum area. The outcome will have broad significance for all of Tennessee, but especially for Nashville with large areas affected by highway and urban renewal programs.

Voter Project - Miss Rosetta Gardner of YWCA and Mr. Zeitlow of Student Christian Federation have been in Nashville proposing a Negro Voter Registration Project. There has been a mixed reaction. It could be used, and therefore has validity. It would cost considerable time and money from local persons and both assets are not readily available. Meeting in late March will make decision.

Consultation, December 27-29, Nashville, "The Ethical Demands of Integration"
For Nashville, perhaps the greatest reward is that it took place and without incident. It was our first experience in having an integrated group for this long at a first class motel located in the city. I am sure that Vanderbilt University was happy to see the end of the meeting, but I am sure that they learned also that such groups can meet without violence to their campus.

As for content and effect on Tennesseans, I cannot assess it. It seemed to me there was a good deal of the "fellowship of suffering", and I expect I am just weary of that role. It may be much more pertinent to a deep south state, but it is not conducive to progress in Tennessee. I have heard of no follow-up meetings in this state, and cannot assess any permanent effect. It was good to see old friends, and to meet some of the other concerned people in the South - although we all looked bone weary.

Tennessee Council Administration

While political campaigns have ceased, the involvement of our leadership has not been as greatly curtailed, and we have not yet been able to get any concentration on Council guidance. The Council is publishing - from Foundation fund - a study made of state government employment. Will be ready about April 15. Funds remain a problem, and we do not yet have a fund raising committee. Former chairman not able to continue this year. Council audit has been completed, and copy enclosed.

Respectfully submitted,

PROGRAM REPORT FOR DECEMBER, JANUARY and FEBRUARY

1. Information-Education Mail Program

No general mailing was made in December.

In January, Human Relations Bulletin #45, highlighting significant court decisions, was mailed to members and a small list of VIPs. (Limited funds prevented wider distribution.)

In January, we also mailed the statement of the Raleigh Council on Human Relations to 212 mayors in the state. Also, a memo on the status of race relations in Charlotte was mailed to Charlotte ministers.

No general mailing was made in February.

2. Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Council was held at the Carolina Inn in Chapel Hill on December 13th with 140 members and visitors present.

McNeill Smith, who was scheduled as the main speaker, was detained in Charlotte by a court case, and his place was very ably filled by the Reverend Charles Jones, pastor of the Community Church in Chapel Hill. He spoke on "What's Ahead in Race Relations?" He emphasized the necessity not only for greater progress in desegregation, but for more attention to integration.

Dr. T. Franklin Williams of Chapel Hill was elected chairman of the Council, replacing Rev. Henry Ruark of Rocky Mount who asked to be relieved because of the pressure of his church work.

New members elected to the board were: Ruben J. Dailey of Asheville; Dr. Nelson H. Harris of Raleigh; Dr Guy B. Johnson of Chapel Hill; Dr. Howard Miller of Raleigh; William S. Page of Kinston and Rev. Vernon C. Tyson of Sanford.

Dr. Raymond Wheeler was elected to the newly created office of assistant treasurer.

3. Charlotte Council

Members of the Charlotte Council began to take their financial responsibilities more seriously in January, and by the end of February had raised about $450. They reduced their obligations to the North Carolina Council to about $100.

The Council continues to concern itself with merit employment, school desegregation, and hotel and restaurant desegregation.

At the January meeting it was decided to send an open letter to the superintendent of schools protesting an announced plan for holding two joint baccalaureate services, one for all the white schools and one for all the Negro schools. This letter received considerable publicity and comment in the local papers. The superintendent expressed a desire to discuss the matter with the Council, and he was invited to meet with the executive committee for an off-the-record discussion. This meeting was held on February 28th. There was a lively but polite exchange of views, and the superintendent expressed his willingness to meet with the Council again and to bring some members of his staff.

At the January meeting, also, it was decided that the Council would draw up a statement on Mecklenburg (formerly Carver) College since it seemed to be an appropriate time to consider the future of this Negro school. (The enrollment had gone down from 300 to 200 since last year.)

At the February meeting (19th) the statement was presented and discussed. It was decided, however, to ask for a conference with the college board before releasing the statement to the press.

A committee was appointed to look into the operation of the state employment office in Charlotte and see what could be done to hasten the desegregation of this service. (It was learned that state employment offices in Asheville and Greensboro had recently been desegregated.)

Panel discussions on race relations were presented, with the help of the Council, at the First Methodist Church on February 12 and at the Tuckaseegee Road Methodist Church on February 24.

4. Monroe

The Mayor's Committee in Monroe has been enlarged to twelve members--six of each race.

A delegation from Monroe met at my house on January 7 to discuss the committee and its work. At last report, the committee was having regular meetings--two each month--but as yet no specific desegregation has been attempted.

5. Work With the Governor

Dr. C. E. Boulware of Durham continues as chairman of this committee, which plans to keep in close touch with the Governor and his Good Neighbor Council. Dr. Frank Williams and I spent an hour with the chairman of the Good Neighbor Council on February 7th. At that time the Council had not had a meeting although the chairman had spent some time with some of the members. People are beginning to ask: When will this Good Neighbor Council begin to function?

6. Executive Committee (board) Meeting

The executive committee, which is really our board of 28 members, met in Chapel Hill on January 12th. At this meeting it was decided to ask the general membership to contribute a minimum of $2 this year. But before appealing to the general membership, it was decided that the members of the board should make generous pledges--$100 if possible.

In response to a memo sent later to the board members, over $1,500 was pledged, which is about $1,000 more than these same members contributed last year.

Members are responding well to the assessment of $2 or more. Some have sent extra gifts of $5 and $10.

For other topics discussed and decisions made at the board meeting, see minutes attached (unless these have been previously mailed).

7. Membership and Finance

In February, each member of the Council was sent two prepared mimeographed letters which he was asked to address and mail to prospective members. If all these were used, it would mean over a thousand prospect letters went out. The response has been disappointing. Only 15 new memberships have come in thus far. We must find a more effective way of recruiting new members.

Our income for the three-months period, not counting $900 from Southern Regional Council, and not counting the receipts for the annual dinner, was $2,964.99. The comparable income in the same period last year was $2,305.00.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE STATE

In December it was announced that plans are under way for a new privately operated elementary school in the Durham-Chapel Hill area to serve children of all races. Among the sponsors are Dr. William Friday, president of UNC; Dr. A. E. Manley, president of Spelman College, and Dr. Howard Thurman of Boston University.

On December 23 a six-column ad calling for equal and fair employment opportunities for Negroes was placed in The Charlotte Observer by some 125 persons. The ad drew favorable editorial comment.

The Mayor of Charlotte, Stan R. Brookshire, in speeches and public statements, continues to call for equal job opportunities for Negroes. Several Negroes have been hired in non-traditional jobs by the city administration.

Perhaps the most important development in January was the Governor's announcement of a five-point program aimed at opening new job opportunities for Negroes. The five points were: (1) The establishment of a N. C. Good Neighbor

Council to encourage merit employment and to encourage Negro youth to prepare for employment; (2) the establishment of local Good Neighbor Councils; (3) a policy of non-discrimination in state employment; (4) the sponsorship of a conference of business and industrial leaders to enlist their leadership in the program; and (5) calling on church and civic leaders to support the program.

The Governor's announcement received favorable comment both within and without the state. He has appointed some very able and liberal leaders of both races to the committee. (Two--John H. Wheeler and Roy D. McLaurin--are members of our own Council executive committee).

As a result of the December court ruling of Judge Stanley in the Durham and Caswell County cases, 39 Negro students (of 183 eligible) transferred to "white" schools in Durham, and 16 Negro students transferred to "white" schools in Caswell County. The change was without incident in the schools, but two white men in Caswell County were wounded when a Negro whom they were harassing opened fire on them.

Judge Stanley's ruling, ordered by the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court, means the end of the employment of the school assignment law to maintain segregated schools. From now on it would appear that only one court case will be necessary to compel a school board to submit a plan for school desegregation. It is clear that from now on, tokenism and piece-meal desegregation will not satisfy the courts.

Court cases asking for the operation of the public schools on a non-discriminatory basis are pending now in Randolph County, Transylvania County (high schools), High Point, Reidsville, and in several other districts.

Two Negro students were enrolled in two previously all-white schools in Reidsville on January 17th.

Raleigh public swimming pools, closed last August by a five to two vote of the City Council to avoid desegregation, will be reopened this spring "to the public" it was announced recently. The word "public," the mayor explained, includes Negroes.

The first Negro fireman was employed in Raleigh recently, and the fire chief has announced that five other jobs are open, and Negroes who meet the qualifications will be hired.

The City Council of Charlotte has formally announced that racial discrimination would be unlawful in the redeveloped Brooklyn area. (Such a resolution was necessary to make Charlotte continue to be eligible for federal urban renewal funds).

County Commissioners of Mecklenburg Council have formally agreed to hire county employes on their qualifications only, without regard to race. (Charlie Lowe, chairman of the County Commissioners, was formerly chairman of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Council on Human Relations).

An effort of Negro leaders in Statesville to get the cooperation of white officials in setting up a bi-racial committee to deal with racial problems has failed to date. The mayor and city councilmen have turned a deaf ear to their proposal.

A Negro student at the University of North Carolina, Mrs. Evangeline R. Darity, has been inducted into the Order of the Valkyries, the highest women's honorary organization at UNC.

Queens College in Charlotte has announced a policy of admitting all qualified students without regard to race. The decision, said the president, was based on "ethical and religious" beliefs, and on the conviction that the move was "in the best interests of the college." H. H. Everett, chairman of the trustees, said the group felt a "moral" obligation to desegregate. "We were just waiting for the propitious time, and this was it." (Perhaps the "propitious time" resulted from President Kennedy's order barring discrimination in federally assisted housing. The college has applied for loans to assist in the building of two new dormitories.

Dr. Emery L. Rann
Dr. Howard Miller
Dr. Raymond Wheeler

Mrs. Chase Benson

The meeting was opened at 2:30 p.m., Dr. T. Franklin Williams, chairman, presiding.

The committee gave Dr. & Mrs. Williams a vote of thanks for the lunch served prior to the meeting.

Minutes of the last meeting and those of the annual meeting were summarized by the secretary.

Dr. Wheeler, in speaking of the two vacant posts on the executive committee, stated that the nominating committee had left these vacant in the hope that they could be filled later with people who are members of other human relations organizations in the state, so that we might have closer contact with such organizations. He also suggested that the nominating committee for this year be appointed now and begin to work on these two vacancies. Dr. Boulware MOVED that this be done and it was so PASSED.

In the absence of the treasurer, the assistant treasurer, Dr. Wheeler, gave the financial report (which is attached). Dr. Wheeler stated that the deficit as of January 1 was $79.62, with unpaid obligations of $1,060.64, and that the present deficit is $48.96.

Dr. Wheeler stated that we have actually increased our funds in the past few years, but that the grants from foundations have been decreasing, and he thinks that the Southern Regional Council will continue to decrease its assistance and will expect us to become more self-supporting.

A number of suggestions were made as to how we might increase our income:

1. By voluntary assessment of $2.00 for every member, in order to get the Council out of its present difficulty.

2. By considering raising dues next year, from $5.00 to $7.00 or $10.00.

3. By approaching some of the North Carolina foundations which have not been approached.

4. By allowing those persons who make special donations to indicate that such donations be used to pay initial dues of people who might be interested in continuing their memberships.

5. By putting on a campaign to get people to pledge $5.00 per month. (Virginia Council did this.)

6. By following up previous contacts with college organizations. (Only three have given money.)

7. By continuing our present plan of trying to increase membership through the present members. (Most of our members have been obtained through the mail from lists sent to state office by other members.) The office could prepare a general letter which members could send to interested people they know. (Dr. Williams has been drawing up such a letter, which could be used in February and March when we usually have a membership drive.)

8. By members of the executive committee pledging themselves to give $100, if possible, during the year. This would be a good example to set for other members, as we ask them for larger pledges.

9. By trying to enroll people outside of the state in a long-range program. This could be done by ads or letters in readers' columns of the liberal journals.

10. By continuing the fund-raising dinners.

11. By considering contributions from churches. (The Committee on Social Concerns of the Methodist Church gave $500 last year.) Bylaws would have to be changed to admit organizations to membership. On Dr. Rann's MOTION it was AGREED to investigate this.

12. By having benefit performances by well known artists.

It was VOTED that we send a letter to the general membership telling them of the need for money now and of the $2.00 assessment. Members of the committee AGREED to make pledges themselves for the year--$100 if possible.

A list of North Carolina foundations was passed around, and those who know any of the people connected with the foundations were asked to contact them.

Dr. Rann was asked to follow up on his suggestion that we have printed certificates of membership for members to hang on their walls, if they give a certain amount, in order to help publicize the Council.

Dr. Boulware hoped we would plan for more fellowship dinners, and suggested that we have a social hour at the annual meeting before dinner so people could get better acquainted.

The committee AGREED that the Raleigh statement, published by the Council in October, 1962, be distributed to mayors of certain towns and cities in the state.

Mr. Jones made a report on the Governor's plan for a conference on fair employment and a "Good Neighbor Council." He said that we started over a year ago to get a conference with the Governor about merit employment and membership of qualified Negroes on official boards. We asked the Governor for his opinion about a conference with business leaders, and he asked us, in turn, to give him a plan. He did decide to call such a conference himself, and asked for suggestions, which were sent in.

Dr. Boulware talked to the Governor's office the morning of this meeting and was assured that we will hear from the Governor in less than 30 days. He is now in the process of naming a chairman.

Dr. Boulware stated that the Governor has issued a directive that there be no discrimination in employment in state agencies. He is working on a conference on fair employment in industry. He sent out "feelers" to people in the state and has received good results. (He referred to the low per capita income of Negroes in the state in a recent address.)

A comment was made that it was to be hoped that the Governor would not put such "safe" people on his committees as to halt progress. It was suggested that we should ask for time at the Governor's conference on employment for a representative of the Council to give a 15 or 20 minute statement.

It was suggested that we should try to say what would bear most weight to Mr. Fleishman, the Governor's assistant, and to explore ideas which would be most fruitful. It was AGREED that we should continue Dr. Boulware's committee.

A report was given on Durham and Caswell counties desegregation, as given in the Human Relations Bulletin of January, 1963. This is a significant change in segregation policies in the state.

The executive secretary is continuing to get out information, and is participating in interracial meetings in Monroe.

Dr. Wheeler said that the Southern Regional Council wants to see state organizations strengthen their programs and to improve communications among themselves. He says they are planning to see that various state programs be distributed to other state councils. They are also considering having a workshop of council workers. They believe that councils should give time and thought to preserving victories already won.

Mr. Page suggested that there are human relations groups in a number of cities in the state that we should try to get in touch with. It was AGREED that we should clip news items about such groups and send them to Mr. Jones so he can write them offering our services.

It was AGREED that at our next meeting we will discuss the possibility of such groups affiliating with the Council, as is done in Virginia. This will necessitate amending our bylaws.

There was a short discussion on ways and means by which ideas could be presented in person to city councils, and not just by letter.

The date for the meeting was set tentatively for April 6, with the place to be decided later.

Clergy Joins Trial Protest

Christian Council, 3 Churchmen Deplore Sentences for Sit-ins

By FRANK RITTER

The Nashville Christian Leadership Council and a group of clergymen — representing the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic faiths — denounced last night the recent trial of eight sit-in demonstrators.

"We are deeply disturbed that young people of our community have been sentenced to jail for attempting to eat in a public place," the clergymen said.

"We feel that this is not only a denial of our democratic way of life but of the moral and ethical principles on which the laws of our country are founded," the group added.

THE EIGHT demonstrators, all Nashville university students, were found guilty last week of conspiring to obstruct trade and business in connection with a sit-in last October at the downtown D&W Cafeteria.

They were sentenced Wednesday to 90 day county workhouse terms and fined $50 by Criminal Court Judge John L. Draper — an action which several community groups have since strongly condemned.

The Rev. Kelly Miller Smith, president of the Nashville Christian Leadership Council, said last night that he felt the sentence was unduly harsh.

"THIS IS NOT simply the Negro's problem — but the problem of everybody. It is especially the problem and responsibility of those who hold positions of leadership in business, government and the press," he said.

The three clergymen who spoke out last night are the Rev. Clyde C. Flannery of the Brookmeade United Church, Congregational; Rabbi Randall M. Falk of The Temple, and Father Donald Foust, assistant at St. Vincent De Paul.

"As members of the clergy," the three said, "we feel very strongly the failure of our religious institutions in making an effective witness in the business life of our community."

THE REV. MR. Smith said the verdict of the all-male, all-white jury was "symptomatic of the disease which still affects Nashville."

The statements last night closely followed on the heels of a statement Wednesday by the Nashville Community Relations Council in which Draper's sentence and the jury's verdict were denounced as "a dangerous precedent."

"We feel that these convictions will not stop sit-ins but will result in more racial conflicts in Nashville," the council's statement said.

IN OTHER action yesterday in connection with the incident:

● The Rev. Mr. Smith announced that the leadership council will meet Tuesday night to map out a plan of action in regard to their fight against segregation.

● A letter has been sent out to Nashville's Negro ministers. The letter states that "the verdict and sentence directed at the eight students is directed at all of us.

"Their denial is our denial—and their loss of freedom is our loss of freedom."

● Approximately 5,000 newsletters describing the fight being waged against segregation in Nashville are being sent out to community leaders in government and business.

JUDGE DRAPER could not be reached last night for comment.

The attorney for B&W Cafeteria, John K. Maddin, Jr., said he did not wish to comment on the statements.

Father Foust, in a supplemental statement last night said: "Speaking individually, I subscribe to this statement (denouncing the trial and sentence), but I do not have the authority to speak for all Catholic priests."

Racial Bias Hit By VU Group

By EDMUND WILBINGHAM, Religious News Editor

The Vanderbilt Divinity School faculty protested yesterday the racial discrimination practices of Nashville businesses and added that the sentences placed on eight recent sit-in demonstrators were "harsh."

The demonstrators, all Negro university students, were sentenced to 90-day workhouse terms as a result of a sit-in last October at the D&W Cafeteria. They also were fined $50 each.

The demonstrators were convicted of conspiracy to obstruct trade.

THE FACULTY, in a letter to the Rev. K. [illegible] Miller Smith, president of the Nashville Christian Leadership Council, said:

Council Assails Sit-in Terms

The Nashville Community Relations Council strongly condemned last night the 90-day county workhouse sentence which Criminal Court Judge John L. Draper levied yesterday against eight convicted sit-in demonstrators.

"This sets a dangerous precedent in the means by which cases of this type are to be handled," said Gideon Fryer, president of the council. "In the first place, the boys were only tried because they are Negroes."

The university students were found guilty of conspiracy to obstruct trade and commerce in connection with a sit-in at the downtown B&W Cafeteria last Oct. 31.

THE JURY in the "test" case left the sentencing up to Judge Draper.

Z. Alexander Looby and Avon Williams, attorneys for the eight, will file a motion for a new trial within the next few weeks.

If Draper denies the motion, the attorneys said they will appeal to the Tennessee Supreme Court.

A STATEMENT which the executive committee of the relations council released last night said:

"We are concerned that these young Negroes have been convicted and subjected to severe punishment for peaceful protest of segregation practices in public businesses.

"We feel that these convictions will not stop sit-ins but will result in more racial conflicts in Nashville. We call upon people of good will in business and government in this community to exercise leadership in bringing about orderly changes in the practices of racial segregation."

SENTENCED yesterday were Lester McKinnie, John Jackson Jr., John R. Lewis, Frederick Leonard, Nathal Winters, Frederick Hargraves, Harrison Dean and Allen Cason Jr.

Looby questioned the legality of the $50 fine and said his objection would be included in the appeal for a new trial.

NAACP Scores Sit-in Rulings

The recent conviction of eight Negro students on conspiracy charges stemming from a B&W Cafeteria sit-in was termed "a miscarriage of justice" last night by the Nashville branch of the NAACP.

Claude Walker, president of the association, said the trial and sentence March 9 in Judge John L. Draper's division of Criminal Court was a backward step in racial progress, and added:

"Legal enforcement of segregated practices would seem to be the kind of thing that a progressive Nashville would never want.

"The Nashville branch of the NAACP is opposed to any policy which permits a place serving the public to deny that the Negroes of Nashville are a part of the general public by discriminating practices."

The eight demonstrators were found guilty of conspiring to obstruct trade and business in connection with the sit-in last October at the downtown B&W.

They were sentenced to 90-day workhouse terms and fined $50 apiece by Draper. The court's action has been criticized by several community groups, including the Nashville Christian Leadership Council, the Community Relations Council, the Vanderbilt Divinity School faculty and several local clergymen.

A mass meeting, protesting the sentence—and segregation practices in Nashville—is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. today at the Mount Zion Baptist Church, 11th Avenue, North, and Jefferson Street.

The trial of 14 students arrested for attempting to eat at the Green Hills Restaurant recently is set for 10 a.m. Thursday in City Court.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

BOARD MINUTES

February 9, 1963

The Executive Committee meeting of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations was called to order Saturday, February 9, at 10:45 a.m. at the offices of the Council in Nashville, Tennessee with George Barrett, chairman, presiding.

Mrs. Ish moved that the minutes of the annual membership meeting which had been mailed previously to the entire body be adopted without reading. Mr. Sinclair seconded the motion and it carried unanimously.

A typographical error in the minutes of the October Board meeting was pointed out in which Mrs. Silver was recorded as having both made and seconded a motion for the integration of the PTAs. Mrs. Todd seconded the motion. Mrs. Silver moved the adoption of the minutes with this correction, Mrs. Ish seconded, motion carried.

The Committee was presented with a request that the Tennessee Council on Human Relations underwrite the publication of a report on Negro employment in the state, prepared by Nashville Community Conference on Employment Opportunity. Mrs. Silver moved that we do so, and the motion was seconded by Mrs. Ish. Mrs. Schweid moved that the motion be amended to read that the chairman be asked to explore the possibility of obtaining assistance from other funds, but that if these were not immediately available, the TCHR would underwrite the report, Mrs. Silver accepted the amendment which was seconded by Mr. Sinclair and the motion carried.

Mr. Barrett reported that a group of the TCHR Board members had met with Governor Clement to ask him to appoint a Commission on Human Relations. The members were: Mr. Barrett, Rev. Sam Dotson, Dr. Ernest Dixon, Mrs. Hugh Morgan and Maclin Davis. The Governor stated that he intended to establish such a commission by executive order after the Legislature adjourned. He asked the Council to prepare a memorandum for him describing such commissions as have been established in other states and with any suggestions the Council might care to recommend. He asked the group to contact him again after the Assembly had adjourned. Mr. Barrett also asked the Governor to urge the Legislature to ratify the 24th Amendment abolishing th the poll tax. The Governor stated that this act had his support and that he believed it would be ratified.

Mr. Willis moved that the TCHR contact the Department of Conservation and Hotel and Restaurant Inspectors with the purpose of requesting the elimination of restrictions presently existing in the hotel and restaurant division. Mr. Sinclair seconded. Motion carried.

Dr. Long moved that after such contact had been made, the TCHR should issue a public statement expressing the need and desirability for such action. Mrs. Silver seconded, motion carried.

Mr. Barrett reported that the U. S. Civil Rights Commission had asked the State Advisory Commission to do a hospital survey showing admission policies, employment policies, staff prerequsites, etc., and the State Commission had asked that Nashville prepare it. Dr. David Rogers had agreed to undertake this task, as he felt he could get a student to do it, but he did need a little money and was asking the TCHR if they could provide it. Dr. Long moved that the Tennessee Council agree to appropriate funds for a hospital survey in this area along the lines of a formula providing for $20 per interview per hospital with an additional honorarium of $50 for writing the survey. Mr. Sinclair seconded, motion carried.

Dr. Long moved and Mr. Sinclair seconded that the TCHR issue a statement accompanying the publication of the report on employment stating our position on this question and urging reformation where needed in present policies. Motion passed.

The report of the special Committee on Structure, Program and Goals of the TCHR was discussed and the attached amendments proposed. Dr. Long moved the adoption of the amended report and its presentation to the Board for its approval. Mrs. Ish seconded, motion carried.

Mrs. Schweid moved and Mrs. Ish seconded the selection of either Oak Ridge or Knoxville as the place for the next Board meeting and that it be held Saturday, March 30. Motion carried. It was suggested that interested individuals from Kingsport, Bristol, Maryville and Johnson City be invited to the Board meeting. It was further suggested that the chairman announce the appointment of a program chairman for the next annual meeting at the Board meeting.

The meeting was adjourned at three o'clock.

TENNESSEE LEGISLATURE CONSIDERS CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Although the Board of Directors of our Council has taken no stand with regard to the death penalty, we believe that this matter is so closely related to our basic concerns we are calling it to your attention. The Legislature is currently considering repeal of our capital punishment law. Governor Clement, on leaving the Governor's office in January 1959, asked the Legislature to abolish capital punishment. This year, he has asked the Legislature to act on the question without pressure from his office. The issue will probably be fully debated, and settled within the next 10 days.

Fred Graham, former Nashville attorney, in a published review of a book, "And May God Have Mercy" by Eugene Block, ends his article as follows:

"The situation in Tennessee aptly illustrates the arguments put forth in the book for the abolition of the death penalty:

"It unfairly discriminates against the poor and the unpopular.

The four men in Tennessee's Death Row are all penniless, all uneducated, and all Negroes. This reviewer cannot remember a case in which a defendant who could afford to pay his counsel was executed in Tennessee.

"There is always a chance of killing an innocent men.

During the last two years, while all Tennessee executions were being held up by court action, the sentences of five condemned men were commuted because of developments which occurred after their intended execution dates. Also, our archaic laws make it possible for insane persons to be executed, and even prevent a condemned man from voluntarily taking a lie detector test, prior to his death.

"The death penalty does not deter crime.

After Tennessee abolished the death penalty in 1915, its crime rate rose along with that of the entire nation during the World War I years. But after the penalty was re-enacted in 1919, the crime rate continued to climb at an increased rate.

"Today, our homicide rate is three times that of the average for states which have abolished the death penalty."

TO BOARD MEMBERS

We need to know immediately if you plan to attend the Board meeting in Oak Ridge on March 30. If this date is not possible for most of the Board, we will set another time.

CHATTANOOGA

The Chattanooga Community Relations Council is sponsoring a workshop on Employment Opportunity on March 22 and 23 with Dr. V. W. Henderson as leader. All three sessions will be held in the auditorium of the Interstate Life and Accident Insurance Company, and are open to all interested persons without charge. The Chattanooga Community Relations Council extends a warm invitation to persons in Cleveland, Athens and other nearby areas. Reservations and inquiries should be sent to: Chattanooga Community Relations Council, 871 McCallie Avenue, Chattanooga.

The Chattanooga workshop will be the fourth one led by Dr. Henderson under auspicies of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations. Since March 1962, similar workshops have been held in Johnson City, Jackson and Memphis directed toward increasing employment openings on a non-discriminatory basis, and developing appropriate training for current and future jobs. The TCHR's participation has been made possible by a grant from the Field Foundation for which we are indeed grateful.

In June 1962, the state parks were open to all citizens for full use, except for waterfront activities. This change in policy came about through negotiations initiated by a committee of the Council. In February 1963, the Council instituted discussions with the new Commissioner of Conservation, Don McSween, asking for full use of the parks, removal of racial designation from maps, brochures, signs and place mats used in state park dining rooms, etc. The Council representatives were warmly received and we are hopful of further progress. We urge Council members to make use of the parks and notify the park superintendent of your approval of the inclusive service offered.

SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND

In December 1963, three six-year old Negro girls enrolled as boarding students in the School for the Blind on the Donelson campus. The School for the Blind (Colored Division) reopened in January 1963 following building repairs and installation of safety equipment. These 50 Negro students were without schooling from September until January, as reported in our last NEWSLETTER. The solution lies in full integration of the schools - faculty and students - which is anticipated when additional dormitory space becomes available.

Other state facilities can operate more efficiently by integrating their services. We need volunteers to visit the institutions and schools in their area, and propose appropriate steps for inclusive use. Any takers?

IN MEMORY OF MRS. BERNARD FENSTERWALD

The Council has received contributions from five Council members in memory of Mrs. Fensterwald who died February 20. Mrs. Fensterwald was a board member of the Tennessee Council and a former vice president, a trustee of Fisk University, an active participant in civic causes. She gave generously of herself and her substance. We will miss her.

EAST TENNESSEE

Bristol - Was welcomed as our newest local council chapter at a meeting on February 18. Employment opportunity, with special attention directed toward Federal contract firms in the area, is receiving special attention. Conversations are under way with movie houses, bowling alleys, etc. Job specifications indicate that segregated schools offer inadequate preparation for qualifying applicants.

Johnson City - Repeated attempts to obtain skilled employment for Negro applicants in Federal contract firms have been unsuccessful. Complaints have now been filed with the President's Committee on Equal Job Opportunity. Negro applicants for technical training courses have been rejected on the basis that classes are full.

Greeneville - Rotary Club sponsored a "Round Robin" competition among schools, on the order of the GE College Bowl with a $100 prize. All schools participated. Technical training course in electronics is open to all high school applicants, but requires 2 years' basic algebra; not previously offered at Negro school. Magnavox, now employing 6 Negro women, plans plant expansion which will provide 2000 additional jobs. Rose's variety store lunch counter now integrated.

Athens - Has Negro policemen with full responsibility; Negro police auxiliary is uniformed. Mayor's Human Relations Committee has 2 Negro members. Negroes are members of Citizens' Urban Renewal Committee, City Recreation Committee, United Charities Fund. Three Negro students from Cook High School spend half day at the McMinn High School in electronics course.

Cleveland - Has integrated nursing course at Bradley Memorial Hospital, which has no racial barriers to patient hospital service. Despite several large Federal contract firms, Negroes are totally excluded from employment or limited to janitorial service.

A CHURCH BODY SPEAKS

The Cumberland Presbyterian Synod of West Tennessee adopted a report at its annual synod meeting urging ministers to "preach their true convictions concerning these social problems of our day, especially the recognition and acceptance of all races as the children of God. We are told that some elders have instructed their ministers to refrain from preaching or mentioning race relations, under threat of losing their pulpits.

"We join in prayer for those of such mind-sets that they may be led to give to others the same freedom that they demand for themselves, and that the love of God be given a chance to soften their hearts that they may be obedient to God's Word rather than possess a faithfulness to a tradition of the past...

"Men everywhere are being denied freedom, and in so many areas the church has joined with the world in denying freedom to men."

WHEN A SCHOOL BURNS

In early January, Darwin School in Cookeville was completely destroyed by fire. This six teacher, 12 grade school enrolled Negro students in Putnam County and high school students from Clay, Overton and White Counties. The Darwin supporters, the Putnam County B oard of Education and the County Court have been considering whether to rebuild the school for a Negro student body, build a new school for a broader geographic area encompassing Negro and white residents, or integrate the Putnam County students into already existing schools. What is the future of the Negro teachers? Four former Darwin High School freshmen have entered Central High School (Cookeville) and Allgood High School in Putnam County. Other Darwin students are attending school in three churches in Cookeville for the remainder of this school year. While differences of opinion abound about the wisest plan, they are not divided along racial lines.

The destruction of Darwin School means that the adjacent counties who have transported their Negro high school students to Cookeville must now face the responsibility of educating their students at home, or transporting them to another county. How frankly will citizens meet this challenge?

Rice University of Houston, Texas has asked court authority to lift racial bars against qualified students. The University was created in 1900 by a bequest specifying "instruction and improvement of white inhabitants." Trustees propose that the word "white" not be construed as creating an inflexible barrier to the admission of qualified students without regard to race or color. In the petition, the trustees said, "Rice stands alone as the last nonsectarian private university in the South and in the nation which has not admitted or does not stand ready to admit, qualified applicants without regard to race or color."

WHY NEGROES DON'T GET JOBS

In addition to outright discrimination on racial lines, there are additional reasons for inadequate employment of Negroes, according to Dr. Irvin Sobel, Professor of Economics at University of St. Louis, Missouri. These are the reasons

* Failure to provide appropriate investment in young Negro men and women.
* Inadequacies in our school systems.
* Patterns of counseling.
* Lack of family stability.
* Trade schools that reflect the needs of another generation.

NOTES FROM GREENWOOD, MISSISSIPPI

The Voter Education Project, a south-wide drive to register southern Negroes (see NEW SOUTH, October 1960) has recently experienced renewed violence. On February 28 in LeFlore County (Greenwood is county seat) three Negro registration workers, driving out of Greenwood were attacked from a moving car which pulled along side and opened rifle fire. James Travis, a field secretary for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, was seriously wounded. The attackers' car was unlicensed and occupied by white men who had been seen earlier observing the building in Greenwood where the registration workers were meeting. On March 6, shots were fired at a car outside the registration office which was occupied by 4 registration workers; the glass was shattered, but there were no serious injuries. The Voter Education Project has accepted the challenge, and is now concentrating its major effort in Greenwood and LeFlore County.

LeFlore County in the Mississippi Delta has a population of 30,000; 54 per cent is Negro. Persons attempting to register have been dispossessed. Surplus Federal foods, formerly made available through county-state cooperation, have been terminated. It is estimated that 10,000 persons are eligible and would benefit from surplus food distribution.

Tennesseans, recalling our successful efforts in obtaining Federal foods for Fayette and Haywood Counties, may wish to assist the embattled and impoverished residents of LeFlore County. Here are things you can do:

1) Write to President Kennedy urging that he approve the distribution of Federal surplus foods as he did in West Tennessee, without recourse to local and state approval.

2) Send letters of encouragement to registration workers. James Travis (the man who was shot), 2147 Powers Avenue, Jackson, Mississippi; Robert Moses, 901½ Nelson Street, Greenville, Mississippi; Samuel Block, 115 McLaurin Street, Greenville, Mississippi. Letters will be posted in registration headquarters.

3) Contribute funds to equip the registration office and purchase essential supplies and equipment.

The Nashville Community Relations Council is sponsoring a community-wide meeting on "Six Years of School Desegregation", Thursday evening, May 2. The meeting, designed to evaluate the progress already made, and future objectives as the grade-a-year program moves into junior high, will be held at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

A series of council sponsored luncheons, open to the public, is in progress directed toward the problems encountered in initial employment of Negroes in formerly racially limited positions. On March 7, the film, "New Girl", was used as a basis for discussion. The next meeting, Thursday, March 28, will be held at the Methodist Board of Education, Grand Avenue at 19th Avenue, South. For further information, telephone CY 1-7544.

Eight Negro college students were convicted of conspiring to violate trade and commerce at B&W Cafeteria in Nashville and sentenced to 90 days in the workhouse and $50 fine each. Motion for a new trial was filed by their attorneys. The all-white, all-male jury deliberated more than 2½ hours before returning a verdict of guilty. The trial, lasting three days was concluded on March 9, with sentence pronounced by Judge John L. Draper on March 13. Attorneys for the students gave notice of their intention of appealing the case on constitutional issues to the State Supreme Court and on to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

From: Katherine Jones

QUARTERLY REPORT: December, January, February 1962-63

State Issues

State Commission on Human Relations - In a meeting with the Governor a delegation from the Council asked for the formation of a state commission by executive order. The Governor readily agreed to do this following the adjournment of the legislature, now in session. It was acknowledged that the present Legislature would not act favorably on this request which would be described as another attempt of the cities to dominate. The Legislature is faced with reapportionment at this session, and while they are going to continue representation on a basis which will probably not be acceptable to the Federal Courts, the rural legislators are suspicious of any seemingly progressive measure. We are now obtaining information to draft an order for the Governor. It is probable that the Tennessee Voters League (Negro group) is also submitting a draft proposal, as this was part of their program endorsed by Governor Clement when they supported him last summer.

School for the Blind - Former report detailed this conference with the Commissioner of Education and the outcome. It is probable that the school will be integrated in 1964, or as soon as additional dormitory space becomes available. Meantime, the three first grade girls continue on the white campus, although the Negro division is now reopened, and in operation. We intend to continue our interest in this state facility, and expand our concern to other state schools and hospitals.

State Parks - In February a delegation from the Council talked with the new Commissioner of Conservation in whose department the parks operate. The delegation found Commissioner McSween relaxed, frank and anxious to take some progressive steps. They also found him unknowing about this department which he had only been recently appointed to head. In addition to requesting full and free access to the parks, the Council representatives asked for the removal of all racial designations on place mats, road signs, brochures, state park folders, etc. We will need to follow up on this as soon as the Legislature adjourns.

Members of the Council are particularly concerned at this time with abolition of capital punishment, ratification of abolition of the poll tax, and getting the Legislators out of town before they think up additional new taxes.

Local Issues

Since the last quarterly report covered the first part of December, these developments will not be repeated. In February I made an eight day trip to the Eastern part of the state. Much of the progress there is detailed in the last NEWSLETTER, copy attached. Some additional comments are probably in order. East Tennessee's Negro population by county varies from zero to 9%, which is Knoxville. The 6% county is Hamblen, seat of Morristown College, a junior Negro college under auspicies of the Methodist Church. All other counties have 5% or less Negro population. There is little outright demand for change, although there is dissatisfaction. In some of the counties there is practically no professional or business leadership in the Negro community. In others, as Johnson City, there is a very knowledgeable Negro family, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Kilgore. He is a dentist, and about 75% of his patronage is white. The Negro teachers, who have long provided the leadership and communication with the white power structure are not part of the leadership for school integration or other civil rights programs. Their reluctance is economic, and concerned with fear of losing their jobs. My own feeling is that it also involves their investment in segregation, whether recognized or not. They have long been accustomed to going along with the white community, of "getting along", and they are fearful of anything which might lead to upheavel, and a new relationship. I do not think they are satisfied, but are fearful of change and the uncertainties which may come about with it. For instance, in Johnson City, the Negro school principal is a long time resident of John City, well thought of locally, and operates her school without interference. However, when the trade school, built for white students, adopted an open policy, it is reported that the principal and the vocational teacher have discouraged transfers there, convincing the prospective students that there are no courses which they do not offer. This is untrue. It is possible that there are subtle pressures on them which are unknown to the Johnson City Council on Community Converns with which the teachers have not affiliated.

School boundary lines were recently changed, and there is a charge of gerrymandering to exclude Negro children. The county and city adopted a voluntary grade-a-year plan, but there are only about 8 first graders eligible under new school districts. Some of them have transferred to all Negro schools, on the basis of teacher's statemnnt that "the child was not happy". The Kilgores tell me that they feel sure the new Science Hill High School (white) could be desegregated with the mere threat of a lawsuit, but they are unable to get a petitioner, because of economic fear and overly cautious advice.

In Bristol, Tennesse, which has just voluntarily desegregated this year, there was also a redrawing of school district lines so that most of the Negro students were excluded from formerly white schools. One of the projects of the newly formed Bristol Council is to encourage parents of Negro children to send their children to white schools. In Bristol, as in Johnson City, you don't get the school people working with the Council.

See January-February NEWSLETTER. The Negro school in Cookeville (grades 1-12) burned completely (including records) in early January. Our office was notified by our board member in Cookeville, who thought this an advantageous time to press for integration of the schools. The following day, accompanied by Rev. Metz Rollins (Social Education & Action Regional Office, Presbyterian Church, USA), I went to Cookeville, where we talked with several Darwin supporters and Dr. Raper, our board member who is on the faculty of Tennessee Tech. Later, I attended the Board of Education meeting where the future of Darwin was discussed. I have made several trips since then, and more recently, the NAACP branch president has visited there. Darwin is currently operating in three churches.

In summary, the situation is one in which the County Judge and County School Superintendent are pushing for desegregation. The majority of the Negro community, led by the Darwin principal and faculty are resisting which requesting the rebuilding of Darwin School. The school has enrolled high school students from three neighboring counties in order to meet minimum enrollment standards. At present, it seems assured that the high school will not be rebuilt, and that other counties will need to provide education for the students who have been transported to Cookeville. The grammar school is in doubt. None of us have been able to persuade the Negro teachers, especially ones with tenure, to inform the school board of their desire to continue teaching in the system. By devious means, I learned that the school board had recognized that if these teachers sought jobs, it would be the Board's responsibility to "take care of them". The teachers have long been the leadership group in the Negro community, and the school has operated as a community center. There is only one local resident Negro minister, of limited educational background. The students are uneasy about desegregation and parrot warnings from teachers about lack of social life if they go to integrated schools. Negroes make up only 2% of the population, but are not a subservient group and are able to speak frankly, even bluntly, to school board and others.

Four former Darwin students are now attending two white high schools. On orders from the superintendent and school board, they were cordially received. The first one enrolled was introduced to other students by the president of the student body who also shared his locker with the new student. The integrated Little League team which has existed for several years was helpful in preparing for this transition. This freshman student says he prefers Central High School to Darwin. We do not know what kinds of subtle economic pressures are being applied to the Darwin teachers, or what their anxieties are about an integrated school.

Sparta, 16 miles south and in adjoining county, has transported 30 high school students to Darwin School. After Darwin School burned, parents of the students living in White County (Sparta) met together to determine whether to ask for immediate integration or continue the students at the temporary quarters of Darwin School. They agreed to continue at Darwin this year. They recognize that integration at Sparta is probable for September 1963, but are not enthusiastic about it. I spoke at the Methodist Negro Church in Sparta, on invitation of the minister, on February 24, urging them to ask for the addition of a Negro teacher at White County high school next year. A community meeting for further discussion was planned for the following night. Decision unknown.

Denominational Colleges

King's College in Bristol is supported by Presbyterian Church USA and serves about 300 students. It has the appearance of prosperity. Has not accepted any Negro student, although it has rejected applications from day students. This was one of the colleges I visited, and talked with administrative personnel. They are uneasy about this, and defensive about policy of discrimination. (They are unwilling to agree that it is discriminatory.) There is a large building program under way, and again this may be tied in with economics, and a conservative board. Academic standards are reported to be high with most of male students going on to advanced academic work.

Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City is under auspicies of the Baptist denomination, and its physical appearance does not indicate such prosperity. It has about 600 students. One of our members there told me that there is little sentiment to desegregate, but the general atmosphere has changed to the place where he can frankly talk about the issues in class and out. There was a time when this was just not possible.

I have tried at these colleges and others to bring to their attention the changes taking place in the upper south, and elsewhere with regard to inclusive admission, and wondered if they might unwittingly become the haven of students and their parents who were arch conservatives, and unable to think freely about social issues. What will this do to the encouragement of free inquiry among the student body?

Nashville

For more than a year, the protest movement has been moribund. There have been occasional sporadic sit-ins with little support from white or Negro community. With the push for opening the YMCA for food and lodging, there was some push forward. The trial and conviction of eight students who sought service at a local cafeteria, and their harsh sentence has stirred some community feeling. See enclosed clippings. Whether this will arouse the community to fervent action is not yet known. Proposal is for economic withdrawal before Easter. Representatives of several organizations in the civil rights field recently met with the editor of the TENNESSEAN to exchange views and build better communication. Another meeting with the editorial writers is planned.

The Nashville Community Relations Council is planning a large community meeting for Thursday night, May 2 under the general title "Six Years of Desegregation". The review of accomplishments will be distributed, in printed form, ahead of time. Hopefully, the meeting will concentrate on the future. I think Nashville is on the brink of some long-term decisions. It could settle into tokenism, or move out with leadership. The opposition is stubborn but not formidable. The Billy Joe Harges-General Walker meeting only attracted 350 people in an auditorium which will hold 1000. While a White Citizens Council was organized a year ago, it seems to have attracted few persons beyond its founders. In Federal court at this time is a suit asking for desegregation of Holiday Inn, located in an urban renewal area on land redeveloped from a Negro slum area. The outcome will have broad significance for all of Tennessee, but especially for Nashville with large areas affected by highway and urban renewal programs.

Voter Project - Miss Rosetta Gardner of YWCA and Mr. Zeitlow of Student Christian Federation have been in Nashville proposing a Negro Voter Registration Project. There has been a mixed reaction. It could be used, and therefore has validity. It would cost considerable time and money from local persons and both assets are not readily available. Meeting in late March will make decision.

For Nashville, perhaps the greatest reward is that it took place and without incident. It was our first experience in having an integrated group for this long at a first class motel located in the city. I am sure that Vanderbilt University was happy to see the end of the meeting, but I am sure that they learned also that such groups can meet without violence to their campus.

As for content and effect on Tennesseans, I cannot assess it. It seemed to me there was a good deal of the "fellowship of suffering", and I expect I am just weary of that role. It may be much more pertinent to a deep south state, but it is not conducive to progress in Tennessee. I have heard of no follow-up meetings in this state, and cannot assess any permanent effect. It was good to see old friends, and to meet some of the other concerned people in the South - although we all looked bone weary.

Tennessee Council Administration

While political campaigns have ceased, the involvement of our leadership has not been as greatly curtailed, and we have not yet been able to get any concentration on Council guidance. The Council is publishing - from Foundation fund - a study made of state government employment. Will be ready about April 15. Funds remain a problem, and we do not yet have a fund raising committee. Former chairman not able to continue this year. Council audit has been completed, and copy enclosed.

Respectfully submitted,

The executive director, Miss Kay Jones, gave her report. Copy attached.

Mr. George Barrett gave the president's report. He spoke of his disappointment in not having been able to accomplish the two major goals which he had set forth the year before:

1. The establishment of a sound financial basis for the Tennessee Council on Human Relations.

2. The implementation of a broader membership base.

Having failed in these two objectives, Mr. Barrett urged that the Tennessee Council re-evaluate its purposes and its organization so that the members could decide exactly what type council could be most effective. He stated that he felt that they should determine whether there should be local councils with a central organization or whether the local councils should be autonomous and the Tennessee Council merely a large board supporting the activities of the executive director. Mr. Barrett warned that the local councils must assume their individual responsibility if the present structure of the Tennessee Council was to remain unchanged.

Mr. Hunter Lane, Jr. distributed the Treasurer's report and moved its adoption. Mrs. Todd seconded, motion carried.

Mrs. Nelson Fuson called for state strength to help work toward a Tennessee Commission on Civil Rights. Mrs. Silver suggested that a Committee be appointed to explore the facts concerning such a commission and to report back to the board.

Mrs. Fuson moved that the Tennessee Council on Human Relations take a position with regard to attitudes of state institutions expressing specific concern over the closing of the Tennessee School for the Blind. Motion seconded by Dr. Long, unanimously adopted.

Dr. Long moved that the Board of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations request President Kennedy to issue an order for non-discriminatory housing. Mr. Crutcher seconded, motion adopted.

Mrs. Todd recommended that a resolution be adopted by the Board expressing the support of Meredith and so moved. The motion was seconded by Mr. Lane and adopted.

The meeting was adjourned.

Mrs. Silver moved that the office staff of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations and the president appoint a committee to study and implement the integration of the PTAs. Mrs. Silver seconded and the motion was adopted.

The meeting was adjourned.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON STRUCTURE, PROGRAM AND GOALS

OF THE

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

The question of the function of the committee was raised by Chairman Long and defined by the group as being to give some long-range direction to the Council and to the staff. Questions were raised as to the present and future role of the TCHR. Is it the same now as it was two years, four years ago? Will it remain the same with the appointment of the Governor's Commission on Human Relations? Concensus was that the Council has an added dimension with the creation of such a governmental body. It must serve as a sort of watch dog and lobbyist as well as cooperating body with the Commission.

The question of Council structure and finance was discussed with alternative structural arrangements being offered by members of the committee. It was agreed that a different kind of structure would not solve the financial problems. The following reasons were advanced by Herman Long: (1) A large board would tend to be restrictive. (2) There is strength to the state council in having local groups related to the central group. (3) Other agencies have tried this arrangement without success.

The following additional conclusions and proposals were reached by the committee:

In recommending that the present operational structure of the Council be maintained, namely one which permits individual membership participation and local council units, it was realized that some practicable and meaningful balance should be reached in the deployment of staff resources as between (a) organizational efforts in the field, and (b) program development through the central state office. Expanded organizational activity in new localities of the state would obviously require more time in travel and less concentration on necessary program matters at the office.

Accordingly, it was suggested that the present number of local councils, including those having an affiliated status, constitute the major focus of the Council's program effort. In this regard, effort should be made by the President and staff to bring the independent and affiliated local groups into organic relationship with the State Council.

Renewed effort and negotiations with the Knoxville group is called for in this respect.

In addition it was suggested that in view of the action taken at the Chattanooga meeting, through which the Council deliberately assumes the function of taking positions and making public statements on current issues related to its concern, the Oak Ridge group be asked whether this change removes its reluctance to be an actual local unit of the Tennessee Council.

Further, it was felt that the Council should have some concrete organizational goal in mind as a general directive to staff effort. A goal of 10 strong and functional local councils in strategic areas of the state was proposed. Columbia, Clarksville, and Murfreesboro were cited as places where staff assistance might be concentrated in the development of additional councils. This is suggested, however, not as a directive for the staff to take initiative, but rather to give service where there is indication of local interest. It was also believed that a council in the Union City-Dyersburg, Paris area would fall high in priority. Here, too, the staff would not have to assume the initiative in prompting interest, but would respond to it, should it develop, as a priority which the Council deems important.

Presence of staff at the annual meetings of local councils was suggested as a minimum goal of staff field service. This should be a regular and scheduled responsibility. Other visits are certainly desirable, but they would be determined by the convenience of the staff, crisis developments in the area, and specific programs under promotion in the area requiring staff assistance. With the present two-person staff, it was felt that some division of labor in servicing local councils in the field was desirable.

We have a functioning group now in existence in Bristol, and it was suggested that this might be encouraged to be either a tri-cities organization or a Bristol-Kingsport council.

Beyond these considerations as to goals and direction of council organizational activity, it was felt that encouragement should be given by the State Council to the organization of Student Human Relations Councils in colleges or some groups of colleges where there is interest. We now have some student members, and perhaps these young people might be helped to organize councils in the colleges and communities in which they are now located.

Stimulus to Local Councils

Over-emphasis upon fund raising can be a deterrent to local effort, but it was believed that some responsibility by local groups in meeting the state budget is a healthy stimulant. The committee recommended, therefore, that each local group be asked to raise $200 each year as a contribution to the state budget, probably through the avenue of an annual dinner. The staff of the state council could be of assistance in two important ways in this regard: (a) program planning and format, and (b) providing speakers and resource persons without cost to the local group.

It was suggested that the staff undertake the formation of a "stand-by" list of speakers willing to give their services to the council for this purpose. Persons both within and outside the state could be obtained, especially those serving the intergroup relations field and whose organizations would encourage their coming from their own budgets. Some additional assistance in resource personnel might also be obtained through SRC. A panel of 30 to 40 such persons is realistically possible. These lists should be developed by the staff, circulated among the local groups, and requests for service channeled through the state office. This proposal obviously becomes not merely a means of raising funds for the state organization but also a major type of program activity.

A further stimulus to local program activity, it was believed, lay in the opportunity now provided by the Chattanooga decision to take public positions on various issues germaine to the general objectives of the state organization. This new function should be lifted up and emphasized for each local group. It is a line of program activity for each of them. In addition, local groups are encouraged to bring before the annual meeting general concerns about which they feel the state organization ought to make public statement. This line of departure might also broaden the concern of the organization beyond the important desegregation issue to other issues of moment.

The development of special program memoranda, dealing with these matters, would seem to be needed.

Membership and Finance

We should have in mind a membership goal of at least 1,000 members. Our present number is around 700, and perhaps our goal ought to be that of doubling our present size. This would help financially, and a campaign toward this end should be launched during the current year.

It was felt that membership on the Board carried a special meaning and responsibility. For this reason it was recommended that the Board members be asked to assume an additional financial responsibility to the Council, to the extent of giving annual contributions of $20, exclusive of membership, as a special "Board Member" donation. Pledges to this end might be solicited, with payments being made quarterly at $5.00 each. Regular reminders and reply envelopes would facilitate this process.

Quarterly Narrative Report
January-March, 1963

I. Some Significant Events

A. In the Communities

1. Beginning January 2 the trial period began for open facilities in downtown Little Rock. No significant incidents marred the ending of segregation in Blass' tea room, at lunch counters in Walgreen's, Woolworth's, McClellan's; in rest rooms and water fountains in all downtown stores; in hospitality of the four hotels of Southwest Hotels, Inc., Marion, Grady-Manning, Lafayette, Albert Pike.

   The impetus of this work by the "negotiating committee" (see report last quarter) was used to end segregation in lodging and feeding inductees of the army, navy, and marines.

   The supporting group of twenty-five business men authorized the continuing of the negotiating committee which is working on theaters, cafeterias, and hotel dining rooms for local Negro use.

2. On January 12 (Saturday) a lone laborer picket walked in front of Blass' store for one hour at noon. Mr. Amis Guthridge stood at the corner talking to any inquirers. The poorly lettered signs, a second one was used alternately, read: "Blass' tea room is integrated. These Jews are sneaking integration on white people;" "These Jews are feeding Negroes and whites off the same plates;" "Blass' tea room is integrated. These Jews are in cahoots with the NAACP."

   The lone picket, poorly dressed, appeared each day at noon for 30 minutes to one hour for some three weeks. The public apparently gave no heed or attention to the suggestion of boycott. Within the store morale among employees appeared high. Blass reported losing ten accounts, "only one who spent any money. We will get her back as soon as we advertise an $85 dress for $50." (ACHR's related activities described under II, below.)

3. At Pine Bluff Negro students, stimulated into activity by two SNCC workers, began a sit-in at Woolworth's lunch counter on February 1. A policy of guarding against incidents and ignoring the students was consciously pursued by city and business officials. Woolworth removed lunch counterseats later.

   The students indicate that the state and field officials of NAACP opposed their protest. The president of the Pine Bluff branch, Mr. Dove, supported them.

   On February 11-12 President Lawrence A. Davis of A.M.& N. College (state college for Negroes) suspended indefinately eleven students involved in the sit-ins who refused to desist when warned by the president. The president of the Ministerial Alliance (Negro), minister at the church of the college president, opposed the sit-in as did a number of other members at first. Soon most Negro ministers rallied to support the students and joined with other Negro leaders to provide housing and food for the suspended students. The protesting group changed its name to the Pine Bluff Movement and the student leader, Robert Whitfield, was made chairman. Weekly mass rallies were held drawing "400 to 900" persons. By count 490 persons, young and adult, joined in one march.

After Woolworth closed its lunch counter action centered on other places - counters, cafeterias, hotel, theater. A total of forty-nine were arrested and "overflowed" the jail with singing young people including high school students of 15 and 16. A negotiating committee was organized and had its first session on April 3. All are out of jail. Court hearings have been deferred.

4. The National Junior Chamber of Commerce held its annual Ten Outstanding Young Men Congress at Little Rock, January 19-20. To a standing ovation the ten without exception spoke out on freedom and civil rights. Governor Faubus was one of those applauding. Bob Richards, Olympic pole vaulter and master of ceremonies, summarized by crying out to the audience: "Do we need to emphasize that we stand for freedom? In Little Rock, Arkansas, tonight we have honored a man who stands for civil rights -- another who said that we can't be free until James Meredith is free.-- If you're not inspired tonight, friends, you can't be touched."

B. In the Schools

1. On court order the Dollarway School admitted Sarah Howard, daughter of Attorney George Howard, who is President of the Arkansas Branch of the NAACP, to the tenth grade on January 21. On her second day Sarah reported abuse by students. Two white sisters, Earline and Cathy Hudman, were also abused because they befriended Sarah. On the same day William Howard, Sarah's uncle who came for her, was involved in a fight with high school boys, one of whom he stabbed not seriously.

Attorney George Howard sent a message to Attorney General Robert Kennedy for protection.

On January 28 school officials assured the federal court that it was taking all necessary steps to restore order. One of these was a letter sent to all parents on January 29 saying the board would maintain discipline and order. After missing four days the Negro children are back in school. The white girls returned, but the older one quit school January 29 and reportedly is entering a business school.

The case of William Howard is still pending in court. He is charged with carrying a secret weapon and with assault with intent to kill.

2. On March 22 Horace Mann High School (Negro) had its annual Career Day with a Professor of Education from Prairie View, Texas, and Mr. Woods, St. Louis, member of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity as speakers and with many individuals, colored and white, as consultants. Both Directors of ACHR were platform guests.

3. On March 25 Jacquelyn Evans was inducted to the Honor Society of Hall High School in Little Rock. She is the first Negro student to be selected and has a grade average of 4.4 which is A+. She has been persistent in knocking on all doors into educationally helpful extra-curricular activities.

4. Mr. Ted Lamb, School Board member at Little Rock, came to ACHR office on March 27 to talk about procedures to be followed by officials in making assignment of students in May. The schedule as set forth by the Superintendent again clearly revealed that Horace Mann and Dunbar schools have a city-wide attendance zone while other senior and junior high schools have defined non-overlapping zones. In addition Mr. Lamb quoted the Board's president and attorney to the effect that this year's procedures should be very informal reflecting the attitude "we are desegregated, That's that."

C. In the Courts

1. Judge Gordon E. Young of the federal district court dismissed suits against the estate of the late Police Chief Smith by members of the march on Central High, August 1959. The suits of nine plaintiffs asked for a total of $450,000 damages. The cases were tried January 21-23.

Nineteen persons arrested at this same time for their part in the riot have not been brought to trial. Cases are still pending in Little Rock minicipal court.

2. William M. Howard, charged with assault with intent to kill in circuit court of Jefferson County because of the Dollarway School incident, petitioned on March 9 that this case be transferred to federal court in Little Rock. Wiley A. Branton is attorney for Mr. Howard.

3. On January 25 U.S. District Judge J. Smith Henley rejected the Dollarway School Board's plea to stop the transfer of Sarah Howard from Townsend Park High School to the tenth grade at Dollarway.

D. In Politics

Noteworthy is the fact that the Arkansas legislature met January 14 through March 14 without involving itself in the issue of segregation. On March 23 Governor Faubus explained this phenomenon to newsmen by saying the legislature ignored racial issues because people are tired of the subject and consider opposition to federal policies as futile!

E. In Organizations

1. On February 10-17 St. John's Mission Seminary (Catholic) conducted an Institute on Interracial Justice. Three professors dealt with the issue from the view points of sociology, psychology, and religion. About two hundred from the various parishes in Greater Little Rock participated.

2. On March 18 George Parsons, student at Little Rock University, invited the directors of ACHR to participate in a state student conference at Aldersgate Camp, April 20-21. The sponsors of the conference included the YWCA (Mrs. Edna T. Anderson, director of a special human relation project for students by the YWCA initiated the conference), YMCA, Baptist Student Union, and Methodist Student Movement. A steering committee of adults and students have worked on plans since February 2. This is the first student conference in Arkansas with such wide participation.

3. On February 27-28 the Women's Society for Christian Service Conducted a statewide workshop on the United Nations at the First Methodist Church of Little Rock. The meeting was interracial in program and participation.

II. Activities of ACHR Related to Events

A. In the Communities

1. Initiated by ACHR, an Inter-faith Discussion on Race and Religion took place February 5 at Lasker Auditorium with some 400 participants. Attached card indicates program.

2. The white chairman of the negotiating committee for opening downtown called the Director the night of January 12. "Blass is considerably shook-up by the anti-semitic picket at his store today. We need to find some way to help." That night church leaders were asked by the Director and promised to phone officials of the store assuring them churchmen would support Blass against such an attack. On Monday, January 14, organization heads were asked to encourage members to eat at Blass' tea room. In regard to segregationists' threats to bring "fifty of the stinkingest, dirtiest niggers to eat at the tea room, the Associate Director suggested to officials that if such person came to tell them, "Go home, dress in a suit with tie as do other customers and you will be treated the same." The results were gratifying. See above.

3. The Directors of ACHR by being present and known to both parties in the protests at Pine Bluff became ipso facto channel of communication between students and business men in Pine Bluff. The sequence of relations follows: Early in February the Director visited the publisher of the Commercial, Mr. Jim Kennedy (former city councilman and now a member of the housing authority), Mr. Walter Trulock III (investment broker and member of ACHR) to share two ideas, 1) change can be made peaceably, 2) business men in Little Rock can be helpful. The Associate Director spent some time there appraising the situation as to division among Negro leaders and people; he was called subsequently by manager of Walgreen's to advise on what steps to take. The white head of the Little Rock negotiating committee was invited for dinner with Pine Bluff leaders; he called us to advise us of the fact, to ask suggestions, and to say he would refer them to ACHR for help. Mr. Trulock of Pine Bluff on March 25 phoned to ask Mr. Sutton to meet with newly named negotiators for the business community. The object of this meeting was to set up negotiators for the students which was done. Because of obvious confusion in getting the sides together, Mr. Sutton made another trip to see the students. The negotiators met on April 3 with the initial understanding they would plan to end discrimination at lunch counters and rest room facilities. The students agreed to desist from demonstrations while this is being effected.

B. In the Schools

1. The Director moved to rally moral support among white churchmen for the Hudgen girls who befriended Sarah Howard at Dollarway working through a news reporter, a Methodist minister, Council of Churches, and Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

2. On February 17 the Greater Little Rock Ministerial Association renewed its practice of conducting an interracial service for worship on Brotherhood Sunday. The Director of ACHR served with the planning committee. The meeting was at Wesley Chapel with the Reverend Jac Ruffin of the Second Presbyterian Church, Little Rock, as preacher.

3. The Committee on Education of the Arkansas Advisory Committee has completed its study of school disabilities of Negro children. ACHR secretary, Mrs. Arnold, closely supervised this study and involved persons in the Teachers Association, Department of Education, and members of ACHR.

4. Mr. Charles Carnes, School of Law, University of Arkansas, has completed his study of what is happening in school desegregation in Arkansas as this relates to law. This is part of the projected study of the Civil Rights Commission. The Director was asked by Mr. Carnes to read his draft report and give reactions.

5. The Associate Director helped plan a meeting sponsored by Committee for Better Education on April 9 for Negro parents of students finishing the sixth and ninth grades to inform them of their rights and the procedures to be followed under the school assignment plan in Little Rock. The call was by letter to all these parents urging them to choose the "school nearest your home." The letter was signed by Mr. Jordan, chairman of the committee. (As of this date, April 24, school officials have not sent parents preference sheets. Last year they were sent in February.)

6. In the same week that Jacqui Evans was elected to the Honor Society of Hall High the faculty sponsor of the Science Club called in the three Negro members to say they could not attend the annual dinner because Morrison's Cafeteria was not "integrated." Using Mr. Sutton's new rapport with the chairman of Little Rock's Negotiators (a banker) ACHR received from the manager through the banker word that arrangements for an integrated school group could be made on request from a school official. This information was transmitted to Superintendent Parsons. The Science Club advisor called the club together to say all could go to the annual dinner.

C. Organizational Activities

1. The Council held its annual meeting of members on February 1-2 with Fred Routh of NAIRO as principal speaker. (Substantial help from Paul Anthony secured Mr. Routh after Mr. John Wheeler found he could not come.)

2. The Directors joined other state staffs for a "round-up" March 5-7 in Atlanta.

3. On March 25 ACHR was notified it had been elected to membership in the Pulaski County Planning Council on Health and Welfare. Mr. Sutton and Dr. Rosalind Abernathy, a member of the ACHR Board, will represent ACHR at monthly luncheon for delegates.

4. The Finance Committee headed by Vice-President Townsend and the Membership Committee headed by Vice-President Gunn are cooperating in an effort to reach new goals in members and income.

D. In Employment

1. ACHR is in the middle of activities concerning opening training classes under MDTA to Negroes. We have enlisted help of the Secretary of the Urban League, have written analyses of the problem to both the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and the Labor Department. Have had conferences on the subject with John Hope of the President's Committee, Mr. Schulter of the Department of Labor, Mr. Zeck of the Department of Labor, and, yesterday, with Mr. Hellerstein of the Civil Rights Commission, the last two conferences in person. Not too hopeful of substantial change, though we have the understanding and support of the President's Committee and Mr. Hellerstein.

2. Mrs. Bowe, a Little Rock Negro secretary, was advanced to the position of G 4, stenography, at the VA Hospital on March 4. This change has been a year in coming!

E. Toward the Open Society

1. The Associate Director used the occasion of negotiating facilities in Little Rock to write the Defense Department in regard to discrimination in housing and feeding inductees. Captain Olds of the Marines called February 5 to report ending of discrimination and a letter from the Navy confirmed the change. The army made the change through the negotiations of the downtown committee.

2. March 11 the Director called Mr. Ray Winder, General Manager of the Little Rock Travellers, now a member of International Baseball League. The question was raised by Negro fans, "Would reserved and other seating be segregated?" After a bad moment Mr. Winder said, "We are selling tickets to the general public." His inflection indicated this meant integrated seating. (The opening game confirmed the complete desegregation. The Gazette reported it as "The most thrilling and satisfying of all opening games, the debut of AAA baseball with a desegregated team and desegregated seating." Mrs Guthridge had a picket outside with a sign: "Mr. Faubus plays ball with Negroes.")

F. Miscellaneous Activities

1. February 20, John Walker called from Yale to ask for material to use for a long paper.

2. On our reference Mr. Youngdahl, Arkansas Advisory Committee on Civil Rights, had satisfactory conferences with two ACHR members at Hot Springs, Reverend Fudge and Attorney Chesnutt. These will aid in a study of hospital facilities in that city.

3. Mr. Falk, American Jewish Committee, called on March 8 and asked to have us distribute flyer of AJC on the cases pending in U.S. Supreme Court involving religion in public schools. We sent out 24 to newspapers and individual opinion makers.

4. On March 15 the directors conferred with President R. D. Crockett of Philander Smith in re plans for an institute for Negro ministers across the state on "Leadership for the Sixties." He opened the way when we secure funds.

FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Appil 4, 1963

Dear Paul:

I hope you won't mind receiving a mimeo'd quarterly report. I decided to "kill enough birds with one stone" to include the Board and local council chairmen. In the rush I just typed stencils from rough notes. Ralph said I should take time to type up a special original copy for SRC, but he, too, is compulsive!

You will also note on page 4 that we have assumed you would be our principal speaker on June 8. A more formal request would have been better, but you have already said you would be willing "to do anything." Maybe you shouldn't make such broad statements, especially to someone who is of the opinion that you can do just about anything!

Sincerely,

Georgia

QUARTERLY REPORT to the
SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL
for the period ending March 31, 1963

April 4, 1963

(The following report is given in some detail for four reasons: (1) To give SRC an overview of FCHR deeds and needs, so that the Director of Field Activities will have further background for his much-appreciated assistance; (2) To help the new Executive Director plan his beginning work with FCHR; (3) To furnish FCHR Board members with an account of FCHR concerns needing their continuing attention; (4) Because the Acting Executive Director is, according to her psychologist husband's opinion and her own admission, somewhat compulsive!)

Administration

During this reporting period the administration of the Florida Council on Human Relations has continued to be based in its "home office" in the residence of the Ralph Dregers in Jacksonville, with Mrs. Dreger (Dr. Georgia) taking over the Acting Executive Directorship when Dr. Ralph was elected President of FCHR at the 1963 Annual Meeting on January 26.

On the above-mentioned date the Board of Directors voted to offer the position as Executive Director of FCHR to the Reverend Louis L. Mitchell, Jr., of Birmingham, Alabama, to ~~being~~ begin June 1 with headquarters in Daytona Beach. He has since accepted this position; and even though he will not be full-time in Florida until July 1, he plans to make several trips to Florida in the interim.

Professional work Dr. Georgia Dreger had anticipated beginning January 1 did not materialize because grant support for a large state-wide psychological research effort, headed by Dr. Ralph Dreger, was not forthcoming as expected. Because FCHR needs were so great, the Dregers decided Georgia would not seek any further professional employment and would devote full-time to FCHR administrative and clerical work until the new Director could come. Within the past few days, however, an unexpected opportunity has been presented to the Dregers to participate in significant research with one of the top research psychologists in the nation, in fact in the world. Such participation would require immediate involvement for both Dregers in the time-consuming task of data collection, a phase of the work which must be completed before June 15. Both of them will be able to continue to devote considerable "spare" time to FCHR administration, but much of the clerical detail will have to be handled by someone else. Fortunately a workable solution to this problem is at hand.

Coincident to a Daytona house-hunting trip made by the Mitchells the last week of March, Dr. Georgia spent March 29 and 30 in screening interviews with prospective office secretaries, referring the best qualified applicants to Lou Mitchell for his decision. Independently both Georgia and Lou came to the same conclusion as to the very best qualified applicant, and she has accepted the position. She is Mrs. Alma Bille Weston, a young Negro woman born in Florida but reared and schooled in Schenectady, New York. She is at present employed part-time in a law firm in Daytona, and will be able to start work for FCHR part-time as soon as needed and full-time as of June 1. The present proposal (concurred in by Lou Mitchell over long-distance phone) is that the Daytona office will be opened on a part-time basis on or about May 1. Dr. Georgia will spend one day a week in Daytona Beach working directly with Mrs. Weston, and will continue administrative work from the Jacksonville headquarters, including keeping FCHR financial records until an audit following May 31. Fitting nicely into this plan is the fact that, through contacts made by Dr. Marshall Taxay of our Executive Committee, office space in Daytona is going to be given to FCHR rent free. Mrs. Pierre Miles, Chairman of a Local Arrangements Committee for preparing for opening the Daytona office, will check into the possibility of having the office ready at the earliest possible date.

Administrative work for FCHR carried on during the first quarter of 1963 has included the following emphases:

Planning the Annual Meeting, held at Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, January 26. Attendance was estimated to be among the largest ever at an FCHR Annual Meeting, with enthusiastic participation in all activities--from local council reports to fund raising. Paul Anthony of SRC did a superb job of pinch-hitting for the absent principal speaker. Newly-elected Treasurer Herbert Davidson raised $1800 in cash and pledges from the members present. Two additional local councils were chartered by the Board. Prospective Director Lou Mitchell was introduced. FCHR 1963 got off to a good start.

Publishing the NEWSLETTER on a monthly basis. Response to the October, December, and January issues of the Newsletter was such that it was decided to continue to publish monthly. Before 1963 is over this will necessitate boosting the budgets for office supplies and printing and for postage, but experience has shown this Newsletter to be a very important part of our life-line.

Updating the Mailing List. Various "direct mail advertising" devices have been employed to verify addresses from an unchecked list of some 1300 names "inherited" in September. With clear verifications from that list, along with some addition of new names, we now have an active mailing list of about 700. Approximately 475 1963 state memberships (individual or couple) have been paid to FCHR headquarters, either directly or through local councils; this represents a total of almost 600 members. During March a complete mailing list by local council area was mailed out to local secretaries and/or treasurers for further checking and addition of new names. It is our policy now to add new names to the mailing list only if they become members or at least request further mailings after receiving one issue of the NEWSLETTER.

Completing a Detailed Plan for FCHR Financial Records. Based on the experience of late 1962, a detailed though not complicated system of records has been set up for 1963 such that there is easily available a running record of three major types: (1) A general record of income and expenses; (2) A record by local councils listing all dues and contributions made from each area; (3) A Kardex file record for each member or contributor. Careful monthly reports are made to each local council, and, in turn, local councils are beginning to make careful monthly reports to the state office. The latter process needs further encouragement, particularly with new local officers being elected this spring, but the channels have been opened for having available in the state office a much more adequate over-all picture of FCHR finances, state and local.

Attending SRC Staff Meeting in Atlanta. Both Georgia Dreger and Lou Mitchell attended March 5-7 meetings in Atlanta. Dr. Georgia reports two primary impressions from that conference: First, that the new "lease on life" experienced by FCHR during this past few months has both surprised and pleased just about everybody, but also with the expectation that this is only a good beginning and that significant progress should be just around the corner. To that end SRC has pledged all possible support to FCHR for 1963 in terms of time, personnel, and money. Second, that with the present push at promotion as a starting point and stepping stone, FCHR must mount and carry out a real program in human relations. The Dregers as Acting Directors have been unable to do much in programming except through including some appropriate materials in the NEWSLETTER. Travel during this first quarter of 1963 has been limited to participating in one local council's human relations institute. Of course, organization does have to come first, and one primary objective of the interim Directorship has been to get things organized in such a way that a full-time Director can move quickly into promoting a program rather than just promoting an organization as such.

Encouraging Increased Board Participation. Questionnaires were sent out to all members of the Board of Directors (more than forty in number) asking for a brief statement about their vocational work and their involvement in various human relations endeavors. Space was provided for them to check major interests within the broad field of human relations, and to make specific suggestions for Board action in dealing with current human relations issues in Florida. Response to this questionnaire has been gratifying, but by no means complete. Short statements about each Board member replying are being run in a NEWSLETTER section called "Follow Your Leaders," and copies of the full questionnaire responses have been passed on to Lou Mitchell to acquaint him with his new co-workers. According to action of the Executive Committee on March 9, all persons listed on the Board of Directors who have not responded to this questionnaire (even on second request), nor to any other communication from the FCHR office since last September, will be asked directly by the President whether or not they wish to continue to serve on the FCHR Board. If so, they will be expected to take a much more active interest; if not, they will be replaced. The President is appointing a number of standing and special committees from the Board to deal with current and continuing FCHR concerns.

Planning for a Mid-Year State-Wide Membership Meeting. In order to consolidate the gains of the past months, and to get Director Lou Mitchell off to a running start, a second 1963 state-wide meeting is planned for June 8 at Bethune-Cookman in Daytona. Lou Mitchell took a major hand in planning the day during his March trip to Daytona, and it will be he who will be in the primary leadership role on June 8 for the entire program--even though at that point he can be in Florida for only that one day. At this meeting it will be "batter up" for Paul Anthony from SRC as invited principal speaker, rather than as pinch hitter. The Board and Executive Committee will meet, there will be special programs for children and youth and an old-fashioned "dinner on the grounds" at noon--and (we hope) "a good time will be had by all."

Scheduling April Local Council Visits by the President and/or Acting Executive Director. By extending both time and distance required for two professional trips during April, the Dregers will be able to make several local council contacts with a minimum of drain on the limited FCHR travel budget (with, of course, only Dr. Georgia's expenses being paid by FCHR):

April 11--Dr. Georgia to contact interested persons in Lakeland-Winter Haven area. No organized work has been done there as yet.
April 22--Both Dregers in Orlando-Winter Park.
April 23--Both Dregers in Tampa-St. Pete-Clearwater.
April 24--Both Dregers in Fort Myers (Lee County).
April 25--Georgia available to Dade CRC, if needed, while Ralph is conventioning.
April 26--Georgia available for daytime conference with officers and members of Broward County Council (Fort Lauderdale).
April 27--Dregers may be able to transport to Daytona more of the old FCHR records currently held in the basement of a Negro Baptist Church in Miami. Time will not allow contacts with other East Coast councils on this trip.

Local Council Doings

Broward County CHR.--This Council, formerly quite active, is evidently not functioning regularly at present. One correspondent has sent us a list of current officers, along with considerable materials we have been able to use in our NEWSLETTER.

Central Brevard CHR.--The Secretary-Treasurer indicates that this is already a chartered local council, a fact which had not been clear from records in the interim FCHR headquarters. Newspaper clippings from Cocoa report Council-sponsored, public, somewhat heated discussions of Urban Renewal in that community, with meetings attended by the Mayor and other officials.

Community Relations Council (Dade County).--Reorganized within the past few months, this Council was chartered by the FCHR Board in January. They have a growing membership, but no specific reports of program have been received.

Fort Pierce Community Association has been accepted by the FCHR Board as an "Institutional Affiliate" since the group does not wish at this time to become fully chartered. The affiliation, however, is active and cooperative, with their President serving as a member of the state Executive Committee. An important project of this Council is sponsoring and staffing a child care center for children of migrant farm laborers.

Gainesville CHR.--This Council held an excellent Human Relations Institute on February 15-16. University of Florida students were very active in the planning. James McBride Dabbs of SRC gave the principal address, and FCHR President Ralph Dreger was one of three leaders of a well-planned series of rotating discussion groups. This Council is not yet chartered by FCHR, but several of the members are encouraging this move and will push for a decision this spring.

Halifax Area CHR continues to be one of the strongest councils in the state. A significant workshop on human relations is planned for April, co-sponsored by nine community civic groups. New Director Lou Mitchell will be on the workshop faculty. Several members of the Council are taking specific and heavy responsibility in planning for the coming of the FCHR Director to make headquarters in Daytona.

Human Relations Council of Greater Jacksonville is the new name for the former Northeast Florida CHR. Big news from this Council is that its local office is in full swing, with a full-time Executive Director, Mr. Ernest Lent, and a full-time secretary. The address is 129 East Forsyth St.; Phone, 353-8081. An essay contest on "Putting Democracy to Work" is being sponsored by Jax HRC for Duval County high school students, with $100 prize to be used for tuition in any accredited institution of higher learning. A reception introducing Mr. Lent to the Directors of other social agencies in the community is planned for April 9.

Lee County CHR is an active, young council (organized just a few months ago and chartered by FCHR Board in January). They are creating considerable interest in that community. A great deal of help was given to them by a recent visit from Miss Josephine Wilkins, one of the Vice Presidents of SRC. The Dregers will visit LCCHR on April 24, at which time they will have their first meeting open to the public.

Melbourne CHR is not yet a chartered council, and continues to be a relatively small group. They are, however, continuing to hold monthly meetings and make regular financial reports to the state council.

Orlando CHR has evidently ceased to function. Word from an FCHR Board member living there is that the group disintegrated (no pun intended!) when former active leaders moved from the community. The Dregers will assess problems and possibilities on their April "swing" through Central Florida.

St. Petersburg is reported to have a large and active human relations group, numbering several hundred members, but it has no affiliation with FCHR whatsoever, except that four or five persons from that group have also paid 1963 dues or contributions to the state office. Specific contacts with officers of this group will be attempted when the Dregers visit that area, with the hope that at least closer cooperation, if not affiliation, will result.

Tallahassee CHR has just within the past month voted to ask to be chartered by FCHR. This is particularly gratifying to the Dregers, since Ralph was first Chairman of the Tally group several years ago when he was on the faculty at FS . The assumption then was that, since FCHR Director Bill Williams helped to organize the Council, it was an officially affiliated group. This was not the case, and later council votes did not go for affiliation until now.

Tampa does not have an organized council on human relations at this time, but prospects for immediate organization are bright. The Acting Director had a telephone conversation with one of the leaders there in connection with an ADL-sponsored Human Relations Workshop to be held at the University of South Florida April 22-25. The Dregers will attend one evening of the workshop and also meet with a local committee to discuss organizationof a council. A prospect list of 500 names is already compiled.

Upper Pinellas Branch of FCHR (Clearwater) was organized in May, 1962. This large and active council has recently voted to ask for FCHR charter. They have a goal of 500 members, and bid fair to reach it.

West Palm Beach Chapter of FCHR is an active, chartered council, but suffers from the not-uncommon failure to make monthly reports to the state office. Therefore the present status of actual council work or projects is not known to the Acting Director.

Winter Park Interracial Council is a non-chartered group whose specific activities as a group have not been recently reported to FCHR. Two FCHR Board members from that Council have expressed concern for the organization of an Orange County Council, which would include Orlando. Exploring this possibility will be a major objective of the April visits to that area.

FROM: Alabama Council on Human Relations

Re: Quarterly Report __December, 1962 - February 6, 1963

Early in December of 1962 the general mood in Alabama was one of calm. Governor-elect George Wallace was making very few statements, although the statements that he made were of defiance of the Federal Government and promised that his campaign speeches to prevent desegregation of the schools would be kept. Lieutenant Governor-Elect James B. Allen spoke on December 3 at the Birmingham Ministerial Association's meeting. He stressed that he was in favor of segregation of all public facilities and yet stated that he was in favor of law and order.

In Birmingham, Negroes had attempted to organize a selective buying campaign but it was, at best, only partially effective. The Senior Citizens Committee of Birmingham was , for all practical purposes, identified with the Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham. They kept contact with the Negro community of Birmingham urging Negro leaders to avoid any demonstrations until the Mayoralty election in February of 1963. Final briefs on the school desegregation suit in Birmingham were to be filed with Federal District Judge in December and it was expected that he would give a ruling in the Spring of 1963.

Early in December a Negro was shot in downtown Birmingham by a Bus driver. The bus driver said that the Negro was bothering him and he got off the bus to call the police. When he got to the telephone he alleges that the Negro approached him with a knife. There was only a very brief report on the shooting in the Birmingham newspapers and ther was no mention in the newspapers later that the Negro had died of the wounds received.

On visiting Huntsville in Mid-December there appeared to be evidence that the political leaders and the newspaper would be anxious to avoid any situation that would give Huntsville bad publicity. People across the state of Alabama were speaking of Oxford and the more responsible citizens apparently learned a great deal from this horrible event. The letters to the Editors of the Birmingham papers contained many blatent accusations against the Federal Government and generally many people in the state put the whole blame for the events of Oxford on the Federal Government. As time went on it became apparent that more businessmen were realizing that Alabama should attempt to avoid any incidents similar to those at Oxford, Mississippi.

During this period there were statements made by local ministerial associations and a group of eleven top religious leaders in the state came out strongly for law and order.

On December 9, the Executive Director of the Alabama Council spoke at the Unitarian Church giving a summary of the racial situation in Birmingham. This was the first time that he had spoken to a White group in many months. On December 14, a Negro church was bombed in Birmingham and several homes were damaged. On December 17, Negro ministers held a protest meeting. Persons present at the meeting accused the local police of showing more interest in destroying clues than in gathering evidence. One minister made the remark "It is very difficult to catch your own".

On December 18, a small group of Negro ministers went to City Hall. It was reported that their protest was poorly worded and quite ineffective.

Field Foundation granted $6,000.00 to the Alabama Council on Human Relations in December of 1962 in order to carry out an intensive educational program. This special project would include an enlarged newsletter to members and key leaders in the state. The project is also set up to provide information to opinion makers such as religious leaders, news media, business leaders, political leaders and law enforcement people.

In December, Dr. Frank Ross, president of the University of Alabama, announced that all applications for enrollment in the spring term at the University of Alabama that were incomplete would not be considered and no further applications would be accepted because of overcrowding. Some of the Negroes who were making application withdrew and it was reported that the final figure was that three Negroes had their applications in for the term beginning in the Spring of 1963. Their applications were declared incomplete and void. Reports since then have indicated that there are empty dormitory rooms at the University of Alabama after the spring term began.

It was reported that the NAACP would give assistance to the applicants and there would be suits filed against the University of Alabama. However, there have been no reports that such a suit was instituted.

One indication that voter registration was proceeding with some effectiveness in Birmingham was the statement made by Eugene "Bull" Connor in Birmingham urging Whites to register. Voter registration had been very effective in Huntsville with several hundred Negroes registering to vote. There had been a couple of newspaper reports that Wallace would organize a State Militia to resist Federal Troups when the National Guard was taken over by the Federal Government in the event of school desegregation. Reports that the militia was being organized have not been verified.

On December 27, 28, and 29 the Executive Director attended the Nashville Consultation on Church and Integration sponsored by the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen and Southern Regional Council.

The year, 1963, began with newspaper reports that on January 1 two Negroes were shot by policement in Birmingham. On January 3, the Executive Director of the Alabama Council spoke at the meeting of the Southern Inter-agency and gave a report on Alabama, summarizing race relations in Alabama for 1962. This group decided to spend much of its time at its spring meeting on April 18-19, 1963 discussing Birmingham and Alabama.

Those who had hoped that Wallace would be a little bit more quiet in his defiance of the Federal Government were greatly disappointed when he made headlines with his extreme remarks at his inauguration, including the oft-quoted expression "Segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever". Two hours before Wallace's inaugural speech, State Attorney-general Richmond Flowers made a statement that the state must calmly and rationally face the problems of desegregation and pledged he would maintain law and order.

One of the most successful projects of any of the local groups was a workshop on equal employment opportunities held in Huntsville on January 18-19, 1963. The City Council agreed that the Huntsville Council on Human Relations could have its workshop in the Municipally owned utilities building. The Council then rescended its action and, finally, the day before the workshop, held a special meeting of the City Council at which it voted that the group could meet in the public utilities building. Following the workshop, committees were organized to contact Federal contractors; a research committee was also organized to study the employment patterns in Huntsville and have facts upon which to base its actions in the field of employment. It also was reported that the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity was making some progress in opening up opportunities for Negroes in the area of employment at Hayes Aircraft and Tennessee Coal and Iron Company in Birmingham.

In January, the Alabama Council on Human Relations was busy preparing for its annual meeting on February 1. Ralph Bunche, under-secretary of the United Nations, had agreed to be the main speaker. But two weeks before the meeting he sent his regrets that he would be unable to attend the meeting. Southern Regional Council assisted in procuring Mr. Percy Williams, director of the Federal Contracts division of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunities as the keynote speaker at the annual meeting held February 2, 1963.

At the Board Meeting of the Alabama Council on Human Relations on February 1, it was decided to have a student intern from Kalamazoo College, Michigan come to work with the Executive Director for a period of three months beginning April 1, 1963. Detailed plans were approved concerning the project made possible by the Field Foundation grant. On February 2, about 175 persons attended the morning session at which Mr. Percy Williams spoke; in the afternoon about 75 members of the Council met in Business Session and reports from the various local groups were given and showed that the local groups were becoming more active. The Executive director outlined his program for 1963.

Across the state people were giving a great deal of attention to the Mayor's campaign in Birmingham prior to the election on Tuesday, March 5. Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor had declared after the City voted to change its form of city government that he wanted nothing to do with the proposed Council and that he would not be a candidate for Mayor. However, he changes his mind and while there was much wishful thinking no one was quite willing to say that he did not have a chance to become the Mayor of Birmingham. He did not really begin campaigning for Mayor until a few weeks before the election. In February, the Executive Director cancelled a workshop scheduled for March 8-9 to be held in Birmingham concerning merit employment at the request of Businessmen and other persons who suggested that "Bull" Connor might possibly use this event as a part of his campaign speeches. Perhaps one has to live in Birmingham to understand the degree of concern that Businessmen felt concerning any action in the area of Civil Rights that might give Eugene "Bull" Connor ammunition in his attacks upon the other candidates. Former Lieutenant-Governor Albert Boutwell and Attorney Tom King were running against Connor. Commissioner Jabo Waggoner was also running for Mayor but no one felt that he had any serious chances of victory.

It is significant to those interested in the Alabama Council that the local group in Mobile was able to sponsor a meeting for community leaders to discuss "law and order" and peaceful acceptance of school desegregation. Mr. Paul Anthony, Field Secretary of Southern Regional Council described the efforts made in Atlanta for quiet school desegregation. Many civic leaders attended and responded with interest in a community effort to maintain schools and peace.

I share with you this poem---"HATE" by: Edgar A. Guest----given to me by one of my students last year, Jackson State College, Jackson, Mississippi.

I wonder at the early dawn
When spring is dancing on the lawn
And tulips deck the garden gate
How men can rise from bed to hate.

And when the sun is overhead,
When men at noon are breaking bread,
I wonder then how mortals can Hold hatred for any man.

At evening when the sun slips down
And leaves to moon and stars the town
I wonder then how men can be Disturbed by cant and bigotry.

Since man's allotted years are few
And, oh, so swiftly hurried through,
It seems to me a blunder great
To waste one day of them in hate.

WHAT IS CHARITY?

It's silence when your words would hurt,
" patience when your neighbor's curt,
" deafness when the scandal flews
" thoughtfullness for another's woes:
" promptness when stern duty calls,
" courage when misfortune falls.

From the VCHR Office:

A Director for the Virginia Job Opportunity Bureau has been employed. Mr. Gregory Shinert, former Executive Director of the Governor of Missouri's Commission on Human Rights, is now on the job. Mr. Shinert will be moving to Richmond by April 15, and his job analysis calls for Mr. Shinert to "be responsible directly to the Executive Director of VCHR, but will work within the framework of policies established by the Equal Job Opportunities Committee." Mr. Shinert will occupy an office in the VCHR offices and all mail should be addressed to 17 East Cary Street, Richmond 19, Virginia.

Mr. Ocie Lee Smith, Associate Director of VCHR, has worked into our over-all plans quiet well. He has visited all local councils as well as making contacts in the following areas where we have no councils: Hopewell, Powhatan, Warsaw, Tappahannock, Reedsville and Quinton. Several of these have good possibilities for discussion groups which would lead to local councils. A new council was organized in Radford, Virginia by Mr. Lee on Friday Evening, April 5. Mr. Smith has also visited this group early in March.

From the local councils across the state:

Norfolk continues to be a problem council. Rev. Dan Bowers has not yet been able to develop the type leadership needed for what could be one of our most dynamic councils. Something is lacking in the Norfolk leadership.

Fairfax County has perhaps the most highly developed local council in the South. Their Annual Meeting was tremendous. The latest of their long list of activities is a tutoring service to 105 Negro school children by seventy women who hold College Degrees. (This local council would make for a good piece of written material if a writer could be found to develop their story)

The Richmond-Petersburg Area Council has a Ways and Means Committee which is hard at work seeking to develop an expanded program which would include the solicitation of the Business Community for $20,000.00 Annually for the purpose of employing an Associate Director in charge of Richmond-Petersburg affairs. This Ways and Means Committee is made up of some outstanding community leaders, and it is my opinion that their proposal is in the realm of high possibility.

Strong councils are to be found in Alexandria, Charlottesville and Blacksburg. Good councils are to be found in Fredericksburg, Danville and Arlington. Fair councils are to be found in Lynchburg, Williamsburg and the College group at the University of Virginia. Poor councils exist at Norfolk, Roanoke, Bluefield and the High School councils at Charlottesville and Fairfax County.

From the State of Virginia in general:

Theatre picketting is in full swing in Petersburg, Hampton-Newport News, and in Arlington. Arrests have been made in each locality and test cases are now in the courts concerning Senate Bills 184 and 185 which were anti-picket and anti-boycott laws passed by the Va. General Assembly in 1962.

A Conference has been arranged between Virginia Union University students and Neighborhood Theatres of Virginia for Thursday, April 17. Should these fail to produce favorable results picketting of Richmond's theatres will no doubt follow.

The Arlington County Board voted on February 23 to establish or create a Human Relations Commission. A decision on the scope of the Commission's work and its membership was deferred to April 23 to allow time for more study.

Other happenings around the state will be included in newspaper clippings enclosed.

Prince Edward County:

The State Advisory Committee of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission has received a $3,000.00 grant from the Taconic Foundation to write the Prince Edward Story. The grant has been received by the VCHR. The story will include: I. The setting of the County, II. The chronology of the litigation since 1951. III. The results of the closed schools upon the youth as well as the larger community and will be published by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

In addition to the Prince Edward Story, Michigan State University is launching an exhaustive ($65,000.00) program to test and measure the effects of closed schools upon the 1700 Negro children in Prince Edward.

(Confidential) In addition to the above, appropriations are about to be made, (or it is highly possible that they will be made) for a quarter of a million dollars to establish an accelerated program of instruction for the Negro children of Prince Edward to salvage from the chaos as much as possible and to prepare the children for resuming ~~of~~ public education. An opinion from the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals is pending which is expected to uphold Judge Oren Lewis' decision that Virginia must either operate schools in all counties or in none. The Governor of Virginia is poised to call a special session of the General Assembly to deal with this if and when such a decision is handed down.

General Comments:

VCHR is in a process of growth and expansion or transition. This means that we have now become a potential voice within the State. We have good support from newspaper reporters (not editors), radio, Television and some surprisingly good state leaders. However, with an enlarged staff, the job of the Executive Director is in a state of flux, confusion or simply running himself ragged trying to keep up with all of the demands being made upon him. This includes all of the previous calls he has always gotten and the new demands which are of a more significant nature. However, to keep 20 local councils going, these lesser things remain very important. He expects to try to discipline himself to learn and act upon the more important without straining former images and activities in which he has long been engaged.

Sincerely,

Heslip M. Lee

Civil Rights Role Of State's Leaders Criticized in Talk

By Allan Jones

The executive director of the Virginia Council on Human Relations ridiculed yesterday the possibility of a special session of the General Assembly to cope with the anticipated banning of the poll tax in federal elections.

The Rev. Heslip Lee said the Assembly would only enact new legislation to accomplish the purpose of the poll tax. That purpose, he added, is to keep the number of voters as small as possible.

Mr. Lee spoke at the last in a series of symposiums on the general field of civil rights at Virginia Union University, in connection with the visit of three Barnard College students.

His talk stressed what he described as a lack of civil rights leadership in recent years by Virginia Governors, the legislature and the newspapers.

The fact that the legislature has done nothing about closed schools in Prince Edward county for four years "is indicative that you can't look where you would expect to look for leadership," Mr. Lee declared.

"This is a far cry from the early days of Virginia, when Washington, Jefferson, Patrick Henry and others offered leadership." It is ridiculous to revere these men "only as hollow shrines."

Summing up, Mr. Lee said "Virginia hasn't been pregnant for 100 years as far as political leadership is concerned."

He described the editorial pages of Richmond newspapers as "the biggest funny papers you can read . . . They are anti-United Nations, anti-Supreme Court and anti-federal government . . ."

Richmond still has a segregated ball park, Mr. Lee said, and professional Negro musicians "can't even try out for the Richmond Symphony."

[Edmund A. Rennolds Jr., president of the Richmond Symphony, was asked by a reporter about the organization's policye concerning tryouts by professional Negro musicians. Rennolds' reply was "no comment."]

Challenge to Negroes

It is largely up to the Negroes of Virginia to carry on the battle alone, Mr. Lee said. "But changes . . . will be made. Because of the international and federal climate there is only way out, and that's through the door of the 20th century."

His reference to the poll tax was in response to the implication by Governor Harrison Wednesday that a special session would be called if an anti-poll tax amendment to the United States Constitution is ratified.

Virginia is one of only five states that retain the tax as a prerequisite to vote. Five states have approved the amendment. Three-fourths of the 50 states are expected to ratify the provision before the 1964 elections.

State Sen. Edward E. Haddock of Richmond, another speaker yesterday, said the human rights picture is looking a little better, "but not because of the General Assembly."

The success of the political organization headed by Sen. Byrd has continued because of its ability to control the vote and the lack of equitable legislative reapportionment, he said.

"When we get a new redistricting (the 1962 reapportionment is being litigated) and the poll tax is abolished . . . the organization won't be able to control the vote and there'll be a new day in Virginia," he said.

Teaching Integration Applauded

ARLINGTON — The Arlington Civic Federation Tuesday night called for abandonment of the senior high school section of all-Negro Hoffman-Boston.

The federation also applauded the action of the School Board this week in opening summer teaching positions to Negro teachers — opening the way for the first Negro to teach a white or mixed class.

In asking the closing of Hoffman-Boston, the federation urged the board to provide "adequate safeguards to the employment rights of the Hoffman-Boston teachers."

The board has strogly assured the Negro teachers that they will be protected. Presumably, they would be transferred to the other three high schools.

HOFFMAN-BOSTON has about 230 high school pupils, compared to from 1,400 to 22,000 pupils at predominantly white Washington-Lee, Yorktown and Wakefield.

Its continuation was described as educationally and economically unsound, the federation said. To bring the curriculum and plant up to the level of the white schools would be too expensive to contemplate, it was said.

Problems pointed out by the federation included:

- Only a limited number of courses can be offered; physics and chemistry area available only on alternate years; third - year French is not given every year; and Latin has just been made available this year.
- Neither distributive education nor diversified occupational courses are offered.
- There is no school newspaper and no literary magazine.
- Because of inadequate gate receipts, the athletic program is minimal.

THE SHORTCOMINGS were listed by Charlotte Reischer, chairman of the federation's schools committee, who offered the resolution. It said:

"Because the schools committee committed to the best available education for all the children in the county, we resolve that Hoffman- Boston be closed as a high school as quickly as possible."

The resolution was adopted on voice vote with only three or four dissenters.

Member Robert Reynolds said he was confident that space for the students in the other three high schools, even if they are now over their rated capacity.

James G. Stickland, School Board chairman, has said it would be possible to shift the students without impairing the quality of instruction.

"ANYONE WITH an impartial view who looks at this problem will want to end this deprivation and support Stickland," Reynolds said.

Member John B. Lehman, who sits on the Arlington Planning Commission, said he supported the proposed closing of Hoffman - Boston, but that there would be problems in the changeover. Pupils will need careful attention, he said, in the student mode.

The School Board will meet in closed session tonight to discuss the closing.

Integration Plan Revealed by Mann

ALEXANDRIA — The city government intends to follow the Presidential housing desegregation order and open public housing on a desegregated basis, Mayor Frank E. Mann announced Tuesday night.

Speaking before a large crowd at a meeting sponsored by the Alexandria Division of the Council of Churches, Mann said that all Alexandria public housing and urban renewal projects would be carried out on a desegregated basis.

Mann said the administration was proceeding with plans to build 90 new public housing units "on the basis of [illegible] pancy."

[illegible] and [illegible] over the need for [illegible] public housing for the Negro minorities.

THE ALEXANDRIA Council on Human Relations recently distributed a "fact sheet" which questioned the city's intentions to solve the Negro minority problem and provide more public housing.

During the meeting, many Negroes and whites warned that the city's middle-class Negro population was in danger of "extinction" unless something was done about its housing problem.

Mann, however, contended that the main role of the city government was to provide public housing for the "needy" and not to subsidize a "status" symbol."

He maintained that his administration had done more in the last 18 months to improve the housing situation than any other in the last 10 years.

He said the city would speed up efforts to find land for private investors to build low-rent housing developments.

Court Weighs Redistrict Unit

NORFOLK, Va., April 3 (AP) — Circuit Court Judge Thomas M. Johnston took under advisement today an application for a temporary injunction to halt any elections for the General Assembly this year pending another reapportionment of legislative seats.

Judge Johnston had listened to two hours of arguments for and against an injunction, which was sought by Norfolk attorney Henry E. Howell Jr. for two clients, L. A. Jett Jr. and N. P. Tyler, suing for themselves and "all other citizens similarly situated."

Arguing against an injunction were Assistant Attorney General Robert D. McIlwaine III and Henry Wickham, of Richmond, special counsel for the State in redistricting litigation.

A three-judge Federal court has ruled the General Assembly's 1962 redistricting legislation unconstitutional and has given the State until Jan. 25 to reapportion itself equitably, The State won a stay and the case is before the United States Supreme Court on appeal.

Judge Johnston remarked during today's arguments that the General assembly must have known when it enacted the 1962 legislation that it might be contested. He noted that the redistricting had been criticized time after time as inequitable.

Howell argued that Virginia citizens are entitled to immediate relief from malapportionment and should not have to wait until this year's election puts delegates in office for another two years and senators in office for another four years.

Wickham moved for dismissal of the injunction application on the ground of jurisdiction. Noting that the action was directed against the State Board of Elections and the Norfolk Electoral Board, he said State law provides that such action against the State Board be heard by the Richmond Circuit Court.

Human Relations Unit Calls on All Citizens, Officials

ROANOKE, Va., Nov. 24 (AP).—The directors of the Virginia Council on Human Relations have adopted a resolution calling on "all thoughtful citizens and public officials, including the Governor," to use their influence to open public schools in Prince Edward County.

The directors, meeting in closed session last night befor a general meeting of the council, also adopted a resolution approving President Kennedy's order banning discrimination in Federally assisted housing.

A third resolution commended "the General Assembly and people of Virginia for approving the constitutional amendment removing the restrictive voting registration provision."

The constitutional amendment permits the use of printed voter registration forms rather than the so-called "blank paper registration."

Heslip M. Lee, executive director, gave an account of the council's activities for the year.

Mrs. George A. Eddy, president of the Alexandria Council on Human Relations, described ways that the council has attempted to obtain merit employment for Negroes in the city government there.

The human relations group asked the Mayor and those running for council to sign pledges that they favored employment for Negroes on merit, Mrs. Eddy said. All candidates signed the pledges, she said.

As a result, she said, some Negroes in the sanitation department were promoted to truck drivers.

Start Drive In McLean, Va.

White Pupils Assisting Prince Edward Students

McLEAN, Va. (ACNS)—Bitterly criticizing the closing of Prince Edward County public schools to prevent integration, white students of McLean high school are conducting a fund drive to benefit the locked out Negro pupils.

The McLean students criticized Prince Edward county school officials for closing public schools depriving an entire county of its educational system.

IN THE petition the students said "by contributing to a tuition drive, we are doing what we can to encourage the Prince Edward county Negroes' effort to become responsible citizens. We do want the adult residents of Virginia to know that we are concerned for the future of our commonwealth whose success depends on the education of all its citizens."

The project, it was revealed, was started by Kathy Walsh, 17, a senior of Great Falls, Va. and editorial writer on the school paper, The Highlander. Funds collected during the drive will be sent to the Virginia Teachers Association which is raising tuiton money to enable Negroes of Prince Edward county to attend public schools in other parts of the state.

County Board Votes Human Relations Unit

By Helen Dewar
Staff Reporter

The Arlington County Board decided yesterday to create a Human Relations Commission but warned it would supply no panacea for solution of racial problems.

The Board acted without dissent to set up the official biracial Commission, first in Northern Virginia, after a group of citizens urged that it was needed to gather facts, investigate problems and mediate disputes before the community is confronted with firm racial antagonisms.

Board members expressed skepticism that the Commission would meet its proponents' expectations and agreed that success would depend on makeup of the group.

"Who is on that commission and how it conducts itself can make or break it," commented member Ernest D. Wilt.

A decision on the scope of the Commission's work and its membership was deferred to April 23 to allow time for more study.

The proposal was made initially by Ira M. Lechner, of 2901 N. John Marshall dr., who said the months of picketing at Arlington movie theaters which refused to admit Negroes and the recent arrest of 18 Georgetown University students for trespass at a local diner are indications of the "areas of conflict that lie just beneath the surface."

An official commission, said Gerald B. Greenwald, of 3109 N. 9th st., is one way the County can bring "the prestige of public morality" to bear on solving human problems beyond the reach of courts and other already established bodies.

Unlike Montgomery County, Arlington has no anti-discriminatory ordinance and is governed by a State law, now being contested in Federal courts, that requires segregated seating in places of public accommodation. Hence the Arlington commission would exercise powers of education, persuasion and mediation — "without arrests and civil disturbances," Lechner said.

Board member Roye L. Lowry, while doubting the effectiveness of such a commission, said more should be done to eliminate prejudice.

"If this community is going to be torn apart by racial discrimination then all our other efforts will go for naught," he declared.

The County, Lowry said, must make known and improve its policy of hiring without regard to race. Arlington cannot tolerate school attendance zones drawn "in some obscure fashion" to perpetuate segregation and teachers must be treated equally, he said.

"On paper our policy is correct; in fact, it leaves something to be desired," he added.

Board chairman Thomas W. Richards also questioned whether the Commission would meet the need. If it only collects "well known facts," it would be "spinning its wheels and wasting time." The chairman said Arlington has taken many steps in recent years to eliminate discrimination, including assisting in the successful conclusion of sit-in demonstrations and the Problem Seen Growing

Negro Housing Neglect Charged

ALEXANDRIA — The increasing need for adequate medium rent living facilities for the city's Negro minorities was cited by an official of the Alexandria Council on Human Relations at a press conference Tuesday.

Col. Marion I. Johnson (ret.), president of the local chapter, said city inaction in relieving the situation is "simply leaving the problem unsolved."

One step towards solving the shortage of sufficient housing, Johnson continued, would be for the city "to encourage private enterprise to build more garden and limited-rise apartment buildings.

"There is definitely a great market for new apartment developments rending from $75-$85, if the city would only alert builders interests to these facts," he said.

Johnson said Alexandria Negroes are paying from $85 to $105 for sub-standard housing, not including utilities.

New developments have gone up in Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Johnson added, and, "there is no reason why new areas could not be cultivated here also."

JOHNSON criticized the city's proposed urban renewal projects, saying the Negroes displaced by the plans would not be able to find enough accommodations in public housing.

"The city government does not have sufficient public housing to replace homes of persons displaced by the urban renewal projects as Gadsby Commercial and Residential," he explained.

Equally critical of the Mudtown Urban Renewal Project approved in December, Johnson said there was no substitute offered for the Negro-owned 20 acres planned for the site of the new T. C. Williams high school.

"The city seems to be avoiding these problems," Johnson concluded.

HE ADDED THAT a "fact sheet" stating these and other problems was in the mail to over 800 members of various civic organizations, city officials and community leaders.

Among the statements in it are:

- Only about 100 new homes have been built for Negro Alexandrians in the last 10 years.
- The city has no apartments for Negroes.
- Negro community leaders are forced to find suitable homes outside the city.
- The city has virtually no homes for middle and upper income Negro citizens.

Johnson questioned, "Why has the city not followed any suggestions of the Minority Housing Project Committee (May 1963) specifically with regard to building pilot project apartments and finding homes for middle and upper income Negro citizens?"

Hermitage Dedication Set Friday

ALEXANDRIA — Methodist clergy and laity officials from the Northern Virginia area and the government will be among those bringing greetings at the formal opening of the Hermitage Nursing Center at 7 p.m. Friday.

An open house for the public has been arranged by Mrs. Allen Johnson, resident manager, for Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. The Nursing Center adjoins the Hermitage House for the Aging at 5500 Fairlawn Ave. in the Shirley [illegible] Section of West.

The program for the formal opening includes the following, with A. W. Brittingham presiding:

State of purpose, Dr. James L. Robertson, administrator; invocation, Rev. L. H. Neville, pastor of St. James Methodist Church; solo "Bless This House" Mrs. James L. Robertson; address, Sen. Gerald P. Nye, special assistant for elderly housing, Federal Housing Administration.

LITANY FOR THE opening, Dr. H. H. Hughes, District superintendent, Arlington District of the Methodist Church; delivery of the keys, Clarence Simpson, vice president of Eugene Simpson and Bro. Inc.; greetings from Mayor Frank E. Mann of Alexandria; B. M. Smith, member of executive committee, Hermitage Board; Rev. C. Warner Crumb, administrator, Hermitage House, Richmond; Mrs. W. Cameron Roberts, president, Hermitage Guild; Allen Dickey, architect; Mrs. Helen Holt, special assistant for nursing homes, Federal Housing Administration; address, "The Arms of Compassion," Dr. Bernard Via, executive director, Hermitage Board; acceptance of building, Dr. James L. Robertson; benediction, Dr. Roland P. Riddick of the Arlington Methodist Church.

The new building will accommodate 124 patients. About 20 residents of the Hermitage are now receiving care in the Nursing Center. Sufficient space is being reserved for residents in the Hermitage and remaining space will be allotted to others in need of such care. Applications may be filed through the office of the administrator.

Planners Tackle Backlog

FAIRFAX — The Fairfax County Planning Commission will meet tonight in special session to continue whittling away at the 70 rezoning applications now on file.

Eight deferred requests for apartment zoning in the Lee Magisterial District will be up for consideration.

The commission Monday unanimously recommended against a change from residential to commercial use 5.5 acres on the south side of Lincolnia Road across from Parklawn Elementary School and near the intersection of Old Columbia Pike.

E. C. Brown and S. J. Holland each own one-third of the property. Atty. Ralph Payne represented 39 heirs to the remaining third.

PAYNE SAID the application was for the C-G classification, although no commercial facility was planned at this time. He said this category would permit 30 apartment units per acre but proposed to construct only about 90 units total.

Rev Milton Sheppard, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Church, said he was opposed to residential land now owned by Negroes being commercialized. He cited [illegible] in the county and said an effort should be made to preserve as much as possible.

Representatives from most of the surrounding subdivisions also protested the application.

APPROVAL was given for smaller lots on a 65.5 acre tract fronting on the south side of Columbia Pike across from Belvedere School and extending to Old Columbia Pike.

ATTORNEY Bernard Fagelson, representing Community Builders Inc., said the rezoning was not proposed to increase the number of homes to be built on the property but would permit greater flexibility in arrangement.

Fagelson said 141 houses are planned with lots ranging in size from 11,000 to 37,000 square feet. He said nine acres would be set aside for park land and the subdivision would be similar to Sleepy Hollow Woods and Kings Park.

The commission also recommended approval for a 3.8 acre extension of the shopping center at the intersection of Columbia Pike and Lincolnia Road. The property is owned by Hanson Buchner and a Peoples Drug Store is planned to abut the existing Safeway food store.

New Bureau Offers Firms Advice on Hiring Negroes

By WALTER WURFEL
Star Staff Writer

Virginia businesses seeking advice on hiring Negroes for the first time or in better positions than before can now turn to a Job Opportunity Bureau opening this week in Richmond.

The bureau will give advice on a fee basis, according to its new director, Gregory E. Shinert, of Fairfax. Much of his work will be to help firms that are obligated as prime Government contractors not to disciminate in hiring, he said yesterday. There are about 200 of these in the State.

The office is the first of its type operated by a private group in the South, Mr. Shinert said. It is a branch of the Virginia Council on Human Relations, which received a $30,000 three-year foundation grant to set it up.

The bureau's approach will be to sell the idea that offering Negroes equal job opportunities is good management, according to David H. Scull, of Annandale who is chairman of the council's Employment and Opportunity Committee.

"The hope is to offer something on a businesslike basis to get out of the area of emotion into the practical dollars and sense value that businessmen can be interested in," he said.

GREGORY E. SHINERT

Mr. Scull believes that the good management argument is that way out. "We don't want businessmen to contribute to a cause, but to pay for a service," he added.

Both Mr. Scull and Mr. Shinert said they believe there is a need for the bureau. They admit there has been little vocal demand from Virginia businessmen but believe, like the supporting Field Foundation and civil rights advisers in the Federal Government, that the bureau can interest them in its program.

Although there has been no reaction to the project from State officials in Richmond, both men think the bureau will receive the Governor's support because it can help stimulate industrial development in Virginia.

Mr. Shinert soon will consult with a Business Advisory Committee appointed by the VCHR and then call a conference of business and industrial leaders in June or July.

The director hopes to build a reservoir of qualified workers from Negro colleges and vocational schools.

Mr. Shinert, a soft-spoken Texan who has lived for years in Missouri, has a Bachelor's degree in Human Relations from Catholic University and a Master's degree in the same field from St. Louis University. For five years he was executive officer of the Missouri Commission on Human Rights, a state agency.

Since January he has been an adviser on inter-group relations for the Army Corps of Engineers. Mr. Shinert, 37, and his wife, Elois, and three children have been living at 3739 Poplar drive in Fairfax County. They are moving this week to Richmond.

Virginia Digs Deep In Federal Moneybags

TO LISTEN TO THE almost constant rantings of the Organization group in Virginia's government as well as certain Virginians in the U. S. Congress, we would all come hastily to the conclusion that here in the Commonwealth we are well able to take care of ourselves and particularly our schools without interference from the Feds or use of their money.

On occasion decisions are made to reject federal assistance on the premise that governmental control follows government money and that for Virginia, this is a bad thing. Thus, when the National Defense Scholarship-Loan program got underway some four years ago Virginia's state colleges were reluctant to proceed with their applications until the answer finally came from the State that the colleges could participate but that the state would not provide the matching funds required under the Act. Virginia's colleges, unlike those of many other states, must raise their own matching funds in order to obtain federal scholarship aid.

And so it goes—or did, at least, until the recent release of information concerning the federal aid to schools in the several states. Virginia, we find, tops all states except California in federal aid to schools in federally affected areas. The Old Dominion is reported to have received more than 166 million unclean federal dollars since July 1, 1950 when the program was started, or $98,031,985 for maintenance and operation, and $67,453,039 for school construction.

Two pictures come immediately to view, the first comical and the second pathetic. The first is of Virginia with a closed fist pounding the top of the table and an open hand under the same table. The second, and more serious, picture is that of the public school program here in Virginia, inadequate as it is, without the benefit of federal aid. It's frightening.

Virginia Tuition Grant Applicants Dip Here

By JAMES BAKER

The number of Richmonders getting tuition grants has dropped off each year since the program began, despite an over-all increase of about 1,000 public school pupils each year.

City school officials reported this today, but they hesitated to call it a trend because the state tuition grant program has been in effect only three years.

Roy N. Puckett, administrative assistant to the city school superintendent, said 105 Richmonders got tuition grants during the school year before last and 97 got them last year.

CURRENT SCHOOL YEAR FIGURES

During the current school year, 84 Richmond residents received tuition grants in the first semester.

Puckett presented requests for 82 grants for the second semester to the City School Board at a meeting today. The board approved the grants.

"It's too early to call it a trend, but the facts stand by themselves," Puckett said. "The number of grants has declined each year so far."

The tuition grant program was established by the Virginia General Assembly. Under the plan, a parent who so chooses can get a tax-supported tuition grant to send his child to a private nonsectarian school or a public school outside his home locality.

STATE, LOCALITY SHARE IN GRANT

The maximum grant is $275 for high school students and $250 for elementary school pupils. Of this amount, the state pays $175 for high school students and $150 for elementary pupils. The locality pays the rest.

Puckett said the reason the number of grants had dropped from 84 the first semester of this school year to 82 for the second semester is that a couple of students had dropped out of school. The deadline for applying for the second semester is March 15 and some more applications could still come.

The total cost of the 82 applications presented to the school board for approval today is $10,480.32. The state will reimburse the city for part of this.

Attempting to analyze why the number of grants has been diminishing here, Puckett said one reason seems to be that the private schools are getting more selective. In other words, some people who would like to send their children to a private school and get a tuition grant simply can't get their children in.

PARENTS MOVE TO CITY ZONE

Puckett said some of the current batch of grant applicants are persons who had lived in the adjacent counties, but have moved into the city. In these cases, they kept their children in the county high school they had been attending and applied for a tuition grant.

The list of grant applicants also contains the names of some persons who traditionally have sent their children to private schools and who now apply for the grants because they are available.

The Virginia tuition grant law was set up originally to allow pupils who attended a school that became racially integrated to escape to a private school or a segregated public school. The law was later changed, however, and all references to race were removed. It then became an integral part of Virginia's so-called "freedom of choice" approach to education.

Unit Seeks Equal Job Opportunity

An equal job opportunity bu-au is being organized by the rginia Council on Human Re-tions which says it will be the st such public service in the uth.

The Rev. Heslip M. Lee, the uncil's executive director, said sterday the new bureau will sist employers who are pre-red to hire persons without gard to race or color.

The Editor of the Presbyterian tlook and president of the uncil, Dr. Aubrey N. Brown of Richmond, believes the oject being undertaken here will have great significance throughout the South.

He said an increasing number of employers want to adopt a policy of merit hiring and the new bureau will be designed to help them achieve this goal.

Under professional direction, the bureau will provide a non-profit consulting and personnel service for employers. The council hopes this service eventually will become self-supporting through fees from its clients in business and industry.

Mr. Lee said a $30,000 grant from the Field Foundation of New York has made the service possible. The bureau will function under the guidance of the council's equal job opportunities committee headed by David H. Scull of Fairfax.

Scull said yesterday he hopes to announce employment of a director for the bureau within two weeks. The council expects the service will begin functioning shortly after the appointment.

An advisory committee of Virginia businessmen is being formed to assist the bureau which eventually will interview and test job applicants and refer them to firms which can use their skills.

Once appointed, the director of the bureau will be available as a consultant to work with any plant or community on any aspect of personnel policy, employe relations or staff training.

Inmates Conclude Speaking Course

A course in personality development and public speaking has been completed by 26 inmates at the State Penal Farm for Women in Goochland.

The 14-week course, taught free by Fred E. Fairburn, Richmond's head of the bureau of administrative services in the Public Works Department, was completed yesterday.

Twenty-four inmates at the State Penitentiary will complete the course with graduation exercises Sunday. At Beaumont Training School in Powhatan, 25 boys will complete their course next week.

A Humanitarian's Record

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, who visits Richmond tomorrow, brings with him a collection of honors greater than those awarded to anyone save Eleanor Roosevelt. He has received a score of honorary degrees; the NAACP Springarn Medal, the Nobel Peace Prize, the Theodore Roosevelt Association Medal of Honor; he has been attached to more honorific study institutes than one can name. He has been a member of the State Department, a delegate to the International Labor Conference, the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, the San Francisco UN Conference, the Caribbean Commission, the UN Palestine Commission, the UN Trusteeship Committee; and Special Representative in the Congo. The list runs to 4½ inches of fine print in Who's Who.

After this dazzling recital of honors, there may be little point in discussing Dr. Bunche's pro-Communist record in the years previous to 1940. His admirers just will not believe it. His articles for the Journal of Negro Education, written in 1935-36 while he was a young radical professor at Howard University, bristle with Marxist terminology—with the coming rise of the workers and the downfall of imperialist capitalism. The same attitudes appeared in his first important booklet, A World View of Race, recommended in the official Communist press for its party-line orthodoxy. But in the Thirties, weren't many humanitarians misled?

In fact, Dr. Bunche found Communist ideology so sympathetic to his own that in 1936 he joined in organizing the National Negro Congress, which has five times been cited as a subversive organization—twice by the Attorney General, twice by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, and once by the Subversive Activities Control Board. Dr. Bunche has since declared that the Congress did not become a Communist front until 1939; but has not the Congress' President, A. Philip Randolph, admitted that the Communists contributed money and leadership from the very inception?

During this same period, Dr. Bunche's name appeared on the board of editors of the Communist Party theoretical journal, Science and Society. In 1940 he began to do background studies for the famous Swedish socialist-sociologist, Gunnar Myrdal; and by the time that Myrdal's An American Dilemma appeared, containing certain criticisms of Communist tactics, Dr. Bunche's name was no longer associated with the Communist organ. In the days of the Hitler-Stalin pact, is it not obvious that no humanitarian could profess Communistic philosophy?

Therefore we will assume that Dr. Bunche's record as a humanitarian was gained after he withdrew from his Communist fronts. In 1942 he entered government service as a specialist in African studies and soon transferred to the State Department. Here he became a high official of the notorious Institute for Pacific Relations. He was with Alger Hiss at Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco and was a staunch Hiss supporter while Hiss was being convicted for perjury about his Soviet espionage activities. Was it not natural that Dr. Bunche became part of the UN itself?

In 1948 UN Secretary General Trygve Lie appointed Dr. Bunche to be assistant to Count Bernadotte in the mediation of the Palestine question. When the Count was assassinated, Dr. Bunche took over and won the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts. But his peaceful solution displaced 800,000 Arabs from their homes, and alienated the Near East. Thirteen years later, is not the "UN Emergency Force" still an open sore costing about $19 million every year to maintain?

In 1953 President Eisenhower set up the International Organizations Employes Loyalty Board, an organization which still exists on paper but is little used. On May 27, 1954, Dr. Bunche was called before the board for an extraordinary 12-hour closed hearing. Two former Communists appeared voluntarily and swore that Dr. Bunche was a comrade in the councils of the Party. None of the three principals was indicted for perjury. The board broke its secrecy rule to announce that Dr. Bunche was cleared. After all, could anyone but a humanitarian work for the UN?

In 1960 Dr. Bunche was conveniently in the Congo, when that country dissolved in riot. He became Dag Hammarskjold's representative on the spot who supported the extreme leftist Lumumba in all his works and pomps and was largely responsible for the ugly bias against Moise Tshombe. This winter, when the UN began its final drive to smash Katanga, Dr. Bunche again returned to the Congo as a special overseer and protector of the socialist Premier, Cyrille Adoula. At the conclusion of the UN's peace, it was revealed that the Congo's finances were in ruins, industry at a standstill, food supplies disrupted, and a military coup plotting to upset Adoula, who had no popular support. How much money, how many soldiers will be needed indefinitely in the Congo?

As a humanitarian Dr. Bunche is biased. He is biased towards internationalism and towards socialism. He is so biased towards collectivism that his former friends, the Communists, have never attacked him. Dr. Bunche's record as a humanitarian is a bit too long to fit the list of honors. We hope the audience at the Mosque tomorrow will bear that in mind.

Well, Goodness Gracious

Whatever can Dr. Ralph Bunche mean? Last Friday, we ventured a mild suggestion in these columns that his reputation as a great humanitarian was somewhat overblown. And on Saturday evening, before 3,500 persons at the Mosque, he described us ungenerously as a part of the lunatic fringe, sick in the head, trying to "smear with the Communist taint" certain things we did not understand.

Gracious sakes alive! We were trying only to draw some of the same nice distinctions that Dr. Bunche must make in his own mind. To the casual observer, it might seem that Dr. Bunche's abiding love affair with Marxian socialism has been bound up awfully intimately with Communist projects, to judge from his own statements and his own actions on the public record. However, in point of fact, Friday's editorial noted that Dr. Bunche ceased active association with known Communists about 1940.

In the Thirties, the Communists found Dr. Bunche's Marxism especially congenial. In his articles in the Journal of Negro Education of that not so distant day, he held some remarkable views: FDR's New Deal was not only right wing, but Fascist too; only the Russian workers had succeeded in winning a position of real power in the state; the schools and political constitution of America were tools of the capitalists to keep the workers downtrodden. He lamented that the American Negro had rejected the Communist party, and urged the development among Negroes of radical class consciousness. We went to the trouble to read this stuff last week, and will gladly cite chapter and verse to all who apply.

No doubt Dr. Bunche was merely befuddled and confused in those days; so many humanitarians were. After all, how could a muddled Marxist tell the real Red from the ersatz Pink? Thus Dr. Bunche furiously denied on Saturday that he had ever belonged to any organization which, at the time of his membership, was a front for the Communist party. Any such charge, he said, was an unmitigated lie. So be it, so be it. But our humanitarian friend was an organizer of the National Negro Congress in 1936; and if Communist party functionaries and fellow travelers did not figure prominently in the National Negro Congress from the moment of its organization, the Attorney General of the United States must have been mistaken when he filed a report to that effect in 1942.

A whole lot more might be said by way of reply to Dr. Bunche's umbrageous remarks, but for now we let it pass. Among us humanitarians, sub and otherwise, the rule is to speak genteel. Let Dr. Bunche watch over the Congo; and we will watch over him.

Virginia Digs Deep In Federal Moneybags

TO LISTEN TO THE almost constant rantings of the Organization group in Virginia's government as well as certain Virginians in the U. S. Congress, we would all come hastily to the conclusion that here in the Commonwealth we are well able to take care of ourselves and particularly our schools without interference from the Feds or use of their money.

On occasion decisions are made to reject federal assistance on the premise that governmental control follows government money and that for Virginia, this is a bad thing. Thus, when the National Defense Scholarship-Loan program got underway some four years ago Virginia's state colleges were reluctant to proceed with their applications until the answer finally came from the State that the colleges could participate but that the state would not provide the matching funds required under the Act. Virginia's colleges, unlike those of many other states, must raise their own matching funds in order to obtain federal scholarship aid.

And so it goes—or did, at least, until the recent release of information concerning the federal aid to schools in the several states. Virginia, we find, tops all states except California in federal aid to schools in federally affected areas. The Old Dominion is reported to have received more than 166 million unclean federal dollars since July 1, 1950 when the program was started, or $98,031,985 for maintenance and operation, and $67,453,039 for school construction.

Two pictures come immediately to view, the first comical and the second pathetic. The first is of Virginia with a closed fist pounding the top of the table and an open hand under the same table. The second, and more serious, picture is that of the public school program here in Virginia, inadequate as it is, without the benefit of federal aid. It's frightening.

Equal Job Opportunities Are Goal of New Bureau

The Virginia Council on Human Relations announced yesterday it will establish an equal job opportunity bureau to assist employers who are prepared to hire persons without regard to race or color.

It will be the first such public service in the South, according to the Rev. Heslip M. Lee, the council's executive director.

The bureau will provide, under professional direction, a non-profit consulting and personnel service for employers, Mr. Lee said. The council hopes the service eventually will become self-supporting with fees from its clients in business and industry.

$30,000 Grant

A $30,000 grant from the Field Foundation of New York has made the service possible. This money will be spent over a three-year period.

Dr. Aubrey N. Brown Jr. of Richmond, council president and editor of the Presbyterian Outlook, said the pioneering nature of the project can have great significance throughout the South.

In addition to the 200 Virginia firms which are being required to adopt non-discriminatory employment policies because they hold contracts with the federal government, an increasing number of employers want to adopt a policy of merit hiring, Dr. Brown said.

Many employers view such a policy as economically advantageous, morally right, or both, he added. Negroes have been employed for positions traditionally reserved for whites in businesses throughout the country, including the South, Dr. Brown said.

Smooth Transition

Through the new bureau, Virginia firms can make the transition smoothly, Dr. Brown said.

The bureau will function under the guidance of the council's equal job opportunities committee, headed by David H. Scull of Fairfax.

Scull said he hoped to announce the employment of a director of the bureau within two weeks. The council hopes the service can begin functioning shortly after this appointment.

An advisory committee of Virginia businessmen is being formed to assist the bureau. Scull listed the following as the bureau's principal functions:

(1) Conferences will be held at which executives of Virginia firms can discuss their problems confidentially and hear how other employers have solved similar problems.

(2) The director will be available as a consultant to work within a plant or a community on any aspect of personnel policy, employe relations or staff training.

(3) The bureau eventually will interview and test job applicants and refer them to firms which can use their skills.

The council was founded in 1955 and seeks through education and persuasion to eliminate discrimination and to enhance opportunity for all people.

The Field Foundation was established by Marshall Field III in 1940. Its main interests have been child welfare and inter-racial and inter-cultural relations.

UN's Congo Role Hailed By Bunche

By Conrad Lemon

The United Nations action in the Congo, said a United Nations official here last night, has been the organization's most successful operation in terms of objectives realized.

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, undersecretary of the United Nations, speaking at a program sponsored by the Richmond-Petersburg area council of the Virginia Council on Human Relations, said the Katanga secessionist movement has been abandoned and the United Nations has ended all military action in the province.

"There has been," he said, "no war waged by the United Nations in the Congo." He said the United Nations has used military force only to put down "military outbreaks by the Katangese army."

An integrated audience of about 3,500 people, predominately Negro, heard his talk at the Mosque.

Answered Appeal

The United Nations, Dr. Bunche said, did not force itself upon the Congo but "came to the Congo following an appeal by the Congo government."

When the Belgians left the country in June, 1960, after independence, he said, a vacuum in leadership, both in government and in the military, was created.

"There would have been," he said, "a war in the Congo if the United Nations had not filled that vacuum."

Earlier, Bunche said that Katangan President Moise Tshombe, who has been accused of reneging on promises before, "is now acting in complete earnestness" and all organized resistence has ended.

Tshombe, he said, "has never really wanted to secede from the Congo. His objective is, and has always been, the formation of a . . . loose confederation" and he has been holding out for this form of government, Bunche said.

Even though Tshombe announced secession a few weeks after independence was declared, Dr. Bunche said, "he never really had control over Katanga, especially the northern half.

Pressure Cited

"Tshombe," he said, "never would have mentioned secession if he hadn't had outside pressure from Europeans" who had mining interests in the province.

The central Congo government, the United Nations official said, could survive without the resources of Katanga. United Nations action to force Tshombe to end his secessionist movement has, he said, been based solely on the "principal of unification."

United Nations action in the Congo, he said, has differed little from Union action against the Confederacy during the Civil War."

Dr. Bunche, in an interview, denied that any United Nations funds have ever been used for propaganda purposes to combat opposition to the United Nations operation by some United States factions.

He also denied that former United Nation Secretary General Dag Hammerskjold's family had any connections with mining interests in Katanga.

"Absolute Fabrication"

"This," he said, "was an absolute fabrication."

He further denied that he has ever belonged to any organization which was, at the time of his membership, a front for the Communist party.

"To say that I am or ever have been a Communist or a supporter of the Communist party," he said, referring to an editorial Friday in the News Leader, "is an unmitigated lie."

"It is," he continued, "a tactic of the lunatic fringe of society to smear with the Communist taint things which they cannot understand."

James J. Kilpatrick editor of the News Leader, is, Bunche said, "loose with the truth."

"Mr. Kilpatrick," he said, "rejects decency . . . Mr. Kilpatrick regards Negroes as subhumans . . . Mr. Kilpatrick despises the United Nations."

He is, Dr. Bunche said, "sick in the head" and his thinking is "still anchored in the 19th century, maybe the 18th."

A small group outside the Mosque picketed Bunche's appearance.

Earlier in the day, the board of directors of the Virginia Council on Human Relations adopted a resolution that said the organization deeply deplores "the last-minute efforts of the editor of The Richmond News Leader to attempt to dim the luster of the occasion through an ill-founded, misleading and inhospitable attack on our distinguished visitor . . ."

Sanders Of Georgia Talking Sense

Some Governors Trying For New Image Of Dixie

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When the late Eugene Talmadge was governor of Georgia, he once plowed up a small park in front of the mansion and planted ac ouple of rows of corn and cotton.

When James E. (Big Jim) Folsom ran for governor of Alabama and James (Jimmie) Davis bid for the governorship of Louisiana, they used hillbilly bands complete with jug blowers.

But a new type of governor has sprung up in some southern states, dedicated to giving the nation a new image of the South. One of them, Gov. Carl E. Sanders of Georgia, has some remarkably candid comments on this development in an interview with Al Kuettner of United Press International's Atlanta bureau.)

ATLANTA, Ga.—(UPI)—Here is a transcript of the interview:

Q. Governor Sanders, is there actually a new image of the South?

A. Very definitely. Our people today are thinking differently than they have in many years. This generation recognizes that it's not so much what has happened in the past as what lies ahead that makes the difference.

I think people recognize that the only hope for the salvation of civilization as we enjoy it is to work together as part of the union. The South has many great leaders, but we have allowed too many people to use the old political trick of the demagogues to brainwash us about never forgetting the past and "The War."

North Carolina—while many other states were still living in the past—began to work for progress and just walked off and left the other states.

Q. Georgia has done a complete turnabout on such issues as school desegregation in the past two years. But do you feel the state is enthusiastic about your brand of New Southism?

A. We have come through some critical times with respect and dignity. The reason is that the people have responded to the leadership some of us have given. It took the people to make it a success.

Georgia has a great reservoir of people with fiber and moral courage. They are coming out of the walls these days. The demagogues no longer have their confidence and respect.

There is a great opportunity in the South today and I feel this region will make a much greater contribution to our national government.

Q. Do you see yourself in this national government framework?

A. The answer is flatly no. But let me say this. As chief executive of one of the states, I am cognizant that we do have a national government.

I am not personally committeed or obligated whatsoever to the present administration in Washington or to any other federal official. But as long as I am governor, I am going to work toward a constructive relationship between my state and the national government.

I don't intend to sell my state and its people (to the federal government) or commit them to something I think would not be to their best interests.

The fact that I am governor and that we have people in Washington who happen to be from some other part of the country is not going to make me turn my back and say I can't have anything to do with them up there because it might be politically detrimental to me in Georgia.

I don't believe my people feel that way. I'm not going to ever refuse to work on what I consider is good for the progress and future of this state simply because of some personal animosity or personality conflict I might have with some federal official or another governor.

Q. Are you making this kind of recommendation to other states in the South?

A. I've had contact with most of the other states on the subject of mutual problems. . . I'll say this: We ought to recognize that if we can't present a united front as a nation to the world, it's going to reflect on the image we have with other countries.

Many times we as a state or states become involved in things that are really not doing the country any good. Often they are things that, when you boil them down, don't amount to a hill of beans to begin with.

A man dedicated to constructive leadership won't allow himself to be used or his people to be used by anybody to create the things that make us as a nation, a section or a state look ridiculous in the eyes of others.

Q. Have you given any thought to the rising crime rate in the South?

A. Yes. I think we must develop an image on the state level that we have a militant law enforcement agency that's going to move into local areas when called upon and when necessary to see to it that crime and its counterparts do not flourish.

In the past, we've had too many situations in this state where local law enforcement agencies either turned their head or refused to do anything much about criminal elements.

But we also must have preventive medicine. In this regard, I have created a state youth program that will work with our young people and will attract thousands of volunteer workers. . . I envision an army of citizens . . . people you couldn't buy for a state job but who will work with dedication for our youth.

Q. Do you share with some other southern leaders concern about federal controls over affairs in the states?

A. I think this was an evil influence. But the best way to reverse it is to recognize and communicate to the people that the only way to avoid it is through responsible government.

If the state will have responsible leadership and operate its government on a responsible basis within the framework of the laws that exist in our land and in our state, then you can thwart and repel and resist a further encroachment or invasion by the federal government into purely local affairs.

Q. There is a move at the federal level now to either desegregate schols or withdraw federal aid funds to education in some southern areas where there is a large number of government employes. Does your formula of local responsibility apply there too?

A. I have told people in Georgia, particularly regarding the impacted school situation, that they have got a responsibility—that they must recognize there are certain local conditions related to federal aid. They have to decide whether they are going one way or the other. That's a decision, once it's made, they have got to live with.

If they are going to accept aid, they are going to have to accept responsibility for it and obligate themselves. Of course, they can get out and work twice as hard and do away with certain of these things (like federal funds) that come so easy the other way.

Q. Do you feel federal aid and local controls are compatible?

A. The greatest way we can avoid any further encroachment by our federal government is to make it crystal clear we have to operate the state as responsible people and it has to be done under the provisions of our laws . . . that we are a government of laws, not of men.

In so doing, we can stand up and fight back and do so on a very constructive and reasonable basis. We can say that these are matters we are taking care of . . . that we are setting our own house in order.

If all the governors would adopt this attitude and preach it to their people, we would eliminate much of this idea that anything we do has an overlay of federal supervision and federal intervention.

ASSUMING A UNIVERSAL OBLIGATION

We are always handicapped with the problem of communication, and we are also bound to the symbols of language. I trust that as I speak today, that you will be able to pick up in your minds and hearts something of the same images of thought as I feel so sincerely, and that you will reflect upon my thesis, ASSUMING A UNIVERSAL OBLIGATION, during the days ahead.

Education is the conversation with great minds, the acquaintance with fresh ideas basic to life. This theory of education differs widely from the theory that holds education to be sure facts about a limited area of the tangible world; from the theory that education is merely an adjustment to one's social environment; and from the theory that education is merely the preparation for a job, learning to make a living. These theories, or any one of them, may be the task of one college course, one college curriculum, one graduate degree or one span of formal education. But the basic educational process transpires from the cradle to the grave, and the only diploma which you can receive which denotes that you will have finished your educational process will be a tombstone. Someone has said that a college education never hurt anyone if he or she continues to learn after they leave the college classroom. To be a whole person, or a responsible citizen of the twentieth century world, you will forever be taking the fragments of your experiences and comprising them into formulas which lead to a meaningful life. This means that you and I are not just a skelton propped up in a Biology lecture room, nor a chart of a nervous system on the wall of a Psychology classroom, nor a piece of paper called a contract of the first or second party, nor just a soul floating angellically about a Religious Building. At. least the Christian view of man refuses to have him dissected and abstracted into such dichotomies or irrelevance, but sees man as a whole being, made of eternal substance with the ability to find meaning and purpose for his existence in Christian community with his fellowman. Paul said, "I feel myself under a sort of universal obligation, I owe something to all men. I see in the Gospel of God's Love the very power of God working for the salvation of all mankind." What a concept? What an idea? What a structure upon which to build one's life? In essence it says whatever I do, I shall do for the welfare of all men and the glory of God, to bring about reconciliation, redemption, salvation and proper relationships of all men everywhere. This is an ultimate concept. This means we have an obligation to receive all the facts and information of every existing structure within our complicated society. But, is also means that we must relate this knowledge to an ultimate purpose. This ultimate purpose cannot be limited to a narrow denominational religious program of some particular creed, class, race, nation or group, but must be cast within the dimensions of the universal. This means that we seek always to view life as God himself views and intends it. We cannot have our way or live by our will, but will always subject our favoritisms under the Will of the universal, eternal being whom all mankind can address as God, our Father.

There is nothing easy or simple about this Christian view of life anymore than with any great idea. To confront any great idea is agony; to converse with a great mind is usually emabrrassing, Aristotle said that an education is a painful process. That, we will not deny, I'm sure. I like the definition of education which holds that it is the agonizing, unsettling of ideas so that when they resettle they will be more meaningful and consistent. If anyone thinks this to be an easy process which may be had without a struggle and suffering, then that person has never ventured beyond the shallow water of thinking. Since the Christian Faith includes the total or whole life, it is not easily comprehended, in fact never entirely so. I agree with the following quote, "We who think ourselves converted to the Christian Gospel, and who have indeed entered into its many blessings, should beware lest whole areas of our thought and outlook remain regenerate, so that it is after all not the whole gospel to which we have been converted."

There is nothing simple or easy in reading and understanding the Bible. As Whitehead said, "Whenever a book is written of great worth, you may be quite certain that some reviewer will say it is difficult to read."

There is nothing simple or easy in finding a phiposophy or an understanding of the meaning of our existence on this earth. To attempt to find this means that we must be informed persons. To be an informed human being with a liberated soul means to acquaint one's self with the best of the cumulative ideas of all previous human thinkers, and to carry on a dialogue with living minds, both among living contemporaries and in great books. This is a lifelong process, and can be an exciting adventure.

Notice the struggles and presuppositions which have gone into some of the great ideas of men. In Thucydides, democracy and totalitarianism struggle to the death; in Milton, it is man and the devil. In Archimedes, Galileo, and Faraday, amn masters nature; in Aquinas, reason meets faith; in New on, the earth meets the heaven; and in Freud; man meets his own subconscience. In Plutarch, Machivelli, and Tolstoy, man's powers tear the world apart; in Homer, Shakespeare and Dostoevsky, man's soul is rent by ambition, envy and lust. In Hitler's Nazism, White Supremacy of the blond Germans grapple with anyone who would challenge them; in the Black Muslims, white supremacy is turned completely into reverse and, ironically, we find a philosophy of Black Supremacy. In the great American Democratic Ideal, every citizen has an equal right. However, within the North Georgia community where I grew up, as well as in other parts of this nation, equal rights are denied Negroes, Jews, Catholics, Yankees and Foreigners.

In the Hebrew-Judeo-Christian Faith contained in the Bible record, man confronts God's plan for the human family - Brotherhood of man under the Fatherhood of God. History takes its clue and gets its meaning from the perspective of man's relationship with God. The Christian view of man is that he is made of eternal substance. We are more than leaf on the tree of humanity shooting forth in the spring and falling off in the Fall. As a human family created for a purpose, we are a tree of life, having roots in the eternal past; our trunk of greenery is seen for a short while; our real purpose is mental and spirtual fruit produced as we enter into the continuing fulfillment of our earthly existence as brothers having a universal Father, God. This God, Father of us all and of our Lord, Jesus Christ, is concerned with the total person in all he does. This is the ever-present God, the living God, who works out his purposes within the warp and woof of human history. This God is far different from the god of the Greeks who stood on Mt. Olympus either crying or laughing at the human predicament. This God cares, loves and calls man in every generation into peace with himself and to live together in Brotherhood with wach otheruniversally.

I'm aware of the fact that even within institutional churches there exists worldly standards of success, class division, economic rivalry and secular mind. I'm aware that often churches have concentrated on on a purely spiritual. other-worldly, or individualistic inperpretation of their message and their responsibility, and have often failed to understand the forces which have shaped the society around them. It is often suggested to me that churches have been unsuccesful in weaving into the religious fabric a social ethic which has power over the hearts and minds of man. Nevertheless, with much truth in these accusations, the message of the Christian Church is atill that of reconciling the world unto God and onto each other. It was the message of the church which revolutionized my life, and drew from me a commitment of my life. The church had me on a box at five years old singing Red and Yellow, Black andWhite, all are precious in God's sight! The Church gave me the message that there is no East, West, North nor South in the Kingdom of God. The Church gave me the message that there is no East, West, North nor South in the Kingdom of God. The Church gave me the message that if we take seriously our commitment to this Living God, creator of all things, the center of all things, above all things, beneath all things and within all things, then the gates of Hell could not prevail against the peace and assurance of knowing that somehow within this commitment, that I was in part fulfilling the true meaning and purpose for my life. The Church gave me the message in Galatians 3:28 -"Gone is the distinction between Jew and Greek,slave and free man, male and female, you are all one in Jesus Christ." In Acts 10:34, I read and believed, "And Peter opened his mouth and said, Truly I perceive that God shows no partiality, but in every nation any one who fears him and does what is right is acceptable to him." It was also from the church's message that I received the tempering side of the story, that he who would come after Jesus the Christ, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow him as Lord. Through the total message of the Church, I saw that the element of suffering was contained throughout the history of the people of God, and came to realize that we of this century would be no exception.

To make the message of the Church relevant, we must understand that what the Christian Faith is really demanding of us is an involvement or the commitment of our total lives to continue what was begun in Jesus Christ. If understood in its total setting, I am certain that we could see with Paul that God is actually at work in 1962, just as he has forever been throughout the history of mankind. God committed himself. God identified himself among us in the form of our flesh. He identified himself with us in our own situation in Jesus the Christ, and in so doing brought to us the message of our reconciliation. This works. It works in other realms of life as well as in the Christian community. Justice Douglas of the U.S. Supreme Court says that as far back as the 1930's, the Russians were sending people into underdeveloped countries saying if we identify ourselves with these people we will win them.

Arnold Toynbee recently said during a T. V. appearance that he had just returned from Pakistan and Indonesia. While there, said he, "I could tell every American and European I saw. I could identify them by the dress they wore, by the wheels upon which they rode, or by the houses in which they lived. We knew the Communists were there, but we could not identify them on sight because of their identity with the people and their problems." Here is an atheistic, ungodly form of government exploiting people by borrowing a basic ideal from the Christian Faith and warping it into a selfish, personal end.

The Christ who calls us unto himself says, "Go ye into all the world...identify yourselves with the hungry, the despised, the forsaken, the exploited, and as often as ye do it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me." Someone has well said that what we owe to God is payable to man.

I agree with Henry Sloan Coffin when he says, "Christ's broken and bleeding body on the cross is the exposure of a murderous world. This crucified becomes one with the unrecognized, misused and cruelly treated in every age. The nail-pierced figure on Calvary haunts our race as a symbol of what is forever taking place generation after generation, and of which each of us has his part in."

If we would truly feel a universal obligation to be followers of Christ, then every man, no matter how rich or how poor, no matter of what race or national origin, is entitled to my concern and my assistance, my love and my ministry. Every baby in China or Africa has a claim to my support. Every human being struggling in this world has a right to my helping hand. There are no aliens. There are no foreigners. There are no enemies for whom I should not care. Whatever virtue, whatever ideal, whatever vision, whatever hope, whatever comfort, or whatever right I claim for myself which I deny to any other person is unwholesome and unjust. Every man's goodness uplifts me. Every man's vice infects me. Every man's disease, perversion, greed, hatred, prejudice and contempt exercises a pull upon me. To love only my family, my color or my friends is no virtue, but selfishness, but to love every man is Christianity as revealed of God in Jesus Christ our Lord. Any religion which professes to be concerned with the souls of men, and is not concerned with the slums that damn them, the economic conditions which strangle them, and the social conditions and discriminatory practices which cripple them is a sick religion awaiting death and burial.

Following your formal education you will be expected thereafter to commence to apply your learning and philosophy of life to the functioning structure of our society. I would like for you to think of this arena of life as having to do with two halves of a circle. One side has to do with emperial stuff, namely, an emperical formula expressed in a quantitive analysis and dealing with phenominal matter. Simply put, you will deal with houses, automobiles, electrical appliances, and thousands of items at market value. But let me suggest that life has another side, and on this side of life you will deal with such things as love, joy, peace, kindness, patience, tolerance, self-control, personalities, attitudes, community and human relationships. This latter side of life is just as real, just as important, and even more so, than the first side of which I spoke. You must deal with this latter side of life. You can ignore it, neglect it, or take for granted that others will take care of that side. And, if this is the way you deal with the human relations side, then it is just that certain that you will contribute to a cold war of fear, distrust, misunderstandings and prejudice - broken relationships among mankind.

You can contribute to the positive side of life through Christian Love. And, after all, it is from this latter side of life that we get the answers which determine whether we use our scientific accomplishments for wellfare or warfare, whether for good or for ill. The greatest problem facing your generation is that you have inherited a responsibility of facing a world of people who, for several generations, have spent most of their knowledge, energies, monies and talents in dealing with the emperical, phenominal side of life, while largely ignoring and neglecting the side of Brotherhood-peace and true Love. What has been done in the name of peace has too often been done selfishly without any sense of a universal obligation. You are caught up in one of the most fantastic races of developing your minds, talents and energies on the side of the scientific at the expense of a sincere, all-cut effort to develop a sensible and sane moral and spititual philosophy of life which would seek to make whole the whole world. I propose that the moral and spiritual side of life, if made applicable to give guidence within the emperial and material realms of living, and, if seen as a universal obligation, both to the cultured Greek and to the ignorant savage, is the thermostat which wil. determine whether or not we develop civilization into a community of Brotherhood or whether we annihilate mankind from the face of the earth. Remember, I have not divided life into a dichotomy. Life is not an either/or, but the Christian Faith speaks to the whole existence, the total life. I am for the advancement of the scientific field, but not at a continuing neglect of Brotherhood, peace and improved human relations.

Go out into life, and become concerned with all of it. Do not live a schizophrenic life, that is religiously on Sunday, without applying Christian love to the things you do during the other six days of the week.

Demand of your Minister that he preach a full Gospel, and challenge him when he shuns life where it is lived.

I have tried to say that true Christian Love frees us from all fears of life, and gives us a universal perspective for understanding the meaning of our existence. I now trust that you haven't picked up the wrong symbols and heard me say other than that.

The response is yours, and respond you will. How? Perhaps in one of four ways. One, with sheer apathy and a growing feeling of being unconcerned. Many people today are responding in this way. Two. Look out for number one of respond selfishly. You will be joining a big crowd if this your response. Third. Enjoy each moment and get all you can from it with no feeling connected to a past or a hope for a future. Fourth, respond with a sense of a universal obligation to glorify God and be his true disciple, seeking to fulfill His Will and help bring in his kingdom on earth as it is in Heaven.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

March - May 1963

As follow-up to the Conference on Training Programs and Jobs for Rural South Carolinians held jointly by SCCHR and The Penn Community Services, Inc., Feb. 13, 1963, Mr. L. S. James has been busy esteblishing on-the-scene contacts with leaders in the predominantly rural counties-- especially those declared eligible for assistance under the Area Redevelopment Administration (ARA) program. (There are 25 such counties to date.)

Unfortunately, the Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has failed to cooperate after it was discovered by SCCHR that Negro farm agents had not been given adequate information about the new federal program to assist low-income farm families. Reports were made directly to Washington through the National Sharecroppers Fund, to the RAD Advisory Committee. Investigations have been made.

Mr. James' activities have included:

Case studies of six farmers rejected for loans by local offices of the Farmers Home Administration were sent to Washington, returned to local officials who reported to Mr. James that reinvestigation indicated that all were still ineligible. Later, special investigations were made by white federal agents. As a result, at least one of the rejectees has already been accepted for a loan. (See Exhibit I).

An article is being written by Mr. Ben H. Bagdikian, to appear in the Saturday Evening Post, which will include information about these cases. Hopefully, the article may call national attention to the plight of low-income farmers, many of whom are Negro.

With the assistance of the S.C. Credit Union League, a county-wide credit union is being organized in Jasper County.

A special conference with both national and state officials of the Farmers Home Administration explored the availability of loans for rural housing. Findings and information are being distributed.

Intensive communication is being continued with leaders and community groups in the following counties where one or more public meetings have been held and efforts made to set up definite projects: Bamberg, Barnwell, Calhoun, Colleton, Fairfield, Hampton, Jasper, Lee, Orangeburg, Sumter, Williamsburg, Beaufort and Clarendon.

Mr. Jac Wasserman, project director of the National Sharecroppers Fund (NSF), visited all of the counties listed above with Mr. James during the first ten days of May, 1963. (See Exhibit II).

Mr. Wasserman interpreted all of the important Federal programs before ten different mass meetings. He discussed how to use provisions of Area Redevelopment Administration, Manpower Development and Training Act, and Farmers Home Administration, and how to set up credit unions and cooperatives.

As a result of these discussions, committees were selected in each county to contact ARA County Committees to seek membership and to learn the nature of the county Overall Economic Development Programs (OEDP). One county became interested primarily in getting aid for development of a community center for family recreation.

There have been two outstanding state-wide program offerings this quarter which have been geared to SCCHR's continuing effort to relate effectively to mainstream needs and opportunities. For a report of the first of these, the Spring Conference of the S.C. Student Council on Human Relations, see Exhibit III. The second of these is described in the following paragraphs.

Citizens Consultation on Urban Problems and Potentialities

"A major breakthrough" was the enthusiastic description given by Dr. Frederick C. Jones, director of social action of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of the Consultation held at the Wade Hampton Hotel in Columbia, May 2, 1963. This meeting was the culmination of a series of interviews, small group meetings and much hard work!

Approximately 85 white persons, many of whom have never seriously communicated with Negroes, and few of whom had maintained any contacts with them since the 1954 Supreme Court Decision on public school desegregation were participants in this historic consultation of 150 persons. As far as can be learned, this biracial consultation is the only such meeting ever to have been held in a hotel in South Carolina.

In addition to those individuals and groups listed on programs, persons attended who are members of the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the S.C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, the S.C. Federation of Women's Clubs, most of the protestant denominations, private as well as public social agencies, several men's service clubs, et al. There was both press and television coverage of the Consultation.

In the closing session this summary statement was made, "We have made a long hard search to find common problems on which to unite our efforts; today we are convinced that there is nothing more common to all of us as South Carolinians than ignorance; we shall work together to eliminate it! Truthfully it might have been added: poverty, poor housing, cultural deprivation, underemployment and unemployment are all a part of a vicious circle on which South Carolina has revolved so long that nothing short of determined self-help and national assistance will suffice. (For program see Exhibit IV. Summaries of the symposium and of the workshops are being prepared for follow-up program uses. Upon completion, copies will be sent to SRC).

Program Activities

Both before and since the Citizens Consultation, the work of the SCCHR committees on education, economics and employment, and community affairs have been focused and coordinated as never before.

The staff worked together to enlarge participation in meetings held by each of the three committees, at which plans were made for the workshops held in the afternoon sessions of the Citizens Consultation. These committee meetings were preceded by many interviews with staff of governmental and lay organizations working in related fields. Also contacted directly were key persons in citizens opinion-forming organizations having similar interests. All of this was done to try to establish awareness of common problems and potentialities, and the necessity for working together across racial lines. It was hearenting to see the fine responses. However, there were numerous amusing examples of unreadiness. These imposed limitations on the outreach which was realized, but in most cases can be overcome later.

The Committee on the Church and Human Relations

This committee met twice during this quarter for an evaluation of the pilot projects initiated in the Columbia area and for a projection of plans for the future.

A report from the recently organized high school group in Columbia was heard with an approval to continue this project. It was noted that this group was the first venture of SCCHR into the high school field. This group of some 35 students meets regularly on a bi-monthly basis for discussion of common problems. At present a community project, possibly in the nature of a work camp, is being investigated by a student committee.

The Columbia Women's Interdenominational Interracial Fellowship has met on a mohthly basis during this quarter, focusing on the role of the church in meeting community needs. At the last meeting of the group the director of urban rehabilitation for Columbia suggested community projects for the church in the neighborhoods in which the rehabilitation program is working. It is hoped that members of this group will give volunteer service as the program of the Community Affairs committee of SCCHR broadens to include services with culturally deprived groups.

At the May meeting the urgency for community action to step-up processes od desegregation at all levels was noted. The chairman of the committee on the church and human relations was asked to interview the Mayor of Columbia concerning the appointment of a bi-racial committee for the city. This was subsequently done and it was found that an informal citizens committee was being called together and would continue to meet on occasions.

The need to expand the work of this committee to include other communities in the state has been discussed. It was suggested that Charleston would be an important next city for a functioning committee on the church and human relations because of the pending public school desegregation suit in that city.

The Rev. Fred M. Reese, SCCHR president has continued to hold together a group of 14 white ministers who were instrumental in preparing the statement signed by 122 ministers relative to the admission of Harvey Gantt to Clemson College. Under his leadership, a bi-racial meeting has been held with Mr. Lester Bates, mayor of Columbia. Also a local project in Columbia seeking non-traditional jobs for Negroes is being undertaken by this group.

Citizenship Committee

This committee submitted to Governor Russell a letter which had been carefully planned by a subcommittee headed by Courtney Siceloff. Thoughtful members throughout South Carolina had participated in determining the nature of the matters to be presented for the new Governor's consideration. Fred Reese drew the final draft. Due to a very heavy schedule, an appointment with the Governor to discuss the proposals set forth in the letter was postponed until June 12. Those serving on the committee to confer with Governor Russell are: Fred Reese, Earl Middleton, SCCHR first vice president, the Rev. J. Sherrard Rice, second vice president, John Montgomery, editor of the COLUMBIA RECORD, and I.P. Stanback, manager of the N.C. Mutual Life Insurance Company, Columbia, S.C.

Student Activities

In preparation for desegregation, special work with a student committee and with the chaplains at the University is now in process and plans have been initiated to bring the University student leaders and the Negro students seeking admission together for a conference prior to the opening of the University in September.

Recruiting or "public relations" committees from Clemson and USC have been set up to interview high school guidance counselors, principals, prospective students or parents, thus hoping to encourage qualified Negro students to apply to these two institutions. To date there have been few persons to interview. It is understandable, although regret table, that there is great reluctance as yet on the part of Negro students in South Carolina to take this step. The plan of "quiet" recruiting and consultation, it is hoped, will be stepped up in the coming year, for encouragement will be needed for a long time to come.

Panels of student speakers from three colleges presented programs in Negro high schools in the Columbia area on "Preparing for College."

These discussions included numerous questions about the University of S.C. and brought enthusiastic response from students and faculty.

Two one-day work camps were sponsored for students in the Columbia area during March and April, working cooperatively with members of a Negro church in the community and with Richard Ramsay, of the American Friends Service Committee, who initiated the project on earlier visits to the state.

One of the members of the SCSCHR committee on political study and action circulated a petition at Clemson, opposing a bill before the S.C. General Assembly to provide tuition grants to private schools. He personally presented this at a public hearing on behalf of some 180 Clemson College students. This hearing was an historic occasion. In answer to a direct question the student answered simply, "yes, I do believe in integration." According to the governmental affairs reporter in THE STATE newspaper, this was the first time on the floor of the legislature that any white South Carolinian had publicly stated that he believed in integration. Also, according to this reporter, certain legislators confided that they were "shaken" by this statement and of course angered. For them it may be that this student symbolized the future which many political leaders cannot accept.

Student communication and exchange programs have stepped up during the spring. Deputations from Clemson have visited Claflin College; Morris College provided a program for Westminster Center at University of S.C.; the Columbia Student Council (four colleges-- two for which students and two for Negro students) participated in a joint program with Voorhees College students on their campus.

Mr. Maxwell Hahn and Judge Justine Wise Polier visit S.C.

SCCHR set up a schedule of visits to four Negro private colleges: Allen and Benedict in Columbia, Morris in Sumter, and Claflin in Orangeburg.

Two group meetings were held by SCCHR, at dinner meeting and a larger group meeting at the Methodist Center. Through informal conversation, Mr. Hahn learned first hand of conditions in S.C. with which SCCHR is concerning itself.

A trip was made to Sumter and Clarendon counties where Mr. James introduced these guests from the Field Foundation to rural families of which case studies had been made.

Shote-term Staff Service

The Rev. Charles Webster, who lost his job at Clemson College where he was director of the Baptist Student Union, was employed for short-term service by SCCHR. He visited Coker College in Hartsville, Lander College in Greenwood, and Newberry College in Newberry in an effort to recruit participants for the SCCHR Spring Conference.

Also, he spent some time in Columbia and made contacts in Anderson, Greenwood, Greenville interviewing ministers and church members identified by them as possible participants in the Citizens Consultation, held May 2. In Columbia, he succeeded in getting representatives from several of the men's service clubs and from the Columbia Roundtable to attend the Consultation.

Inter-organizational Cooperation

In addition to the cooperation achieved in the Citizens Consultation, staff members encouraged attendance at a conference of the Methodist Board of Christian Social Concerns, the first to be integrated. Gil Rowland delivered the keynote address.

Faculty members and students of social science departments in the Negro colleges and church people of both races attended the annual S.C. Welfare Forum. The Forum president asked SCCHR to extend invitations to these non-members.

Mr. James took part in the annual conference of the S.C. Congress of Colored Parents and Teachers and of the Palmetto Education Association.

Mrs. Ledeen attended the annual meeting of the Columbia Council of United Church Women and Mrs. Spearman worked with the S.C. Committee on Children and Youth at its annual conference.

Field Trips and Local Councils

The executive director has visited local councils in Sumter (3), Greenville and Rock Hill this quarter. Intensive work was done with council leaders and community contacts were made.

Sumter is focusing on securing admission of Negroes in the technical education center. Committee (TE) adamant, so far.

Greenville has been using a meeting room in the Citizens and Southern National Bank, presenting timely programs and has attracted a larger membership. Through efforts of the council a Negro has been employed by the Greenville post office. Local power structure is active and interested. Breakthroughs should not be hard.

Rock Hill continues to meet in a church basement, but has added some leaders from the white community who are working behind the scenes to open public accommodations.

A new council has been organized in Aiken.

After the NAACP announced in May plans to demonstrate in eight cities, close contact has been maintained to keep abreast of developments and to promote the organization of bi-racial committees.

On a visit to Spartanburg, the executive director found the mayor already planning to negotiate.

On a visit to Charleston early in the quarter, it was found that there was considerable unrest and determination by Negroes to move ahead. At the end of the quarter there was evidence of much ferment over the state, A few mayors were showing a desire to forestall demonstrations, but little more was known publicly. The NAACP announced a strategy meeting for June 5.

RURAL HOUSING LOANS
of
Farmers Home Adminsitration

-a summary by PENN COMMUNITY SERVICES
Frogmore, S. C.

The purpose of the loans is to provide safe, sanitary and decent housing in rural areas where income is not enough for bank loans.

I. Repairs or Improvements to Rural Housing

Loans can be used to provide:
- sanitary water supply
- toilet facilities
- addition of room or rooms
- repair of roof or structural supports of house.

Interest: 4% per year on unpaid amount

Requirements:
1. must have proof of ownership of property
2. must be unable to borrow the money from a bank
3. must have adequate income to pay family expenses, to meet payments of debts he already has, and to be able to repay the FHA loan
4. no earlier debts to FHA which were not paid in full
5. plans- must furnish a drawing of floor plan of house to show where repairs or new rooms will be made

Amount of loan- Depends on repairs. Some loans can be stretched over 33 years. However, there are certain advantages to shorter time repayment:
1. for loans of $1,500 or less, and to be repaid within ten years, a promissory note can be given if the perwon meets these additional requirements:
   - A. has a good reputation for paying debts promptly
   - B. sufficient income to meet all obligations
   - C. on basis of normal value, the person has equity at least equal to the amount of the proposed loan in assets that would be acceptable as securtiy for the loan, in case security were required.
   - D. proof of ownership, but a title search not required.
2. for loans of more than $2,500 and to be repaid in more than 10 years, a mortgage on the property will be required. This will require a title search by a lawyer to get a clear title with warranty deed for 40 years; the average cost of this search will be about $100, more or less

II. Building a New Home

Requirements: same as above

Amount of loan for new house:

Loan can go up to 100% of cost, but often is less. To get a loan for a large percentage of house cost, the following factors are important:
1. Location- if on a paved road and in a settlement of houses, the appraisal will be higher; a remote house is also eligible
2. Size- size should be adequate for family. Should be low-cost, adeuate, minimum housing. Some low-cost house plans, which give the most space for the least money are available in FHA office; Penn also has some.
3. Cost- should be moderate, not deluxe. Should be in price range of neighbors.
4. Income- the amount of income of the applicant is considered security, as well as the property itself. The more adequate the income, the more likely the loan will cover the cost of the house.
5. Helpful, but not essential, is a farm of several acres; this will increase the appraisal value.

Applicants will need:

1. Clear title- warranty deed for 40 years
2. plat- location of boundaries of propery; if legal description is adequate, a plat can be drawn to scale by any qualified person
3. specification- drawing of the house
4. cost- more than one bid on the cost of building the house.

III. Special Provisions for Elderly (62 or over) or Handicapped People

A. A loan, a grant, or a combination loand and grant will be given under the following rules (Section 504)

1. The maximum anount is $1000.
2. Do not have sufficient debt paying ability for an adequate housing loan.
3. Be in urgent need of repairs to house to make it safe and to remove the helath hazards to applicant, his family, or community. (This can include repair and installation of sanitary toilet facilities, measures to insure ssanitary water supply, roof maintenance, window screens, probably also a sage heating arrangement.)

B. Loans for adequate housing

Elderly people must meet the same requirements as other applicants, with one exception: they may get a relative or another person to sign the note with them; that the other person must be willing to repay the loan, if the elderly person cannot.

FHA loans:

1. There are many kinds; this summary tells about only one--rural housing loans. Two FHA bulletins are enclosed-one on rural housing loans, and the second on other FHA loans. All FHA loans are handled in the same office.
2. All applicants are handled on an individual basis.
3. To get a rural housing loan, you need bot be a farmer or live on a farm; you can earn your moeny from other work.
4. There is not mimimum size for property. Where the lot is less than 100'x200' and has a well and a septic tank, the property must be approved by the health department. However, the larger the tract, the more chanceoof getting a larger loan.
5. A person does not have to have a salary or regular wages to get a loan. People who work part year-as in farming or oystering-are eligible.
6. It was indicated that some people who have recently built homes in Beaufort County could have qualified for the low-interest FHA loans.

SCSCHR Spring Conference

The spring quarter brought to a close the most significant and exciting year in the life of the SC Student CHR. The Student Council in its entire program has felt a real sense of involvement in history. There has been a realization that processes of preparation for desegregation must be accelerated and continued on a broad basis, that at the college level there must immediately be more than mere tokenism, that a much greater involvement of students in the life of the community and state is a tremendous need in South Carolina because of the obvious lags in education and in economic development. This sense of urgency and involvement was apparent in the discussions at the spring conference, held April 19-21 at Penn Center, Frogmore, with 67 students from eleven colleges in S. C. participating. At one evening session a large group from a nearby college attended, bringing the total in attendance to approximately 110 for the week-end.

Three of the workshop groups included areas of study which have been of continuing emphasis in conference programs: Preparation for Desegregation; Student Involvement in Politics, and Students at Work in Communities. Two additional discussion groups were helpful: International Students on the Campus, led by two international students in attendance at the conference; and one on Feelings and Fears, designed especially for new students who had not before participated in an interracial conference.

The workshop on Preparation for Desegregation focused on the positive and negative factors in the Clemson situation and anticipated the desegregation of the U. of S.C. in September.

Student Involvement in Politics concerned itself with specific trends in S.C. and heard a report of the SCSCHR Political Study and Action Committee which encouraged a study of the private school tuition-grant bill introduced in the S.C. General Assembly in January.

Students at Work in Communities set up an education project which hopefully may result in relating college students to one of the great needs in South Carolina--the school drop-out. A week after the conference, a special Education Committee met to map out plans. It is now in the initial stage of securing data in local communities. In the fall it is hoped that some plan for tutorial work with drop-outs or potential drop-outs may be developed.

HUMAN RELATIONS BULLETIN

ISSUED BY THE

NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
121 East Third Street — Charlotte, North Carolina

T. FRANKLIN WILLIAMS, M. D.
Chairman

HARRY S. JONES
Executive Secretary

This bulletin is issued periodically for the purpose of disseminating information on problems, programs and progress in the field of human relations. Readers are encouraged to send items suitable for inclusion in this bulletin.

NEGROES DEMONSTRATE FORCEFULLY AGAINST SEGREGATION

Perhaps what touched off the massive Negro demonstrations this month was the refusal of two restaurants in Raleigh to serve the Liberian ambassador to the United Nations. This occurred on May 1st, and a week later the demonstrations began. They spread quickly to Greensboro, then to Durham and High Point. Lesser demonstrations have occurred in Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Fayetteville and Wilmington. Hundreds have been arrested, mostly on the charge of trespass.

The driving force behind these demonstrations is the pent-up frustrations and bitter disappointments with the slow pace of desegregation since the Supreme Court decision of 1954. Token compliance is not enough. The gains in equality that have been made have served only to strengthen the determination of Negroes to achieve full equality, and to enjoy first-class citizenship--now.

We commend those business and civic leaders of our State who, individually or through the organizations they represent, have called for the immediate end of racial discrimination and segregation in places of public accommodation. There is no other way of restoring peaceful and amicable relations between the races.

As an example of this intelligent and progressive leadership, we quote below the statement of the directors of the Raleigh Merchants Bureau who were, we believe, the first such group to speak on this issue:

"God-fearing people, as responsible citizens, and all people of good will, must face the fact that peace in human relations is essential. Being charged with the responsibility of offering leadership to business in the community of Raleigh, we are convinced that we should, without further delay, remove all policies in both government and business which deny rights and services because of race.

"The overriding challenge now confronting every Raleigh business person is to do these things that would further human relations and the continued economic growth in Raleigh."

GUILTY--OF TRYING TO BE SOMEBODY

A young Negro couple was convicted in City Court in Raleigh on May 3 of trespass charges brought April 7 during an attempt to integrate the white seating areas of the Ambassador Theatre. "What they are really guilty of," said Judge Pretlow Winborne, "is trying to be somebody, and who should deny them that right?"

Warren Veasey and Ruby Mae Lawhorn, a Shaw University student, were ordered to pay the costs of court. They gave notice of appeal to Superior Court and bond was set at $50 each.

"I think wisdom in this case would be to say 'guilty' and stop there," Judge Winborne declared, "but I usually open my mouth when I should keep it closed. The defendents were charged with trespass," he added, "but I don't think a soul that is within the sound of my voice would deny that what they are really guilty of is trying to be somebody."

--from an AP dispatch from Raleigh

A FEAR BARBECUED, ITALIAN STYLE

There was something useful for communities troubled by desegregation problems in a story from Raleigh yesterday. Twenty-two Negroes came into a restaurant and sat down at tables. We will let the president of the firm, Jack Griffith, take the story from there: "(They) were served. They conducted themselves as ladies and gentlemen and were treated as such."

Griffith said about 15 white patrons eating in the restaurant "did not appear to be disturbed in any way." Some of the white patrons "complimented the management on the manner in which it was handled.

The restaurant official said he took the step to cooperate with Raleigh's bi-racial committee and the merchants' bureau in trying to settle the racial problem. Then he made a statement that required courage and conviction from a person operating a business where feelings about desegregation are far from unanimous: "I would like to thank all my patrons for their business," he said, "and if they feel they can no longer support us because of integration, we still wish to thank them for their past patronage."

Individual decisions were involved here to an ideal degree. The decision by the Negroes to be orderly or disorderly; the decision to stay or leave by the white patrons; the decision of the management to serve Negro patrons or have them arrested; the decision by the owner to no longer remain aloof from the problem but to do something constructive about it, even at the risk of losing business.

We don't know how you feel about it, but Gino's Italian Restaurant on South Salisbury Street in Raleigh has a steady customer next time we get to the capital, even if it means pizza for breakfast.

--an editorial in the Charlotte Observer

HOW LONG MUST NEGROES WAIT FOR FREEDOM?

Here, in a juvenile court judge's office, is the whole story of Birmingham today, the Negro side, the white side, the heart-breaking human side.

Judge Talbot Ellis sits behind his desk. He has crisp grey hair, a clean cut profile. He speaks in a low, kindly voice. On the other side of the desk is a 15-year-old Negro youth, Grosbeck Preer Parham. He is big for his age. He was arrested five days ago for participating in the demonstrations which have wracked the city.

"Now, Grosbeck," said the Judge, "you know violence in the streets is not the answer to this. Just the other day, Attorney General Kennedy said this problem 'won't be solved in the streets.' And I often think of what one of the founding fathers said, 'There is no freedom without restraint.' Now, I want you to go home and go back to school. Will you do that?"

No answer. The boy stares at the judge, unblinking, through his spectacles. His jaw juts forward. Judge: "Are you mad at me, son?" Boy: "Can I say something?" Judge: "Anything you like." Boy: "Well, you can say that about freedom because you've got your freedom. The constitution says we're all equal but Negroes aren't equal."

Judge: "But your people have made great gains and they still are. It takes time." Boy: "We've been waiting over 100 years."

HE SOLD INTEGRATION TO NITECLUB OWNER

Booked for a week's engagement in the swank Copa niteclub in Atlanta, Negro singer Clyde McPhatter was told on his arrival by Negro leaders that they planned to picket the club during the week because the club would not admit Negroes.

A lifetime member of the NAACP and a supporter of civil rights organizations, McPhatter set about to remedy the situation. "I felt that the owners should be given an opportunity to rectify their ways," he said. "When I first talked with the club manager he was adamant in his attitude toward barring Negroes as paying guests. But when I showed him that previous white headliners had failed to draw the expected crowds and he needed to come up with new ways to pack his club.

"When I pointed out the breaking down of jimcrow barriers throughout the South in schools, public places and on transportation lines he relented. A picket line wouldn't solve any of his or my problems, so he agreed to just quietly let any orderly guest in."

On opening night about 15 Negro parties were admitted without incident. One waiter was heard to remark that "they were much better behaved than many white parties he had served and their tips ran higher than he was accustomed to."

"NEGRO CRIME" IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

As a result of recent events there appears to be a methodical campaign, directed from segregationist sources, to make it appear that Washington is one of the most dangerous cities in America. It might be instructive to put things in perspective.

Crime in the capital usually means "Negro crime." Those who generalize about it take pains to point out that the Negro population of the District of Columbia is over 54 per cent. From this statistic you are supposed to draw several conclusions: . . that Negroes are more violent than white men, and that they are not "ready" for equal rights. . .

The Negro population of Metropolitan Washington, which takes in suburbs in Maryland and Virginia, is 24 per cent--not much different than it was 100 years ago. While the crime rate is admittedly bad, some people are exaggerating it to prove their point about Negro behavior.

The FBI Uniform Crime Reporting statistics show that Washington, instead of being first in crime, ranks 13th among the nation's 25 largest cities. While there was a nationwide increase in crime of 7 per cent for 1962, in Washington the rate of increase went up 4.9 per cent.

NEGRO RIGHTS AND THE POLICE

Too often policemen have considered it their duty to help "keep the Negro in his place." There are indications that this attitude is changing. At a recent conference of the Southern Police Institute in Louisville, Kentucky, the following comments were reported:

A police chief from a small town told a reporter after meeting Roy Wilkins of the NAACP and James Farmer, the national director of CORE: "I had expected to meet two demons. But after talking to them, I can see that they are intelligent people. They're only doing what I would do if I were in their place. Now I know what I am facing."

The chief of the Atlanta, Georgia, police department, Chief Herbert J. Jenkins, said: "The time has come, it is here now, when an individual cannot be denied any public or official right or privilege because he is a Negro. The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court is the law of the land. . . Regardless of what I think personally, I am prepared to yield to the judgement of the Supreme Court.

"Why do I say that? Because as a policeman there is no other position that I can honestly take. . . But if a police officer is so thin-skinned that he is afraid of being called a Negro-lover, because he is doing his duty, then he is in the wrong kind of business and should follow some other vocation."

SCHOOL INTEGRATION WOULD HELP WHITES

Those who favor school integration do so, generally, because of a desire to improve the lot of the Negro. Though I agree with this, I would like to argue the case for integration from a different vantage point: public schools should be fully integrated to improve the lot of the white children.

The extent of prejudice, misinformation, and oftentimes, abject snobbery among the white children in junior and senior high schools here is saddening. For instance, it seems to be generally believed that the ideals of the Black Muslims are the ideals of all Negroes; that the Negro race is basically inferior; that full opportunities, educational and professional, are open to the Negro. . .

Prejudice and mistruths are being handed down from one generation to another, and are perpetuated in our middle and upper-middle class segregated school environment. If we do not want to raise another generation of white supremacists, let's give these youngsters a chance to learn the facts by allowing them to learn with, talk with, laugh with children of another race, and to understand that, in reality, all men are created equal.

18th ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT FOR CITI

A growing number of young people today believe the forces at work in public affairs are beyond their control: the immmensity of the problems confronting society appear so overwhelming as to make any action on their part seem inadequate. But the solution of these manifold problems—and indeed survival itself—requires the utilization in public life of the energies, wisdom and knowledge of each of us.

You—the individual citizen—can count if you are adequately prepared for your public responsibilities. The Encampment for Citizenship can help you to identify the problems, encourage you to find your own solutions, equip you with the methods for taking effective action.

IDENTIFYING SOME OF THE PROBLEMS

Generally, the organized study program centers on the following major areas:

THE HISTORY AND MEANING OF DEMOCRACY. The roles of government, political parties, the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, the individual. The uses of power in a democratic society. Democratic methods and procedures of political action. Civil liberties. Anti-democratic ideologies; their origins and why people are drawn to them . . . the democratic answer to contemporary challenges.

HUMAN RESOURCES. Democracy as a way of seeing people. Obstacles to equality and fulfillment. Causes and effects of prejudice, discrimination, segregation. Intergroup conflict with special reference to current problems.

NATURAL RESOURCES AND THE ECONOMIC SYSTEM. How the productive and distributive systems work; strengths and weaknesses. The economic and moral issues between labor and management, farm and city. Role of government in economic life.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS. Factors making for war and peace. Problems of world organization and functioning of the United Nations. Factors shaping American foreign policy. Problems of emerging nationalism and their effects.

The educational program is planned in cooperation with an able faculty drawn from the universities and professions, with wide experience in public affairs. The faculty lives in the dormitories together with the students, affording ample opportunities for additional exchange of ideas.

Basic information is afforded through lectures, films, field trips, discussions, books and pamphlets, and supplemented through the constructive use of the experience and backgrounds of campers and staff. Discussion groups, forums, role-playing and other techniques of group problem solving are used to clarify the relation of leader and groups. The conflicting interests and practical problems of community participation are studied.

ZENSHIP JUNE 30 — AUGUST 10, 1963

Workshops are focused on practical problems—with the purpose of social analysis, of problem-solving, and developing techniques of constructive action.

THE PROCESS USED

LECTURES. Because of its proximity to urban centers, the Encampment has easy access to a great variety of resource persons and institutions. Academic material becomes alive and meaningful. Staff lectures are supplemented by guest speakers who bring concrete information and viewpoints directly from the very areas of life in which the problems under discussion occur.

DISCUSSION GROUPS. The core experience in each unit of study is the discussion group. Campers meet in small groups under a faculty leader to discuss and interpret the material. Learning is related to the campers' individual backgrounds. Ideas are analyzed and information shared. Above all, the aim is to develop an understanding of conflicting viewpoints so that campers become increasingly capable of critical analysis.

FIELD TRIPS. Field trips for research are planned to assure first-hand observation of problems. Direct contact is made with people and their leaders. Campers see conditions in different social and economic areas of the community; visit housing developments, talk with families and meet with school, church and civic leaders. Trips include visits to neighborhood settlements, human relations agencies, labor union headquarters, migrant farm labor camps, steel plants.

WORKSHOPS. Campers are encouraged to select a problem of immediate interest and concern. Then, either individually or in small groups, they spend time on research, reading and reporting. Typical workshops explore such problems as: segregation and integration, farm surplus, labor and management relations, juvenile delinquency, international relations, mediation of strikes, political action, civil liberties, community relations, migrant labor, housing, sit-ins, church-state relations, and American Indian tribal problems.

FORUMS. Special case studies and findings of projects conducted by workshop groups are often reported to the entire Encampment. In many instances, these are reported in panel and socio-drama form. Campers learn techniques, solve problems and discover new methods of presenting their findings effectively.

RECREATION. Recreational activities are conducted by campers under the guidance of an expert staff. They contribute to health by involving campers in outdoor and indoor physical activities—sports, games, dancing, swimming —enriching the personal development of the individual and opening up the world of the arts. Talents of campers are utilized in programming recreational and social activities. The cultural riches of the urban centers—theatres, concerts, museums—are drawn upon.

CAMPER WELFARE. While campers are given freedom commensurate with their maturity, their physical and emotional welfare are at all times a close concern of highly qualified members of the staff.

What Encampers Say:

". . . Because I went to the Encampment some very remarkable things happened to me . . . I won a scholarship to the Chicago University to study labor and management. . . ."

". . . It has given me what history, government and civics courses had failed to give me—a real feeling of how a nation works: how things get done and who does them; who decides what ought to be done and why; just how our government is organized. . . . How very much more politically adequate I now feel."

". . . For us all, the Encampment awakened new ideas, brought out problems of which we had hitherto been ignorant."

". . . They offered me the most unforgettable and valuable experience of my life, and they made me proud of being what I am . . . a Puerto Rican in culture, and also a proud citizen of the United States . . . and a friend of the world."

". . . It remains for me one of the most gratifying experiences of my life—a kind of living recollection of the extraordinary beauty of which human society is capable."

". . . The intellectual gains have been enormous for us all, scholars or manual workers."

". . . We were not indoctrinated but enlightened."

". . . I learned to respect people whose ideas were opposed to mine. . . ."

". . . you learn that you need not hate all people of a particular kind because some of them hate you. . . . I can honestly say that I have grown during the past six weeks to an extent that I would have believed impossible before."

". . . We all became each other's teachers as well as pupils.

WHAT IS THE ENCAMPMENT FOR CITIZENSHIP?

It is a non-profit, non-sectarian, non-political educational organization inaugurated in 1946 under the auspices of the American Ethical Union.

The Bureau of Applied Social Research of Columbia University has called it a "rare and successful experiment in democratic education."

WHO CAN APPLY?

Any person between the ages of 18 and 23. Participation is limited to 80 students each at the New York and California Encampments and 70 students at the Puerto Rico Encampment.

COLLEGE CREDIT

An increasing number of colleges grant academic credit for Encampment attendance or for special projects undertaken with faculty approval. Exploration should be made early by the student with his college supervisor if he is interested in obtaining such credit. A special memorandum can be sent by the Encampment for faculty consideration.

3 Concurrent Sessions: June 30 - August 10, 1963

NEW YORK

. . . at the Fieldston School in Riverdale . . . on the outskirts of New York City . . . 14-acre campus . . . tennis courts . . . swimming pool, ballfields.

VIRGINIA EQUAL JOB OPPORTUNITY BUREAU NOW IN OPERATION

The Virginia Council on Human Relations, through a grant received from the Marshall Field Foundation, has inaugrated a new service which is now in operation. The Virginia Equal Job Opportunity Bureau (VEJOB) under the Director of this exciting project, Mr. Gregory E. Shinert, will send notices of its services to five thousand Businesses and Industries within Virginia this month. Mr. Shinert, a native of Texas, and former Executive Director of the Missouri State Commission on Human Rights for five years, will spell out three areas of services which VEJOB will offer Virginia's Industrial and Business Community; 1] A professional Consulting Service to assist those mpving into and practicing merit employment as a Company policy. 2] A recruiting service for these same businesses and industries. 3] Providing and setting up conferences whereby business and industries may meet and discuss similar goals, objectives and procedures in making the transition toward merit employment more smoothly.

An Advisory Committee, made up of Virginia Business and Industrial leaders, is being formed. This Committee will assist the VEJOB Committee made up of VCHR Board members in implementing the project.

Mr. Shinert has spent the month of April 15-May 15 visiting key leaders within Virginia both within the Business Community and other state leaders as well. The reception which he has received has been encouraging and gratifying. Brochures which fully explain VEJOB are being prepared and will be widely distributed shortly throughout the state.

Local councils can be of great help in making VEJOB known in your area, and by arranging luncheons whereby Mr. Shinert and state leaders may come together to further discuss his services. For further information concerning VEJOB, write Mr. Gregory E. Shinert 17 East Cary Street, Richmond, Va., or call Richmond 648-7348.

NEW COUNCILS - OPERATION EXTENSION

Two new local councils are in the process of being organized. Radford, Va., has a fine group of interested citizens who are meeting regularly. Co-chairmen have been elected to lead the group during the formative stages of its life, and a growing concern for a local council is evident.. This group is the outgrowth of the Blacksburg Council's hard work and concern.

Hopewell also has begun monthly meetings with a fine group of interested citizens. Co-chairmen have also been elected to lead this group during the first months of its activities. The Hopewell group is an out-growth of the efforts of the Richmond-Petersburg Area Council.

Congratulations are in order for both Radford and Hopewell, as well as for Blacksburg and Richmond-Petersburg.

Mr. Ocie Lee Smith, Associate Director of VCHR, is very busy these days, visiting and making initial contacts all over Virginia, The ultimate purpose of Mr. Smith's activities is to bring about the organization of many new local councils. Some of the areas where Mr. Smith has made good contacts are: Powhatan, Tappahannock, Warsaw, Quinton, Charles City County, Orange, Culpepper and Lexington. Please furnish Mr. Smith with names of good contacts.

VIRGINIA WHERE ART THOU? Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina said recently, "Reluctance to accept the Negro in employment is the greatest single block to his continued progress and to the full use of the human potential of the nation and its states. The Time has come for American citizens to give up this reluctance, to quit unfair discriminations, and to give the Negro a full living for his family and to contribute to higher standards for himself and all men....WE CAN DO THIS. WE SHOULD DO THIS. WE WILL DO IT because we are concerned with the problems and the welfare of our neighbors. We will do it because our economy cannot afford to have so many prople fully or partially unproductive. WE WILL DO IT because it is honest and fair for us to give all men and women their best chance in life."

The Governor of Virginia insists on an Industrial Development Progress, FOR WHOM? The Governor of North Carolina has not only spoken, but has also acted by establishing a bi-racial commission to assist him in an Industrial Development Program for all citizens. VIRGINIA! WHERE ARE THOU?

NEW LOCAL COUNCIL PRESIDENTS recently elected are: Alexandria, Mrs. George A. Eddy for a second term; Blacksburg, Mr. Carl A. Williams; Jefferson, Mr. Wesley Harris; Fairfax County, Mr. J. Sidney Holland; Fredericksburg. Mr. Johnny P. Johnson; Lynchburg, Dr. Lawson Crowe; Radford, Miss Harriet Stewart and Mr. David Lewis, Co-chairmen; Roanoke, Mr. George P. Lawrence, second term; and Hopewell, Reverend Eugene C. Ensley and Reverend Curtis Harris, Co-chairmen.

THE CHURCH AND HUMAN RELATIONS:

Danville: Dr. Robert L. McCann has resigned as pastor of the first Baptist Church of Danville, effective in June. Dr. McCann will enroll at Harvard Univ. in September to spend two years studying College Administration. Following his Harvard studies, Dr. McCann plans to establish an International. Poly-Cultural College near Oak Ridge, Tennessee, through foundation grants and contributions from philanthropic organizations and individuals interested in such a College. Dr. McCann has served as president of the Danville Council on Human Relations since the organization of VCHR's local council in Danville in 1962.

BIRMINGHAM AND FREDERICKSBURG CHURCHES COMPARED: While petitions were being circulated in Fredericksburg, Virginia, by parishoners of the Methodist Church to oust the pastor, the Reverend J.William Hough, for leading his congregation to accept a Negro Lady into membership, churches in Birmingham, Alabama, were permitting Negroes to artend their Worship Services.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, U.S. continued to approve the abolition of segregation in all Southern Presbyterian institutions at its Annual Meeting in Huntington, West Virginia, revently. The same group approved a resolution to ordain women as church officers.

CONGRATULATIONS TO A BAPTIST INSTITUTION! Happy Lee, Executive Director of VCHR, is happier than usual, following a recent vote by the Board of Trustees at Mercer University, Macon, Georgia, to remove barriers for admission recently. Mr. Lee is a graduate of Mercer, which is supported by the Baptist of Georgia.

132 CLERGYMEN OF THE CATHOLIC, PROTESTANT AND JEWISH FAITHS in Montgomery County, Maryland, voted recently in favor of the following resolution: "Moved by religious conviction, we feel that the adoption of the County ordinance concerning elimination of discrimination in places of public accomoation was a great step in the right direction, and therefore we are opposed to any move to repeal or weaken the ordinance."

PRESENT AND FUTURE LEADERS SPEAK OUT:

GOVERNOR ALBERTIS S. HARRISON of Virginia said recently in a speech at Bridgewater, Virginia, "We must have men and women who can give direction and meaning to the unending mechanical outpourings of our time, who can grasp the thread of truth that runs through all human endeavor, and use it to orient our world toward human values, moral strengths, spiritual ends....Both Virginia and the South stand on the threshold of a great awakening and a great fulfillment.... The demands of this future press close upon us and reinforce our conviction that education is the key to Virginia's future."

U.S.
ATTORNEY GENERAL, ROBERT F. KENNEDY said recently that racial disturbances will continue in both the North and South for ten more years before Negroes obtain full equality with whites. Kennedy said that the interracial difficulties and disturbances that have marked the Negro's rise are a sign of progress however.

DR. SAMUEL D. PROCTER, OF THE U.S. PEACE CORPS speaking to the Fredericksburg Council on Human Relations recently, "The Peace Corps program is winning more friends and influencing more people than all the money we are spending overseas." "You can't imagine the effect it has when natives in a former colonial country see young U.S. white and Negro volunteers working at eye-level on a Peace Corps project."

YOUTH GOVERNOR, JAMES H. PENDLETON OF ROANOKE of the Virginia Youth Model General Assembly summed up the feelings of the group after it had passed a law repealing the Poll Tax as follows: "I have always believed the right to vote was a freedom bestowed on all of us by our forefathers. I don't think a price should be set on it."

EXTREME RIGHT WING GROUPS IN THE U.S. will spend more money in 1964 than the Democratic and Republican National Committees combined, said Wesley McCune, Director of Group Research, INC., recently. Mr. McCune continued, "Several such groups are in the million-dollar-a-year bracket, and others whom many people think are dead are taking in several hundred thousand dollars a year. They seek to create in state legislatures, Congress and the White House a climate of doubt, controversy, distrust and conformity....This is one of the subtle successes of the right wing....They are now on the freedom kick."

U.S. CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION"S STAFF DIRECTOR, BERL I. BERNHARD, will be the speaker for the Richmond-Petersburg Area Council on Human Relations meeting on Tuesday Evening, May 28, at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. Mr Bernhard said in a recent speech, "To set the records straight, according to FBI data Washington, D.C. ranks 13th. among America's 25 largest cities in the number of crimes per population thousand....In the states of the old Confederacy less than one half of one per cent of Negro school aged children attend desegregated schools....In an Alabama county, Bullock - one in which the Civil Rights Commission first exposed conspiracies to keep Negroes from voting - Negro registration has risen from 5 to 1,000 in one year's time."

FAIRFAX COUNTY IS URGED TO UNITE NEGRO-WHITE SCHOOL SYSTEMS:Eventual abolishment of Fairfax County's dual school system will be considered by the County School Board this Summer. Board members favoring merger of the Negro and White systems said that total desegregation would perhaps begin with the lower grades.

DR. SAMUEL NEWMAN, VCHR BOARD MEMBER OF DANVILLE, veteran pediatrician and clinician was recently honored at a surprise testimonial dinner by the citizens of Danville. Among Dr. Sam's achievements were cited his administering the first blood transfusion to a child in Virginia, and his establishing the first blood bank in Virginia. Dr. Sam is a prolific writer and ardent worker for better Human Relations among all mankind.

WE POINT WITH PRIDE TO: Fairfax County Council on Human Relations for the outstanding work it is doing through various committees on schools, housing and especially for its support and influence in obtaining a Meyer Foundation grant of $26,500.00 for the Higher Horizon's Day Care Center to help the culturally-deprived areas of Fairfax County.

THEATRE PICKETTING CONTINUES IN VIRGINIA: Picketting of Theatres continues in Arlington, Hampton, Petersburg and Richmond, Virginia. Also students have continued picketting the White Tower Eating establishments in Richmond. Theatre owners have continued to use the argument of the Virginia Seating Law as reasons for not opening theatres to Negroes. A test case of this seating law was scheduled to have been heard in the United States District Court, Alexandria, on Friday, May 17. The outcome of this case perhaps will clarify the situation. All downtown movies are desegregated in Atlanta, Georgia as well as some movies in Kentucky, North Carolina and Tennessee.

SUMMER WORKSHOPS AND INSTITUTES RECOMMENDED: For students - Civil Rights Leadership Institute, July 15 - August 12, in Atlanta, Georgia. Write: Southern Office, United States National Student Association, Room 701, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Atlanta 3, Georgia. For anyone: Race Relations Institute, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee. Write: Dr. Herman Long, Department of Sociology, Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee. Workshop In Adult Leadership Training, Norfolk. Write: Dr. G.W.C. Brown, Norfolk Division, Virginia State College, Norfolk, Virginia.

WHAT COLOR IS GOD? The recent vogue in adult coloring books has prompted a whole slew of "color" questions. The Reverend Richard W. Miller, president of the Greater Milwaukee Council of Churches, was asked on a recent TV show, "What color is God?" He replied: "What color is love and justice and mercy? When you know that, then you will know what color God is."

DR. HARRY PENN OF ROANOKE, died on May 8, and with his death the VCHR Board lost one of its most faithful and ardent members. Dr. Penn, a Roanoke Dentist, was the first Negro to be appointed to a School Board from the Roanoke Area, served in that capacity from 1948 to 1951. He was also the first Negro candidate for Roanoke City Council. The VCHR Staff, the Board of Directors and the entire state of Virginia suffered a great loss with the going of Dr. Harry Penn.

PRESIDENT'S PARAGRAPHS: by Dr. Aubrey N. Brown, Jr. President of VCHR

It would be good to have a Negotiating Committee in each community, operating within or in relation to the VCHR's Public Facilities Committee. Such a select group of concerned and able people could be highly effective in unpublicized, behind-the-scenes conversations, as they have been for several years in some of our VCHR communities.

Much depends upon the wise selection of members for such a group. Much also depends upon the group's diplomacy, firm but understanding insistence upon open facilities, and public support and encouragement of complying firms and institutions. It would seem that, on the basis of wide experience across the South and elsewhere, such approaches should be warmly welcomed, in preference to what has come in other situitions in the form of other demonstrations and more aggressive demands.

Even better (and more to be praised) are those enlightened leaders of business, industry and public institutions who do not wait even for a Negotiating Committee's request. This Newsletter would like to be able to list such institutions as they open their facilities and/or provide employment on the basis of merit. Where this is appropriate, will you notify us?

Rev. Emmet Green, Roanoke

In order that all VCHR members may think in terms of possible service for this committee and for their own local committee on Public Facilities, enterprises like the following are suggested:

--Investigate areas where next advances in opening up facilities for all should be made, with recommendations to local chapters.

--Survey successful techniques of change in Virginia and other areas where significant advances have been made and share this information.

--Where needed and desirable request (through executive committees) at studies or analyses by qualified scholars.

--With the Extension Committee plan workshops, particularly in areas without HR chapters, on such topics as: Ministers and Effective Teaching of Good Human Relations: also in turn for Parents and Public School Teachers. Or: Churches and Good Human Relations: How to Teach Them.

--One-day men's conferences of 25 each of the topmost Negro and white leaders in the state to consider "What remains to be done to abolish second class citizenship in Virginia?" And, 25 women at city or state levels, on the same topic.

--Inquire of candidates for public office their attitudes on key issues, providing this information to the state membership.

--Seek to keep maintained up-to-date information on all litigation within the state dealing with opening public facilities for all citizens.

--Consider the possibilities of encouraging, in co-operation with other Virginia Organizations, a legislative reporting service during the General Assembly Session which would provide an analyses of current legislation and status reports on all bills related to Human Relations.

--Call attention to significant studies within and without Virginia dealing with the concern of Public Facilities.

--Consider the possibility of periodic statewide meetings of allied and congenial groups working or concerned with human relations advances.

QUARTERLY REPORT: March, April, May 1963

Matters in the major cities in Tennessee have moved so swiftly during the latter part of the quarter that any accounting rendered today may be invalid by the time you receive it. Therefore this report will be brief, and a supplement to the Field Foundation report already sent to you.

State Progress

According to the State Commissioner of Conservation, the state parks are open without restrictions. We do not have new brochures, and at a visit in May 1963, last year's paper place mats containing racial designations of parks were still in use. We have asked members to check on state parks and see if racial designations are in evidence.

On June 6, we presented the Governor's administrative assistant with a proposed executive order, plus a number of pamphlets, and the Kentucky Fair Practice Code which was signed by Governor Combs. We have not presented our list of proposed members of the Commission, but will do so shortly. The Governor's assistant thought that August 1 would be the target date for the formation of the Governor's Commission.

The bill to abolish capital punishment failed in the Legislature. Poll Tax abolition bill passed. The Governor is sensitive to pressure of Negro groups who supported him in campaign last summer, and has appointed a Negro to Board of Education, and the five member Parole Board. He has announced that he expects to make at least one appointment per month of a Negro to some important regulatory board. This has led to speculation among his political detractors of "who the Negro-of-the-month" will be.

Local Action

Knoxville - See enclosed photostats. The Chamber of Commerce has had a committee meeting for several month working toward desegregation. This was a nearly secret group, but known to a few people. It had the mayor's backing. When they were ready to go ahead the Knoxville NEWS SENTINEL carried the lead with the editorial. The petitions (copy enclosed) were available at the Chamber of Commerce, and were distributed widely with announcements being made through churches and various groups. By June 4, 3500 Knoxvillians had signed the petitions; additional ones were coming in daily. As far as we know, there have been no incidents.

Memphis

On May 20, but without public announcement, practically all motels and hotels in Memphis were desigregated. The trade association agreed to the move, but there are probably motels which do not belong to the association which have not chanted their policy. However, all first-class hotels, Holiday Inns, Downtowner, etc. are open, and are being tested by Negroes to assure that they have guests. There will be no public announcement to avoid retaliation by Mississippi and Arkansas business interests. Movie houese are generally open and this is now known. A campaign for job openings, under leadership of NAACP is in progress, with persuasive pressure being applied by the Memphis Community Relations Committee which is a power group. The new president is Mr. Arthur McCain. He replaced Rev. Paul Tudor Jones.

Nashville

Nashville has been caught in the backwash of progress across the state. A Negro boycott of limited effectiveness has been on since late March. Student demonstrations throughout the early spring met with adamant resistence of the owners of B&W cafeteria and Cross-Keys restaurant as well as YMCA. In early May the student interest picked up, both because of the stimulation of the Birmingham protest and the feeling of abusive and unfair treatment in recent trials. The week of May 6, the demonstrations increased in momentum and number of demonstrators. They were no longer the quiet, disciplined group, but grammar school, high school and college youngsters without previous experience who joined the small Student Non-Violent Committee. A near race riot ensued on May 10 and again on May 13. I witnessed the May 13 demonstration which was composed of three hand-clapping, singing, dancing groups picketing and protesting throughout the central city. The young hoodlum element was also in evidence, and some minor fights occurred. On May 13, I felt that the police did a commendable job under extreme provocation. Many of the demonstrators were armed with knoves and rocks as were the hoodlums. Following this, there was consternation on the part of Negro adult leadership and the business community. The mayor, who had only been in office since April 1, began immediately the formation of an interim committee and then a permanent committee on human relations. The interim committee has since been dissolved, and the permanent committee has taken over. Will D. Campbell is currently serving as its executive secretary and does not vote. The committee is composed of eight (8) Negroes and nineteen (19) power structure white persons. No white ministers with regular pastorates were included and they have protested their exclusion, as have some women's groups asked for appointment of at least one white woman. Pressure for the committee was exerted by the White House prior to President Kennedy's visit on May 18.

Within the past 24 hours, three downtown restaurants are opening on a controlled basis. On May 12, Kay Jones and other whites acted as observers when a designated Negro couple were served at B&W. At 5:00 p.m., the appointed time, there were few customers beyond the observers; but the entire matter was handled without incident. There are no announcement at this time, but we are working closely with Negro members of the committee and know of a broad goal for desegregation of places of public accommodation. We believe the city should be rather thoroughly open by August 1. The Metropolitan Committee on Human Relations is being asked to consider many additional facets of discrimination, including equal employment opportunity, recreation and open occupancy housing. See clipping of June 11, 1963 for desegregation of downtown.

Former Congressman Rousselot spoke in Nashville for John Birch Society on April 11. Auditorium seats 1200; 300 attended.

Nashville Community Relations Council had its annual community workshop on May 2. Several months previously this had been set with emphasis on school desegregation, past and future. Nashville school program begins desegregation with junior high (7th grade) in September 1963. A summary of the first six years was sent to members, in order that discussion center on the present and future situation. It had been anticipated that we would attract teachers. However, the city school superintendent brought pressure on principals against their participation and that of their teachers. The superintendent wrote a highly emotional letter to the chairman of the meeting protesting its being held and the subject for discussion. City teachers on the panel withdrew. At the May 2 meeting, attended by 130 person, the superintendent appeared, apoligized profusely for his letter which he termed"insulting" and praised the Nashville Community Relations Council. In our attempt to follow up on this with school board, chairman Lou Silberman asked that teachers be notified of their freedom to make their own decisions about participation. The chairman of the board of education replied sharply and indicated that no changes would be made until the new board of education takes over in 1964. Consequently, it seems clear that no preparation will be made by the city for junior high school integration this fall.

Peabody College desegregated undergraduate classes, effective in 1963. Demonstration School, grades 1-12, remains segregated. Of particular concern is the attitude of the Division of Surveys and Field Services. They employ a sizable staff and offer their services to school systems throughout the south. We have a copy of a recent study with recommendations for Giles County, Tennessee. Released in April 1963, its recommendations are designed to perpetuate segregation. The Peabody Plan calls for a high school, junior high and seven elementary schools for white children and a high school and three elementary schools for Negroes. It is proposed to re-route buses in order to provide transportation for white children in a district where the recommendation calls for the school to become Negro.

My attempts in the past to talk to Mr. W. D. McClurken, director of the Division of Surveys and Field Services, has met with complete failure. He has frankly said that desegregation was not his concern, and believes it is "unfortunate" for many Negro children. Some of his staff deplore his continued reprisal to face the issue, but he is unconcerned. Any suggestions?

Special Projects - There will be three summer projects for college and post college students involving integrated living arrangements in Nashville this summer. A Mennonite group of six persons will be serving through South Street Community Center in both the settlement house program and a tutorial program for school age children for whom the city summer school program has inadequate resources. Text books will be furnished by city school administration.

The Voter Registration Project under guidance of Miss Rosetta Gardner and Mr. Carl Zeitlow will be housed in South Nashville and will work in North Nashville primarily toward stimulating Negro voter registration. There will be 16 participants - integrated.

The American Friends Service Committee, Internes in Community Service, will be housed near Scarritt College and the 12 young people will work in social service agencies or state hospitals. All groups are to be integrated.

Cookeville and Sparta

Our March-April Newsletter carried report of Cookeville school integration, including teacher integration. Since Cookeville is in process of building a new three million dollar high school, the Board has voted to use temporary structures at crowded schools this fall. The Negro students will be distributed among a number of schools rather than added to Sycamore, the one nearest to the Negro community. Sycamore serves the lowest economic level in the white community and part of the Negro resistence to integration was resistence to sending Darwin students to Sycamore.

Sparta is integrating entire high school for the county this fall. Negro 8th graders were included in the "round-up in May" of all potential freshmen from the county. They also participated in a musical program for all 8th graders in the county with integrated program and integrated seating. By the grapevine, it seems clear that White County plans to desegregate the remainder of the system in the next three years.

Chattanooga

Mayor Kelley has called Negro and white leaders together to prevent disorder there. There have been attempts to gain service at L&W cafeteria and Krystal lunch counter by Negroes, and some ensuing scoffling. Eight Negroes were admitted in June to University of Chattanooga; graduate program. Undergraduate program remains segregated.

Clarksville

Clarksville is a small city North of Nashville and home of a state teachers' college. It is also the nearest city to Ft. Campbell, a permanent air force base. My attempts to stimulate Negro leadership to request open accommodations failed. Clarksville already was more progressive than most small towns, and there was a reluctance to push. Wilma Rudolph of Clarksville, on completing A&I examinations for graduation, returned to Clarksville and led peaceful demonstrations for three days. The mayor and county judge supported protest movement. In early May segregation bars were dropped at restaurants, hotels, swimming pools, etc.

MEMBERSHIP AND FUNDS

Membership dues payments and contributions have reached a total of $4,200.90. We are $599.10 away from meeting matching fund from SRC. In addition to announcements in 2 Newsletters all members have been billed twice by first-class mail, a copy of which is enclosed. Also see attached report now one month old.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT

The Council participated financially in the costs of a workshop for city school personnel engaged in guidance and other counselling function on May 6. The all day meeting, led by Dr. Henderson and Mahlon Griffith, representing the Community Conference on Employment Opportunity, was attended by several persons from the State Employment Service, and personnel from Fisk and Tennessee A&I State University. The meeting grew out of a recognition that guidance persons are not encouraging students to prepare themselves for the new occupations opening to Negroes, and are likely to counsel them into traditional occupations which have been open to Negroes.

Wide distribution of the pamphlet, "Jobs and Color", has been made. It has been sent to all members of the Tennessee Legislature, Congressional Delegation from Tennessee, to all members and other state councils on our mailing list, and to additional selected persons. Over the name of the Tennessee Voters Council we are distributing it to the Governor, and all appointive and elective state officials.

The council has continued to serve in a secretarial capacity to the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the U. S. Civil Right Committee. Since the Committee is without funds we have borne the cost for stenographic services, and the clerical costs of the upcoming study on medical services available in the Nashville area.

PROGRAM REPORT FOR MARCH, APRIL and MAY, 1963

1. Information-Education Mail Program

March: The March Bulletin, mailed in April, went to the entire mailing list of approximately 1750.

April: No general mailing.

May: A "Statement on School Desegregation" was mailed to all daily newspapers in the State, and to members of the Council. It received good publicity.

A letter-to-the-editor regarding Negro demonstrations was sent to daily newspapers. It appeared in papers in Charlotte, Raleigh, Greensboro and probably others.

The May Bulletin was mailed on June 5 to the entire mailing list.

2. Board Meeting

The board met in Chapel Hill on April 6th with fourteen members present. The minutes of this meeting are attached (unless you have already received them).

3. McNeill Smith Dinner

The dinner honoring McNeill Smith was held in the Carolina Inn, Chapel Hill, on May 1st with Burke Marshall, U. S. Assistant Attorney General, giving the main address. Nearly two hundred people were present. It was a successful meeting in every way.

The proceeds from the dinner were sufficient to pay all expenses with about $50 left over.

4. Charlotte Council

On March 25, Dr. Aubrey Brown, editor of the Presbyterian Outlook, and president ofthe Virginia Council on Human Relations, spoke to a Council dinner meeting on "Racial Progress in Richmond." About 50 people were present.

The annual meeting of the Charlotte Council was held on May 21 at the Myers Park Baptist Church with about 125 peopel present. Matthew Perry, Negro civil rights lawyer from Columbia, South Carolina, and Harry Golden, were the main speakers.

Ernest DeLaney, a prominent attorney, formerly a law partner of Spencer Bell, was elected chairman of the Council for the coming year.

5. Raleigh Council

The Steering Committee of the Raleigh Council met soon after the beginning of Negro demonstrations in Raleigh and drew up a statement, addressed to the City Council, urging the desegregation of all public facilities in Raleigh.

Later, Dr. Howard Miller and others initiated a movement to get public endorsement of a statement urging the end of discrimination and segregation in all places of public accommodation. This resulted in a full-page ad in the Raleigh News & Observer on May 15 which carried over 900 names. A later ad carried another 300 additional names.

6. Around the State

I was present when an informal interracial group in Greensboro was organized as the Greensboro Interracial Fellowship in March. This group has been active since that time and has grown to a membership of eighty. Recently the Fellowship sponsored a full-page newspaper ad urging desegregation of hotels, motels, restaurants and theaters which carried 1359 names. A later ad carried 287 names.

The Greensboro Community Fellowship, under the chairmanship of John R. Taylor, a builder who also owns and operates the two Holiday Inns in Greensboro, seems to be a vigorous group. Mrs. Chase Benson, one of our board members, is active in the Fellowship.

Dr. Boulware and his committee have been attempting to follow and to stimulate the developments of the Governor's Good Neighbor Council. A conference with the Governor was held on April 5, and just recently a conference was held with Mr. Coltrane, the chairman of the Good Neighbor Council. There is not much to report. The Good Neighbor Council has never had a meeting. Some local councils have been set up but none, so far as I know, is really at work.

Dr. J. T. Taylor, formerly dean at North Carolina College and now retired, has been given a full-time job with the Employment Security Commission. We thought he was to serve as executive secretary of the Good Neighbor Council, but this is not the case. His duties are not clear. Joseph Beech, the personnel manager of the Commission, referred to Taylor as "my right hand man."

I have had two conferences with Col. H. E. Kendall, head of the Employment Security Commission, in regard to the desegregation of the state employment offices. A program is underway to desegregate these offices, but I have received several complaints to the effect that Negro employees of the offices are not being treated the same as white employees. I discussed this at length with Mr. Beech, who contends that there is absolutely no discrimination in personnel policies. We are watching particularly the Charlotte office to see what happens to Negro and white personnel. It is now in the process of desegregation.

Dr. Williams and I have been giving close attention to the Negro demonstrations in the various cities. Twice we have appealed to the Governor to take a stand in support of the rights of all, or at least to say that the cause of the Negroes is just. We also sent a telegram to the Mayor of Greensboro urging contacts with the people involved in the situation as well as representatives of the power structure, and urging desegregation as the only solution to the problem.

I have tried to keep in touch with the main centers of demonstrations--Raleigh, Durham and Greensboro--and to give whatever help I could--which wasn't much. Perhaps the most that one can do is to try to interpret the situation--to explain what is happening and why.

7. Membership and Finance

Twenty-six new members were recruited during the quarter, and 130 memberships were renewed.

Contributions received from organizations during the quarter were as follows:

Council of Presbyterian Men, Catawba Synod.....	$ 100
N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Company.....	100
N. C. Teachers Association.....	500

From the Southern Regional Council we received our quarterly grant of $900 and matching funds amounting to $2,300. From the latter we repaid a loan of $500, making the net received $1,800. Our balance at the end of May was $664.27.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE STATE

I will not attempt here to report on all the demonstrations against segregation that have occurred in the past few weeks. They have been numerous, especially in Raleigh, Greensboro and Durham. Minor demonstrations have occurred in Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Fayetteville and Wilmington. There are stirrings in other communities.

In Raleigh, first the Merchants Bureau, then the Chamber of Commerce, and then the Ministerial Association called for an end of discrimination in places of public accommodation. In Greensboro, the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants Association called for desegregation. In Charlotte the Chamber of Commerce is the only predominantly white organization so far that has spoken.

In Raleigh, seventy-six business organizations are reported to be desegregated, or in the process of desegregating. None so far have been named. In Charlotte, eight hotels and motels which include five restaurants have desegregated. The theaters have begun desegregating as this is being written. In Greensboro, a truce has been called awaiting developments.

Some desegregation of restaurants and hotels has taken place in Statesville, Winston-Salem and Fayetteville, and probably in other places not yet reported. Changes are taking place daily.

- - - - - 0 - - - - -

A suit asking that all students, teachers and other school personnel be assigned without regard to race or color was filed on March 13 against the High Point Board of Education in the U. S. Middle District Court by parents of eight Negro students.

The Durham Junior Chamber of Commerce has dropped a clause from its membership requirements which restricted the club to white men.

A bill to desegregate the North Carolina National Guard passed through the General Assembly late in March almost without opposition.

Duke University has admitted five Negro students to undergraduate colleges for the fall term. Each of the five has been given a grant-in-aid from Duke.

The West Raleigh Presbyterian Church, through its Church Session, has endorsed the action of the Raleigh Merchants Bureau in calling for an end to segregation in business that serve the public.

MINUTES OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE NORTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS, CHAPEL OF THE CROSS, CHAPEL HILL, SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1963.

MEMBERS PRESENT

T. Franklin Williams, Chairman	C. E. Boulware
Raymond Wheeler	William Finlator
J. Neal Hughley	Howard Miller
Guy B. Johnson	Moses S. Belton
Edward A. McDowell	Mrs. Ellen S. Alston
William S. Page	Mrs. Chase H. Benson
Thomas Thrasher	Harry S. Jones

The meeting was opened by the chairman and the minutes were read and approved.

Dr. Wheeler read the financial report in the absence of the treasurer. He reported that we are in better shape financially than last time, but we are still in the red. Total receipts for the year are $3,999.37; disbursements are $4,139.82, with a deficit of $140.45. A complete report is attached.

Dr. Williams stated that good results have been obtained from our fund raising efforts, which included asking members for contributions of $2 each, and asking board members to pledge a certain amount per year. Dr. Wheeler was asked to head a membership committee to bring in more members as well as more money. The chairman will appoint a committee to look into the matter of having a benefit affair, with a well-known figure such as Dick Gregory, to make money for the Council, as well as the more important purpose of getting people with common concerns together.

The chairman stated that the McNeill Smith appreciation dinner will be held Wednesday, May 1st, at 6:30 at the Carolina Inn at Chapel Hill, price $4.00 per plate. The speaker will be Burke Marshall, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. Dean Brandis of the University will present a citation to Mr. Smith. Dr. Bowers and his committee will work up a list of people to attend. It was agreed that we invite Marion A. Wright, vice-president of the Southern Regional Council, and Dr. Rankin of Duke University, a member of the Civil Rights Commission, to be special guests. Invited also will be representatives of the AP and UPI, and reporters from Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill and Greensboro, as well as new members of the state Civil Rights Commission and the Governor's Good Neighbor Council.

Mr. Finlator, nominating committee chairman, presented the following names for election to the executive committee: Father Robert Wilken of Chapel Hill, Miss Nell Hirschberg, Raleigh, and Millard Barbee, president of the N. C. State Federation of the AFL-CIO. Mr. Page moved and it was VOTED that these three be named to the executive committee, their terms to run until the annual meeting. They will fill vacancies on the committee.

Dr. Williams asked Mr. Finlator to act as chairman of a permanent nominating committee, with Mr. Hughley and Mrs. Alston continuing as members.

Dr. Boulware reported on the meeting of his committee with the Governor on Friday, April 5. Present with him were Mr. Page, Dr. Duncan, Mr. Morris and

Mr. Jones. Dr. Boulware said they expressed appreciation to the Governor for his asking the state to consider justice of equal opportunity, and asked him about his Good Neighbor Council. The Governor stated that he has not appointed all the members of the council, and no full meeting has been held, although several small ones have been. Dr. Boulware emphasized that at no point did they have to convince him of the justice of the proposals. The question was with what speed they could be done. The Governor said that any qualified scientists for the Research Triangle we could find would be hired.

Mr. Page feels that the Governor thinks long- range planning is necessary so his successor can continue to move in the right direction, especially with the industrial education centers. He thinks the Governor is moving along with us, but that we should keep in close touch with Dave Coltrane who is taking over some of this work. J. T. Taylor is now his assistant, and his job is to get industry to open up jobs. It is thought that these men will do the job the Governor wants done. Mr. Fleishman is working on a conference of business men to be held in June. Special mention was made of the desegregation of the National Guard, which came about much more quietly and easily than the Governor had thought.

There was a discussion about the difficulty of recruiting qualified people to be ready to take jobs as they are opened up, and it was thought we should make definite plans to aid in getting somebody to talk to industry and to help colored people realize that people will hire them if they are ready. Mr. Hughley thinks this Council can be of help in finding people to be trained. Industrial schools have been told to recruit actively, but Dr. Wheeler pointed out that there is a need for people to have a prospect of jobs before taking training.

Dr. Williams thought we should keep in close touch with Dr. Coltrane and find out where we can be most helpful. We should keep informed on what local Good Neighbor Councils are being set up and should talk to their members. Part of the job of these councils is to get industry open.

Mr. Jones stated that the Employment Security Commission is in the process of desegregation, but that in Charlotte they need additional personnel. Desegregation has already taken place in Greensboro, Durham and Raleigh.

Dr. Wheeler thinks we could get a foundation to give a grant to have a study made on how to get qualified people, as the state of Virginia has done. It was thought that the Ford Foundation might be interested in doing such a study. Dr. Williams stated that the Ford Foundation is working on a proposition (1) to set up a demonstration school district to raise the quality of education in secondary schools which come forward with their own plans, and (2) to put money in all the colleges in the state to improve teacher training.

Dr. Miller proposed a crash program for underdeveloped Negro children. Mr. Page said industrial centers should provide special training for Negroes. Dr. Miller will look into this as something we might be interested in. Dr. Boulware said that colleges are becoming aware that their graduates are not measuring up as we would like for them to. It has been hard to get students inspired to become qualified.

Mr. Jones brought up the matter of dual memberships in Charlotte Council and the state Council. He suggested that we credit Charlotte with state memberships and that Charlotte pay the state Council $125 per month instead of the $100 they have been giving, as $1500 is about the amount we have been receiving from Charlotte each year anyway. It was VOTED that we make this change, with Dr. Wheeler suggesting that we will hope this amount will be increased as time goes by. There was a short discussion on the proposition that local councils might become affiliated with and support the state council, as is done in Virginia.

The statement (on school desegregation) to school board chairmen and superintendents was APPROVED and will be sent out with a covering letter on our stationery, which has our purpose on it, as well as a list of our executive board. A press release will also be worked up to go along with this statement when it is released to the press.

It was VOTED that Dr. Miller write a letter of appreciation on our stationery to Herbert O'Keefe of the Raleigh Times for the articles appearing recently in his paper.

The next meeting will be held in June or July, time and place to be set by chairman.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. Chase H. Benson

The Council received the quarterly allotment of $900 from the Southern Regional Council on April 2nd which took care of obligations due.

Our anticipated income during April and May is around $2,000. We will also receive matching funds from SRC of $2300. From this amount, we will have to repay $500 borrowed last fall.

Seventeen members of our executive committee have made pledges totaling $1,420. Four members, without making pledges, have sent in a total of $145. About 150 members of the Council, in response to our appeal, have sent in extra contributions of from $2 to $10 amounting to nearly $500. These are still coming in.

Indications are that we will have enough money to get through the summer, and with good luck, perhaps through to the end of the year.

SCOTLAND YARD said it feared Ward might tamper with prosecution witnesses if he got out of jail.

Monday is also the day parliament will debate the sensational resignation of war minister John Profumo after disclosure of his torrid affair with model Christine Keeler, 22.

It was Ward who introduced the red-haired party girl to Profumo and to the Soviet assistant naval attache, Capt. Yevgeni (Eugene) Ivanov.

THE STOCK market reflected these fears as it took its most severe tumble since the Cuba crisis last fall.

Behind the setback lay market fears that Harold Wilson's Laborites may soon win power. Industrial shares which might come under Laborite schemes for nationalization or dividend limitation were first to suffer.

Most Restaurants, Hotels Desegregate

By JAMES M. TALLEY

The majority of downtown Nashville hotels, motels and restaurants have agreed to desegregate their facilities, Mayor Beverly Briley's permanent Committee on Human Relations announced yesterday.

James O. Bass, committee chairman, said the Nashville Hotel-Motel Association has "voluntarily placed in effect a plan to continue offering their facilities to desirable patrons, regardless of race, creed or color."

Bass said many of the major hotels and motels "already are adhering to the decision of the association."

University officials said this was for her protection. Later she was expelled for criticism of the university's board of trust.

THERE IS confidence here the admission of two Negroes, Vivian Malone of Mobile and James A. Hood of Gadsden, could have been carried out peacefully if Gov. George Wallace had not made such an issue of it.

Wallace had vowed he would stand in the doorway of any white public school to bar the admission of Negro students. And he is here now to make good on that vow today.

town areas have already placed in effect a policy of desegregation of their facilities."

The committee did not name or list the number of the business firms that have agreed to integrate facilities.

The group's statement was the first major announcement of a breakthrough in the committee's work—by individual and by team efforts. Attention now is expected to be turned to problems of employment, housing, health, and recreation.

Some work is still to be done, it was learned, among the eating places and motels.

AT THE SAME time the Nashville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People handed the biracial committee a memorandum calling for action ending what it called discrimination in employment, education, health and housing.

It was learned that the restaurant owners who desegregated agreed last week to the plan. Most of them put it into effect Sunday.

The hotel-motel association drew up its plan early last week and put it into effect in some cases before the end of the week.

Metropolitan Mayor Beverly Briley, who appointed the committee, said he was "very pleased" with the group's report, made after an hour-long session at the Nashville Area Chamber of Commerce building.

AND THE chairman of Nashville's Coordinating Committee of Human Relations Organizations, the Rev. Dr. J. E. Lowery, termed the committee report "a good beginning."

His organization includes representatives from the NAACP, Nashville Christian Leadership Council, Student Central Committee, Tennessee Council on Human Relations, and the Nashville Committee on Employment Opportunities.

Said the Rev. Kelly Miller Smith, a leader in the Negroes' drive for desegregation:

"The Nashville Christian Leadership Council is aware of the fact that substantial progress has been made toward the accomplishment of the goal of an open city. We are convinced that our city is mature enough to accept complete social change and we shall continue our efforts toward the ultimate goal of eradicating segregation from Metropolitan Nashville.

"We further pledge our continued cooperation with the Human Relations Committee in the pursuit of its laudable work."

Lowery, who also is a member of the biracial committee, said:

"This good beginning by the committee shows evidence of its potential effectiveness in the whole area of human rights and equal opportunities for all citizens. Most of the work of the committee, however, is still before it and will require continued hard work and the cooperation of all citizens of good will in the community.

Lowery also is a NCLC board member.

He is expected to explain the latest work of the biracial committee to the Negro community during a mass meeting tonight.

THE BASS statement said:

"Since its organization, members of the committee have met frequently with representatives of the hotels, motels, and the eating establishments in the metropolitan community.

"These meetings have been conducted in an atmosphere of cooperation and understanding and have resulted in a lessening of racial tensions and substantial progress in the solution of some of the more pressing problems.

"While having no operational control over individual member units, in the interest of furthering the business community the Nashville Hotel-Motel Association has already voluntarily placed in effect a plan to continue offering their facilities to desirable patrons regardless of race, creed, or color.

"Many of the major units are already adhering to the decision of the association.

"ALSO, eating establishments representing the bulk of the table capacity in the downtown area have already placed in effect a policy of desegregation of their facilities. Discussions are continuing with others in both the hotel-motel and restaurant fields who have the matter under consideration.

"The actions thus taken by all these businesses are a result of mature consideration of both the legal and moral aspects of the segregation problem, are in the interest of the whole community, and will, we believe, be accepted as such.

"It is our hope that all citizens will give their support to these decisions and to the business people who have made them in the interest of a peaceful and moderate solution."

The NAACP memorandum to the committee asked for:

- Enactment of a Fair Employment Practices Code for Metropolitan Nashville and Davidson County.
- Equal employment opportunities in business and industry.
- A study of the Metro government's employment of Negroes.
- Adequate vocational and technical training for all people—primarily the opening of Hume-Fogg Vocational and Technical High School immediately to interested Negro youth.
- Elimination of discrimination in the use of health facilities and assurance that none of the facilities will be denied Negroes.
- Adequate housing without color restrictions.

The requests by the NAACP came, the group said, "in order that peace and tranquility will prevail in our community, that economic growth may increase with benefit for all citizens, that democratic ideals may be realized to the extent that Negro citizens will be accorded an equal share in its benefits as well as its responsibilities."

The memo added:

"THESE suggested areas are of utmost concern to the minority groups are are basic to the economic growth and health of this city.

"The Nashville branch NAACP has been actively pursuing change and improvement in the community and would actively cooperate with you to speed their resolution."

Hotels in Knox Desegregated

KNOXVILLE (AP) — Knoxville's leading hotels and two large motels disclosed yesterday they have opened their facilities to "desirable patrons, regardless of race, creed or color."

A resolution adopted by the Knoxville Hotel-Motel Association said:

"We will continue to offer our facilities to desirable patrons, regardless of race, creed or color. However, the association has no individual hotel or motel. Each hotel or motel has a right and privilege to operate on such a basis as to benefit their community and operation."

THE ACTION affects hotels Andrew Johnson, Farragut, Arnold and St. James and two Holiday Inns.

Hiring Practices Parley Scheduled

The Nashville NAACP and the Community Conference on Employment Opportunity will meet with the U.S. Civil Service Commission today to discuss employment practices.

The meeting will be at 6 p.m. in Park-Johnson Hall at Fisk University.

A Civil Service Commission committee is in Nashville investigating fair employment practices.

CCEO Chairman Mahlon Griffith said discussions will include two areas:

- Progress being made in business, industry, local, state and federal government employment of Negroes.
- To express disappointment with the rate of local and federal agency upgrading, hiring and informing the public of employment policies and vacancies

Theatres And Drive-Ins Quietly Desegregate Here As Planned By Leaders

More than 100 local firms have changed their hiring policies and are currently employing Negroes in capacities heretofore denied, according to an announcement released by the Memphis Branch NAACP earlier this week. The announcement also announced the "desegregation of theatres and drive-ins."

Mrs. Maxine Smith executive secretary of the local NAACP said:

"The Memphis Branch of the NAACP, the Church Work Committee of the NAACP, the Intercollegiate Chapter of the NAACP and the Youth Council announces through me, that it can now be revealed that tremendous progress has been made in the desegregation of motion picture theatres and the creation of better job opportunities for Negroes.

"Early this year representatives of the NAACP began negotiating with numerous retailers asking for up-grading and hiring of Negroes in positions previously denied. Out of these conferences came agreements to hire and upgrade Negroes to better positions. Presently, more than 100 stores and businesses, representing more than 60 per cent of the retail community, are using Negroes as clerks, cashiers, saleslady, salesman, stock clerks, etc.," said Mrs. Smith. The businesses included are groceries and supermarkets, department stores, drug stores, variety stores, jewelry stores, soft drink companies, bakeries and beer distributors. This represents the greatest breakthrough in the creation of better job opportunities for Negroes in the entire history of the civil rights struggle, added Mrs. Smith. The NAACP executive secretary continued: "The NAACP is proud to have played a prominent role in initiating and helping to carry out this program. The job is not yet finished, for there is much to be done in this area, and the local branch pledges to continue this drive until it is apparent that a man will be hired on the basis of his ability to perform a job rather than the color of his skin."

She announced that 17 theatres are now completely desegregated. This program began in January with a committee from the NAACP working in conjunction with other community leaders and the theatre operators. At this time practically all of the theatres are completely desegregated.

Mrs. Smith said for the benefit of the Negro public, "We announce the complete list of theatres desegregated: Malco, Warner, Palace, State, Strand, Memphian, Crescent, Plaza, Gulf and Studio.

"The Drive-Ins are as follows:

"[illegible] Skyway, [illegible], Lemon and Stryker," she said.

"In addition to continuing in these areas until the job is complete, the NAACP is presently working for complete desegregation of all hotels, restaurants, hospitals, equal employment opportunities with Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company and in all government employment (city, county, state and federal)," revealed Mrs. Smith.

Let's Make Knoxville An 'Open City'

LET'S OPEN UP.

The time has come when Knoxville, an All-American city, opened up to all Americans. We are convinced of this and urge it upon this community.

This means admit everybody to every place that caters to the general public — to the movies, the stores, the hotels, motels and to the "private" hospitals.

And let's do it by common consent and not by force. This calls for leadership from Knoxvillians of all races and faiths — from the mayor and other public officials, civic clubs, the churches, the educators and above all the business and professional people. There will be difficulties, yes, but what are difficulties to a city whose people in recent years have given Knoxville its nationally famous face lift with an Auditorium-Coliseum, Mall, Promenade and the many other physical and esthetic achievements? It can be done and we believe the time is NOW.

WE ARE WEARY and ashamed of the violence which occurred in Little Rock, New Orleans, Albany, Greenwood, Birmingham and Nashville. A new industry will think long and hard before opening in any of them. Knoxville can avoid this by taking down "no admittance" signs and becoming an All-American city.

Our local schools are on the way to desegregation. All of our public, tax-supported facilities are open to everyone. But many of our eating places still bar Negroes. So do our movies, even though Nashville and Atlanta theaters admit them.

THIS NEWSPAPER contends that private concerns are entitled under law to admit whom they please and bar whom they please. But most who bar Negroes do so because they fear the loss of their white customers. We would like to see a concerted community movement to persuade all business establishments to open their doors to everyone, and a like movement pledging all customers to patronize these establishments. We urge men and women of good faith to take up this challenge and give it a try.

MEANWHILE, PICKETS, DISBAND! Even if your resistance is passive, it will get out of hand. Look at Birmingham. Look at Nashville.

Discrimination in use of facilities open to "the public" cannot be harbored by anyone who really believes in either the Christian religion or the Constitution of the United States — or in democracy. Knoxville has a chance to prove that she is not only an All-American city, but a Southern one. The true Southerner was a gentleman.

NAME	ADDRESS

The Eighth Annual Conference of Vocational and Practical Arts Teachers was held the week of June 24-27, at Virginia State College in Petersburg, Virginia, with 400 registered delegates.

Keynote Address, delivered by

Heslip M. Lee, Executive Director
Virginia Council on Human Relations

Conference Theme

PROJECTING A NEW IMAGE IN PRACTICAL ARTS AND VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

We must always be projecting a new image in all phases of a democratic society. Let us always remember that a democracy is never static. It is a constantly moving force that challenges us continuously to reach new and higher levels of achievement each day. A community, nation or world unfinished and broken must be made whole. If American freedom is to live, then all segregation and discrimination must die. There is no more important or basic advance that our country needs to make than complete liberation of all our citizens, and the granting of their privilege of freedom to be free.

Today, we see signs that this basic idea of the American dream has come into its own and we can only hope and pray that enough responsible Americans have remained genuinely American to see this movement through. We must see to it that there are no second-class citizens in America. Thank God our President has now thrown his active support behind his words. In fact, we could say that the Executive Branch of the Federal Government is now committed to this accomplishment as well as the Judicial branch. Within the next few weeks the Legislative branch of our Government will get its chance to show the world that it too is a Congress of the Twentieth Century and not the Eighteenth.

There are many hopeful signs. Signs even to the South of us. Governor Terry Sanford of North Carolina recently said. "Reluctance to accept the Negro in employment is the greatest single block to his continued progress and to the full use of the human potential of the nation and its states. The time has come for American citizens to give up this reluctance, to quit unfair discriminations, and to give the Negro a full chance to earn a decent living for his family and to contribute to higher standards for himself and all men. WE CAN DO THIS, said Governor Sanford. WE SHOULD DO THIS. WE WILL DO IT because we are concerned with the problems and the welfare of our neighbors. WE WILL DO IT because our economy cannot afford to have so many people fully or partially unproductive. WE WILL DO IT because is honest and fair for us to give all men and women their best chance in life."

As we embark upon the second century following the Emancipation Proclamation, it is encouraging to see that there are more forces at work for the realization of Civil Rights for all Americans than ever before in our history. However, far to few leaders of Virginia have learned the practical art of advancing with America's destiny and the credit for most of the advances within Virginia must go to the Negro community itself.

I do trust that you are acquainted with the VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS, which has 23 local councils in 23 communities of Virginia, providing an opportunity for all Virginians regardless of racial, religious, ethnic or cultural backgrounds to work together for the common good of all.

This NEW IMAGE IN PRACTICAL ARTS AND VOCATIONAL EDUCATION which we are projecting, must be cast in the mold of our day. We must help Virginians to turn around and stop trying to preserve George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, Jamestown, Colonial Williamsburg, and the Civil War Centennial as hollow shrines, but see and recapture the spirit of these men and these events and use that spirit constructively for the problems of our day, just as these men led the people of their day. We must help Virginians to see that we are a part of the United States of America - that same United States which has been given the assignment as the leader of the Western World. We must recognize that we shall never be able to advocate to the nations at large any course of action based upon any higher plane or ethic than we are able to produce and practice at home. We must become ashamed and repent of the fact that while America attempts to provide food, comfort and protection for most of the distant peoples of the world, we still refuse to provide here at home the most vital of all constitutional rights - first class citizenship for everyone. We must repeat and try to teach a simple fact. so simple that every first grader should have learned it on the first day of school - in fact he or she should have learned it even before they started to school - namely, that neither the American ideals of democracy NOR the Judeo-Christian Faith we proclaim, leave any room for second class citizenship. And, we should all have been able to spell this out in action and practice by the time we learned the pledge of allegiance to our flag.

ANOTHER FACTOR in this projected image should have already become so apparent to every American citizen that we shouldn't have to waste time saying it. BUT IT HASN"T, SO WE DO HAVE TO PROJECT IT, AS SILLY AS IT IS FOR US TO HAVE TO DO SO. There is widespread discrimination against Negroes in this country in practically every area of our life - education; public facilities; voting rights; employment; religious worship; housing; and all the other facets of our social structure.

In employment; There is discrimination against the Negro in apprenticeship training. There is discrimination against the Negro in vocational as well as academic programs. There is discrimination against the Negro in labor organizations. There is discrimination against the Negro in referral services rendered by the employment office. There is the basic problem of discrimination against the Negro by employers, including those with Federal contracts. There is discrimination against the Negro in employment by the Federal Government, the State Government and the local County and City Governments. Everyone knows these things. The Negro talks about them, and is frustrated because of them. and is dedicated and determined to do something about them. While the majority of white leaders play hide and go seek and when they do talk about them, they try to say to the North, you have the problem too, rather than we all have the problem, and are guilty of the sin.

ANOTHER DIMENSION OF THE IMAGE BEING PROJECTED, and in many ways is being understood, is that the majority of the new generation of Negroes will not accept any longer an imposed inferiority in education, housing, voting rights, public facilities or employment. The past rate of so-called progress has been, or has become, to slow. This has come as a real shock to some people, nevertheless, it has come. Since it has come, each of us have a real chance to watch our Democratic form of Government in action. Local leaders have refused to exert responsible leadership in this matter. State leaders have done likewise. Therefore, we see how the founding Fathers foresaw such circumstances and provided that any citizen, or group of citizens of this country, had acess to a redress of his grievances until such redress went all the way to the Federal branches of this Government. Here the Federal Government has both the responsibility and the right to remove such causes which deny any individual citizen the opportunity to fully develop and enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Today, the Federal Government has begun to assume its role in these matters and to remove the decision from the arena of demonstrations by Negroes on the one side and the Bull Connors, Ross Barnetts and George Wallaces on the other. Walter Lippmann has summed it up so well, "We cannot count upon non-violence persisting in the face of brutal and illiterate resistance. The outstanding danger is not that there may be rioting and brawling. For these can be suppressed. The outstanding danger is a loss of confidence by the Negro people in any good faith in the white people. This is where the turning point lies at the present time. The time has come when there must be a change in the American policy... It must become a national movement, enforced by national laws, led and directed by the national government... Then, because the national power is behind the movement towards equality and status, that national power, which will be more than sufficient, can be exercised without violence, with wisdom, and with restraint. FOR IT IS THE VERY WEAK REBELS WHO FEEL THAT THEY MUST RESORT TO THE EXTREME MEASURES."

So our Government is acting, and I feel proud to be an American. I forsee the barriers being removed and that now very shortly. But what does this mean? Will this be the end of our problems? Will we suddenly come into the reality of the American Dream?

My answer is an unequivocal NO. When the legal barriers have been removed, then we shall just have begun to develop this new IMAGE which will still have to become a reality. THERE WILL STILL REMAIN MANY PROBLEMS! We shall be left at the outset with the present problems without the barriers which protected them. President Kennedy, in delivering his Civil Rights Legislative Program to the Congress recently, so well said, "There is little value in a Negro obtaining the right to be admitted to hotels and restaurants if he has no cash in his pocket and no job." Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges said recently, "Every man whose earning power is below par is a burden on the community; he drags down the whole level of life, and every other man in the community is poorer by reason of his inefficiency, whether be be a white man or a Negro... This should be the concern of all of us - practical men as well as humanitarians."

The national economy today is said to be operating at about $35 billion below capacity. The per capita income of the Negro is far below that of the white. The unemployment rate of Negro workers is more than twice as high as that of the working force as a whole. These problems will be with us after Congress adjourns. We must get across to the community at alrge why these problems exist. This is an important factor in PROJECTING A NEW IMAGE OF PRACTICAL ARTS AND VOCATIONAL EDUCATION. The Council of Economic Advisors in its recent report entitled ECONOMIC COSTS OF RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT has shown that these problems for the Negro working force stem from two causes: 1. Inefficiencies in the use of the labor force resulting from failure to utilize fully the existing skills of our people;

2. Failure to develop potential skills more rapidly and more fully. So, we must open up the labor market for Negroes and also we must step up the various Vocational Training programs in Virginia. The President of the United States is aware of these needs and has asked for legislation to: 1. Eliminatate racial discrimination in employment;

2. Step up the national economy to create jobs;

3. That Congress broaden the Manpower Development and Training Program; that additional funds be provided for the pending Youth Employment Bill, the Vocational Education Program, and the Public Welfare work-relief and training program. This would be of great help.

However, I would like to suggest some areas where I suspect we will still run into problems. Let's be fair and recognize that because of the legacy of past discrimination effects there will be some apathy, both within the Negro and White community, to readily endorse fair and Merit Employment. I can forsee the problem of many industries with an all-white work force which will largely continue to be predominantly so even if they were to begin in good faith a merit employment practice. Many industrial leaders of small businesses will simply remain defiant to change. There is the problem of the argument of community acceptance. There is the problem of token integregation which will come in industry even as it did in education. There is the problem of in-plant prejudices even after top management in good faith adopts merit employment. There is the problem of projecting the image to the Negro Communities who have for so long been deprived until apathy is an accepted pattern of life. There is the problem of automation to be dealt with and it is a big one. There is the problem of population explosion or drop-outs of high-school youth. During the school months of 1962 approximately 750,000 young people between 18 and 21 - as many as the population of San Francisco, Saint Louis or Boston - were out of school looking for jobs. It is estimated that 26,000,000 boys and girls will be added to the labor market during this decade. About one-third of these will not have finished high-school if the present rate continues.

But with all of these problems, the larger one I have saved to mention last. These are the problems which will be hidden behind the records in industrial leaders offices, within the records and minds of responsible persons in politics, in economy, and within the total social structure. These will be the subtleties which will be so hard to get at; which laws will be unable to crack easily simply because lawyers will find the technicalities which will produce them. In essence, I am saying that our greatest problem will continue to be that of HUMAN RELATIONS.

In conclusion, the Virginia Council on Human Relations is dedicated to work with you and any other agency within Virginia which seeks to improve human relations. We feel that we have many services to offer in improving and projecting a new image of our state. Through our local councils we work in all of the areas of concern and in so working, we provide the possibilities of working together. These possibilities have become actualities in twenty-three communities of our state, and we are seeking to have a Council on Human Relations in every community of the Old Dominion.

Recently, we have entered the field of employment with a new program. We are happy to announce the inauguration of a professional personnel consulting service for Virginia business establishments who wish to employ on the basis of merit, irrespective of race, creed, color or national origin.

This department of our work is called VEJOB. (Virginia Equal Job Opportunity Bureau) Mr. Gregory E. Shinert, former Executive Director of the Governor of Missouri's Commission on Human Rights, is Director of VEJOB, and through his department we offer the following services:

* IN-PLANT CONSULTING SERVICES, to assist employers in establishing their own internal procedures to carry out Company policy on merit employment.

* EMPLOYER CONFERENCES AND EMPLOYEE WORKSHOPS, to provide business and industry leaders with opportunities to meet and discuss common problems and experiences, and to explore methods of making an orderly transition to merit employment.

* RECRUITMENT SERVICES, to help identify qualified Negroes and other minority candidates and refer them to potential employers for specific openings.

We ask you to call upon us for these services and we pledge to you our best efforts in assisting you, the delegates to this Eighth Annual Conference of Vocational and Practical Arts Teachers, in projecting a New Image In Practical Arts and Vocational Education throughout Virginia.

Quarterly Report of Executive Director - Virginia Council on Human Relations

April - May - June, 1963

Office:

Gregory E. Shinert, Director of VEJOB, came on the job April 1, and has gotten off to a good start in his new role. Announcement cards have gone out to all Industries of Virginia and Brochures are being processed and will be widely distributed. Mr. Shinert has moved about all over the state talking to industrial leaders as well as political, community leaders and professionals of all kinds. The reception has been most gratifying and the co-operation has been excellent. The Richmond Urban League's Executive Director became jealous of our project, but we now have this straightened out and all seems to be moving well. We have had our first call for a service from Mr. Donald Layton, President of Virginia Elastic Company of Tappahannock, Virginia, along with the Mayor, Mr. George Clanton. With Mr. Shinert on a trip through the South, Dr. Aubrey Brown and I visited with the above mentioned gentlemen and found a real and genuine rapport and desire for our services on their part. The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce had referred them to us, and if this is any straw in the wind, then we feel that we might be on our way.

We have added a new IBM Typewriter, a folding machine, two file cabinets and a Multigraph-Lithograph machine to our equipment. We are now in a position to do our own printing.

Mrs. Elsie Adams, a Negro lady, is now a full-time employee and Mrs. Laura Lee continues to work five hours per day.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE QUARTER:

NEW COUNCILS: We had two councils ask for affiliation during the quarter and both were accepted. The first is Hopewell. This council was organized during the quarter and is located in the Fourth Congressional District which is regarded to be among the more problem areas of the state. Rev. Eugene Ensley, pastor of the Presbyterian Church is the president. They have developed a program for the remaining months of the year. The other newly affiliated council is Peninsula. This has been a co-operating group for several years but now is affiliated. One other group has now organized in Harrisonburg. I have made two trips there and spoke to about seventy-five persons in the Rockingham County Bank Building on June 18. This was a first rate group including the head of Reynolds Metals of Harrisonburg who is also the president of the local Chamber of Commerce, a member of the city planning commission, Professors from two Colleges, Clergymen and businessmen. It is only a matter of time before this group becomes affiliated with VCHR. We have the strong possibility of new councils in Louisa County and Tappahannock as well as Lexington.

PUBLIC FACILITIES: Much of my time has been spent this quarter in setting up negotiations between Negro leaders and Theatre owners and managers. Several meetings at which I presided and summed up the results, resulted in the desegregation of all Richmond Theatres and others have now followed in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax County, Lynchburg and several other places.

One of the most delightful pieces of work I have yet done was challenging the restaurant owners and managers to help us in desegregating all leading eating establishments of Richmond. The time consummed with this endeavor was long hours and hard heads, but the results are most gratifying. On June 18, thirty-five restaurants in Richmond were desegregated when two white and two Negro persons entered together at 12:00 noon. The restaurant managers had asked that we visit this way on that date. I released a news story on this at 12:45 and a recording of my remarks were carried on National CBS news at 1:00 P.M. No incidents were encountered and since that date we have continued to work on the lesser eating establishments and some 12-15 have also opened on a desegregated basis.

Things like the above are going on all over the state and we are now conducting a survey to try to determine how many public facilities have opened within the past six weeks. Restaurant owners told me that President Kennedy's National T.V. Address plus the death of Medgar Evers had been the two events which had completely changed the minds of most die-hard managers of places of public facilities in Virginia.

SCHOOLS: Most Negroes who applied for formerly all-white schools for this Fall have been admitted. Reports are still coming in but it is certain that there will be thousands attending school in Virginia this Fall. This no longer makes the front page in our conservative papers.

DANVILLE: Violence in Danville destroyed the myth that it couldn't happen in Virginia. The Mayor and City Council refused to discuss matters until things got out of hand. The Police issued permits to demonstrate and showed no signs of prohibiting it until the Mayor visited the Governor of the State and a decision was reached to follow a get tough policy. From there the tensions have mounted and relationships are broken although demonstrations have subsided somewhat. Before this report reaches you there will have been a march to Danville from all over the state led by Rev. M. L. King and we will just have to await the results. Our local council is so ably led by Mrs. Henry Bourne, wife of a medical doctor, wealthy, well read, forceful and articulate, We have other leaders working with businessmen and the City Council, but until the Mayor changes his attitude and some reversals are made in City Councils demands and policies, there are not many tangible results our council can show.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY: The Prince Edward County Story is being written and will be published and widely distributed by the U.S. Civil Rights Commission this Fall (This is not for publication yet). Michigan State University with its $75,000 grant is on the spot doing its research. ~~The Institute of Educational Research is on the spot setting up five separate schools of 100 each with its 2½ million dollars to do research on a new reading method~~. The Justice Department has announced that there will be an all new Vocational Educational Program begun in P.E. this Fall and that plans are moving ahead to have schools financed by Foundations and run by the Department of Education of the U.S. this Fall. The solving of the dilemma rests with the Fourth Circuit of Appeals which after hearing arguments on January 9, has failed until now to hand down an opinion. The Governor of Virginia says all must wait on that decision.

grant refused to be made

OTHER MATTERS: I have spoken on T. V. four times within a month on the following topics: 1. Reaction to President Kennedy's Civil Rights Legislation (I had spoken on T.V. on this topic on two former occasions). 2. If There's A Senate Filibuster Should Negroes Demonstrate as They Have Promised? 3. What have Richmond's leaders Both White and Negro Been Doing About De-Segregation? 4. My Views On The Closing Of Prince Edward County Schools for The Fifth Year.

I had a thirty minute Radio address on Sunday, June 23, and was on the popular Radio program OPEN FOR OPINION for fifty minutes on Friday, June 28. My topic for this discussion with the Radio audience via telephone was the Virginia Council on Human Relations.

Fourteen persons, seven white and seven Negro, asked for and received an audience with Governor Harrison on Tuesday, June 25. We presented a four point program for the Governor's consideration. I. That the Governor lend the good graces and influence of his office to encourage local Governmental Authorities to co-operate with existing Councils on Human Relations in solving the problems of Human Relations at the local community level and that the Governor ask that all public facilities in Virginia desegragate immediately. II. That the Governor find ways to open public schools in Prince Edward County this Fall. III. That the Governor enlarge upon his Industrial Development Program to project the image and definitely commit himself and his program to include Merit Employment in this program. IV. That the Governor convene a series of State-wide conferences, patterned after President Kennedy's National conferences, of key and blue-ribboned persons from every area of our social structure. And that the Governor persuade these leaders to assist in desegregating the entire scope of public facilities in Virginia. We got an audience, but the Governor is too limited in ability to get the message.

The Executive Committee of VCHR has voted the following: To Incorporate VCHR; to re-study our role within Virginia and spell out new areas of concern and methods for enlarging our influence immediately; To proceed on a Consultation of Opinion Makers - with 100 lawyers being invited to a state wide meeting this Fall; That VCHR buy newspaper space to largely advertise and display the work of the VCHR in key areas of the State; That new financial drives and methods be developed immediately to enlarge upon our work; That a job analysis be made and clarified for the Executive Director and Associate Director; That efforts be made to get four communities each year to develop a week's program whereby the Executive Director could visit the community and have a full week's activities on Radio, T.V., speaking before Civic groups, College groups, Ministerial groups, etc. with a mass meeting ending his week sponsored by the local council on Human Relations.

Quarterly Report
March April and May to
Southern Regional Council

During this quarter a change has taken place in the state of Georgia. The determination of the whites to give in as little and as late as possible is being contested in loud angry voices. There are bits of violence with threats of great violence. There is an increase in the push of the Negro and in his antagonism not only Negro against white but Negro against Negro. It seems impossible for the white leaders and the public officials to realize the explosiveness of the situation. If we are to have peaceful change the white man cannot be the one to decide the timing of desegregation. The situations in Albany and Savannah at this time are the most explosive.

In Savannah we stood in our member's house and looked at the bullet holes, bullets from a high powered gun. The police were saying,

"It's a good thing no one was in that chair; they would have had it in the neck. It's a good thing no one was eating in the dining room." Violence is a reality and not a threat. If in the very near future agreements are not reached and the large public demonstrations stopped, there will be great trouble.

On the positive side:

1. There are many good white people working hard behind the scenes; religious leaders, business men, politicians, women.

2. Negotiations have not broken down. White people seem to be talking in good faith.

3. Some 20 organizations have gotten together to work for peaceful desegregation of the schools. (Includes major groups - PTA, Minister's Alliance, Catholic groups, B'nai Brith, Savannah Council on Human Relations.) Mrs. McDew of our organization chaired the first meeting.

4. The city police have behaved very well, allowing maximum freedom and maximum protection to the demonstrators.

On the negative side:

1. Good white people will not come out in the open.

2. Various organizations of the Birchers are making great headway.
3. The Negroes are split. There seems to be a personal rivalry as well as an organizational rivalry between the NAACP and SCLC.
4. The school plan starting with grade 12 is terrible - worse than Atlanta. It has infuriated many people - white and Negro.

Timetable runs something like this:

Theater Fiasco: Late in May 1963 the Mayor worked for the desegregation of the theaters. The preparation was poor. Near riot followed. Hosea Williams started demonstrations - two a day. A smaller one in the middle of the day with speaking in the public parks. Then a large march at midnight. These have had as many as 2000 participants. During the day both the young groups under Mr. Alexander (NAACP) and Mr. Ben Clark (Crusade for Voters) were making small attacks on the various eating places and hotels. Bishop Stuart and other leaders began to talk with the Mayor. The Chamber of Commerce was persuaded to assume the leadership in negotiations.

June 14, 1963: Negotiations got under way, the committee meeting for 7 hours - white business leaders with Negro leadership from both factions. Demonstrations stopped.

June 15, 1963: Mr. Williams (the real leader of the demonstrations) was late for the meeting of the negotiating committee. The meeting adjourned with no action.

June 17, 1963: Mr. Williams started demonstrations again. Leaders from SCLC (Young and Walker) were in and out of town giving directions.

June 19, 1963: Fire hoses were used for the first time to break up a riot. Weariness and torrential rain halted the demonstrations for a few days. Negotiations were continuing.

July 1, 1963: Desegregation school plan released - a most abominable plan.

July 3, 1963: Demonstrations started again with a smaller number of participants.

The outcome is unknown. We believe we missed a chance to have a wonderful success in Savannah. On June 15th the sympathy in the city was with the demonstrators and against the few restaurants and hotels that were holding out. The large majority of hotels, motels, restaurants, theaters, and bowling alleys were ready to give in. But the Negroes were unwilling to stop demonstrations for as much as a week for negotiations. They stopped only three days. Part of this might be the lack of understanding of the powers of the local government officials. There is no small group of men in a city who can desegregate all, now. This the Negroes in the Movement seemed not to understand. There is one cry - Freedom NOW.

There is great lack of understanding. The white man cannot realize the need for immediate action. He has no feeling of urgency. We hope the recent failures will not mean that progress is postponed even longer than before.

ALBANY

There is a great potential for violence in this town, as reported previously. Police oppression continues at an increased rate. The City Commission is as recalcitrant as ever. We have lost two of our best members - two Episcopal ministers. They have gone to other towns. We lost our best business contact from a heart attack. (Another casualty of the revolution.) The Baptist minister, Reverend Ramsey, has gone. We will have to find more whites if we continue a council. They are there, perhaps. Dr. Anderson has moved to Detroit. Slater King is head of the Movement. The ministers have gotten together (47 of them) and issued a Manifesto. (Copy attached). They have had at least one meeting with a group of white business men. They do not have the cooperation of the Albany Movement. There are 26 SNCC young people in town. They have been arrested by the police as they have sought to work on Voter's Registration. There are also gangs of unemployed Negro young people causing constant trouble. Albany is a sick town filled with bitterness and hate.

ROME

In March and April we had sit-ins at lunch counters in Rome. Arrests and trials followed. Negotiations were set up; failed; through our efforts were set up again. To date the lunch counters are still closed. The Council has played an active part in the proceedings. There is segregationist activity. An organization (PASS - People's Association for Selective Shopping) headed by Lester Maddox has a Rome branch. There is great fear. How much of it has a real basis is hard to determine. Rome is a rough town.

Time table:

July 1962: First visit of Negroes to City Commission (with help of Mr. Holmes.) Buses and City Park desegregated immediately. However, it was several months before the details were ironed out and the buses were actually used. The park will be tested again this month. Announcement was made that the library was open. It was not until April 1963 that it was really used. There is still a problem about the waiting rooms. The Negro committee visited the Chamber of Commerce to talk of further desegregation. Early in 1963 the Chamber set up a negotiating committee of prominent citizens to meet first with the lunch counter owners and then with the Negroes. These meetings continue - the next one is July 8, 1963.

March 1963: Mass meetings started.

June 1963: A well qualified student refused admittance to a local branch of the University system for summer school. The Board of Regents has reported to us that they are investigating. There are several applications in for the new white technical-vocational school. Mr. Purcell, State Superintendent of Schools says that one Negro will be admitted in September and one in Valdosta.

The Rome Council hopes to gain membership because of its outstanding activities in recent months. Attendance is good at meetings but money has gone for bail and fines and local programs rather than memberships to the council. The number of members is not an accurate picture of the activities. See the attached brochure which is being used in a membership campaign. The greatest need is more white people. The Rome Council as a whole has achieved a color blindness that is very wonderful.

VALDOSTA

The libraries were tested and Negroes served during spring holidays. Several applications have been made for the trade school. We hope that there might be a new council this fall.

GRIFFIN

The new council is progressing nicely, but still is undecided about becoming affiliated with us.

Cooperation with other organizations:

OPERATION BREAD BASKET: Mr. Holmes continues to work with the Atlanta ministers in employment of Negroes in bakeries in Atlanta.

Y.W.C.A.: The Council cooperated with the Student Y.W.C.A. in a working conference. The Council's team worked visiting and planning program for the Griffin Council.

N.S.A. Connie Curry's summer conference will be enjoyed by students from several of our Georgia towns. We believe this will be helpful as the High School students are struggling with their organizations in many towns where our councils are working.

April 26,27,28th was a high point in the Council's history. Our first three day meeting - all living under one roof. About 80 people ages varying from 17 to 70 had an unusually rewarding experience. One of the high school students wrote to a friend,

"I attended a Conference of the Georgia Council on Human Relations at Brunswick, Georgia. The theme of the conference was 'Can Man Get Along with Man'. This was a good theme for me because I learned as I had never known before that man can get along with man."

The conference was costly. We were disappointed that the new people we have met recently throughout South Georgia did not get there. The Johnny Reb radio stations learned of the Conference and broadcast,

"The Georgia Council on Human Relations is mixing the races at Camp Reese, etc."

This sort of activity does not help dispel the fear of the South Georgian.

71 registered from 13 towns. Total cost $900.74.
$667.50 registrations. $137.50 donations. $95.74 deficit.

Rome and Macon had the largest delegations with the exception of Glynn County. It is hoped that some day we will have a special grant of money to use for conferences so that more people without funds can attned.

THE GOVERNOR

Immediately after the Conference the officers of the Council called upon the Governor. The Governor said he wished to work with us. He said if we refrained from publicity he wanted to cooperate. He repeated his request that the director keep him informed concerning trouble spots. We followed his wishes. There was no publicity. However, there has been no cooperation. The director has been unable to reach the Governor either by telephone or by letter. The only appointments of Negroes that have been made have been two members to the state Democratic Committee. At the present the Governor has not lived up to his friendly remarks.

STATE PARKS

Progress is zero. Several of our members have called on the State Park Director. Several other organizations have joined with us in seeking to persuade the director to change his attitude. The Council Staff had a most unsuccessful visit with the Jekyll Authority. Mr. Holmes has visited about half of the state's 36 parks (6 Negro). The inequalities are vast. The NAACP says there will be a Jekyll case. It has not been filed yet.

LABOR DEPARTMENT

Contacts with several members of the Labor Department concerning the State Employment Offices has been as fruitless as the meeting with the Jekyll Island Authority.

HOUSEKEEPING

Membership analysis is attached: 46 new members this quarter.
Financial statement is attached:

The Director's fund raising trip to New York was somewhat successful. We raised $2550 for current expenses. We also have the renewal of the two foundation grants we had this year. One grant for the salary and expenses of Mr. Holmes, one grant for work in South Georgia. We still need to find more new money if we hope to expand our work.

Pauley has traveled 3157 miles around the state of Georgia this quarter; Mr. Holmes 1375. New contacts have been made in Statesboro, Waycross and St. Mary's. Work has continued at Tifton, Albany. Still no new councils. Please be brutal in your criticism of our activities.

FACE THE FACTS

rome council: Face the Facts

The population of Floyd County, Georgia is 14.2 per cent Negro. This is a minority, but a minority vital to our future.

Here is a statistically verified list of opportunities available to white families in our community which are not available to Negro families.

Economic Conditions

We do not have, do not train, and cannot expect to retain professional, technical and kindred workers.

Only 2% of the entire Negro population fall into these categories.

36% fall into low economic brackets: laborers, household workers, service employees.

2% fall into the middle income bracket: managers, officials, proprietors, clerical and sales workers, craftsmen and foremen.

The economic imbalance in the Negro community is obvious, the economic strain on the white community consequently is tremendous.

The most recent statistics available show the median annual income of the Negro family in Floyd County as 42.8 per cent of the total median income of all families in Rome.

Here lies a rich and undeveloped resource in human potential for community economic health and progress, especially among the Negro youth, BUT

When asked if he, after college, intended to come back to Rome, a Negro high school student said, "I see nothing wrong with being Southern. My home is Rome and I want to come home after college, but I want my hometown to be fit to live in."

This, we believe, is what he meant:

Educational Opportunities — Separate but Equal?

A Comparison of the Main Elementary and Fourth Ward Elementary Schools, Rome, Georgia.

White Elementary School

1. 36 sq. ft. of space per pupil
2. Value of Buildings, $971 per pupil
3. No double sessions
4. Regular physical education program with trained full-time instructor
5. Band
6. Full testing programs
7. Access to vocational training

Negro Elementary School

1. 8.106 sq. ft. of space per pupil
2. Value of Buildings, $380 per pupil
3. Double sessions
4. No physical education program
5. No band
6. Only I.Q. Tests
7. No access to vocational training

Recreational and Cultural Facilities

1. A check made recently of the programs at the Carver Theatre revealed poor quality, little more than C grade movie fare. Negro students studying Julius Caesar in their classrooms had to forego the opportunity to see a recent performance at a downtown theatre. Countless opportunities for educational enrichment such as this one are closed to the Negro family.
2. The YMCA does not offer its programs or its physical plant to the Negro citizen.
3. Negro citizens do not have full use of the meeting facilities in the central library.
4. Negro music lovers are not accepted for unrestricted seating at the Community Concert Series, or the Rome Symphony Programs.
5. The Rome Little Theatre is open to Negroes as audience, but not as members.
6. Freedom of choice in church attendance is not openly afforded Negro families.
7. Neither Civic Clubs nor the Rome Chamber of Commerce offer membership to Negroes.
8. Although there are many qualified Negro women, neither the League of Women Voters in Rome, nor the American Association of University women in Rome have accepted Negro members.

PASTORS' MANIFESTO

We, the Pastors of Albany, God-fearing servants, accept the responsibility which the trend of our time has thrust upon us. We are faced with the task of establishing relationships between the white and Negro citizens of Albany in order to reach agreements necessary for peace and progress in our city. We prayerfully approach this task in our Lord's Name, asking His guidance and seeking to do His Will.

This nation is an active and growing democracy and we are in full understanding of the ideals and goals of her people. We are called upon to establish the democratic ideal and make it evident in our lives.

We, the Albany Pastors, call upon all God-fearing people in our city to unite as never before, laying aside old wounds, to build a city of true brotherly love.

Since laws which have separated us have been wiped from the books, we seek to encourage responsible, civic minded, and moral citizens to rid our city of the evils of undemocratic living. We pledge to work for the enforcement of the spirit of the law as well as the letter of the law - words written "not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God -- for the Spirit gives life."

The problem of our community is a part of a world-wide problem, and by observation we have noted that whenever and wherever men of good will have come together and were willing to reason their problems out, workable solutions have been found. We believe with the help of the Almighty God the same may be obtained here.

We pledge that we as ministers of the Gospel and leaders of our congregations will make the needed sacrifices, will work shoulder to shoulder with all Albanians to seek to understand, to forgive, to work unceasingly for honest discussion and solution of our present problems. We remember the words of our Master:

> "A man may say, 'I am the light'; but if he hates his brother, he is still in the dark. Only the man who loves his brother dwells in light; there is nothing to make him stumble. But one who hates his brother is in darkness; he walks in the dark and has no idea where he is going, because the darkness has made him blind."

With the full realization that love is not a matter of words or talk, but must prove itself in action, we a group of 47 ministers pledge our strength in overcoming the evils in our city.

VIRGINIA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
17 EAST CARY STREET
RICHMOND 19, VIRGINIA

July 9, 1963

Dear Presidents and Officers of all Local Councils:

Much has happened and is happening in human relations since I last pestered you about raising your chapter quota for the Virginia Council.

Enclosed is the financial report for January through June of this year. "New South and refunds not included" means that subscriptions and local dues have been deducted from gross amounts sent to the state office so that "received to date" is the net amount of your chapter to the state budget.

The time is NOW to raise your quota and the budget. Circumstances such as the President's backing, the outspoken endorsement by the Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church and other leading church officials, the formation of a Commission of Religion and Race by the National Council of Churches, etc., and etc., make a good climate for an appeal for money.

The following is from a letter of mine which, however, needs considerable adapting by now since things have moved so fast. You can probably appeal to people's greater desire to participate in some such way:

"Are you doing all you can to improve race relations? None of us are probably, but here is an opportunity to support a state-wide group. Through it you can make your daily individual efforts more effective.

"The President said: 'It is a time to act in the Congress, In state and local legislative bodies and, above all, in all of our daily lives'. Also he said in his speech to Congress: 'I ask you to look into your hearts - not in search of charity, for the Negro neither wants nor needs condescension - but for the one plain, proud and priceless quality that unites us all as Americans: a sense of justice. In this year of the Emancipation Centennial, justice requires us to insure the blessings of liberty for all Americans and their posterity - not merely for reasons of economic efficiency, world diplomacy and domestic tranquility - but, above all, because it is right'."

Here in Alexandria we have been told by donors that it is most effective to be asked for a specific sum (such as $5 monthly and $60 a year) and that they like the idea of giving enough money to one organization to be really effective instead of scattering a few dollars here and there. Even if you don't get $60 from each person, I am sure youget more by naming a specific sum.

As I have written you before, getting these letters out and following up is a spot job which I am sure you will find more possible to find a person to do now than ever before. Don't just aim for your quota - you can do more - we did.

Aim higher than you think you should and send out at least 50 to 100 letters not only to members, but to sympathetic people in the community - especially church people in view of many denominations urging participation in the last weeks.

The $8,000 plus contributed for the budget is good but there remains almost $5,000 to go and this is the harder part to get. The Governor is not going to appoint a State Human Relations Council so we are going to have to carry the ball. We're doing it - Happy Lee and Aubrey Brown have recently been invited to Harrisonburg and Tappahannock to set up councils at the request of leading citizens - but we will have to continue. Also, the Southern Regional Council reminds all of its affiliates that the Executive Directors get meager salaries. Our Virginia Council is just now coming into its period of greatest usefulness - send your finance appeal letter firmly convinced of this!

Sincerely,

Mrs. George A. Eddy, Chairman
VCHR Finance Committee

FINANCIAL

As of this date:

Funds carried over from 1962	$2387.61
Contributions Jan. 1 to May 31	1977.50
Membership dues Jan. 1 to May 31	1141.00
Collections for New South Jan. 1 to May 31	848.00
Collected in State Total	$6354.11

(Note: This makes us eligible for the $2000 matching funds on the basis of dollar for dollar over $3500)

Total Income July 1 through December 31:

SRC Matching funds	$2000.00
SRC Grants	1700.00
Cash on hand	2835.14
Savings	3275.00
Total*	$9810.14

* This does not include those monies to be received by memberships and contributions between now and the end of the year. I would estimate such income as not exceeding $300.

Liabilities July 1 through December 31 (based upon amended budget approved by Board of Directors June 8, 1963):

Salary Executive Director	$4500.00
Salary Secretary (25 wks @ $65)	1625.00
Travel($1175 less 373.04)	801.96
Moving Expenses Exec. Director	700.00
Office Supplies, Printing ($800 less 286.51)	513.49
Postage ($720 less 351.95)	368.05
Telephone ($400 less 105.48)	294.52
Miscellaneous ($200 less 19.30)	180.70
Books	100.00
Rent (service charge)	90.00
Audit, bank charges ($50 less 17.50)	32.50
Total	$9206.22

At the end of 1963, therefore, the Florida Council will have carry-over funds (excluding membership-contributions collected before the end of the year) totaling $603.92. This is far short of $2500 seen as necessary for carry-over by the Board ~~in~~ last spring,

A two-fold response to this situation is:

1) An increased effort for new memberships and contributions for this year's budget.

2) Depleting certain budgeted liabilities (such as travel, telephone, books).

Also, Paul, a clarification on the ½ quarterly grant paid in January. I am slightly confused, for I heard you say two things, or at least I thought I did. It was my understanding that SRC would pay the full $850 in January if an Executive Director was immediately committed, though not in residence. I realize the $850 was paid in April, but thought it would also apply to the first grant also. That other $425 would complete the $7400 I understood was on tap for the FCHR.

QUARTERLY REPORT CONTINUED (3)

THE FLORIDA SITUATION - GENERAL

At the State meeting June 8, a rather complete report was given from chapters of the FCHR, including Brevard, Dade, Ft. Pierce, Gainesville, Lee, Jacksonville, and Tampa. The most significant observation made at this meeting was the lack of communication between local chapters of FCHR. Further, there was little program depth shown, especially in areas of housing and voter registration. Committees on Program were instituted, and will be used more extensively in the future.

On June 18-19 the Executive Director travelled from Birmingham to Tampa to speak to and help the group there assembled to become active in the State organization. About 50 persons attended the meeting, and the follow-up will be July 10-11, with the ED in attendance. Contacts with Mayor and other political leaders has been made.

NOTES ON STATE RALLY

FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

1) Board of Directors meeting (see separate minutes)

2) Forum on "Needs and Deeds; Statewide"

Rev. Lou Mitchell presided. He called the roll of councils to hear what they have done and plan to do. Broward County opened the subject of voter registration and a general discussion of it ensued. Dade County raised the question of apprenticeship and employment in the skilled trades. Ft. Pierce reported considerable progress in desegregation of restaurants and good cooperation from officials. In the discussion a warning was sounded against complacence. Lee County reported considerable cooperation from the local newspaper. Time ran out before all councils could report.

3) Board committees met to organize themselves.

4) Afternoon session "Problems and Progress; Southwide"

Dr. Dreger presided. He thanked Bethune-Cookman College and Dr. Moore for playing hosts to this meeting.

Dr. Moore paid tribute to Professor Mary L. Divers, a long-time supporter of the FCHR, who died after a heart attack suffered in this very chapel.

Paul Anthony, Field Director of the Southern Regional Council, spoke eloquently of the urgency of the race problem in the United States.

5) Mr. Mitchell took over as discussion leader for consideration of goals. There was general agreement on voter registration and education, employment and manpower training, and student activity as areas of desirable action for the FCHR. Mr. Mitchell expressed his gratitude to the Council for calling him here and to the Dregers for their assistance.

Minutes
BOARD OF DIRECTORS
Florida Council on Human Relations

The Board of Directors met in the Chapel of Bethune-Cookman College at Daytona Beach on June 8, 1963, at 10:00 a.m. with President Dreger in the chair. Directors present were Mrs. Chesley, Mr. Davidson, Mrs. Eddy, Rev. Mr. Graham, Dr. Howard, Mr. Johnson, Mrs. Kimball, Bishop Louttit, Mrs. Miles, Dr. Moore, Mrs. Mosely, Dr. Porter, Mr. Spivey, Dr. Thompson, Mrs. White, Dr. Williams, Dr. Georgia Dreger, Acting Executive Director, and Mr. Lou Mitchell, Executive Director-Designate attended. A number of members of the Council were present as spectators.

The minutes of the meeting of January 26, 1963, were approved as mailed out.

The President reported that the Executive Committee had approved the minutes of its meeting of March 26, 1963.

Mr. Davidson, the Treasurer, reported that a Jacksonville accounting firm had audited the accounts before the transfer of records to Daytona Beach, charging the Council only $8.50. He submitted a report showing a balance on hand of $3673.53, not including certain funds from Southern Regional Council which are in a savings account. He noted that the income item "contributions" was below what it should be. He urged that local councils remedy the situation. Approval of his report was moved, seconded, and carried. Approval of changes in six lines of the budget, recommended by the Executive Committee, was moved, seconded, and carried. A motion of thanks to the auditors was moved, seconded, and carried.

Mrs. Miles reported on the work of the Office Committee in finding and redecorating an office in Daytona Beach. A motion of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Goldman, who are giving the use of the office, was moved, seconded, and carried.

The Acting Executive Director made a final report on her tenure. She linked her work to that of the President, as they had worked closely together. She expressed gratitude to the staff of the Southern Regional Council and to many members of FCHR who had helped in the work. She pointed out the need of more communications among local councils, of a local committee structure reflecting the Florida Council pattern, and of student activity.

Dr. Williams reported briefly on decisions by the Executive Committee, which met June 7, 1963. (Its actions are reported in separate minutes.)

The President informed the Board that a personnel policy statement had been approved by the Executive Committee and would be circulated. Changes can be proposed at future board meetings. The President thanked Rev. Ed. Graham for his work on the committee.

The President reported that Rabbi Taxay's By-Laws Committee has been at work and will report to the Board in writing.

Charters were presented to the Tallahassee and Sarasota (or Upper Pinellas) councils.

A name change from Northeast Florida Council on Human Relations to Human Relations Council of Greater Jacksonville was approved.

The President announced that he and Dr. Georgia Dreger would be out of the state after June 15 and that business should go to Vice President Dean Henrine Ward Banks at Bethune-Cookman until July 1.

Meeting adjourned at 10:32 a.m.

Minutes

Executive Committee
Florida Council on Human Relations

June 7, 1963 - Ormond Beach

The Executive Committee met at 8:00 p.m. in the dining room of the Star in the South Motel, President Dreger presiding. Present were members Messrs. Davidson, Howard, Williams, and Mesdames Banks, Chesley, Miles, and Moseley. Also present were the Acting Executive Director (Dr. Georgia Dreger) and Mr. Chesley.

The minutes of the meeting of March 9, 1963, already mailed to members, were warmly approved.

The treasurer's report, showing expenditures for 5 months against the budget for 1963, was submitted and discussed. The following significant facts were noted:

1. The Executive Director will be on the payroll for 6 months, not 7, in 1963.
2. The payroll tax item was overestimated.
3. The office rent item can be reduced because Mr. Goldman is donating the use of two rooms, making only a service charge.
4. The expenditure already made for "office secretary" was necessary to prepare for moving the office.
5. "Office Supplies and Printing" and "Postage" were underestimated, if we judge by 5 months' experience.
6. Redecoration and furniture will call for $500 or $600.
7. A typewriter and a mimeograph will have to come out of "Equipment" and "Miscellaneous."
8. Discrepancies in "New South" and "Refunds to local councils" items are self adjusting.

After discussion it was moved, seconded, and carried that the budget be adjusted by decreasing "Payroll, Exec. Dir." by $240, "Payroll Taxes" by $580, and "Rent" by $400: and increasing "Office Supplies and Printing" by $400, "Postage" by $420, and "Equipment" by $400.

In the course of the discussion the committee agreed that Mr. Mitchell should have expenses but not salary for any work done for the Council before July 1. The committee also heard the report of Mrs. Miles on the work of the local committee to prepare the office. A number of suggestions were made and noted by Mrs. Miles.

It was moved, seconded, and carried that, because of the special character of the by-laws committee as a special, one-time committee, the Executive Committee ratify the payment of travel expense for the one meeting which the committee held.

It was moved and seconded that Board members whose attendance at committee meetings is required may request and receive reimbursement at 8 cents per mile for that part of their travel beyond a 100-mile radius of the meeting place. An amendment was moved to make the policy effective from January 1, 1964. Amendment and motion carried.

The President reported on the correspondence with inactive Board members. All but two have reacted. The Rev. Paul Wagner has not replied to queries. Since Mrs. Lewis has not yet replied, Mrs. Chesley agreed to explore her interest in the Council. Mrs. Hankins has not sent in her questionnaire, but there has been some correspondence with her and Mrs. Miles knows of her interest.

The President expressed appreciation for the work of the Office Committee and asked that a letter of appreciation go from the secretary to Mr. Goldman, the letter to include acceptance of responsibility for the service charge and recognition that occupancy may be terminated if the building is sold.

The Acting Executive Director indicated that Mr. Lent, the Jacksonville Council's executive, was willing to help the Florida Council. It was moved, seconded, and carried that in cases where the Executive Director of the FCHR is not available for a local situation, the President, the Vice-President, or--after July 1--the Executive Director may invite Mr. Lent to act for the FCHR.

The Acting Executive Director indicated the need of regular reports from local councils and of clarification of the status of local councils.

A proposed statement of personnel practices* was read and then revised. A description of the qualifications for the Director was dropped, since he has been employed. Provision was made for the Treasurer to approve the expense accounts of the Director and for the Executive Committee to approve capital expenditures over $50. Other revisions were primarily in language. The Committee approved the revised statement. Mrs. Chesley will prepare a fair copy for the files.

The meeting adjou ed about 11:00 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

H. Franklin Williams, Secretar

BROTHERHOOD or RACIAL ENMITY?

(The following editorial is reprinted by special permission from the Fort Myers News-Press, June 2, 1963, William R. Spear, Editor.)

The long struggle of American Negroes toward equality of status has now reached a new era of intensity. In cities all over the South they are militantly on the march to wipe out the tattered remnants of Jim Crow, to eliminate discrimination and segregation and gain access to public facilities on equal terms with whites, to establish their rights as citizens and their dignity as human beings. In many places their movement takes the form of demonstrations and is marked by violence and destructive hatred on both sides. But it is not going to subside. It will certainly grow. It must be considered actually a revolution.

Some towns have been blessedly free up to now of the troubles and disorders that have broken out elsewhere. What should be the attitude of the white people in these communities so far spared the open strife? Is it realistic for them to congratulate themselves on their current surface placidity and simply assume that it will continue? Is it sensible to suppose that although their practices follow the pattern of Birmingham, Jackson, Tallahassee and the rest they will somehow be able to cling peacefully to the pattern where the others cannot? Is it prudent for them to rest upon nothing but hope, or to imagine that their Negro citizens are somehow different from other Negroes, or to think that closing their eyes and doing nothing will represent a useful policy?

No, these attitudes are blind and bankrupt and they will not do in this day. The white people in the towns so far unshaken by open racial strife must do otherwise, and the only cause for congratulation they have in their freedom from trouble at present is that this leaves the initiative in their own hands.

First, they need to disabuse themselves of the comforting notion that the troubles elsewhere are solely the work of "Communists" or "outside agitators" and that their resident Negroes if left to themselves would be fully content with things as they are. They need to realize that times have changed, that the Negroes in their own midst like those elsewhere will no longer accept an inferior status imposed upon them in education, in jobs and in public facilities generally, and that they feel deeply about it.

They need to realize, too, that patience is no longer a useful counsel to many Negroes, whether it comes from their own or from white leaders. For nearly a decade now they have been waiting patiently for the rights promised by the Supreme Court ruling which demolished the "separate but equal" doctrine and for longer than that they have been waiting for the equality of citizenship which the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution purported to establish for them. They are not going to wait patiently much longer.

Further the white people must see that their own attitude will determine the attitude of their Negro community, that on their action or inaction the course to be taken by the Negroes depends. They can reinforce the confidence of the Negro people in the good faith of the whites or they can destroy it. They can encourage the Negroes to follow leadership marked by wise restraint and by respect for important community values or they can impel them to the preachers of hate. They can generously offer in brotherhood the rights that can no longer be withheld anyway or they can deny them and sow the enmity that will then be inevitable.

The communities that have escaped racial strife to the present have this choice. But the choice is there. It must be made.

"The Fire Next Time" -- In Florida, NOW?

Address by Paul Anthony
Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council
June 8, 1963

There are people in Atlanta, notably my superiors at the Southern Regional Council, who are developing a serious doubt about the frequency with which I come to Daytona Beach!. . .This is the second time this year that I have addressed the Florida Council on Human Relations. On the last occasion it was as a last minute substitute when nothing was expected and one was appreciated for trying. That is by far the most favorable circumstance for a speaker.

By contrast today, in addition to having been forewarned, I am very impressed by the importance of this occasion. In a sense this is the rebirth of the Florida Council on Human Relations. Ralph and Georgia Dreger have done a magnificent job and we cannot commend them too highly. They hand to us and to Lou Mitchell a strong infant.

Thinking of the Florida Council as an infant is both a pleasant and a frightening thought. Pleasant, because it gives us an opportunity to look at the new day and the new future unemcumbered by too much of the past. Frightening, because we are on the verge of a new day in race relations in the South and in the nation. There is a new future, so new that prudent men are very cautious in their predictions about it.

A NEW FUTURE

Recently, on a Sunday morning, one of the nation's most competent newspaper reporters was speaking on the phone from a cluttered hotel room in Birmingham to a high government official in Washington. The reporter had spent the night covering the tragic riots of that city and he described the night's events in detail. At the end of the conversation the official in Washington asked, "What does it mean?" In all seriousness the reporter replied, "Go back and read James Baldwin again. This is the fire next time." *

This is, as of the last few weeks, a fire next time if not "the" fire. I speak of it cautiously not only because there is definitely such a thing as self-fulfilling prophesy, but because none of us--no individual in this country--knows what it means at this moment.

But, it does mean something. It means something for human relations councils; for the whole concept of the interracial, non-violent approach to change. It especially means something to the new Florida Council.

To look very gently and very cautiously into the near future I should like to make a prediction and then--probably foolishly--to wander around with the implications of that prediction, if it is a correct one.

NUMBER ONE DOMESTIC PROBLEM

I predict the Negro has begun a process which will--rather quickly--make the race problem in the United States the country's number one domestic problem.

This may not sound like a very bold prediction. After all, any number of people have been saying for years that the race problem was our number one problem. But saying this has not made it so. It has been a "convenient" number one problem, remembered with an occasional intense drawing room vogue, fine campaign oratory, excellent platform promise, but manipulated callously in public life and pushed aside in private life when it became boring or distasteful. Until now our "number one" problem has been such that drawing room drapes could shut out the sights and smells--and even the screams--of black slums. Our "number one" problem has--until now--been the kind that could, for the sake of expediency, be shunted aside for votes or unity on wheat and harbors and public debts and all manner of immediately vital issues.

This kind of convenience is not that of a number one problem--and this, if the signs are correct, is just what the Negro in America is about to change.

The Slumbering Giant Awakened

The sights and smells and all of the screams of the slums and the ghetto are beginning to come downtown. The drawing room drape is no match for this. I wish every person in this country could have toured a small area in downtown Birmingham on a recent sunny Sunday. The ashes of burned buildings were still smoking, pieces of brick and broken bottles were everywhere, as were pieces of automobiles and fire hoses. State patrolmen directed traffic with shotguns under their arms. Every street was blocked by two cars and eight to twenty exaggeratedly armed men. And around it and through it all, the dark, silent, sullen faces of the people who lived there. On those faces there was the blank, expressionless nothing; the highly developed defense of the Negro living in the white man's slums. In those eyes, however, there was a hatred which threatened even the usual defense of the blank face. There was almost promise in those eyes: Every week has one Saturday night.

Perhaps I am exaggerating this. I think not. I think the slumbering giant was awakened in Birmingham. I think no man and no group of men controlled that giant. I think pure hate--the kind of pure race hate that Klansmen know as they castrate a helpless, nameless Negro--filled those people and overflowed into ghetto streets against white policemen. When the uneasy quiet settles--that uneasy quiet where the slum dweller knows he has won nothing, when all the uptown white men send the Negro spokemen back to the ghetto empty handed--and then go on TV to apologize for even having brushed a few crumbs off the table--then there is nothing left but an opportunity to hate. Maybe the "downtrodden" Negro had the dignity of protest for one instant; maybe the school child had the exhilaration of "I'm not gonna take it; I'm gonna change it now!" Maybe the poolhall drunk one night lashed out against the despised blue uniform instead of at himself. But after all this when the quiet settles in--when the deep, segregated, tokenism, third-class citizenship quiet settles in--hate settles in with it. And when hate leaves the slums and smashes in the drawing room window, it will be one of the reasons why the race problem has become number one.

But there are other reasons.

The New Speech

If such a thing is possible, responsible Negro "leaders" have perhaps been betrayed even more than have the Negro masses. The responsible Negro leader has tried to lead according to the rules established by the orthodox white society. Even when the facts said otherwise, he has put faith in good will, in good intent, in public battles and private promises. For their effort, all too often these people have found themselves betrayed by the whites and denounced by their Negro neighbors. In the Negro communities of this country, yesterday's "aggressive, militant" leaders are--not always but too often--today's tired discards.

Some of these leaders grope with exasperation. Recently a Negro "leader" sat in his office and talked to a man--not The Man--but a man in the White House. The leader had spent most of two days urging people not to use violence, to wait. He was worried and his call to Washington was the last gambit. This man was a dignified, brilliant, deeply religious person, a college president. The voice from the White House was patient, quiet, reasoning--of another world where one's family did not sleep in the basement to avoid bombs. Finally the Negro leader changed from the informal, first-name speech to the formal, and from dignity to exasperation. "Mr. Blank, I'm tired. I'm tired of trying, tired of begging my people not to shoot, tired of too little too late. I'm tired, Mr. Blank. My ass is tired." Click! End of conversation and perhaps end of an era.

Or another telephone conversation reported to have taken place between the South and Washington. "Thank you, Mr. Attorney General, but I don't want to call you Bobby. I want to call you Mr. Attorney General, because I want to speak to the Attorney General of the United States."

This is another reason why the number one problem is becoming a reality: Recently, just very recently, Negroes have been speaking to Washington the way no people have spoken to the Capitol before. The new speech has nothing to do with the recent-old pattern of manipulation, persuasion, pressure, and compromise. The new message is: "Go to the devil!"

Growing Impatience of the Young

There is one other group we have to mention in this new scene, the young people, mostly college related. This is the group who as recently as February, 1960 in Greensboro used the then revolutionary sit-in technique in the South. At that time the new movement was rightfully interpreted as a sign of the growing impatience of the young with the slow rate of change.

This is part of the group now starting something new. It is too early to describe it explicitly, but a part of the technique is the mass demonstration, the mass arrest, the bodily mass protest, with no particular apparent loyalty to "non-violence" as a philosophy or a technique. It is also too early to say why this new protest has come into being, but there are some clues. There seems to be a disappointment, a deep sense of exasperation, at the practical arguments--the idea of change for the sake of "good business," for instance. After all, what could be more insulting to the human spirit than to say, "All right, you can eat here, but only because it creates a better climate for industrial growth." Some of the recent statements--rather radical ones for their time--from Chambers of Commerce in Charlotte, Raleigh, Durham, and Atlanta seem to begin showing a little awareness of this. Pleas for change are a little broader than "good business." But there still is so little, such a small clamor of voices saying "It is right" that one wonders what this loud silence is doing to the human spirit of these injured people.

These young people also show evidence of having added a new pride in doing for themselves, without legal maneuvering, without adult leaders; perhaps finally capturing a feeling of dignity--so long denied--out of the simple act of doing.

Political Gambits Topsy-Turvy

In politics the number one problem becomes reality because all the civil rights political gambits are becoming topsy-turvy. Anything can happen hereafter, and that which could blueprint election victories last year could be 18th Century political strategy by 1964.

Recently the national administration indicated that strong support would be given to federal legislation requiring all public businesses to serve the public. This is a radical political gesture. Yet, in these cities where masses of young people are pushing for just those results, this announcement has caused barely a ripple. Even so radical a political move--one which would have been greeted enthusiastically a very short time ago--seems now to be a little late for these people. The answer in lack of excitement seems not only to be "Go to the devil," but "Don't bother--we'll do it and we would prefer to."

Interestingly, all of these elements of the new order are jumbled together. The slum dweller, the young (educated and uneducated), the leader (indigenous and outsider)--are all jumbled together in a complex pattern that has only one certain characteristic: unity. The unity is not always automatic. In fact, the new struggles are often particularly marked by disunity at first. But unity is inevitably the result after the first clashes with the enemy.

White Society Has Willed It

The white society has shown great reluctance, indeed has refused to see individuals who are dark-skinned. Only Negro has been seen. Governments have not appointed individuals, they have appointed Negro. The majority society has lectured, "Pull yourself up by your own bootstraps." When the individual has done just that, the same bland society looks impersonally right through him and says, "Negro."

To the extent that it existed, white politics created the "Negro block vote." The block vote was a reaction and a defense of people who were given no choice. Now, to the extent that it exists--and it is beginning to exist predominantly--white society is creating the Negro en masse. Behind the mask of color there is beginning to exist the hard, insoluble grouping--Negro. White society has willed it, without alternative, and it is becoming so.

This, above all else, is why "our race problem" genuinely is becoming our number one problem.

Ironically, this is happening at a time, for the South at least, when there are signs that the white majority has learned a great deal. All of us have been so concerned with statistics and numbers, in itself a legitimate concern with dreary conclusions, that we have sometimes overlooked the tremendous process of education going on in the region. In many parts of the South masses of white people have accepted the inevitability of change, and a growing minority of whites have seen the rightness of it. Political structures that promoted the old order have been overthrown. In a few instances the new politicians have even given some indication of supporting positive measures. Business men and community leaders who had already gotten credit for leading have, in some situations, actually begun to lead.

These groups and these people will probably find it the hardest to understand the new mood and the new era. Cities with a so-called record of good race relations--Raleigh, Nashville, Atlanta, Charlotte, for instance--are and will be stunned to find themselves the centers of renewed controversy and potential violence. "Why pick on us? Look what we've done," will be the naive, confused, and sincere response.

Very much the same response will come from government officials, local, state, and federal. The sound of the wounded innocent will probably be particularly loud among the functionaries at the national level.

THE NEW DYNAMITE

These situations I have described represent real danger in terms of human relations.

Black Nationalism

With the Negro community, the much touted patience is obviously wearing very thin and is giving way to black nationalism. We have watched the phenomenon of the Black Muslims, have understood it, and deplored it. This form of extremism is not yet a mass movement and is not, therefore, a major threat. In commenting on them a minister once said: "If the Black Muslims could somehow put Christ in the movement they would explode overnight." In a sense this is what is now threatened: Not that a Christ will be put into a formal movement, but that a black nationalism will be put into the whole of Negro society.

It is understandable that seemingly patient people would now become publicly very impatient, and no nonsense about it. It is understandable that open anti-white feeling would dominate some of the recent mass meetings in Birmingham and elsewhere. It is understandable that some of the predominantly Negro civil rights groups would feel compelled to seek out the most dramatic situations without particular regard f for all the factors involved. These things are understandable and at present they are manageable. But, if they go much further, as they threaten to do, the job of building a society of unity will be considerably more difficult.

In this regard Negro leaders, white leaders, politicians, private agencies concerned with human relations, all of us must be especially aware of the new dynamite with which we are playing.

The new push is a very human thing made of very human people. There seems to be no alternative but for an injured people to turn to hate after they have been immediately and personally rebuffed. When a mass of people begin a movement, powerful forces come into play. People are called on to make superhuman sacrifices and they do just that. All of the tragic pent-up rebellion comes out and for just an instant people not only make superhuman sacrifices, they become superhuman.

It is dangerous, indeed I would venture to say it is cruel, to play with the emotions of these people, to make promises which are not to be fulfilled, to lead without being able to deliver. This is a caution which I would direct to no one in particular but to everyone in general from Washington to Atlanta.

No Luxury of Time

With the general white community there are concerns of an equally serious nature. With the well-meaning moderate--moderate individual and moderate city--the rather remarkable education of the last decade has got to be greatly accelerated. These people and these places must come to understand that for all our progress we have just begun and can no longer enjoy the luxury of time we have had in great abundance. To do otherwise will be to lose what little progress we have made.

For the determined status quo--individual and city--the real tragedy is in the making. The Negro has become the irresistible force, and if whites insist on becoming the immovable object a frighteningly high price of bitter disunity will be the cost. Jackson, Mississippi now shows signs of reaching this kind of situation. In Jackson and elsewhere, wide sweeping change toward genuine unity will come, or the status quo will strangle itself by the very strength of the hold it has to maintain on itself. And we will have in an increasing number of cities what we now have, for instance, in Albany and Montgomery: a wide gulf across which angry whites and bitter Negroes stare at each other. Cities, places where people live, literally and medically sick with hate.

PURPOSE WITH COURAGE AND WITHOUT APOLOGY

If this prediction and these observations are correct, this is not a very pretty world for the infant Florida Council on Human Relations. On first reaction the loyal workers and supporters might wonder why they've bothered; Lou Mitchell might go look for a new parish even before he gets here, and we might all go home to await the horrible day of doom.

Actually, the world we have just described is one which especially needs a Florida Council. A council of good people, good ideas, and most importantly, good will. A council without illusion as to the seriousness of the problems with which we deal. One with the ability to have a real sense of urgency without panic. And one to have a real purpose with courage and without apology.

On an immediate and practical basis what can we do?

1. Appraise Our Situation

With an understanding that even mile by mile within the state, conditions vary a great deal, we must appraise our situation and know it in considerable detail. Where real dangers exist, immediately, we must concentrate our resources. From here on, fire-fighting will be an important part of our program.

So, too, we must know where real potential for change exists. Where it does we must take every advantage of that potential and deliver as much of decent and orderly change as we possibly can. We must do it not as white delivering to Negro or as Negro taking from white but as people together freeing themselves from a thing which is harmful to all of us.

2. Explain This New Urgency

We must try to explain this new sense of urgency to the people of Florida. In our publications, our conversations, our programs, our conferences, we must interpret what is really happening all over the nation. We have to try to expose the myth of "It can't happen here!" The Mayor of Jackson, Mississippi only last week boasted of their good race relations. Not too long ago the people of Albany--when they still had a bus system, parks, swimming pools, and seats in their library--would have told you of how happy their colored people were. Just a few weeks ago, before the very dangerous violence, the Mayor of Nashville could have truthfully given you a long list of the good changes that had taken place there.

Beyond the myth of "It can't happen here" we must try to explain why "moderate gains are not enough." This will be extremely difficult, but the key to trying is the fact that we are dealing with people. If we are very skillful and if the people with whom we deal are basically decent, then perhaps they can understand "person" and "individual" where they cannot understand "Negro" or "integration." We must explain that to a person, half-free is no better than half-well. That we are trapped not so much by having to create a better industrial climate, though that does enter the picture, as that we are trapped by our religious and political heritage.

We must explain too--honestly and with some pride--that we have good things here in the South. Some very good traditions as well as some very bad ones. That there is still--thank goodness--some real good will and affection among our people. That we are, and no corn pone nonsense about it, all Southerners, all living in and loving our region. We must explain that we want to avoid that cold and impersonal ghettoed eastern industrial society that has been the source of all of the new intellectual bitterness.

Hopefully, we have even honor in large enough measure to do something really good.

3. Be More Than Just Well-Meaning

We must get over the last vestiges of our own feeling of being a "little band of good people." We are good people and have been a little band. Knowing well our recent history as a Council, you may think me foolish to talk in terms of a Florida Council of thousands of members; but it is not foolish. A Florida Council on Human Relations of 5,000 or 10,000 members must be a possibility. Surely there are many times that number of people in this state who believe as do. Surely if in Mississippi, with less population, a group of racist-anti-democratic bigots can boast of a membership of 80,000, we can talk in terms of 10,000. We must.

And we must be more than just good. This is especially true of the standards we place on ourselves, our Council, and our Council staff. We must be more than just well-meaning. Especially, your Director Lou Mitchell must be more than just well-meaning.

Help this man, help to educate him, support him. Judge him by the most exacting standards, the kind of standards our day and our concerns demand. I think he is a good man; so do you. And, thank goodness, so does he. If he is good, give him the full measure of your support. If he is not, make no nonsense about it; dismiss him.

Having left that pleasant little thought, welcome, Lou and Betsy Mitchell--and good luck!

I've used a lot of words here today, certainly enough and likely too many. By only yesterday's history some of the things said here --the dire descriptions and the high hopes--would have been absurd. I don't think either is absurd today. There is a great deal to be done, an almost impossible amount of unbelievably difficult tasks. But, where better to turn than to where mankind has always had to turn in difficult times: to the people, good people of good will.

Therefore, good luck to you, too, Florida Council!

NOTE THAT: Already we have topped anticipated income for dues (including New South subscriptions). We have qualified for all available SRC grants, and these will be forthcoming. We even had greater carryover from 1962 than we had expected. BUT--we have not yet reached the half-way mark in terms of contributions above membership (remember that membership dues merely cover New South and cost of mailing this Newsletter monthly). You do not really help support FCHR financially unless you give more than membership dues.

THE STATE OF THINGS AROUND THE STATE

By extending both time and distance of a professional trip, the Dregers were able to visit several local councils during April. (Dr. Ralph is 1963 FCHR President; Dr. Georgia is Acting Executive Director pending new Director Lou Mitchell's arrival.) Summarized briefly, response was encouraging, ethusiastic. Itinerary as follows:

April 22.--Stopped over in Daytona Beach to see FCHR's new office space (beginning June) and to confer with Mrs. Pierre Miles, who is Chairman of a local committee preparing for Lou Mitchell's move to Florida from Alabama....Proceeded to Orlando-Winter Park, where Caxton Doggett had arranged a profitable interview with two prominent fellow ministers who are interested in helping to reorganize an Orange County CHR....Had dinner with FCHR Board member Denyse Eddy, her family, and three other friends interested in Orange County CHR.... Then attended regular monthly meeting of Winter Park Interracial Council. Two continuing projects of this council are supporting a college scholarship fund and sending delegates to the Annual Race Relations Institute at Fisk University, Nashville (see announcement elsewhere)....

April 23.--Luncheon meeting in Tampa with committee interested in organizing a Tampa CHR....Afternoon visit with Charles MacLennan, President of St. Petersburg CHR. Discovered they have organized their several hundred members into program commissions to carry out specific study and work in such areas as education, housing, recreation, employment on merit....Then attended evening session of Tampa human relations workshop on "The Issues We Face" held at University of South Florida (see report elsewhere)....About midnight, arrived in Clearwater to spend the night with Dr. and Mrs. Marshall Taxay, who reported on continuing progress of Upper Pinellas Branch of FCHR. They now have more than 200 members, with list still growing.

April 24.--Ran out of gas enroute to Fort Myers (Georgia should have been watching the gauge--she was driving while Realph was working on a speech)....But arrived in plenty of time for Dr. Ralph to be guest speaker for the first public meeting of Lee County CHR, held at the County Court House with more than a hundred present, including representatives of the press and two members of the County Commission. News coverage was accurate, fair, full. Chairman Col. Kenneth W. Dalton and Secretary Mrs. Olive Anderson felt they spoke for the whole group in believing the meeting to be a milestone on the way to real progress in human relations in that community. This relatively new council is actively coming to grips with human relations problems there, in spite of some opposition of the kind so familiar to active FCHR groups.

April 25.--To Miami, where Dr. Ralph had professional duties as Secretary-Treasurer of Southeastern Psychological Association. Dr. Georgia had dinner with a dozen or so members of Dade Community Relations Council. At a meeting following, Dr. Ralph arrived in time to share in presenting FCHR progress and plans. Mrs. H. Franklin Williams was elected as volunteer Executive Director for the Dade CRC.

April 26.--Dr. Georgia spoke to the newly reorganized Broward County CHR in Fort Lauderdale. Statements by Chairman E. D. (Tom) Swafford and others show that this group will again be very active in human relations work, state and local. He suggested that local councils in a given geographical area of the state should have periodic regional meetings to share common concerns.

April 27.--Back to home and FCHR interim headquarters (same address) in Jacksonville....And we haven't caught up with the records and correspondence yet!

Workshops WORK: Pensacola
Daytona
Tampa

Note this quote from our FCHR state Charter of Incorporation: "...to join with churches, religious organizations, schools and colleges in educational programs."

Some local councils may not know how many helping hands are extended to them in holding a human relations workshop. Basic planning and much hard work must be done by the local group itself, but experienced counsel backed by active participation is almost as close as asking.

In Pensacola the last week end in March, a human relations workshop was held by the Gulf Coast Unitarian Fellowship. Leader was Ernest Lent, Jr., who until a few months ago was headquartered in Boston as Director of Community Services for Unitarian Service Committee. He is now the Executive Director of Human Relations Council of Greater Jacksonville. Mr. Lent reports major topics at the Pensacola workshop concerned the function of local human relations councils, their relation to state councils, and kinds of projects which have proved effective in USC cooperation with local groups. (On March 31 Mr. Lent also spoke to the Save Our Schools group in Mobile, Ala., and to a group in Orlando on April 6. So Lent is lending a hand in a much-wider-than-Jax circle. Thanks, Ernie!)

"New Dimensions of Freedom" was this year's theme for the third annual Adventures in Human Relations Workshop in Daytona Beach, sponsored April 23-25 by three Halifax area groups (Ministerial Association, Council on Human Relations, and American Association for the UN) and by the Florida Regional Office of the Anti-Defamation League. Seven other organizations co-sponsored and four colleges cooperated. Outstanding leaders included Charles A. Hogan, Secretary, Technical Assistance Committee, United Nations; the Rev. Will Campbell, Associate Executive Director, Southern Regional Office, National Council of Churches; and Louis L. Mitchell, Jr., Executive Director Elect, FCHR.

The third annual workshop (on April 22-25) on "The Issues We Face" was held at and sponsored by University of South Florida in cooperation with Anti-Defamation League, Florida Council of Churches, National Conference of Christians and Jews, Tampa United Church Women, and Tampa Urban League. Guest lecturers were the Rev. Edward Lantz, Southeastern Director, National Council of Churches; and Dr. Morton Sobel, Director, Dept. of Colleges and Universities, ADL, New York.

Want to plan a fall workshop? FCHR Director Lou Mitchell will be glad to know and help when he gets on the job full-time as of July 1. Meantime, we're sure inquiries will be welcomed by Mr. Arthur Spiegel, Associate Director, Anti-Defamation League, Seybold Bldg., Miami.

NEWSLETTER OF THE FLORIDA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

"...to counteract prejudice and discrimination based on racial, religious, nationality or ethnic group membership."

WORDS from to THE WISE

There is a story about a dog and some people which says much about the nature of human relations work. Appearing most recently in the magazine Encounter, it was originally a news item from Brooklyn.

While walking on a city sidewalk a young couple was attacked by a large dog. The girl was knocked to the pavement and the young man frantically attempted to overcome the dog. Quickly a sizeable crowd gathered to witness the spectacle, but no one offered assistance. They were spectators--spectators who perhaps shouted encouragement or groaned discomfort, but remained spectators.

A truck stopped. The driver, unlike the crowd gathered, rushed into the fracas. He attacked the young man, beating him mercilessly, assuming that the dog was protecting the girl from the advances of the young man.

One of the reasons you and I are engaged in working with the Florida Council on Human Relations is that we cannot be spectators. We cannot be part of a crowd which gathers with words of encouragement or sorrow to witness tragedy or injustice. There is something within us which drives us from being spectators to being participants. We feel as did the truck driver when he arrived on the scene. This is good and right and commendatory. The trouble is we often proceed as did the truck driver from such feelings to action: The intensity of our desire to solve situations of tragedy and injustice tends to separate us from an accurate appraisal of the problem, and chaos results in forms of guilt and anger and bitterness.

I come to Florida as neither spectator nor truck driver, yet I recognize I may become either on occasion. My endeavor, as yours, will be to act as did the truck driver but to overcome the dog. I will take leadership of the Florida Council on July 1. I look forward to our involvement together.

LOUIS L. MITCHELL, JR.

More Local Chartered Councils

Application for FCHR charter is welcomed from any group of ten or more members who subscribe to the stated purpose of FCHR, who vote to abide by FCHR Charter and By-Laws, and who agree to pay to the state office (either from members directly or from the group treasury) an amount equal to $4.00 per member on the local rolls.

Mrs. Marvin Olsen, Secretary-Treasurer of Central Brevard CHR, says that council is already operating under FCHR charter (records in our interim headquarters had not been clear on that point). Application for Charter was received during March from Dr. Paul Minus, Secretary of Tallahassee CHR. This will make a total of eight FCHR chartered local councils, others being: Community Relations Council (Miami); HRC of Greater Jacksonville (formerly called Northeast Fla. CHR); Upper Pinellas Branch of FCHR (Clearwater); West Palm Beach Chapter of FCHR; Lee County CHR (Fort Myers).

On March 9 the Executive Committee accepted Fort Pierce Community Association as an "Institutional Affiliate," a step which involves close cooperation with FCHR, but neither the privileges nor the full responsibilities of official chartering.

LCCHR: Report and Post Script

Mrs. Olive W. Anderson, Secretary of Lee County CHR (would there were more like her reporting faithfully to FCHR!) tells of a March visit from Miss Josephine Wilkins, one of the founders and current Vice President of Southern Regional Council. "She was vacationing at Warm Mineral Springs and accepted our invitation to address the LCCHR membership.... Miss Wilkins gave us the background of SRC and of the state organizations which it sponsored. The state organizations, called Human Relations Councils, are now independent of SRC, but interrelated (like the British Commonwealth of Nations), and SRC carries on the research, provides coordination and leadership and gives information and advice upon request. Leading foundations now support SRC, and it is looked to for guidance by government, churches, and other organizations and individuals desiring a peacefully progressive South. Miss Wilkins gave the LCCHR the definite feeling of being undergirded by a vast organization and the knowledge that although we are a new organization we do have roots and we are not alone."

P. S. Miss Wilkins was picked up by the Fort Myers police, and was threatened with a charge of "loitering" while enroute to her motel from the Friendship (a Negro) Baptist Church. Her comment at breakfast next morning: "If they had held me on any charge, Fort Myers would have been on the map!" (Miss Wilkins is a life-long resident of Georgia, member of a prominent Georgia family.)

Anti-Poll Tax Amendment

Last August Congress completed enactment of a recommended amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that citizens not be denied the right to vote in national elections because of failure to pay a poll tax or any other tax. Dr. A. R. Mead, a founding member of Gainesville CHR, reminds us that the Florida State Legislature has not yet ratified this amendment--in spite of the fact that Florida Senator Spessard Holland was the Sponsor.

FCHR, as a non-profit, educational organization, cannot engage in lobbying for legislation, but our members individually can write their state legislators supporting ratification of the anti-poll tax amendment. The right time to write is right now!

More Introductions of FCHR Board Members

The Rev. Edward T. Graham
Miami
(1966)

Minister, Mt. Zion Baptist Church....Wide former experience includes work in NYC Dept. of Public Welfare, public relations for YMCA, founding and directing Greater Miami Urban League....Past President, Miami Branch, NAACP....Board and Committee memberships in Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Department of Racial and Cultural Relations, National Council of Churches; Advisory Committee, Metropolitan Government; numerous others.

Dr. Gilbert L. Porter
Tallahassee
(1965)

Listing major life work as "Education," is now the Executive Secretary of the Florida State Teachers Association, Inc....Has been identified with NAACP, Voter's League of Tallahassee, Civic League, Boy Scouts of America, and Southern Regional Council.

Board Committees on Program Appointed

Pursuant to their pledge for purposeful participation, President Dreger has appointed each FCHR Board member to one of the following program committees: (1) School and Community Facilities Desegregation; (2) Housing; (3) Community Education; (4) Law Enforcement; (5) Voter Registration; (6) Employment. First meetings called for June 8.

SHORT SHORTS FROM RECENT PAST

The Reverend Theodore Gibson, leader of Miami's NAACP, won a narrow decision (5-4) on appeal to the US Supreme Court for his stand refusing to disclose the NAACP membership list to the Johns committee.

Mrs. Harold E. Carmony, of United Church Women and Methodist Christian Social Relations, has been appointed program director for the Florida Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Isaiah Williams, Negro candidate in St. Petersburg, nearly won a seat on the City Council, receiving majority votes even in precincts with no Negro voters. Mayor Herman Goldner forwarded Williams' "success story" to the US Information Agency for use in counteracting unfavorable propaganda on racial prejudice.

Desegregation of state office buildings is supposed to begin with the 1350 NW 12th St. building in Miami. The Civil Liberties Union withdrew a suit in connection with this state government facility on firm assurance that segregating signs would be removed.

Employment on racially-biassed bases has been found in Jacksonville and Miami by the Florida Advisory Committee to the US Civil Rights Commission, both in private industry and business and in public agencies. The Greater Miami Ministerial Alliance, through the Reverend Edward T. Graham, FCHR Board member, states that denial of Negro equal employment does not result from encroachment of Cubans; reminding utility companies via a letter to President Kennedy that Negroes use telephones and electricity, Pastor Graham declares that discrimination exists in the Southern Bell Telephone and Florida Power and Light Companies. A presidential committee seeking to implement fair employment in federal institutions also found little progress in federal offices.

Although opposed by some major newspapers and a number of influential legislators, the Florida Senate investigating committee (Johns committee) was continued for another biennium with an appropriation of $155,000 by a vote of 30-14. Homosexuality and subversion are the areas the committee is supposed to investigate.

Called together by Catholic Bishop Coleman F. Carroll of Miami, a lay and clergy group met to draw up principles on race relations and other moral problems, agreeing they could speak with one voice in some things without losing identities.

"Broken Record" Needs BREAKING

(Excerpted below is testimony given before Miami hearings of the Florida Advisory Committee on Civil Rights. It is, unfortunately, a story repeated over and over again in hundreds of Florida communities, and in the personal lives of many thousands of Florida citizens.)

"I am Florence Williams, a Director of the Community Relations Council, which is affiliated with the Florida Council on Human Relations....The Council has been interested in problems of integration in the Greater Miami area.... There is a general pattern of discrimination which prevents Negroes from obtaining employment in the areas in which there are local job opportunities because these are areas in which training is essential, and they are barred from this training....The building trade unions no longer use the public schools for their beginning and apprentice training, but conduct their own school. Their policy is very simple--of just not finding any Negroes who are eligible....Preparation for registered nurses is given at Jackson Memorial Hospital and Dade County Junior College. Neither school officially bars Negroes but neither school has accepted Negro applicants....Lindsey Hopkins School has a Hotel Training Division but Negroes are not enrolled in these courses....In electronics the requirements include Calculus, and no Negro high school gives a course in calculus....In aviation the same factor would apply."

Arkansas Council on Human Relations
Quarterly Narrative Report
April-June, 1963

I. Significant Events in the State

A. In the Schools

1. On May 13 the Little Rock school officials announced assignment of 38 new Negro students to the seventh and tenth grades in seven different schools. This according to the news reports makes 102 Negro students distributed as follows: 29 in Central High; 10 in Hall High; 4 in Tech High; 1 in Southwest Junior High; 1 in Forest Heights; 19 in East Side; 5 in Pulaski; 33 in West Side.

2. On June 20 school officials at Little Rock assigned eight first grade Negro children to five formerly white schools, not more than two in any school. On Friday, June ~~xx~~ 28, the Board sent out preference forms to all white and Negro parents of students to be in the fourth grade this school year. It had established this policy on June 20 over the protest of Board President Tucker and J. H. Cottrell who objected that this abolished the policy of no lateral transfers.

3. In an editorial of June 22 the Arkansas Gazette, in reference to the above actions of the Little Rock school officials, said, "We are increasingly weary, nevertheless, with the concept that the Board should do no more than the absolute minimum in meeting its responsibilities and then hope to get by. This view is still held by a Board minority, which wanted to desegregate only one elementary grade next year. The minimum compliance theory was plausible enough in 1959 (The the Gazette supported it.) but it has outlived its usefulness in 1963." (Brackets ours.)

4. The East Side Junior High inducted nine students into the National Honor Society. Three were Negro students from the seventeen in that school.

5. On May 31 no Negro students were among those registering for the first grade at Dollarway school. Last year one Negro student was in second grade and one in the tenth.

6. On May 29 L. D. Poynter, Pine Bluff President of Arkansas Association of Citizens Councils, revealed to the press that the Pine Bluff Movement, the anti-segregation protest group, through letters to parents ~~are~~ is seeking Negro students to ask for admission to white schools this fall. The Movement confirmed the report. The letter expressed the "possibility that they will be enrolled without a court order. ..thus eliminating the possibility of intimidations" if desegregation comes through an order of the court.

B. In Organizations

1. The Greater Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations was constituted on April 22 at the school auditorium of Holy Souls

Catholic Church. This "on-going" group is composed of two representatives of some forty church bodies and church-related groups, including all major Protestant communions, Catholic and Jewish churches. The constituting meeting of the Conference was called by Bishop Albert Fletcher, Little Rock (Arkansas) Diocese of the Catholic Church; the Reverend Kenneth Teegarden, President of Arkansas Council of Churches; and Dr. Ira E. Sanders, senior rabbi of Arkansas Judaism.

2. The Steering Committee of the Conference on Religion and Human Relations (CRHR) called a session of the Conference on June 13 at Winfield Methodist Church to consider the areas of possible activity in Little Rock. It projects four meetings in the Fall to consider these areas one by one.

3. Directors of the Wesley Foundation at the University of Arkansas and at State College (Jonesboro) came under fire by local Methodist church leaders in April because of interracial activities. Don Franks, a non-clerical director at Jonesboro was not re-elected by the Board of the Foundation on May 13 by an 11 to 5 vote. He has now gone to head the Department of Physical Education of Paine College, Augusta, Georgia.

The Personnel Committee of the Wesley Foundation at Fayetteville reversed its earlier decision not to re-employ Reverend James Loudermilk as Associate Director. So on April 30 the Board voted to employ Loudermilk for another year and the senior director, Reverend A. M. Martin until December 1963 when he will retire because of age.

4. St. John's Missionary Seminary of the Catholic Church had Reverend Claud Nelson for two addresses April 30 and May 1. Mr. Nelson was Protestant reporter at the Vatican Council this year. Protestant ministers, Jewish rabbis, and their parishioners were personally invited to hear Reverend Nelson.

The Seminary also conducted a seminar on Race for its students and faculty which included the Reverend Colbert Cartwright, Pulaski Heights Christian Church, and Mr. Ozell Sutton, Associate Director of ACHR.

5. Hendrix College had Brooks Hays, former Congressman from Arkansas and special assistant to President Kennedy, in three lectures on Politicians and Social Issues, April 29-May 1.

6. The Arkansas Baptist published on April 23 an article by Ralph Creger, active layman in Calvary Baptist Church in Little Rock, entitled "The Bland Leading the Blind," a forthright espousal of "Christian attitudes" on race buttressed by Biblical quotations.

The same journal carried friendly editorials about the Greater Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations and defending the paper's use of Creger's article.

7. On May 26, at the request of Elbert Jeans, Southern project of the National Council of Churches, Rev. William Gentry called interested individuals to meet with a representative of Southern Churchmen. The unclear objective of the informal conference seemed to be the assessment of the situation in Southern communities to determine the need for continued program activities of Souther Churchmen. The occasion which triggered this inquiry was the dissatisfaction of many with the Nashville conference last December.

8. The NAACP received considerable notice from the press during this quarter.

At the state level Mr. Wiley Branton returning home from Atlanta addressed the state convention in Pine Bluff on May 26. He chided school officials and Negro patrons both for the inactivity in desegregation of schools at Pine Bluff. The convention endorsed the idea of a suit to desegregate the Pine Bluff schools.

At the state level, also, Mrs. Daisy Bates [redacted] answered charges by Attorney General Bruce Bennett of a "secret meeting" of NAACP at Howard University out of which would come further demonstrations and strife. She indicated the meeting was called by the Education and Defense Fund to brief Southern attorneys on the meaning of recent U.S. Court decisions and pointed out that Mr. Bennett should know the Fund and NAACP were separate corporations since he had instituted suits against each separately.

At the local level in Hot Springs and in Little Rock new activities were reported. The Hot Springs branch of NAACP called on the local school board to desegregate the public schools next fall and to meet with Negro leaders to explain its plans. In Little Rock Mr. L. C. Bates and Dr. Jerry Jewell, President of the Little Rock branch, joined in a number of provocative activities. Mr. Bates was rejected service at the cafeteria in the state capitol. Dr. Jewell, Mr. Bates, and two others were turned away from the city swimming pool at War Memorial Park; Mr. Bates indicated a suit would issue. Dr. Jewell and Mr. Bates demanded and held a conference with eight business and professional men in Little Rock making sweeping demands on June 12. Apparently these activites in Little Rock contradicted or duplicated the activities of the Council for Community Affairs, an inter-organizational group to which both Mr. Bates and Dr. Jewell belong.

C. In Communities

1. Pine Bluff during the quarter in addition to opening lunch counters opened the city park with the exception of the swimming pool. A Negro youth in the park was attacked by a group of white youths. Police arrested five of them.

2. The Pine Bluff Movement protested to the U. S. Attorney General when the sheriff's office refused a receipt for money paid to the county with poll tax application forms. The matter was settled amicably by use of money orders for paying the county.

3. In Little Rock negotiations for changes downtown continued. The slow progress was boosted by new agreement from owners of theaters to open immediately. This was done in June.

4. In Fayetteville theaters were opened during the quarter and agreement was reached for desegregation of the city's swimming pool.

5. The Fayetteville Council on Community Relations, the United Council of Church Women, the First Christian Church, the Catholic Church sponsored on May 3 a report meeting to hear Father David Boileau and Reverend C. S. Cartwright, both of Little Rock and delegates to the Chicago Conference on Race and Religion.

6. Announcements of a new plant of Warwick Manufacturing Company at Forrest City included this: "The office of ESD announced the plant would employ Negro and white, men and women." Interviews and interviewers operated on a non-racial basis.

7. On June 23 a committee of 100 citizens put on a state-wide Emancipation Day Celebration with some 800 in attendance with greetings from the Mayor of Little Rock and representatives of many Negro groups. The occasion was used to raise funds for promotion of poll tax campaign with a member of the National Democratic Committee as main speaker.

D. In the Courts

1. The Arkansas Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional a package of 1958 laws aimed at the NAACP and sponsored by Attorney General Bruce Bennett. These were acts number 12, 13, 14, 16. Arguments were heard April 22.

2. The Arkansas Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional a 1959 act aimed at sit-in demonstrations. It upheld at the same time Act 14 which permits a business to charge trespassing against persons refusing to leave on order of the management.

3. The municipal court of Little Rock dismissed early in June charges of trespassing against Worth Long and Bill Hansen on testimony of the plaintiff, Walgreen Drug Store, that it did not wish to prosecute the case. They had been charged under Act 14 in November.

4. Attorney Wiley Branton, in response to the official announcements by Little Rock school officials that grades one and four would be opened this September, said he would advise his clients that the school board was not fulfilling its obligation, that its action at best constituted only token compliance. Wether further litigation was undertaken would depend on his clients' wishes, Mr. Branton said.

5. School officials in Little Rock apparently think they have avoided effects of the U. S. Supreme Court decision on June 3 outlawing voluntary transfer because of race. At the moment (with divergent interpretations of past policies) school officials in court and in procedures avoid use of attendance zones by ostensible use of criteria of the Arkansas Pupil Assignment Law as the procedure for non-discrimination. In describing the procedure in Little Rock the Arkansas Gazette reporter (June 7) wrote, "The whole question of such transfers in Arkansas is complicated by legal semantics. Officially - in court - the Little Rock School Board doesn't recognize attendance areas, ... In practice, however, this (attendance area) is the basis for most assignments, but it goes under the name of residence proximity which is one of the criteria of the Pupil Assignment Law."

E. In Politics

1. Arkansas Attorney General Bennett in May and June renewed his "feud" with the NAACP and "agitators." On May 22 in a speech to the Kiwanis Club of Blytheville he charged that "someone is sending outside agitators and troublemakers into our state in an effort to foment strife and turmoil." He named these "troublemakers" as Martin Luther King, Wiley Branton and the "Negro preacher from Nashville who ran the demonstrations over there." In June he "disclosed" confidential information that the NAACP was holding a secret meeting in Washington to plan further turmoil. He related the provocative activities of Mr. L. C. Bates with these other activities and implied the liklihood of massive demonstrations in Little Rock.

2. On May 24 the Arkansas Statesman, the weekly newspaper owned by Governor Faubus, ran an editorial advising Governor Wallace of Alabama to abandon defiance of the federal government and to turn to legal means of resistance. Continued defiance would mean "he will find himself without support of the citizens he represents - It happened to Governor Orval Faubus in 1958 and to Governor Ross Barnett in 1962." The editorial was written by the acting editor, Merrill Porter, 24. Governor Faubus said he knew nothing of the editorial until it appeared in the Arkansas Gazette and that he disagreed and added, "My policy on integration is still the same: that it should be resisted step by step by whatever means is available." A new publisher and editor for the Statesman has been named.

3. Under the new staff, the Statesman has been giving front page to disclosing secret meetings of Little Rock leaders with NAACP officials and making charges as to who was to blame for integration in downtown Little Rock including the name of Sid McMath. It indicates it knows the names of white negotiators and describes some details of the meetings.

4. On recommendation of Senator McClellan supported by Senator Fulbright, President Kennedy submitted the name of Pat Mehaffy of Little Rock as judge on the Eighth Court of Appeals. Mr. Mehaffy is Arkansas' Democratic National Committeeman. His law firm has been chief advisor to Governor Faubus and also handles desegregation litigation for Little Rock, Dollarway and Hot Springs school boards.

5. When asked by reporters about the regional conference of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity Governor Faubus replied that the state would determine its own policies and did not need the advice of this group.

F. In Federal Agencies

1. Attorney Hellerstein of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission visited Arkansas April 23-25 to inquire into discrimination in ESD handling of applicants for jobs and training under MDTA and ARA. He worked with the chairman of the Arkansas Advisory Committee.

2. Attorney Charles Carnes has submitted his study for the U.S. Civil Rights Commission inquiring into litigation on school desegregation and its consequences to date.

3. The Committee on Education of the Arkansas Civil Rights Advisory Committee is putting into final form its study of the disabilities of Negroes in Arkansas schools.

4. Eighteen Arkansans participated in the regional conference of community leaders sponsored by the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity on June 26 in St. Louis. Concerned persons from seven states participated and heard Vice-President Johnson deliver the principal address. State officials were not included in the conference.

II. ACHR Activities Related to Events

A. In the Schools

1. In a move to open the cafeteria at the Graduate Center of the University of Arkansas in Little Rock the Director had a conference on April 2 with Mr. Storm Whaley, university official at the Medical Center. Since then Mr. Whaley has conferred with the University President and his attorney. He now is to see the holder of the franchise at the cafeteria "to see what can be worked out."

2. On June 15 the Director met with the Committee on Education of the Fayetteville Council on Community Relations and joined in its plans for effecting the end to the segregated elementary (Lincoln) school. The plans call for three phases of increasing militancy. The expectation is for a change by 1964.

3. The Associate Director worked with the Little Rock Committee for Better Education (Negro parents of children now in desegregated schools) in writing a letter to prospective new members and in holding a meeting to encourage parents to express preference for formerly white schools.

4. The Director of the Division of Elementary Education (University of Arkansas) asked for 125 copies of Dr. Spock's pamphlet, Prejudice in Children, for use with the seminar for elementary school principals in the second summer session at the University.

B. In Organizations

1. The Associate Director had leadership responsibilities in a number of unusual meetings during the quarter: the seminar at St. John's Seminary, annual fellowship luncheon of the Fayetteville Council of Church Women, Conference of School Administrators (Negro), meetings of the Wesley Foundation in Jonesboro, school commencement at Emerson, Little Rock celebration of the Centennial of the Emancipation Proclamation, June meeting of Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations.

2. The Director had leadership opportunities at the inter-church youth group in Fayetteville at the meeting for worship at the First Christian Church, at the annual banquet of the social science honor society at Arkansas State in Jonesboro, at the Fayetteville Council on Community Relations, at the meeting of the Wesley Foundation in Fayetteville, at the regional conference of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, at an assembly at Philander Smith College.

3. The Director continued as a member of the steering committee of the Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations.

4. Staff of ACHR worked closely with Mr. Hellerstein of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission on his inquiry in Arkansas in April.

C. In Communities

1. As a member of the Little Rock Committee for Negotiating Desegregation the Associate Director has had heavy responsibility as an intermediary conferring with individuals in person and by phone. He arranged for the process of desegregation of theaters in June. He has continued to work to keep intact the united voice and action of Negro leaders.

2. All members of the staff were busy interpreting events to community leaders in Little Rock and Pine Bluff. This included a direct call to Police Chief of Pine Bluff prompting him to be alert against violence by individual outlaws just when tensions were relieved. It involved sending a letter to the publisher of the Arkansas Gazette about his concern over a possible demonstration by the NAACP on June 19.

3. The Director participated in two sessions of the Services Committee of Fayetteville's Council on Human Relations, both emergency meetings, at which strategy was planned for peaceably opening the city's swimming pool.

4. The Associate Director in company with local Negro leaders visited two plants in Jonesboro and made reports to Washington about employment.

5. Mrs. Kyle Engler arranged for a meeting in Ft. Smith exploring "what we can do" on June 27. The meeting was promoted by Mrs. Peters of the Lutheran Church and attracted forty persons of varied responsibilities in the community. Leading in the discussion was the Director and three active members of the Fayetteville Council.

6. Amicable exchange of letters between ACHR and Mr. W. W. Campbell of Forrest City in regard to the new Warwick Manufacturing plant elicited from the latter the hope that the plant would be "a model for others in Arkansas to follow" in employment policies. Mr. Campbell is the vice-chairman of AIDC.

7. Through the efforts of ACHR forty-five Negro music lovers purchased memberships in the Little Rock Community Concert Association, forty of them at the orchestra or mezzanine level.

D. Organizational Activities

1. Paul Anthony made his first visit to Little Rock, April 10-12. He met with ACHR's Advisory Council and Board of Directors, with Negro leaders, with women leaders, with three business men for lunch. The last group met to discuss the work of ACHR and possible local support from business men.

2. Local membership committees and the staff have added some eighty new families to the roster of ACHR this year. Among these are leaders in business, in churches (Catholic, Protestant, Jewish). Arkansas' senior rabbi has asked to serve on the Advisory Committee.

3. Under energetic leadership of Dr. W. H. Townsend local financial support has been greatly strengthened. A committee of three business leaders voluntarily are trying to raise $5000 of new money from business men (At least $1000 is in hand).

4. As a part of the financial effort and to enrich program the Associate Director successfully appealed to Mr. W. Rockefeller to set up a matching fund of $2500 as incentive for the committee raising funds from business men. This is having desired results.

Re: Quarterly Report March, April, May of 1963

During March 1963 there was a highly contested Mayor's race with Eugene "Bull" Connor running against Albert Boutwell. On March 8 Major General Edwin A. Walker and Dr. Billy James Hargis spoke to a crowd which filled the main floor of the Municipal Auditorium and portions of the gallery.

There were reports that the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights under the leadership of Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth and Southern Christian Leadership Conference might be planning demonstrations for Birmingham to begin sometime after the election on April 2 when Birmingham would vote for a Mayor and nine councilmen.

In the middle of March Dr. Lucius Pitts, president of Miles College, called Mr. Sidney Smyer and gave him the names of five Negroes that he should call. It is doubtful that the calls were ever made.

During March the Director of the Alabama Council and other members of the Council talked with Mr. Robert S. Jemison, owner of the Birmingham Transit Company. Mr. Jemison was very much concerned about reports that he had from drivers and officers in the Company that Negroes were jostling whites, and he had letters from many white people saying that they did not ride the buses because of the actions of Negroes on the buses. Mr. Jemison discussed objectively the problems caused the bus company in loss of fares by the many incidents of bus drivers and whites who are antagonist to Negroes riding in the front seats of buses, and the problem of Negroes acting in a manner to discourage whites from riding the buses. It should be noted that Mr. Jemison had earned the wrath of City Hall some years back by taking down the signs on the buses though many of bus drivers were insisting that Negroes sit in the rear of the buses.

Perhaps, the saddest commentary on Birmingham is that very little attention was given to the fact that an explosion touched off in a dirt alley behind a row of Negroes' homes on Sunday, March 24. Two persons were hospitalized, but was reported in "good" condition.

On April 1, Mr. Michael Morden a student at Kalamazoo College came to work with the Alabama Council on Human Relations for a period of three months as a part of Kalamazoo college's program of "experiential education".

On April 2 Albert Boutwell defeated Eugene "Bull" Connor and became the elected Mayor of Birmingham. Most people felt that the council members elected on April 2 would be able to deal realistically with Birmingham's problems. All of those elected to the council campaigned to open the city's parks.

On April 3 demonstrations began in Birmingham with some quiet sit-ins. The white community was shocked. One liberal white leader who had worked actively to change the form of city government in Birmingham said on April 3 "this is the most cruel and vicious thing that has ever happened in Birmingham". He and many whites and Negroes had assumed that the new government was fully aware of the urgency of dealing constructively with discriminatory practices in Birmingham. Many Negro leaders in Birmingham did not know that the demonstrations were going to take place. Dr. Martin King and Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth had not been in touch with people who did not belong to the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. While Dr. King was saying that Birmingham was the worst city in the South one of his lieutenants admitted that demonstrations were held only because Birmingham's climate had improved to the point where it was felt that demonstrations could be held without anyone being killed. Very few whites observed the demonstrations during the first few weeks. Some were openly sympathetic and others were simply curious. It was only during the last few days of the demonstrations in May that whites were expressing hostility toward the demonstrators.

On April 3 Father Albert S. Foley spoke at a meeting of the Frontiers in Birmingham saying that "the demonstrations were ill-timed and disrupting negotiations already under the way". Later in the month the press carried stories that "Father Foley was saying not only the demonstrations were ill-timed, but that Martin Luther King's motives were motivated by the desire to raise money". Rev. Powers McLeod, president of the Alabama Council, and the Director talked with leaders to inform them that Father Foley did not represent the Council.

During the demonstrations the Director of the Alabama Council was spending considerable time with leaders of the "movement" at the Gaston Motel and with leaders in the white community. On April 9, Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth and three other members of his group met with Mr. Sidney Smyer and two other white leaders. Those interested in the image of the Alabama Council on Human Relations would be interested to know that Mr. Smyer would not meet unless the Director of the Alabama Council called the meeting. On April 11, the group decided to meet again, and agreed that there would be a larger more representive group. When the group gathered one business-man joined the group, but Rev. Shuttlesworth brought only the same people.

It might be noted that Dr. Martin Luther King had promised that he would attend, but did not. The meeting was set for April 16 on a Tuesday evening with only ten or twelve whites and ten or twelve Negroes representing a broad cross section of the community would meet. After a great deal of discussion, the Negroes were able to appoint a negotiating committee, and were ready to meet on Tuesday, April 16. At this point the white leaders backed down and said that they did not feel that they should meet until there was a court decision on the suit brought by the three former commissioners of Birmingham in their attempts to prevent the new city government from being installed as the duly constituted public officials.

During April Bishop George Murray (Episcopal) was able to arrange for some meetings of Episcopal and other ministers to meet with leaders from the "movement". Also during this time there were two small meetings of local Negro and white ministers. On April 23 William Moore was killed near Attalla. On April 25 Governor Wallace had a historic meeting with U. S. Attorney General Robert S. Kennedy in Montgomery.

In May the demonstrations got larger and larger, and Friday, May 3 one of the leading merchants was ardent that neither he nor any merchant would sit down and negotiate with the Negroes at any time. On Sunday morning May 5 in a lawyer's office there was a meeting of merchants and businessmen and a committee of three was appointed to meet that evening with a group of Negro leaders. Assistant U. S. Attorney General Burke Marshall came to Birmingham on May 5, and his presence was helpful in getting negotiations under way. On May 7 there was a 24 hour truce, and on May 8 it was extended again. Finally on May 10 there was a public announcement by Dr. Martin Luther King that negotiations had successfully been concluded. He declared that there was an agreement that lunch counters would be desegregated, an official biracial committee would be established, a committee on employment would be established, and one Negro clerk would be hired in one store. This was to take place in a period of 60 and 90 days.

Newspaper stories, magazine articles, TV programs have carried innumerable accounts of the demonstrations in Birmingham, and the effect that this has had on the rest of the country. Negroes in Birmingham began to be upset that there were no visible changes while other communities were making real progress in reducing discrimination because of the demonstrations that had been taken in Birmingham. It is doubtful if anyone predicted that demonstrations in Birmingham would touch off such nation wide concern. People have been saying that this is a revolutionary movement. Birmingham has made it crystal clear to the country that gradualism is no longer a possible approach to our racial problem.

STUDENT PROGRAM - June and July, 1963 REPORT (3) Ledeen

1. In early June the University of Connecticut "Come and See Seminar" brought a group of Univ. of Conn. students to S.C. for a week's study of the South and its problems. Members of SCCHR staff cooperated with a Columbia committee in setting up the program for this group of students. Through the Council office, arrangements were made for conferences with outstanding Negro leaders in the fields of education and civil rights; an evening with a bi-racial student group was scheduled and an afternoon conference was arranged with Harvey Gantt, first Negro student enrolled in a previously all-while college in S.C. A wide variety of interviews and conferences gave the students an overview of the S.C. situation, including areas of progress, problems and inadequacies-- withall, an honest evaluation. According to the appraisal made by the group, this was a valuable educational experience; certain misconceptions were clarified and understanding was deepened. It was recognized that this type of brief and curcory study had great limitations but did serve a useful purpose in building a bridge of understanding. It was also valuable for S.C. participants to evaluate their own situation afresh.

"Recruiting" or Public Relations Conferences.

2. At the end of the past academic year the discouraging fact confronting SCCHR, NAACP leadership and other concerned persons was that few, if any, Negro students were entering the doors which were being opened in the colleges through court order. This reluctance is understandable, although regrettable. S.C. Student Council had set up in the spring a committee of Clemson and USC students for the purpose of recruiting possible applicants among Negro students. At the end of the school year Harvey Gantt indicated his willingness and great interest in working with this committee. Conferences were set up on two occasions with Mr. Gantt and groups of prospective Negro students. The group conferences, arranged in cooperation with guidance counselors in Negro high schools, brought together recent outstanding high school graduates, rising seniors, and some college students. The purpose of these conferences was to confront these students with the possibility of enrolling at one of the state colleges now opening for the first time to Negroes.

Harvey Gantt presents a very positive image of Clemson College. His experience there has been a good one, with a high degree of acceptance on the part of a number of fellow students and an excellent academic record on his part. His enthusiasm and maturity are an inspiration to younger students. Among those in these conferences were some students who are vitally interested in making application to the state colleges. There will be follow-up with the most likely of these students. Furthermore, this is the beginning of an intensive effort of "quiet recruiting" among Negro students. It is the plan to hold group conferences in all of the large urban centers in S.C. during the coming year with Clemson, USC and Winthrop students serving on the public relations team.

In late June SCCHR received information about one other Negro student who had been accepted at Clemson. Student members and the program director have corresponded with Miss Brawley (the second Negro student to be accepted at Clemson) who is working in New York City this summer.

3. The University of South Carolina situation developed rapidly after the premininary hearings in the U.S. District Court in late June on the Monteith case. Judge Marten ruled in favor of Miss Henri Monteith and "all others similarly situated." The University indicated shortly thereafter its willingness to admit Miss Monteith in September along with two other Negro applicants. Mr. Robert Anderson of Greenville, S.C., transferring from Clark College in Atlanta, was the first Negro student to be accepted at the University of S.C. since reconstruction. Student members and/or staff have been personally in touch with each of the three students to be admitted. Miss Monteith, whose home is in Columbia, was contacted shortly after her return from college in Baltimore. She has been invited to the home of the Lutheran Chaplain at USC to meet a few women students members of this Columbia Intercollegiate Group. Miss Monteith has also participated in summer meetings of this group. Mr. Anderson, who has been working in Washington this summer, has been "welcomed" by correspondence. The third applicant, Mr. James Solomon, a faculty member at Morris College in Sumter, is to do graduate study. All staff members know Mr. Solomon, who works closely with the local Council in Sumter.

Plans are now complete for an informal conference to be held on September 8th, prior to registration, which will bring together these incoming Negro students and some 40 USC student leaders. This conference was set up by SCCHR working with a committee of students and USC chaplains. Harvey Gantt and several Clemson students will be present as resource leaders.

4. In early July arrangements were made by the program director for a student group visitation with Dr. James McBride Dabbs at his home. The group of some 12 students was composed primarily of S.C. students now studying in theological seminaries out of the state and now working in local churches for the summer. Several of these students were "founding fathers" of the three-year-old S.C. Student Council on Human Relations. A real effort is being made to keep in touch with former student members now studying out of the state, and who hopefully will soon be returning to S.C. to work. This evening of conversation was one of the means of "keeping in touch," and of course proved to be most rewarding for all those participating.

In Columbia, students and staff have been in close contact this summer with a student interracial ministry in a local Negro Episcopal church in which students from Mississippi, New York, Alabama and South Carolina were working. This group has assumed responsibility for several programs for the Columbia group during the summer season.

LOCAL COUNCILS (Note: You may wish to include this concerning Columbia).

The Columbia Council H.R. is in the process of attempting to rethink its role in the community. At a meeting on July 30 it was suggested that the local Council set up working committees in line with those of the State Council--education, economics and employment and community affairs. At this meeting it was also planned to seek an appointment with Mayor Lester Bates to offer the services of the Columbia CHR and to express the concern of the group that Columbia move ahead rapidly in the processes of desegregation. This was subsequently done. (Note: Add to this any August information concerning conference with Bates, etc., if it seems wise).

DISTRIBUTION OF MATERIALS

Among materials distributed this quarter were 50 copies of Martin Luther King's "Letter From a Birmingham Jail", with covering letters sent to ministers and lay church leaders in the state.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarter Report

The summer quarter in previous years has been a time for following up on necessary details unavoidably set aside during the program year, September through mid-January; for checking finance and membership records to complete the budget and to bring delinquent members back "into the fold"; for in-service-training, usually at the Fisk Race Relations Institute; for wholesale distribution of important pamphlets, articles and other significant pieces of material; for field trips to make individual and small group contacts; for "weeding" files and swelling them again with plans for the new year worked out with state and local officers; for setting up an annual state-wide workshop for September-- and always for a brief vacation!

This summer things have been different, very different. South Carolina is on the move and SCCHR staff has moved in new directions and new ways, too.

Attached is a report of the work of Mr. L.S. James, the field representative of SCCHR and of the National Sharecroppers Fund.

Mrs. Ledeen, part-time program director, worked for the months of June and July only, with a leave-of-absence in August. Her report is attached also.

MDTA Operation in South Carolina

Prior to the State-Staff Conference at Blue Ridge, N.C., June 19-21, attended by SCCHR's professional staff, follow-up of SCCHR's May 2nd Consultation on Urban Problems was focused upon. On May 2nd, Mr. Keith Aull, Director of the S.C. Employment Security Commission, had announced that classes under the Manpower Development and Training Act, could no longer be held on a segregated basis. The order from OMAT conflicted with S.C. law and caused a statement. The executive director spent much time in conference with Mr. Aull and his assistant, Mr. Paul Jarvis, director of the MDTA program, and also with Mr. R.D. Anderson, S.C. State Director of Vocational Education under whose supervision MDTA classes are set up. In this way SCCHR learned of the road blocks and was able to give information and insights needed for continuing the program. Upon invitation, the executive director participated in a joint conference on the S.C. problem with representatives of the USDL and USDHEW, of the S.C. Employment Security Commission and S.C. State Dept. of Education. Although Governor Russell failed to give needed "go" signals, plans have been worked out to keep the MDTA program alive and at least one integrated class is now being held. Twenty-one additional ones are set up and will begin when needed classroom space can be rented. The State of S.C. continues to refuse use of public school classrooms. Desegregation of at least a few of the State's technical education center and of the Charleston public schools in September presumably will hasten the future collapse of S.C.'s system of public school segregation and assure full use of available MDTA and ARA funds for desperately needed job training.

There is now a suit to desegregate the Greenville public schools as well as the suits of long standing in Clarendon County and in Darlington. Hearings have not yet been scheduled.

Economic Deterrents to Voting and to Continuing Education

Mr. Frank Robinson, of Sumter, CORE voter-registration worker, has said that approximately 80% of the persons contacted by him and his co-worker, both of whom are full-time employees, are inhibited by economic dependency. SCCHR's rural program is focused in the 24 counties declared eligible for area redevelopment in which economic displacement and dependency is greatest.

As an initial effort to point up theeconomic, educational and cultural problems of low-income urban residents, the SCCHR Citizens Confrontation on May 2nd explored the characteristics of the culturally deprived, services presently available and others urgently needed. The shortage of day care centers and of community centers was recognized as contributing to absenteeism and to the school drop-out problem.

Under the leadership of Governor Donald Russell and others, interest in public education, especially the drop-out problem, is at an all-time high.

Judge Justine Wise Polier, Field Foundation Board member, informed the SCCHR executive director of a federal program available under the U.S. office of Welfare, headed by Dr. Ellen B. Winston to provide for the esteblishment of day care centers under state departments of public welfare. In checking with the S.C.DWP, it was learned that S.C. did not plan to make use of the program because if its "provisions"-- obviously requiring that day-care centers be open to all. Remedial action must be planned.

Mr. Jack Wasserman, project director of the National Sharecroppers Fund, provided SCCHR with a report of surplus foods distributed to each of the 50 states. Upon investigation, the SCCHR executive director learned that in S.C. surplus foods are being distributed to schools and a few institutions, but to needy families only at times when localities are designated as disaster areas. Perhaps a beginning may best be made in remedying this situation by informing the Governor who, along with Dr. Arthur B. Rivers, director of the S.C.DPW, are seeking federal economic assistance for low-income families in which absenteeism and school drop-outs are high.

A "Conference on Wheels" originally planned as a follow-up of the May 2nd meeting to include ministers and members of the SCCHR Community Affairs committee resulted in a visit in June by SCCHR and the Columbia Urban Rehabilitation professional staff to the slum areas in Columbia being rehabilitated. (An experienced Rehabilitation staff member's plans to resign made it impossible to wait for a more convenient date.) On the basis of this beginning and of interviews by the SCCHR executive director with the director of the Columbia Bethlehem Center, plans are under way for student projects similar to those described in a winter issue of The Reporter, entitled "Ivy League Integrationists" to provide tutorial and other service rendered by Northern students through a project financed by the Field Foundation. Doubtless these will be slow in developing, but have vital, long-range potentialities.

The SCCHR's Education Committee meeting in June explored possibilities for further coordination of citizen-effort for educational and school purposes. Both the S.C. Education Association and the Palmetto Education Association (white and Negro teachers associations) formerly performed segregated coordination functions. How Governor Russell will succeed in mobilizing voluntary effort will doubtless be indicated at a conference called by him to be held in Columbia on October 8. Hopefully, attendance will be on the basis of bi-racial inclusiveness.

Eight Target Cities

On June 8th the NAACP announced that Greenville, Spartanburg, Rock Hill, Columbia, Orangeburg, Sumter, Florence and Charleston had been chosen by the NAACP for concentrated desegregation efforts to be made on a predetermined time schedule.

Field Trips Related to the "New Revolution"

The SCCHR executive director was asked to work as closely as possible with situations developing in Rock Hill, Orangeburg, Sumter and Florence. During this quarter, field trips have not only been made to each of these four cities but to the other four also. In addition, Newberry, Greenville, Anderson and Seneca have set up bi-racial committees. All of these cities have also been visited. In every city, contacts were made with one and usually more of the following type persons: mayors and/or members of city council, chamber of commerce staff and/or officers, key Negro and/or white citizens.

A number of common denominators were revealed:

1. There is little, if any, realization by white people of the urgency and immediacy of the Negroes' demands for change.

2. Many mayors attribute reluctance to set up official bi-racial committees to four principal causes: a) problem of selection of representative Negro leaders satisfactory to Negroes, b) reluctance of white persons to be identified publicly as members of an official or quasi-official bi-racial committee, c) hardening of many economic leaders, often members of the Chamber of Commerce-- attributed to resistance to the Kennedy "civil rights package" and an attempt to defeat him in the 1964 presidential election, d) fear of political consequences by mayors and members of city councils to appearing to accede to NAACP demands-- issued as an ultimatum, some say.

3. In most places, Negroes are beginning to view the bi-racial committees now set up as tranquilizers to keep them satisfied with token minimal changes.

4.Community leaders continue to fear "outside agitation" and to resist "outside" help.

Demonstrations in Charleston, Orangeburg and Sumter

While the SCCHR was in touch with conditions throughout the state, the NAACP focused its efforts at Charleston.

In line with what appears to be a tacit agreement, newspapers have played down Negro demands and activities. It was not until mid-July when a near-riot occurred in Charleston that much public attention was given to the almost daily, orderly, and growing-in-number marches and to the picketing of stores on King Street in Charleston.

A report of the visit made to Charleston by the SCCHR executive director, who preceded the team mates, Charles Demery, Atlanta Episcopal rector and native of Savannah, who has good personal contacts in Charleston, and John Youngblut, director of Quaker House in Atlanta, who prepared the report, was sent to SRC by Mr. Youngblut in late July, shortly after the visit.

Soon after the six demands made by the Charleston movement were acceded to by most of the Charleston King street merchants, demonstrations began in both Orangeburg and Sumter; little press attention is being given these movements as yet.

SCCHR Statement Urges S.C. Parks Remain Open

An article appeared in The State, Columbia, July 23, which quoted from a statement made to the press by the SCCHR executive committee. The statement was given to the AP and to UPI also, and was carried in a number of daily newspapers over the state and also by a few of the TV and radio stations. (Copy of article from The State is attached.)

Inconclusive Communications With Governor

In an effort to establish rapport with Governor Russell and to secure his leadership in specific areas of political and economic progress affecting Negroes, a committee met with him in June to discuss specifics of proposals made to him in a letter sent to him earlier. (See SCCHR Quarterly Report for March-May,1963). Dr. J. Sherrard Rice, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Columbia; Earl Middleton, Orangeburg, business man; John Montgomery, editor of The Columbia Record; I.P. Stanback, manager of the Columbia district of the N.C. Mutual Life Insurance Company; and the Rev. Fred M. Reese, president of SCCHR, composed the committee. A report of findings-to-date was made in a letter to Governor Russell from Mr. Reese, a copy of which is attached.

Other Activities in Brief

Mr. Reese lent aid to the newly organized Seneca Council on Human Relations by meeting and planning with it at a meeting on June 28.

Like the Seneca Council, the recently formed Aiken Council finds getting off the ground difficult, due to the added need to think through the matter of purpose and program in order to supplement rather than duplicate proposed (Aiken) or emerging (Seneca) official or quasi-official Mayor's bi-racial committees. Work in Aiken will be slowed down due to absence on vacation of Mrs. John Twombly, the chairman.

In Rock Hill, William Barron, SCCHR member and insurance executive, and the Rev. Coit Troutman, played important behind-the-scene roles in the desegregation of lunch counters. Mr. Barron has also made important contacts in Rock Hill to implement the MDTA program there.

Mr. Reese has made valuable new contacts in Anderson.

The SCCHR executive director learned on her visit to Anderson that the public library has had no Negroes to request service at the "white" library. Follow-up steps taken; no report of results yet.

A quiet request for names of Negro leaders known to have an interest in mental health was made to SCCHR. Persons listed have received from Gov. Russell official appointments to a state-wide committee.

Progress in Columbia has been disappointing as it has been elsewhere also. A copy of a report made by Mayor Lester Bates is attached.

In August, the SCCHR executive director attended the court hearing on the Charleston public school desegregation case.

In June, L.S. James attended an institute in Norfolk, Va., called by the Office of Manpower Automation and Training (OMAT), to discuss ways of speeding job training programs. A demonstration has been made by the Virginia State College (Norfolk Extension) in the joint operation of the MDTA program by OMAT and a private institution.

The SCCHR executive director attended the annual conference of the Southern Baptist Convention's Christian Life Commission at Ridgecrest, N.C. in late August. From Ridgecrest, she went to Charlotte, N.C. and attended the funeral of Dr. Harry Jones, director of the NCCHR.

There is a growing awareness of the need for a council on human relations in Spartanburg. In August, a meeting of a few interested persons was held at the Bethlehem Center. Unfortunately, no one has yet been found who is both willing and able to take initiative and to accept leadership.

Finance

Both the SRC matching grant of $4,600 has been earned and an additional $400 raised, which completes the 1963 budget of $5,000 to be raised by SCCHR.

QUARTERLY REPORT OF MR. S. L. JAMES, FIELD REPRESENTATIVE, SCCHR,
FOR JUNE, JULY AND AUGUST, 1963

This quarter was spent largely in conducting follow-up conferences of our state-wide meeting at the Penn Community Center, February 13-15, 1963, where we discussed training programs and jobs for rural South Carolinians. Our field representative spent the month of June in local meetings based on the previous conference at Penn Community Center. He participated in mass meetings in Denmark, S. C., on Sunday, June 9; there were over a hundred persons present. They were deeply interested in organizing committees to prepare for MDTA training, ARA training, and for meeting with the ARA county committee.

On June 18, the Jasper County Council on Human Relations held a monthly meeting. Our representative helped to prepare for this meeting by securing Mr. Wilford F. Broxterman, manager of the South Carolina Credit Union League. He explained to the people the value of a credit union; how to organize one, and gave all the requirements for such an organization. At this meeting local committees which were selected at the prior monthly meeting made their reports. The committee on court house desegregation reported that it had been successful in getting all signs "For Colored" removed from the court house. Integrated seating in the court house was also promised. The committee to the ARA County committee reported that the chairman of the ARA committee was very courteous and promised them that Negroes would be employed to the extent of 40 per cent of the new jobs which would be created by the forthcoming new industries to Ridgeland, S. C. This promise was to materialize by August. Our representative has recently been informed that Negroes are now being trained for work in this new industry.

At the beginning of the latter part of this month, our field representative started preparations for the forthcoming conference at Penn Community Center for September 22 through 27. This conference would emphasize cooperatives, job training, with emphasis on local leadership training for low income rural people. Our representative contacted Mr. J. E. King, County Agricultural Agent for Orangeburg County, June 28, because Mr. King had expressed interest in ARA and MDTA training in his county. Our agent found Mr. King very cooperative and quite interested in having training courses set up, especially in the operation and repair of heavy farm equipment. He realizes that Negroes are not only unemployed because of the lack of training but are under-employed, and he felt that such training would help to double salaries for Negroes who are working on farms.

Our representative intensified his efforts in preparation for our forthcoming conference in September during the month of July.

On July 5 he had four conferences in four different communities, helping leaders to understand the purpose of our meeting in September, informing them how to apply for employment and job training in their local communities. He had a conference at Fort Motte ~~and it was approved~~ with ~~under the leadership of~~ Mr. Hope Williams, who was already getting his men who are unemployed registered for employment and training. He had been encouraged to do this by Senator Gressette of his county.

The same day our representative had a conference with Mr. Williams & Elloree, who is working on a project for the establishment of a recreation center and for an opportunity to get courses set up under MDTA.

Holly Hill was visited also, to meet with Roy Bunch, Box 293, Holly Hill, along with Mr. L. W. Williams, both of whom were interested in the establishment of training courses under MDTA. They were advised how to apply for job training and employment.

On this same day our representative went to Sumter and had an interesting conference with Mr. O. R. Reuben, president of Morris College, Sumter, S. C. He was interested in the opportunity to set up a course under MDTA in guidance and counseling for the unemployed. He was directed how to apply for the opportunity to set up this training.

In order to get the cooperation of the vocational agricultural teachers as well as their supervisors, our representative visited the annual meeting of the Vocational Agricultural Teachers at State College in Orangeburg on July 16, 1963. He got the opportunity to explain the purpose of the forthcoming conference at Penn Community Center, September 22 through 27, to the state supervisor, Mr. Gore, and his assistant, Mr. Hickson, both of whom were very interested in our programs and promised cooperation by encouraging the vocational ag teachers, especially in counties that are eligible under ARA to encourage eligible farmers to come to our conference in September.

On July 18 our representative had a conference with a group of leaders in Allendale, S. C. He explained to these leaders the purpose of the conference in September and asked for their cooperation. This group was under the leadership of Mr. J. J. Fields, P. O. Box 195, Allendale. It was interesting to have in this group Mr. Norman Lofton, Jr., who has a BS degree in agriculture and 15 hours credit on his graduate degree in agriculture but has never been able to find a job after he graduated in 1955. Of course he was in the Army two years during that time. This young man needs encouragement.

Our representative went the same day to Varnville, Hampton County, South Carolina, to meet with one of the outstanding leaders of this county. He is ~~not only~~ a minister and principal of the high school, including the elementary schools. His name is Rev. H. J. Brooks, Box 416, Varnville. He was very cooperative and promised to help select leaders from Hampton County to attend our conference. He has kept his promise in every way.

On July 19, 1963, our representative went to two more counties where ARA committees had been appointed without the cooperation of the Negro population. Our representative contacted Mrs. E. C. Connor in Aiken, S. C. She is associated with Mrs. Josie Hazel. He received friendly cooperation and a promise from this lady and Mr. Jimmy Davis that continued cooperation would be coming from this county.for our conference. Aiken County is sending five representatives to our conference in September.

On this same day our representative continued ~~on~~ to McCormick County and had a conference with two of the leaders in the county at the county seat, McCormick; their names are J. W. Garrett, P.O. Box 282, McCormick, and J. Singletary, Box 511, McCormick. Mr. Singletary is the only member of the NAACP in the city. They were very cooperative in their talk and pledged cooperation with our program for September, but our representative noticed a deep-seated fear of organizations, due to the attitude of the white people in the community. They claim that they are not allowed to organize or participate in organizations which are not generally approved by the county. Although they promised to cooperate with our program, I doubt if any of them will be there.

On July 22, 1963, Rev. J. H. Bowser of Chester, S. C., was visited along with several other ministers and laymen who were having a meeting at the Calvary Baptist Church. Our representative was allowed to speak to this group and explain the purpose of our conference in September and he gave some of the requirements for setting up courses under MDTA. There was 100 per cent expression of cooperation of this group for our conference in September.

The same day, in the afternoon, our representative visited the office of the assistant county agricultural agent in Lancaster and had a conference with the office force there, which included the North Carolina Mutual Insurance director and the secretary of the county agent's office. They expressed active interest in our program and promised cooperation in helping to select capable local leaders to attend our September conference.

At Barnwell, S. C., July 24, 1963, our representative helped complete the name of the organization for that county. They were having their regular monthly meeting. They decided to call the organization the Barnwell County Citizens Club. Rev. Monroe Bush, Sr., was elected president and Mrs. Cornelia B. Green was elected secretary. Since this was a regular meeting, they selected a committee to contact the Barnwell ARA committee to seek information about the nature of the overall economic development program and to ask for membership on the ARA county committee. Our representative advised them as to how they should make approach, and furnished them with names of chairmen of the committees. He also explained the nature of the forthcoming conference to be held in Frogmore, September 22 through 27. They promised to sent five representatives. This group also promised to affiliate with the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. Our representative advised them by letter, after a conference with our executive secretary, as to how the organization could affiliate with the South Carolina Council on Human Relations.

Our representative visited four communities on July 29, 1963. He had a conference with Mr. A. G. Marshall at Camden, who is the assistant county agent for Kershaw County. He expressed interest in our conference in September and a willingness to do everything he could to encourage setting up courses for MDTA. He promised to help select suitable delegates for our conference in September at Penn Center.

On this same day our representative visited Chesterfield County and had an interesting conference with the assistant county agent, Mr. B. L. Cunningham at Chesterfield. He promised to select suitable delegates for our conference in September. He is a member of the ARA committee and is working closely with the committee in its organization for the establishment of a sewing industry at Pageland. He promised to send some one to explain this project to us.

This same day our representative went to Marlboro County and visited the county agricultural agent in Bennettsville, S. C. He had a very interesting conference with Mr. E. C. Abrams, the county agricultural agent. He expressed interest in training under the MDTA for the under-employed and unemployed, and he thinks the course in operation and repair of heavy farm machinery would be one of the main courses needed in that area. He promised to cooperate with our plans for our conference in September. His assistant agent, Mr. Quincy Bembow, was not in his office, but Mr. Abrams said he would discuss our plans with Mr. Bembow upon his arrival. This interview was very friendly and interesting.

A little later in the afternoon, our representative reached Darlington County and had a long conference with Mrs. J. B. Johnson, home demonstration agent for colored families. She promised to discuss this matter with the assistant agricultural county agent who was on vacation. She was sure that they would locate some local leaders who were eligible for attendance at our September conference.

Mr. Wilda J. Gray, county agricultural agent for Darlington County received our representative for a very interesting and cooperative discussion relative to MDTA training for Darlington County. Mr. Gray feels that the course in the operation and repair of heavy farm machinery would help not only to increase the salaries of Negro farm laborers but would in many cases double itself. At present he said the Negro farm laborers are getting $5.00 a day operating a tractor, and he is sure this salary could be increased to $10.00 a day with training. They expressed cooperative interest in our September conference also.

On July 30, our field representative visited two counties for conferences with leaders. In the morning he met with Mr. R. C. Bacote and Mr. John Mott, Jr., associate county agents of Berkeley County. They were in their office in Moncks Corner. Both of them expressed the need for ARA and MDTA training. They indicated that an ARA training program had been stopped because it had to be done on an integrated basis. However, white and colored leaders feel the need for training under MDTA and ARA. Both of these county workers promised to contact eligible local leaders for delegates from Berkeley County to our September conference.

In the afternoon of the same day our field representative visited St. George in Dorchester County and had an interesting conference with the Rev. L. W. Curry, P. O. Box 502, St. George. He is one of the prominent leaders in the county and pastor of a church with a congregation of 500, many of whom are sharecroppers and low income farmers. He is very interested in this program. He has also continued his interest since our meeting with him. The county has been organized and has expressed interest in becoming affiliated with the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. We are expecting to have delegates from Dorchester County to our September conference. They continue to send for more information about the National Sharecroppers Fund and the South Carolina Council on Human Relations.

In order to find out what progress is being made by Negro applicants to be accepted to our new Richland County Technical Education Center, our field representative stopped by to visit this center July 31, on his way to Sumter County. He was received cordially by the director, Mr. R. L. Grigsby. He was interested to learn about the aims and activities of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. He made it clear that there would be no discrimination in selecting students for this educational center. Negroes have applied and been examined along with white people. Many failed the test for entrance, white and Negro; but finally one Negro passed the test with the second highest average attained by any applicant. He was accepted.

In Sumter, S. C., our representative had a conference with Mr. Schuler, district supervisor of FHA, Sumter, S. C., relative to what had been done by FHA for Mr. Columbus Cooper who was the only one of five case studies made by our field representative that the State director said was eligible for a loan under FHA. Thus far Mr. Cooper has not been able to get the local committee to approve him.

At this time picketing of public places and stores was being carried on by Negroes and it was hard to get any other information relative to the progress which a special committee from the Negro group had made with the ARA county committee. Mr. Finney, who was the chairman of this committee, said very little progress had been made. The associate county agent, Mr. Sanders, was not in his office but I had a long conference with his secretary, Mrs. Gadenia T. Butler. Her husband is a minister and she is very active in church and community work. She promised that she would interest eligible local leaders in our forthcoming conference at Penn Center in September.

Later in the afternoon our representative went on to Manning, S.C., and had a conference with Mr. Eugene Fitzgerald, associate county agent from Clarendon County. Both he and the home demonstration agent expressed deep interest in our program in September and promised active cooperation in helping to select suitable persons to attend.

During the month of August, our field representative continued his visits so he could complete visitation to all of the 24 counties that are eligible under ARA in South Carolina. He visited Conway, S.C., which is in Horry County, and had an interesting conference with the county agricultural agent, Mr. V. M. Johnson, and his assistant, Mr. Hubert Hardee. They were very cordial and cooperative. They promised to interest the Negro county agent, Mr. W. P. Johnson, who was not in the city at this time, in cooperating with our program in September, by selecting delegates from this county. The home demonstration agent for Negro families, Mrs. Marian W. Watson and Mrs. Ardella F. Holmes, secretary of Mr. W. P. Johnson, both expressed interest in our program and promised to help in every way they could in making this a success.

Our representative also visited Kingstree for a conference with leaders there, in order to solicit their continued cooperation in our leadership training conference. He was able to get cooperative promises from Mr. Johnie C. Dimery and Mr. E. Irving Lawrence, to encoursge cooperation from their county-side organizations with our program in September. We also planned for the county forthcoming October meeting, which will be held on the 4th of October, 1963, at Greeleyville, S. C. I promised them to have Mr. Broxterman to speak to their organization about the possibilities of a county-wide credit union.

Our field representative has spent most of the time in the office, making preparations for and helping to organize the program for our meeting at Penn Community Center. A copy of this program is attached.

QUARTERLY REPORT
June July August, 1963
to
Southern Regional Council

It has been a long hot summer but encouraging in many ways. For the first time there has been activity in several towns simultaneously. It was difficult for the staff to choose the spot to work. Savannah, Brunswick, Rome, Valdosta, Fitzgerald, Americus, Albany, Columbus, all were having demonstrations and movement of some kind. This made us realize the necessity for establishing more groups, for finding more contacts, if we are to even begin to answer the needs. It is hoped that during the fall and winter we can enlist the aid of concerned members with organizational talents in helping extend our operations.

The Segregationists, though not great in numbers seem to be well organized in Savannah, Brunswick and Rome. Their activities are efficiently directed and show determination. They have successfully blocked progress for the moment in Rome.

The major time of the staff was spent in Savannah. Much of these activities has been previously reported. Mr. Holmes played a most significant role as negotiator between officials of SCLC and the Crusade for Voters and the City Government. Some desegregation of hotels, motels, theaters and bowling alleys are reported to take place after October 1.

The desegregation of the schools in Chatham County has gone smoothly. Mr. Holmes spent two weeks in working with individual parents and the complicated requirements to help 24 youngsters transfer. 21 were accepted. 19 high school seniors are enrolled in the 12th grade at 2 high schools. The Council is tutoring these students who are finding their preparation inadequate. Roman Catholic Parochial Schools also were integrated this fall.

OPTICS (Operation for Peaceful Transition in Chatham Schools) consisting of some 20 leading organizations was organized by the Savannah Council. This group certainly helped greatly in preparing a favorable climate for the opening of school.

Mrs. Arnette Waters has suffered the 7th shooting into her home in Savannah. Besides the shooting there has been other harassment. Still no one has been apprehended. Reports have been made to local Police, FBI, GBI, and Department of Justice. But the shooting continues. Another family who lives in similar circumstances (not members of the Council) are having the same sort of violent harassment. The last shootings have been in day light.

BRUNSWICK

Our dream of the first city in Georgia to voluntarily desegregate its schools was interrupted by District Judge Scarlett's ruling, on the eve of the opening of school, that the school board did not have the right to desegregate until they produced a plan that was approved by the court. He maintained desegregation would do "irreparable injury" to both white and Negro children. The decision was reversed by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. September 16 found the 6 back in the white school. 17 fine students asked for transfers. Only six of these were accepted. The reception of the 6 students has been fairly smooth. The teachers are giving the children extra attention in helping them to make up the 2 weeks lost time. The segregationists have a new High School Youth Council who are pressuring the white students to ostracize the Negro or any friendly whites. So far, they are not completely successful.

ROME

After many futile attempts to enter the white trade schools in Rome there will be a court case. One stumbling block seems to be the employment office which has given the entrance tests, another the school board itself. Governor Sanders has expressed a desire to support desegregation of the trade schools. State School Superintendant Purcell says they will take "one" in Rome. However, no Negro has been admitted. The biracial negotiating committee is not meeting. The lunch counters are still closed.

AMERICUS

We have asked Governor Sanders, the New Director of the Children's Services in the Welfare Department and the Chairman of the State Democratic Party to give us information concerning the children in jail in Americus. All of these contacts promised some sort of cooperation. It is reported that the juveniles are out of jail. 12 of the older young people are still in the stockade at Leesburg. The four leaders are being held without bond in Americus. They are not allowed visitors other than immediate family and lawyers. The Negro, Don Harris, seems to be under the most pressure in jail. The trial is set for November.

The Episcopal Minister in Americus, The Reverend D.G. Pritchard, is having an interracial meeting this week to discuss the local problems. He has asked us not to come to Americus at this time.

We hope to find further contacts and get into the town in the near future.

AUGUSTA

Augusta has had a very eventful summer. Roy Harris has hired a Negro bus driver on his desegregated buses. 2 salesclerks and one bookkeeper are working in retail stores on the main street. The parks have been desegregated. The City Auditorium is also desegregated. Discriminatory signs are down in the Court House. The Mayor has appointed a biracial advisory committee.

Reverend Hamilton, chairman of the NAACP chapter, also a Council member, is due the major credit.

The general atmosphere in Augusta is greatly improved over a year ago. The town is changing. Our Council had a most stimulating and vigorous September meeting. All kinds of acitvities are under consideration.

PARKS

Mr. Holmes has visited several more of the 36 state parks and ascertained the high degree of differences between them. The NAACP has entered a suit against the Jekyll Authority, which we hope will mean the desegregation of all state parks. Mr. Holmes has spent much time with Operation Breadbasket in working with the ministers in Atlanta, in negotiating with the Telephone Company, and the Coca Cola Company as well as the Bakeries.

About 60 Negroes were hired in the Bakeries. However, for many reasons, the lack of training perhaps the chief, many were discouraged and quit.

The Telephone Company has hired only 3 or 4 after a year of negotiating. A difficult situation with Coca Cola still exists. An agreement has not been reached, a boycott is in progress. However, Mr. Holmes believes there will be an early agreement perhaps by October 1.

HOUSEKEEPING

We have 87 new members this quarter bringing our paid membership to 949. A state wide membership drive for October is being planned.

FINANCES

Report enclosed.

BOARD

The Executive Committees has agreed to attempt a plan of increased activity on the part of the board. Each board member will be asked to serve on a committee composed of people living in his town but working on a state wide committee. We hope this will encourage board members to work beyond there own locality. In expanding services into new areas as well as giving more assistance to local councils.

We are enclosing a current list of desegregated facilities in the state.

The Honorable Donald Russell, Governor
State of South Carolina
Wade Hampton State Office Building
Columbia, South Carolina

Dear Governor Russell:

Your secretary indicated that your schedule was too crowded to permit a conference between us and Mr. Keith Aull relative to State employment practices.

You remember that our conversations began with your vocal response to a document submitted to you by a committee of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. It will be necessary for us to attempt a summary of your position on the recommendations contained in the document.

You indicated that you felt a biracial committee was and is not necessary or desirable since no group of whites or Negroes could be representative. You understood that such a proposed committee need not have official status or sanction but rather would provide some face to face confrontation.

In other words, this recommendation of the committee was rejected.

A second recommendation was that Negroes be recommended and appointed where possible to public policy boards and committees. You indicated that you would be glad to receive any names of persons, white or Negro, thought to be eligible for such an appointment or recommendation. You carefully indicated your unwillingness to make any promises on this issue.

A third recommendation was that you give support and encouragement to more vital and helpful technical and vocational education for Negroes. It is obvious that the technical education centers are open to all. It is also obvious that vocational training opportunities for Negroes are far below those available to white youth. On this recommendation, you suggested that one central focus of your administration is the upgrading of education. This is a worthy goal in which we all concur. Our intent on this was to indicate to you the need to upgrade offerings for Negroes, opportunities which white youth already have.

Finally, a recommendation was made that racial discrimination in State employment practices cease and that you give encouragement to upgrading Negro State employees. You arranged a conference with Mr. Pearman, who assured us that there is no discrimination in hiring at the State Highway Department and that all qualified applicants would be hired when needed without regard to color. Mr. Pearman was careful to indicate that among qualifications was the ability to sustain morale among other employees. He was also frank to admit upon direct question that the presence of Negro employees in non-traditional positions would jeopardise morale.

Thus there was given us the impression that racial discrimination is not a factor in hiring but qualifications are.

The purpose of our recommendations was to point out the genuine need for communication across racial lines. The time is past for defensiveness about present policies or bitterness about practices in the past. What we need is intelligent consideration of common concerns.

So long as there is evasion of issues and rejection of interpersonal encounter, so long will there be grounds for continued suspicion and mistrust.

Walter Lippman sums up well what seems to me to be the crux of the issue at stake. "The outstanding danger is the loss of confidence by the Negro people in the good faith of the white people. If confidence is lost that there is a legitimate remedy for genuine grievances, there will be lost at the same time confidence in the doctrine of non-violence. What will come after that is unpleasant to contemplate."

Our committee will make a report to the Board of Directors of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, indicating the consensus of our understanding of your views as herein indicated. Obviously you cannot be quoted directly, nor do we intend to violate any understanding of confidence you may have shared with us. Naturally, the information on the position of Mr. Pearman and the Highway Department and your own views are public information.

The policies of state government are open to public scrutiny and you have indicated an "open door" with regard to problems we face.

It is our urgent hope that you will sense the need for further exploration in these vital issues. However, crowded your schedule may be, you cannot be unmindful of the fact that direct action groups are exerting real pressure upon the Negro leadership of South Carolina. At present, the leadership is able to plead for holding the line, but that time will soon run out if there is no real evidence of genuine progress. Such progress does not imply yielding to demands or concessions to petitions but rather represents a direction toward full equality of opportunity for all citizens in the state.

Thank you for the time you gave us. We are hopeful that our conversations communicate genuine concern for honest encounter in the living of these days.

Sincerely,

Fred M. Reese, Jr., President
S. C. Council on Human Relations

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Katherine Jones September 10, 1963

QUARTERLY REPORT: June, July, August 1963

State-Wide

The Governor has not yet signed an executive order creating a Committee on Human Relations, nor appointed its membership. The Council which agreed on June 6, to recommend a roster of candidates submitted its list on September 4. In recent discussions with George Barrett, Clement and his administrative assistant have confirmed the promise of such a committee. The untimely death of Senator Kefauver, and the political repercussions have been a distressing and distracting factor. Senator Herbert Walters is a wealthy conservative industrialist, 72 years old, and from his past actions we cannot expect leadership from him. However, there is belief that he will follow exactly whatever the Governor wants, and this means he may vote for the Civil Rights Bill. It is also possible that he may absent himself from the Senate at the time. To vote for the bill would be completely counter to his past performance. He has held no previous political office but has wielded economic power.

The state parks were completely desegregated this summer. We have asked members throughout the state to check on them and advise us. No reports have been received except from one near Nashville. A bi-racial summer student group used it without incident several times this summer. On July 4, it is reported that there was indications of potential unpleasantness but state troopers arrived on the scene, and their presence along the water front seemed to be all that was required to restore complete calm.

We have no way of knowing how much state parks have been used. Our experience with the current Commissioner indicates that he is completely easy and comfortable about desegregation of the parks, and that he will support local superintendents under pressure from nearby communities. My guess is that some parks may have had no bi-racial use, and that some park superintendents may have used evasive methods to discourage Negro use. However, until our membership reports we have no way of knowing about the parks. There have been no news reports of incidents. TV and news stories made public announcements of desegregation.

Bench Mark - In accordance with the Board's directive in May, we mailed audit forms (see enclosed) to members in 24 different localities. Replies were finally received from 14, following numerous reminders. They were difficult to coordinate. Most of the cities which have had rather broad desegregation of public accommodations remain unwilling to have them publicly announced for fear of retribution from segregationists. In general, all chain motel, hotels and restaurants along main thoroughfares are fully open. This is generally true of first-class hotels and restaurants in the business area. For the traveler, however, there is no way to assure his welcome and avoid embarrassment if he ventures beyond these strict confines. Our next NEWSLETTER will summarize the findings we have.

The Tennessee Advisory Committee to the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights has recently made a study of health care in Nashville. While no names appear on the study, Dr. David Rogers of Vanderbilt Medical School faculty generally directed it with manpower furnished by Professor Cleary and psychology and sociology students at Peabody. The Council has contributed the stenographic services, involving an original memeographed copy. The total cost to the Council is $142.00. The copies we are sending you have not yet been approved for distribution by the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights. Consideration is being given to re-writing the material as a comparable publication to "Jobs & Color".

My personal feeling (K. Jones) is that it does not have similar usefulness, or that broad on appeal. However, it has already been instrumental in desgregating St. Thomas Hospital, Nashville.

The Council continue to furnish all clerical assistance to the Tennessee Advisory Committee. We consider this reasonable but time consuming.

Special Summer Projects

There has been a voter education project in Fayette County and an American Friends Service Community project in Memphis. Very little is known about them by Council staff, and our assistance and guidance were not sought.

In Nashville, two white ministers were assigned to Negro churches as part of the Inter-racial Ministry. South Street Community Center, in a slum area near our office, had a group of 6 Mennonites working with them in a school enrichment program and summer recreation. The Mennonites have worked with this Community Center over several years. The Mennonite group this year consisted of 5 white women and 1 white man, all mature persons and several of them qualified teachers.

The American Friends Service Internes in community service for the second year had about 12 young people, 18 to 22 years old, with Mr. & Mrs. Charles Puttkamer in charge. While they had no official relationship to the Council, K. Jones served on the local sponsoring committee, and kept in touch with their activities. The students were placed in recreational programs and at two state institution for mentally ill and retarded. They shared group living in a white neighborhood, and I believe the experience was considered valid. Several of the students found the limitation on their participation in demonstrations unacceptable, and one girl was asked to leave prior to the termination of the program. They did engage in picketing at Morrison's Cafeteria which resulted in repercussions from one of the state institutions. I am not sure that a community in transition, such as Nashville is at present, is an appropriate place.for such experiments. While direct action is a natural next step for the students, it may be a strategic mistake for the local community organizations with conservative boards, and for local protest groups working for desegregation. K. Jones was relieved to see the project terminated without serious incidents or publicity.

The Voter Education Project

The Southern Region of the National Student YWCA and the National Student Christian Federation, co-sponsored a voter registration and education project in Nashville from June 23 through August 17.

The main purpose of the project was to stimulate qualified Negroes living in an area of North Nashville (Councilmanic District 21) in regard to citizenship education and voter education-registration. One other purpose was to get a group of college students from across the United States to share in a planned and purposeful integrated living situation.

The 13 participants (1 Negro male, assistant leader, 2 Negro females, 4 white males, and 4 white females, with Mr. & Mrs. Wilson Yates as leaders), with different religious and cultural backgrounds, held workshops in civil rights, economic and political and social structures of Nashville. For these workshops, various local persons were asked to participate and responded with enthusiasm.

D. Webster, co-chairman of the local committee, feels that not enough guidance or assistance was given the participants of this project. One of the reasons, she feels, was due to over-active schedules of those persons who so freely give of their time and service to such endeavors. However, the project was very effective and as a result almost 200 names were added to the roster of Negro registered voters in the said district.

Nashville

Little direct Council activity has taken place since May. With the formation of the Metropolitan Human Relations Committee, the city has achieved considerable desegregation without incident. The state Council staff obtained regular white observers during beginning desegregation and then concentrated on getting Negroes to use the restaurants. There has been sporadic picketing at Morrison's Cafeteria which refuses to drop its color bar. The Nashville Council has attempted to stimulate and support the Metropolitan Human Relations Committee. There is recognition that the public accommodations area is only part of their job. We have worked with friendly members in recruiting job applicants, and in asking their assistance in opening other institutions such as the Nashville Automobile Club (AAA affiliate).

Nash. has sustained a severe loss in Negro leadership with the departure of Rev. Kelly Miller Smith, Vivian Henderson, Rev. Metz Rollins, Rev. Claude Walker (NAACP Branch president) and the imminent loss of Herman Long. We can ill-afford such loss, and the local Community Relations Council has been without real leadership for months. This was the result of the poor functioning of Gid Fryer, president who moved away from Nashville in July and the fact that they have not obtained another president. With their limited activity, it has been rewarding that membership has held up as well as it has. During July and August nearly all of our local leadership was away from the city.

Several speaking engagements have been filled to church groups throughout the city. In late August, K. Jones participated in a 5 night "Youth Week" program at one of the large Methodist churches. This was a discussion group on Christian Social Concerns for senior high school students. My objective evaluation was that it was a disaster for all concerned. The students eventually agreed that while segregation might be immoral, it was not realistic to expect the church to exert leadership within or without, since this would mean loss of income, and the lessening of their own superior youth program. This experience confirmed the extremely conservative mood of young people elsewhere, and the loss of adventure and independent thought usually associated with adolescents.

In August, the state council took on the Nashville planning and entertainment of 4 visiting African students and their 2 American escorts. (Plans were made for 5 African visitors, but 1 did not arrive.) The request was handed to us by the local Chamber of Commerce because of their staff vacation plans. While this seemed a minor chore, it required a tremendous amount of time, since so many of the persons we would normally call on (August 25-27) were not in Nashville. However, it did give us access and approval by the Chamber of Commerce, which has previously shunned our overtures for cooperative action.

East Tennessee

Knoxville, like Nashville, has had little outward activity since May and June. The Highlander sponsored rural work camp destruction and arrests have plagued sympathetic supporters. The Knoxville News Sentinel is continuing its vendetta against Rev. Ewell Reagin of the Presbyterian Student Center, and anyone else who has had any connection with Highlander staff, past or present. There is pressure within the Negro community to get Negroes to patronize the downtown establishments.

From my August interviews with several Knoxville persons, I did not discover any real desire for a local council. The NCCJ and several other organizations have had continuing programs. As Knoxville people explain, you see the same people at all of the different organizations working in this area. During the period of the Knox Area Council, services were made available to help any local organization or committee to achieve its goal. Consequently there was considerable splintering of groups which could not have survived without the transfusions given by Galen Martin's service and encouragement. With the termination of this free service many of the groups have continued, but with severe anemia. The NCCJ has as its president this year, Mrs. W. B. Hembree, also our board member, and an ernest determined person. She expressed willingness to try to assist in organizing a Knoxville Chapter, but expressed reluctance to effect another organization. In August when I was there, most of the state council people, Negro and white, were away from the city.

It was a genuine pleasure and privilege to gave Vernon Jordan's guidance during visits to Bristol and Johnson City. In Bristol the movement toward integration comes from Sid Berman's leadership; he's president of the Bristol Council. There is no real organized Negro effort. They accept what Sid organizes, but initiate little activity. The quality and quantity of Negro leadership is sparse. Life is not difficult and Negroes do not make demands. This is also true in Johnson City. It was a real asset to have Vernon's evaluation and his stimulation of Negro leaders to lead. Following the Johnson City meeting a white member of the newly formed Mayor's Committee telephoned for a "blue-print" on how to go about desegregation in Johnson City.

School Desegregation - Teacher integration was achieved in Putnam County last week without incident. Three adjacent counties desegregated their high schools also without incident. Earlier visits indicated that they were doing so with reluctance, but accepting it as inevitable. The resistence of the Negro teachers to desegregation only confirmed the white generalization that the better Negroes don't want integrated schools. In July, K. Jones' visit to Livingston (Overton County) there was recognition that the schools must accept integration. However, a week before school was to open, the Negroes had not been told they would be enrolled at Overton High School. The principal said he had no plans to tell them. He didn't know how they were to find out; they were not invited for pre-registration. He was misinformed that the number who might come, etc. Following a visit with officials, K. Jones got word to the Negro students to appear at the high school on opening day.

Several other school systems are beginning desegregation, including Harriman City School System, McMinn County, Hawkins County, and possibly others. The only blatant resistence has come in Smithville (see clipping). The school systems will resist by various means, but where Negro population is small, they will reluctantly agree to voluntary desegregation.

West Tennessee

Jackson, which was our showcase community has fallen on hard times. A strong Citizens Council has emerged there and backed the successful ticket for Mayor and city council. The Chamber of Commerce leadership changed and the present directors have disavowed the agreement made in 1961 for a step-by-step desegregation program. While some of the former Chamber officials are continuing quietly to work with Negro leadership, the real bi-racial thrust is gone and most of the former white leadership has moved away from Jackson. There have been Sunday mass meetings of 3000 Negroes determined to bring about equality of opportunity. The local press refuses to report these meetings, and the political leadership denounces it. The Jackson Community Relations Council's white membership has felt the brunt of the Citizens Council, and was discouraged and ineffective when I was there August 1. K. Jones will be in Jackson on September 11, 1963. From earlier successes, the Negro community has gained courage and determination, but violence will probably occur before there is change.

Memphis Council is in the doldrums. It has never been really strong and has had poor or non-functioning leadership. They have faced up to this now and K. Jones is meeting with them September 12.

We have not achieved our goal of organizing new councils. In small communities where communication is established, it seems to the local people unnecessary. Where the Negro population is very small, there is not enough Negro leadership to bring a council into existence. I have tried to work with what leadership there is, using Nashville and local contacts for opening wedges in job opportunity, etc.

Neither have we achieved any real program for enlarging membership. There has been a considerable increase in new memberships in the Nashville area because of one board member's personal drive. The elected council officers have not given time to this, other than one brief meeting. At that time, it was proposed that we broaden our concern to include school drop-outs, prison reform, etc., believing that in this way we would enlist many people of liberal views but uncommitted about race. The competent person asked to head this has since then decided she cannot do so. With the state meeting still without form or substance, there has been no target to pen it on. This whole matter has been a real failure and one that K. Jones feels particularly discouraged about. With a well established program and goals I think we can increase our membership and effectiveness. As it is we are floundering.

Finances - One of our few bright spots has been the increase in financial support. We achieved our matching funds goal considerably earlier that we had in 1961 and 1962, and membership renewals are continuing to come in. All membership renewal notices have gone from this office, rather than from local councils and we have kept a better tab on the process than in former years. We expect to clear our files of old members who have not renewed, and this will show a real drop in membership but the result will be a valid count.

As of September 1, we had received $4,827.90 - $103.00 received in August and deposited in September, in memberships and contributions.

Jackson (K. Jones)

On September 11 and 13, I was in Jackson. There have been meetings in Mayor Smith's office between Negro leadership and white political and business leaders over the past several months. The meetings have been acrimonious, and ineffective. In early September, it was agreed that some statement of purpose was required. The Mayor appointed a committee of 4 persons - 2 Negro and 2 white to draw up a proposal for lessening community racial tensions. It was sheer good forturne that Pierce Winningham, Jr., a young attorney, was one of the 2 white members. The other is Rev. David O. Byrd of the West Jackson Baptist Church. This small committee drew up a modest statement of procedure which called for rescending all segregation ordinance on the books and initiation of action to bring about equality. With some change, this was accepted by the Mayor's Committee - about 12 people - on September 11. On September 13, when I was again in Jackson, it was learned that the small revisions agreed to had been changed completely, so that the new resolution called for the end of Negro demonstrations for the next 6 months while the Mayor and others worked on these matters but with no promise of success. There was to me another Negro mass meeting on September 15 when Negroes would consider this proposal. The Negro leadership was completely frustrated and discouraged, and Mr. Winningham was a patient in the local hospital while his wife was receiving threatening telephone calls.

The only local newspaper, the Jackson Sun refuses to report any racial news but also to accept advertising "which may be inflammatory." They gave this reason for refusing to accept as advertising the Knoxville News Sentinel editorial revised to fit Jackson, and to be signed by the Jackson Community Relations Council. My own interviews with the advertising manager of the paper and 3 hotel-motels was an assurance of their segregation policies. They were actually terrified of my question about their policies.

Part of Jackson's problem stems from the blackout of news. White residents have no way to know that 2000 to 3000 Negro gather for a mass meeting each Sunday night, and they will not be held back very much longer.

Memphis

On September 12, the Memphis Chapter, after long discussion agreed to continue as a chapter and to adopt a formal program of activities. Temporary officers were elected in order to move forward while the Nominating Committee worked on a slate. The Memphis group, now largely disorganized, is made up of 2 groups of members - the ones who see frank and forthright stands on issues, coupled with bi-racial action, and a group of older citizens terrified of action, but genuinely concerned for bi-racial communication. The Memphis Community Relations Committee (power group) considered and then rejected the broadening of their own charge to initiate measures to bring about change, and settled back into their role as firefighters. There they remain, although giving lip service to their ability to go beyond settling of issues.

The NAACP is the leading force in Memphis for initiating change. However, there is little avenue for communication and quiet pressure except through an organization such as our Council. It was the recognition of this by Negro members which insisted on the continuation of the Memphis Chapter.

Nashville 12, Tennessee

June 19, 1963

1. Metropolitan Human Relations Committee

The attached memorandum was sent to the chairman, Mr. James O. Bass, with copies for all members of the Committee. However, it will take considerable individual effort on the part of our membership to further the goals enumerated, and to broaden the concerns of the Committee. Our Council recognizes that there are additional matters of inequality which merit the consideration of the community.

After reviewing the five proposals enclosed, you should write to the Committee -

1) supporting one or more of these points, or
2) making additional proposals for the Committee's consideration.

Letters should be sent to: Mr. James O. Bass, Chairman
Metropolitan Human Relations Committee
Metropolitan Court House
Nashville 3, Tennessee

If convenient, the Nashville Community Relations Council would appreciate a copy of your letter. This will assist the Board in discovering the additional areas of inequality which are of great importance to members.

2. Congressional Civil Rights Legislation

Civil rights legislation in line with the President's nation-wide address on June 11, is anticipated in Congress within the next two weeks. Despite the force and challenge of President Kennedy's statement, there has been little reaction in the form of letters and telegrams to Congressional delegations. Letters should be sent immediately to President Kennedy and -

Senator Albert Gore, Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.
Senator Estes Kefauver, " "
Congressman Richard Fulton, " "

Letters should urge the passage of a strong civil rights bill, and ask the support of our Representative and Senators. There has been surprisingly little reaction to the President's speech. It is noted that the NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN has never printed the text of the President's Civil Rights address.

NASHVILLE COMMUNITY RELATIONS COUNCIL

Nashville 12, Tennessee

Memorandum to the Metropolitan Human Relations Committee

The Nashville Community Relations Council would like to urge that the Metropolitan Human Relations Committee maintain its very fine accomplishments by giving consideration to the following suggestions for further progress in desegregation in the community life of Nashville and Davidson County:

1. Develop a plan for follow-up on restaurant, hotel, and motel desegregation.

   Many businesses may be quite willing to desegregate if directly requested to do so. Therefore, to maintain the momentum which has started, there should be a plan to contact in person or by letter in the name of the Committee each eating place, hotel, and motel in the Metropolitan area to request its compliance with the Committee's recommendations regarding service without regard to race or color. Voluntary desegregation of our well known accommodations should pave the way for the enactment of a Public Accommodations Ordinance. Experience in other metropolitan centers has shown that such an ordinance is necessary to insure compliance by all establishments. The Committee should recommend that the Metropolitan Council enact a Public Accommodations Ordinance with sanctions.

2. Secure service in health, welfare, and recreation establishments on an equal basis without regard to race or color.

   These services are provided by government, voluntary tax exempt agencies, and commercial establishments. The Committee is in a position to recommend to the mayor and governmental departments that they render services on a non-segregated basis. Voluntary agencies such as hospitals, other health and welfare agencies, character building agencies and other leisure time service agencies, should serve all persons without racial limitations. These agencies look to the total community for their capital improvement and operating funds through United Givers Fund, other voluntary fund drives, Hill-Burton funds, and tax concessions.

   Commercial establishment licensed to serve the public in the areas of recreation and entertainment have much the same responsibility for providing an "open city" atmosphere as do restaurants, hotels, and motels. Consideration should be given to including them in a Public Accommodations Ordinance.

3. Secure employment opportunities on a merit basis.

Recent studies of federal, state, and local governmental agencies in Metropolitan Nashville indicate considerable racial discrimination in hiring and upgrading practices. Policies of merit employment consistently adhered to should be an immediate goal for all governmental agencies. We suggest that the Committee give attention at once to their responsibility for expanding equal employment and training opportunities.

All employers should be urged to adopt a policy of merit employment. Agreements should be negotiated with employers whereby Negroes who are qualified by training and experience would be accepted as applicants for all types of employment without discrimination. Labor unions should also be urged to eliminate discriminatory policies and practices. The Metropolitan Council should consider legislation which would safeguard employment rights.

4. Secure housing opportunities on an "open occupancy" basis.

Negroes should have access to any housing for which they are able to pay. Real estate owners, dealers, and developers should make their holdings available on a non-discriminatory basis. Banking establishments should make loans available for buying, or building homes without considering the previous racial character of the neighborhood.

The Metropolitan Council should examine ways in which government can promote a policy of open occupancy housing. Urban Renewal has tremendous impact on Negroes since a disproportionate amount of blighted housing is occupied by non-whites. One device which should be employed in connection with Urban Renewal is a citizens participation program. This is, in fact, a program requirement for federal funds which has been overlooked to date. An over-all citizens committee on Urban Renewal with a sub-committee or separate committee on minority housing should be appointed in accordance with the requirements of the Federal Housing Act. Such a citizens committee could examine various aspects of the problem of equal housing opportunities for all citizens.

Metropolitan Nashville should avoid the handicap to democratic living which inheres in large areas occupied by a single racial group. The Committee should encourage in every way possible long-range planning for open residency as protection against such a hazard.

5. Continued efforts toward inclusive educational facilities.

Although our public schools have fulfilled the minimum requirements of the Federal Court Order with regard to desegregation, Nashville's experience in the last six years should provide confidence for bolder and more creative steps. As schools approach the junior high and senior high school years, extra curricular activities gain a larger place in the life of the students. The board of education, the administrative staff and teachers must be aware of the importance of athletics, glee clubs, debating teams, and similar activities for all students. Such activities are an intrinsic part of a desegregated school system. Teachers should have the advantage of specific preparation for desegregation in the junior and senior high school levels, with the support of the educational system. In addition, it becomes increasingly important that vocational training at Hume Fogg, for example, be available to Negro students.

The Nashville Community Relations Council recognizes the comprehensive nature of these suggestions and the time and effort of all our citizens which will be required to bring about these changes. We will continue our efforts to accomplish these objectives and will be of whatever specific help we can to the Committee. We stand ready to amplify or detail any of these suggestions which the Committee may wish to hear.

Quarterly Narrative Report
July-September, 1963

I. Significant Events in Arkansas

A. In the Schools

1. On July 8 the Pine Bluff School Board announced plans for "voluntary" desegregation of the first two grades. Subsequently the Board assigned six children to four elementary schools, one in the first and five in the second. Five are attending without newsworthy incidents.

2. On August 12 the Hot Springs School Board announced "voluntary" desegregation of the first and second grades. The Board fixed no schedule for additional desegregation but reported it would announce further steps "from time to time." On July 28 Superintendent Mills announced that eight out of fourteen requests had been granted under the Arkansas Pupil Placement Law. The eight would attend four different elementary schools. The Board justified its actions to its patrons by appeal to the legal advice of Attorneys Friday and Light who confirmed the courts would compel the district to take this action if it did not do so voluntarily. These attorneys are the counsel for the Little Rock Board.

3. On August 15 and 16 five Negro students asked North Little Rock Board for admission to the senior and the Jefferson Davis Junior High School. All live near these schools. On August 27 the Board announced that it was denying all requests but that it would draw up a plan for desegregation beginning September 1964. (This is the first action by the Board since it withdrew its plan to open the high school in 1957 after the Little Rock turmoil that year.)

The Board's action was intended to answer the query from Colonel Carl C. Hinkle of the Little Rock Air Force Base prompted by the notice from the Defense Department to all military installation commanders to inform their men that they have a right to send their children to desegregated schools and to obtain policy statements from the local districts on admission. Colonel Hinkle's statement indicated the plan was not what the Department of Defense wanted, but that it was not the policy of the Air Force to "force desegregation on the district." Mr. Hinkle retires this year as commander of the Air Base.

4. On August 8 the Little Rock School Board announced the assignment of seven Negro children to the fourth grade in five schools. Six were denied. Earlier eight Negro first graders had been assigned, making fifteen in the elementary schools of the city. One hundred and eight students were assigned to the junior and senior high schools earlier.

5. Little Rock opened September 4 a new 1¼ million dollar Booker Junior High, named for a deceased Negro attorney. The Board refused to say whether it was designated for Negroes. Only Negroes were assigned. The staff is all Negro.

6. Mrs. Y'Vonn Fitts took her white son, six, in McAlmont School for Negroes on September 3-4. He continues to attend this County school under the Pulaski County Board. The father is an airman stationed in Alaska. She reported a barrage of obscene and threatening phone calls.

Carl W. Darnell, a recent resident from Arlington, Virginia, enrolled his two young sons in nearby Bush School for Negroes on September 6. They were left in the school only one day.

7. On September 12 Mr. and Mrs. William Rogers filed a suit against the Fort Smith School District with George Howard of Pine Bluff as attorney. The suit is over the refusal of the Board to admit the Rogers' daughters, Janice and Patricia, to the 12th and 10th grades. The Board is in the seventh year of its grade-a-year plan.

8. On September 24, Negro candidates for school boards ran in three Arkansas districts. All lost. Two other Negro candidates announced. One at Crossett withdrew because his wife taught in the district; another at Dumas was disqualified because three of the 21 petitioners were not qualified voters. Two of the three who lost were in southeast Arkansas, Dermott and Eudora.

At Little Rock Mrs. John Evans ran second against two white opponents. Mr. McDonald, the incumbent, won with 3811 votes which was a plurality not a majority of the votes. Mrs. Evans received 2461; Mr. Fureigh, 1921. The majority vote seems to be against present school board policies, since this was the issue raised by both McDonald's opponents.

9. The Little Rock School Board chose R. H. Matson as chairman, succeeding Everett Tucker, Jr.; and Ted Lamb, vice-chairman.

10. In August the Arkansas Education Association (white) and the Arkansas Teachers Association (Negro) announced plans to study merging the two organizations.

11. Harding College, operated by the Churches of Christ at Searcy, admitted three Negro men to its freshman class. They all reside in Searcy.

B. In Organizations

1. The Greater Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations (off-spring of the National Conference on Religion and Race) on September 17 held the first of three sessions to be convened this fall. More than two hundred from all the faiths participated in the Student Union of Philander Smith concentrating on "racial justice in the inner life of the synagogue and church." Rabbi Elijah Polnick, John Gillam (Catholic), William Gentry (Methodist), Rufus King Young (AME) constituted the panel chaired by Father Walter Clancy. The session adopted a four point program and authorized a committee to implement same.

2. The Little Rock Council on Community Affairs, which was described as in a Gazette story on September 15 under a front-page heading "A New Negro Leadership Emerges", has organized its work under seven subcommittees as follows - Education, Employment, Housing, Public Relations, Religion, Public Accomodations, Political Action.

On August 20 its Committee on Education met with Little Rock School Board to protest its present plan and procedures in desegregation of the schools. (A copy of its recommendations has been sent to SRC.)

3. On July 16 the Board of the YWCA at Hot Springs strongly urged the local school board to desegregate the schools of that city.

4. At Aldersgate Camp the Wesley Society of the Little Rock Conference of Methodists held a two-day workshop on Church and Race for ministers and others. A number of officials of the church participated on September 30-October 1, including Bishop Kenneth Pope, the Bishop's administrative assistant (Reverend Cecil Culver), and two district superintendents. Papers and discussions were led by members of the group.

5. A.M.& N. College at Pine Bluff was host to a Rural Area Development Workshop on August 27 in which state and federal agencies participated. Invited especially were Negro Agricultural Extension Agents and Negro vocational agricultural teachers. (See ACHR activities for some interpretation.)

6. The Arkansas Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights formulated plans for interviews inquiries in eight selected towns and cities as to official attitudes and plans in reference to desegregation. (See section on politics for some reactions.)

2. In Little Rock "test periods" for 31 leading dining facilities were completed by September 23.

3. The Little Rock "negotiating committee" after August 15 moved on job opportunities for Negroes. During September 15 workers were employed in new kinds of jobs in downtown stores, including clerks and office workers. In outlying stores Kroger has employed cashier checkers and stock clerks.

4. In Little Rock two conferences on employment with Negro leaders were initiated by federal agencies - September 25, 27. One was called by the office of Internal Revenue Service and included three officials out of the Washington offices of that agency. The second was planned to include a representative from each of the federal agencies in Arkansas [redacted] interest[redacted] opening new jobs for Negroes.

5. At Pine Bluff "the movement" concentrated during September on voter registration. The "negotiating committee" maintains good morale. Progress in opening public accomodations at the moment is halted by the sweeping injunction against the movement obtained by the manager of McDonald's drive-in.

6. "Panel of Americans", a testimonial program on intergroup prejudices and relations, was initiated in Little Rock. Patterned after a similar program in Des Moines and Kansas City ladies closely related to the steering committee of the Interfaith Conference compose the panel or panels of six young women of various ethnic and religious backgrounds have made a number of widely publicized and well attended public meetings sponsored by the PTA's and churches.

7. On August 20 Negro real estate dealers organized the "Twin City Real Estate Brokers" under the sponsorship of the Urban League.

8. Eugene "Bull" Conner's speech in Little Rock on September 10 sponsored by the White Citizens Council was heard by 140 persons.

D. In the Courts

1. On August 13 Judge Dawson in the state chancery court issued a broad injunction against the Pine Bluff Movement, the NAACP, Black Muslims, and other Negro leaders forbidding demonstrations at McDonald's Drive-In. "Exactly like some of the early injunctions against labor", remarked a University Professor of Law. Manager of McDonald's based his request on his charge his constitutional rights under the 13th Amendment were being violated, interference with his business was driving him into "involuntary servitude".

2. Arkansas circuit court at Pine Bluff, July 16-18, failed to reach a verdict in the trial of William Howard, charged with carrying a concealed weapon and stabbing a Dollarway student. Attorney for Mr. Howard thinks the case will be dropped.

E. In Politics

1. Governor Faubus on September 2 at Rector before 3000 blasted the U.S. Supreme Court saying "the only way to make integration work is to set up a police state and cram the Court's decision down the peoples' throats with bayonets." Also, he said, "It seems like these days a good God-fearing white man doesn't have a chance in the Supreme Court."

2. The Governor also made public that his mail was overwhelmingly unfavorable toward the announced visit of President Kennedy in Arkansas in October.

3. On September 30 Attorney General Bruce Bennett released to the press a letter from James E. Youngdahl, Chairman of the Arkansas Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, written to a south Arkansas Mayor along with a letter of warning sent to mayors of all cities of the first class by the Attorney General charging Mr. Youngdahl et al with being "busybodies trying to stir up dissension and strife among the races - where no trouble exists." Mr. Youngdahl's letter announced the proposed visit of a member of his committee (Ruth Arnold, ACHR staff secretary) to confer with officials on "preparation for desegregation demands." Mr. Bennett linked Mr. Youngdahl and this activity with Mr. McMath, former governor, as the "Youngdahl-McMath integration combine".

4. In the weekly of Mr. Faubus, The Statesman, the Bennett story above had front page two-column billing headed thus, "Human Relations Council Accused of Attempt to Stir up Racial Strife." The paper quotes Bennett: "We can look for more trouble in Arkansas if officials of the Arkansas Council on Human Relations, aided and abetted by the James E. Youngdahl-Sidney McMath integration combine have their way."

5. Earlier in September The Statesman had reported from reliable informant of a secret meeting of Sid McMath, Mrs. Byron House, and others to plan poll tax drive at which proposed candidates for governor next summer were discussed. The story indicated the informant did not ascertain positively whether Nat Griswold of the Arkansas Council was present although he usually attends such meetings.

6. On July 29 Attorney General Bruce Bennett ruled that county officials could refuse to accept mass applications for poll tax receipts from those collecting for same. He indicated the law required individuals to appear in person to pay poll tax at the court house or they may mail in their tax.

In answer to Mr. Bennett's ruling George Ellison, President of the Arkansas AFL-CIO Council, wrote to the editor that his legal adviser interpreted Arkansas law to mean simply that a person could not pay the poll tax of other citizens, that if the person named on the application paid his tax anyone can turn in the money to officials.

II. ACHR Activities Related to Events

A. In the Schools

1. On September 23 the annual "bridges meeting" was held at Dunbar Center with the cooperation of "The Committee for Better Education" (parents and children (Negro) in desegregated schools). By count 220 persons joined in this meeting for information and fellowship.

2. ACHR staff and Board members pointedly raised again the question of opening Little Rock University to Negro students. The occasion was rejection of a young matron as a student in night classes and the denial of a qualified student to nursing school at St. Vincent's Hospital because she did not have the prerequisite course which only LRU gives.

B. In Communities

1. In connection with ACHR's projected liaison program the staff asked the President for a list of Arkansans taking part in White House conferences on the civil rights crisis. These were furnished for ACHR's information and use.

2. Secretary of Labor Wirtz in a statement on policy in regard to discrimination indicated the department would release policies and programs to concerned local organizations. ACHR has requested to be put on the list of the concerned.

3. ACHR sent to Jack Greenberg of the Legal Education and Defense Fund the local newspaper reports on the response of the local Holiday Inn located on Urban Renewal land to the decision in Nashville which indicated the Holiday Inn there similarly located could not discriminate against Negroes. The local motel claimed its case was different.

4. ACHR secured the address of the national offices of McDonald's Hamburger Chain and furnished it to the white members of the negotiating team at Pine Bluff. (See Events in Courts, above) These men wish to end the impasse caused by the court injunction.

5. Both the Directors of ACHR were involved in the two conferences in Little Rock by federal agencies confronting discriminatory practices in employment.

6. The Directors of ACHR were active on the Steering Committee for the Conference on Religion and Human Relations, both in planning the sessions and in carrying out the plans.

7. Associate Director Sutton continued as professional advisor and planner for a number of community groups active among Negro citizens. These include the following: the Council on Community Affairs and the work of its sub committees on Education and Employment; the Pine Bluff Movement, the rally for which he gave an address during August; the Little Rock "negotiating committee" which opened 31 restaurants and new jobs for Negroes; the poll tax campaign, organizing PTA booths at super markets.

8. Program Assistant Arnold was named to the Arkansas Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. In this capacity she worked toward the printing and release of the Report on Arkansas Education (set for October 6) and plans for a survey by her of eight selected towns north and south as to understanding of and plans in relation to the civil rights crisis. The dates for the survey set for October 2-4, 9-11. (See In Politics, above)

C. Organizational and Program Activities of ACHR

1. On July 13 program and business meetings were held at Aldersgate Camp, 3 - 9:30 p.m. The program included a panel consisting of Mrs. Vivion Brewer, Mr. Ted Lamb, Mr. Ozell Sutton, and Fr. David Boileau. At the business meeting three new Board members were named to the following unexpired terms of Don Franks, John Thompson and Worth Long - Father Walter Clancy, the Reverend Negail Riley, the Reverend A. M. Roberts.

2. The directors with the secretary of the Urban League attended the workshop at A.M.& N. at Pine Bluff, August 27, on rural development and injected vigorously the dimension of discrimination against Negroes in the training programs under state and federal auspices. This led to the information conveyed privately that the planners wished to avoid the issue of discrimination in the workshop! This was the day before the March on Washington!

3. A new program project - Local Liaison Service - has been developed by the staff to meet the need growing out of new national "crash" programs for civil and human rights.

In connection with this project the Director made a seven-day trip to Atlanta and Washington, September 5-11, for consultations with intergroup agencies and program agencies.

4. On August 22 the Director was the speaker to the Rotary Club at Crossett speaking on "Trends in Race Relations." That evening he met with a community interracial group at the Presbyterian Church. (This invitation reflects the increasing willingness of business leaders to confront nationally current pressures.)

5. The committee on special funds from businesses and business men headed by Mr. Hugh Patterson has reported $2900 of its promised $5000. This is all new money.

6. On September 26 the Reverend Charles C. Walker died. He has been a member of the Board of ACHR since its establishment, going back even to 1950. He was Chairman of the Board in 1961-1962. (The Board in its October meeting authorized a Walker Memorial Fund to pay student memberships at the desegregated high schools in Little Rock.)

D. In Politics

ACHR has not been involved in the political activities of course.

The staff is interested in interpreting activities of politicians as barometers of future events. Mr. Faubus' pronouncements continue consistently anti-Kennedy, anti-federal interference. Racial attitudes are reflected in these and in his paper. These are lamentable even if secondary to political strategy against the Kennedy administration.

A discernable rapport between the Governor and Mr. Bennett, the Attorney General, seems significant and ominous. A current rally by the American Legion in Madison County lists Mr. Faubus as the speaker and Mr. Bennett as master of ceremonies. Mr. Faubus finds Mr. Bennett's attack on McMath via the Arkansas Advisory Committee via Mr. Youngdahl greatly to his liking.

The fact that the Governor in these events took two occasions to point at ACHR encourages the Council: he must think ACHR is a force that a politician should be alert to.

Quarterly Report of Executive Director -Virginia Council on Human Relations

July - August - September, 1963

Office:

Mr. Ocie Lee Smith is no longer with us. Mr, Smith proved to be ineffective in the role for which he was hired. The decision to let Mr. Smith go was reached after much careful consideration was given to our over-all work and in justifying our report to the William C. Whitney Foundation for the grant which enabled us to employ him. Mr. Paul Anthony is fully aware of many of the details and circumstances under which he left us. Mr. Smith is now employed by the National Sharecroppers Fund, and is working in Arkansas and Louisianna.

Some office changes in secretarial help will be made by the beginning of 1964.

Mr. Gregory Shinert, Director of VEJOB makes his own quarterly reports to the Board and I shall ask that he send the same to SRC.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE QUARTER

New Councils: The Harrisonburg group which was organized last quarter has now asked for affiliation under the name of the Rockingham Council on Human Relations. This is a well organized group with many committees which are functioning. The Radford group has asked also for affiliation and expects to begin operating as of January 1, 1964, under the fiscal year of membership dues for all members based on our uniform procedure of $5.00 divided equally between local and state.

We have received a $1,000.00 grant from the Woman's Division of Christian Service of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church, 475 Riverside Drive New York 27, New York, Town and Country Work Department, to be used in the employment of Miss Mary Finch on a day to day, part time basis to work in the smaller or rural areas of Virginia. Miss Findh is now employed on a three day per week - Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday - basis. She has been to South Boston, Martinsville and Hopewell on this basis. She is scheduled to visit for three days Christiansburg, Front Royal, Covington, Lexington, Irvington and other such Towns. She interviews Ministers, Community leaders, etc. and writes up a detailed report of the atmosphere and climate of each area, with the strong possibilities of organizing new local councils in as many of these areas as possible.

Five visits were made to Norfolk during the quarter seeking to assist in obtaining a strong President for that council and Board of Directors to carry out an expanded work there. Mrs. Carl Wysoff, a very abled and articulate lady is now the new president. She has recruited a good group as leaders and Dr. James McBride Dabbs, of SRC, will address their first mass rally in Norfolk on Monday, October 21. Things look brighter for Norfolk than ever, but this has been a problem for us.

I have spent some time working on the establishment of the Free School Association for Prince Edward County which is now functioning. They have four white pupils enrolled. This is temporary but no doubt is under top flight supervision, therefore in our opinion is justifiable for the time being.

I have spent considerable time in Danville and was well received. I met with political, business, church and Negro leaders. We have employed Ben Muse on a part time basis to work there and the bill is being paid by Danville.

Much more could be said about Danville, but I shall ask Ben Muse to make copies of his report and send to SRC.

Human Relations Night at Parker Field Baseball Team was a success. Paul Anthony has a keen analysis on that. For our part, I was taken to New York as the guest of the Baseball Ownership for the first two games of the World Series and spent a full week at their expenses where I saw four Broadway Plays and ate at the finest. In fact I was King for a Week. I could not help but rub this in a bit when I spoke to the Richmond Baptist Ministerial Association the following week. I wanted them to know that even Human Relations has some side effects.

I have been on WXEX Telivision fourteen times this quarter speaking on such subjects as: "Prince Edward County"; Why the Civil Rights Legislation Should be Passed"; The Danville, Virginia Problem"; The Absurdity of Senate Filibusters"; "Why I Favored the March on Washington, D.C."; "Assets and Liabilities of Mayor's Bi-Racial Commissions", etc. etc. I also have delivered several Radio addresses and one, one hour radio program entitled "Open for Opinion" where I answered questions called in by the public.

We have completed plans for our first CONSULTATION OF OPINION MAKERS. On Saturday, December 14, we are inviting 150 lawyers of Virginia to meet in Richmond for the day. Five lawyers have served on the planning committee and have worked out the program which will be divided into three discussion groups. We shall have lunch together at which time we expect to have Burke Marshall address the group. Final plans are incomplete but definitely the meeting will go over. (More to come on this)

One of the most complicated things of the quarter was resolving a serious conflict between Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Richmond Hotels. I worked five days and nights on this and am still getting calls from local lawyers and business men thanking me for saving Richmond from being blown apart. Although the Hotel leaders were mad at me for a while for pressuring them to meet with SCLC in my office - this pressure came through the Bishop and Business men - all is now forgiven and apologies made on their part. The SCLC banquet was held in the John Marshall Hotel with 1,000 in attendance and no incidents or after results.

OTHER MATTERS

The paradox of this job is as follows: When I sit in the office and turn out a lot of promotional material, money comes in and we get along real well. When I stay out on t the field doing the job that needs to be done and do not turn out the promotional materials then money doesn't come in. During the last quarter I have done the latter which turns out to be the greater evil and we have run lower in our operational budget than at any time since I have been on this job. However, we simply refuse to push the panic button. The Finance Committee met on Saturday, October 12, and they are fully aware of the situation. They, plus several other maneuvers, will pull us through the next ten weeks.

I have gotten too involved in too many projects and now must drop all speaking engagements, etc., and give some time to administration and promotion. Perhaps this shows up my weakness. I had much rather be out on the scenes than to be in the office, but I shall resort to trying to divide my time between the two.

We are working on a big dream for VCHR. We are applying for a Grant to employ a Director of Public Relations and Fund Raising. This new staff member would be assigned a quota of raising within Virginia $60,000 during 1964. This could well be the grant that could eliminate the needs for all grants.

I discussed this with Mr. Maxwell Hahn of the Field Foundation recently while in New York. He asked that I send the request in immediately and that I send it also to other Foundations. We have now sent the request to Feild Foundation as of Thursday, October 17, asking for $20,600.00 to be used as follows:

Salary of Director of Public Relations and Fund Raising...	$ 12,000.00
Secretary.....	3,600.00
Travel.....	4,000.00
Expense of promotional materials.....	1,000.00
Total	20,600.00

Mr. Henry Caravati, an experienced Fund Raiser, is ready to go to work for us on the following contract, within thirty days following our giving him the position:

> That he will raise $60,000.00 in Virginia in 1964.
> If this is done he will receive a continuing contract with a quota each year on a sliding scale to reach $100,000.00 within three years. If he fails to reach the quota, no renewal will be given.

We have sent this request to The Field Foundation and wish you to know of our action. Please advise us if there are any Foundations whom you do not wish us to approach for this help. We feel that Henry Caravati can do this job. He has the ability, determination, dedication and the respect of the Virginia population from whom this money would come.

We would like very much to set as a membership goal for the Virginia Council 10,000 membership for 1964, and to co-ordinate the fund raising efforts with the membership drive and really seek to make of this Council something both financially secure and numerically respectable.

Sincerely,

Heslip Lee

II General - this Quarter

During this quarter I travelled some 10,000 miles, giving formal addresses to local councils and groups (ministerial-sociological) in Jacksonville, Daytona, Gainesville, Tampa, Miami, Ft. Lauderdale, Palm Beach, and Ft. Pierce. I have had personal meetings and conversations with community leaders in the above named cities and in St. Petersburg, Ft. Myers, Belle Glade, Homestead, St. Augustine, and made a brief promotional talk to the Episcopal Clergy of the Diocese of South Florida at their annual convention in Avon Park. St. Augustine is of special significance in that I did extensive work in that community due to its critical character. My endeavors met with no visible success. However, I realized through such failure the role of the Florida Council in the future, explained below. In addition to the above, I manuvered normal promotion on television, Radio and through newspapers. In short, this quarter is marked simply by my confrontation with as many local persons and situations as possible.

III. Specific - the Future

It has become abundantly clear that the Florida Council cannot be incident-oriented. There is no conceiveable manner in which we can be effective in solving community disunion which has reached a crisis or near-crisis stage. The St. Augustine endeavor offers ample substantiation of this fact.

It has also become abundantly clear that the Florida Council is not an organization, but a compilation of local groups which operate without serious direction and without any real identity as part of the State work. This lack of direction and cohesiveness presents the most serious threat to our future.

Furthermore, it is clear that the financial situation of the Council reflects a pathetic, disorganized response to the avowed concern of the membership for better human relations.

In view of the above considerations, the following direction will be effected.

1. No further incident-chasing.

2. Strengthening the role of local councils in local program and as part of the State function. This will be done by the local council affording the Executive Director specific information and proposals for work in areas of housing, education, employment, and accomodations which he will act upon under their guidance. Advice alone will be afforded work undertaken by the local council, if requested. Meetings of all local officers together with the Director in Daytona will initiate the cohesiveness necessary. The appointment of an Associate Director (already accomplished by the Executive Committee; The Rev. Irvin Cheney of Daytona Beach) without salary, will aid in this undertaking, as will improvement of the NEWSLETTER.

3. The present concept of work done based upon monies available will be changed to monies available for the work to be done. The enclosed budget - proposed for 1964-mirrors this concept - alteration, Membership dues are now voided. In their stead, membership is accomplished by signature alone and opportunity of financial response to the work of the Council through monthly pledging. This will increase membership radically and involve direct responsibility of individuals toward the goals before us.

A detailed canvassing of all present members by committees within local councils will begin in November. It is anticipated that the work for 1964 will be fully supported through pledges before January 1.

This program will have the side-effect of establishing direction and union.

4. In order to implement the described system of pledging, it will be necessary to call a meeting of officers of local councils in Daytona where the program can be explained fully. For this meeting, I ask $200 from the Southern Regional Council to defray travel expenses.

PRELIMINARY REPORT

Eight-City Survey by Ruth Arnold
October 3-4; 10-11

(In its final form this report will include background on the planning and purpose of the survey as well as the press release by the Attorney General on his letters to mayors of all first-class Arkansas cities advising them against seeing a representative of the Committee. The final form will also be made general and will not be in the first person.)

THE INTERVIEW WITH MAYORS

I presented each mayor with a copy of the Arkansas Advisory Committee Report on Education, calling attention to the other members on the committee and explaining its role. I said we wanted to determine his understanding of the civil rights movement, its implications for his community and whether or not any policy or plans had been formulated to meet problems that might arise. I tried to assess his willingness to accept advice, help, or the knowledge gained by other communities.

In order to achieve as relaxed, friendly, and frank an atmosphere as possible I took no notes during the discussion.

Before leaving I asked for names of Negro leaders and tried to evaluate his rapport with the Negro community. Then I gave him a copy of the International City Managers' Association report on "The City Government and Minority Groups" calling attention to its professional approach.

THE INTERVIEW WITH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DIRECTORS OR CIVIC LEADERS

This interview was approximately the same but with more emphasis on the business interest in a peaceful transition. I left copies of the City Managers' Report and the Southern Regional Council Special Report, "Charlotte Has Built Its Integration Road."

FAYETTEVILLE

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 2.5; site of the State University; secondary schools desegregated except for faculty; no integration in the elementary schools; city facilities completely desegregated, including the swimming pool; some hotels, motels, restaurants and theaters open; University housing segregated. An active human relations organization works diligently on pushing for equal rights.)

The Mayor

After introducing myself and explaining my purpose I congratulated the Mayor on the peaceful progress that Fayetteville had made, that though my mission was to be helpful, he was really in a position to advise other communities.

I asked did he think it would be helpful to have an official interracial commission. His response indicated he did not really consider this problem within the scope of his job as mayor. He referred vaguely to the "university group" (Fayetteville Council on Human Relations) as working out these problems. He did not seem to know as much about the desegregation of his town as I did from my previous contact with members of the Fayetteville Council and its newsletter.

I asked did he think those business men who still refused to open their businesses to all jeopardized the peaceful progress that had been made. Would not a non-discriminatory ordinance protect those businesses that had desegregated voluntarily? He gave me a short lecture on free enterprise and the rights of business men to run their businesses as they saw fit.

The Chamber of Commerce

The Director of the Chamber was not in so I called on an active Junior Chamber of Commerce member who was well acquainted with the desegregation process in Fayetteville. After showing him my materials and explaining my purpose he seemed most anxious that I see the Chamber Director and succeeded in locating him for a twenty minute interview. The Director was proud of the peaceful progress Fayetteville had made. I asked him if the Chamber could play a role in persuading the "holdouts" to desegregate in order to support those who had already desegregated and to prevent demonstrations. I got another short lecture on free enterprise and the rights of business men. He did, however, add that Fayetteville business men were very fine people, most of them graduates of the University, and they could work out problems peacefully as they arose. He seemed interested in the report on Charlotte which I left with him. (However, I felt some dismay when I learned that all the other Chamber directors said they had already received a copy and had read it.)

FORT SMITH

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 8.9; site of Fort Chaffee; token desegregation in the schools with a law suit filed to speed up desegregation; city facilities desegregated except for swimming pool; a few hotels, motels, restaurants open. An interracial committee cooperating with the mayor and chamber of commerce works on desegregation problems, but is moving very slowly since the initial desegregation of certain restaurants. There is a good deal of industry in Fort Smith.)

Prior to my visit, in a news interview concerning the Attorney General's letter about my visit, the Mayor announced his door was always open to visitors.

After finding the Mayor out of the office I made my first call at the Chamber of Commerce, leaving word with the secretary to phone me there on the Mayor's return.

The Chamber of Commerce

The assistant director of the Chamber told me of the interracial committee working on Fort Smith's desegregation problems. He gave me the impression that nearly all the restaurants were open and complained that Negroes were not using them. He seemed cognizant of the Chamber's interest in making progress in this area in order to comply with federal policies related to Fort Chaffee as well as industries with government contracts. On schools his personal opinion was that the School Board erred in not changing its original desegregation plan in order to speed up the process. (The following day the Chamber's Board of Directors passed a resolution commending those business men that had desegregated.)

The Mayor

As in Fayetteville the Mayor did not feel the desegregation issue was his problem. He equated it with labor-management problems. He saw his role only as law enforcement in the event of trouble. (However, he was the initiator of the biracial committee working on desegregation.) He seemed proud of the progress that had been made, saw no need for an official biracial committee and disapproved of a city ordinance requiring desegregation of public facilities. He was especially fearful of "outsiders" giving advice, convinced it would be resented. (This included having a native like Jerry Heilbron speak to civic clubs.) On leaving I could not resist saying that the "White only" signs on the buildings restroom doors belied his city's good reputation. He excused it by saying it was a city-county building and he did not have sole jurisdiction.

The NAACP and the Human Relations Council

In the evening I visited with the local NAACP President and the President of the local human relations council. They both expressed dismay with the lack of progress, the interminable delays, and the lack of cooperation from the commander of the army camp. They seemed to feel the latter accepted at face value the rosy picture painted by the Chamber of Commerce.

CLARKSVILLE

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 4.8; white school has NC rating, Negro school has no accreditation; site of College of the Ozarks run by the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.; no desegregation or Negro pressure for change.)

After Fort Smith I decided I should call on a Negro leader before calling on the mayor or chamber of commerce.

My first call was at the College of the Ozarks. No one from the sociology department was accessible. I was finally directed to the head of the physical education department since he was the only person available familiar with the town. He felt that Clarksville was apathetic rather than hostile to the desegregation at the college. He did not know the names of any Negro leaders but gave me directions to the Negro school. (A discription of this unaccredited school would be a report in itself!) I was given the name of a Negro minister who could be found at the "big Methodist church back of the square." This turned out to be a white church where the Negro minister worked as janitor. He had just left for the day. The white minister agreed to see me. He turned rather hostile when he finally understood my role. When I pushed him by asking how his congregation responded to Sunday School lessons and national church policies on race he told me of the town's mountain folk origins and described them as praying, "Dear God, please make me be right. You know how hard it is for me to change."

The Mayor

The Mayor owns the drug store in Clarksville. His assistant was out to lunch when I got there so I sipped a coke and discussed children and the weather with his wife for half an hour before he could join me. He listened quietly while I explained the purpose of my visit. Then I listened quietly while he gave his opinions on the power-grabbing federal government, the morals of Negroes, the mess in Washington schools, the Communists and Martin Luther King, etc. Every now and then he would interrupt himself by saying (with a mixture of hostility and awe) something like, "I wouldn't do the job you're doing for anything in the world." He became so engrossed in confronting a live integrationist he told customers to come back later to have their prescriptions filled. He finally relaxed and the following points came out. He was very relieved I didn't turn out to be a Negro. He disapproved of Negroes at the College sitting among other students at football games but he attended anyway. When I told him Little Rock restaurants had desegregated he said he guessed he could still sit at a separate table. If Clarksville schools had to (tokenly) desegregate he guessed they could manage. He said good-bye in a relieved but friendly mood shaking his head at the state of the world in general and saying, We all need to go back to being Christian." I left hoping he was not a Methodist and thinking my visit to Clarksville was at least good therapy for the Mayor.

MORRILTON

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 15.5; white school rated NC, Negro, A; no desegregation or Negro pressure for change.)

Chamber of Commerce

The Director seemed friendly until casual visitors joined us. One of them, on being introduced, simply told me he disapproved of anyone connected with civil rights and wouldn't stay in the same room with one. He left with a look of disbelief that I existed. The Director could see no relationship between good race relations and the industrial and business climate. He had received the Charlotte report and had thrown it away. I asked if he felt he and his friends reflected the general attitude of his organization and the community. He said

yes. Realizing we could not have a constructive discussion I asked for names of Negro leaders. He knew of none. I asked for the names of Negroes on the Urban Renewal Advisory Committee. He said there were none. When I told him this was a requirement for getting federal funds, that the Negroes could "give them a hard time" about it, he retorted they could give the Negroes a harder time - they were already getting nowhere with their complaints about the program.

The Mayor

The Mayor, a doctor, had an office full of patients when I got there. In response to my inquiry delivered by his nurse, he returned a message saying he would be happy to see me at the regular meetings of the city council on the second and fourth Monday nights.

GOULD

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 62.5; white school has A rating, Negro school has no accreditation; no desegregation; Negroes had submitted a petition to desegregate the schools; main industry cotton.)

The Mayor of Gould was on his vacation and not in town when I got there. The City Clerk was the wife of the Christian minister and was very alert to the problem of race relations. I learned the following; The city council's reaction to the petition for school desegregation centered on discussions concerning the acquisition of police dogs and stepping up the civil defense program. There was not much likelihood of Gould Negroes asserting themselves. Most of them were extremely poor and uneducated, many on the welfare rolls. Aggressive Negroes were not apt to stay in Gould. The Negro teachers were so demoralized they resented even a Negro who tried to improve school discipline and teaching quality. The area of most immediate concern was police brutality. (These points were all borne out in a subsequent interview with a Negro minister.)

After lunch with the Christian minister and his wife, I was taken to one of two brothers who are reputed to "own the county." I asked for his reaction to the petition for school desegregation. He said all but one of the signers were on the welfare roll, that it was inspired by outsiders, and the signers had subsequently repudiated the petition. (The latter two points were also substantiated by the Negro minister.) Asked about community reaction to a desegregation court order he responded desegregation was not likely to happen to any degree - after all, "separate but equal" had been the law for 60 years and no one had been able to enforce that.

WARREN

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 40.6; white school has NC rating; Negro school, A; no desegregation or Negro pressure for change; main industry lumber.

In response to the letter of introduction from Mr. Youngdahl, the Mayor wrote, "At the present time our city is not in position to make any statement concerning civil rights. The plans for desegregation are in the discussion stage and until our groups have had an opportunity to work out some plan, we do not feel that we need the services of your organization."

Thursday afternoon is not a good time to find anyone in a small town. My first interview was with the official of a wood workers union who represented both Negro and white workers. He was of the opinion that nothing would happen in Warren, neither the Negroes or whites wanted integration. His major interest seemed to be in convincing me it would be a bad thing; if only I would wait and let him drive me through the Negro section I would understand.

My second call was on a white business man, active in civic affairs and a former member of the school board. He was a man of good will with little understanding of the civil rights movement and its implications. (He was sure Martin Luther King was a Communist.) I asked him about the "discussion stage" referred to in the Mayor's letter. He was convinced there was no such discussion going on. He felt that cool heads would prevail in response to a court order on school desegregation.

I called at the Negro school where I met a knowledgeable Negro minister, familiar with South Arkansas, who had been a speaker for the Student Protest Movement in Pine Bluff. He agreed there was little likelihood of any pressure from Warren Negroes - they were currently disgruntled only because of the slow pace of the financial drive among white business men for a swimming pool for Negroes.

PINE BLUFF

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 42; both schools rated NC; site of the state college for Negroes; voluntary token desegregation in schools; department stores and some lunch counters desegregated; city facilities desegregated except for swimming pool. The Pine Bluff Movement (which has the help of paid staff members of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee) leads the Negro pressure for change; a secret committee of white civic leaders negotiates with them.)

The Mayor seemed to me little more than a city clerk. He had no interest in desegregation matters, said he did not know the white persons negotiating with Negroes, that he had enough to do "without all that." On city employment policies, he said they were non-discriminatory, that they had not had qualified applicants. I left after another lecture on the rights of business men in response to my inquiry about the desirability of a non-discriminatory city ordinance.

The Director of the Chamber was a genial man who "loved and got along with Negroes" and used as his guide in race relations a line he once heard a Negro speaker give, "If a white man could be a Negro just one Saturday night, he'd never be satisfied with being white again." He had received the Charlotte report, it was very good, and he had it in his integration file - "Yes, I keep up with all that." He told of a program he was working on in which workers of a big plant would be honored - Negroes separately. Asked if he didn't think Negroes resented this, he said they preferred it that way. I failed to confront any realities with him.

I went to Arkansas A.M.& N. College. The President was not in. The Dean talked about race relations in Tennessee and near-rudeness on my part failed to elicit any insights or opinions on race relations in Pine Bluff.

EL DORADO

(Background: Percentage of Negro school children - 31.4; both schools rated NC; no desegregation or Negro pressure for change; main industry oil; home town of the Attorney General.)

The Mayor wrote, "In reply to your letter of September 25th, please be advised that due to such a heavy schedule and so many prior commitments, it will be impossible for me to see, or confer with, Mrs. Ruth Arnold."

I knew little about race relations in El Dorado and from Little Rock phoned a woman I knew as active in civic affairs. Her reaction to my coming there was discouraging. They did not want any outsiders telling them what to do, their Negroes were perfectly satisfied and had already assured the white people they would take care of any outside agitators that might try to stir things up. I asked if she knew the Director of the Chamber of Commerce. She said she did - that the Director was rabid on the subject of segregation. She could think of no one with whom I could have a constructive discussion.

After I conferred with the state office of the NAACP and they confirmed the assessment of the El Dorado Negro mood, I decided a trip there would serve no useful purpose.

Mr. Paul Anthony, Director of Field Activities
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth, Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Paul:

Seems as though I get later and later each quarter. Please forgive the long delay.

We had an excellent Board of Directors meeting last week. I'm enclosing minutes of the meeting.

By our Newsletter you will note that plans are well under way for our Annual Meeting(and here I was hoping that we would be unsuccessful and have to call on you in an emergency. You have already received the invitation--what do you think of it? We are mailing approximately 1500 invitations, anticipating 400 to 500 in attendance. To-date 60 reservations are in. Our Board Members have been mailed about 10 names of the membership to call and urge attendance. Volunteers addressed envelopes by hand, stuffed, sealed and stamped.

Our Junior High Workshop was most successful with 63 young people attending and 30 more that we could not take care of. We are having an evaluation meeting today and making plans for a duplicate session, November 23rd.

Program

Hospitals - Our Health and Welfare Committee held several sessions with an employee, hospital staff and director of medical center regarding the discharge of an employee of the City-County Hospital. She has been reinstated in her position and other changes in personnel policy are being made at this time.

The Methodist Hospital and St. Joseph Hospital both now admit Negro patients. St. Lukes Hospital previously admitted Negro patients (since this past spring--in fact Charles Shaw was one of the first); and Texas Children's Hospital always admitted all children.

Bi-Racial Committee - A Bi-Racial Religion and Race Committee has been formed and some of our members are represented on it.

Memorial Service was held on the steps of City Hall following Birmingham Bombing, sponsored by NAACP and attended by approximately 300 persons (mostly Negroes).

School Board is still scared to admit five-year old child to white kindergarten. Case still pending. Quite a bit of publicity in newspapers on this. The School Board recently appointed a committee to make a study of Vocational Training in our schools. Mrs. Charles White is one of the committee members.

Employment - Mor job opportunities are opening up--IBM, NASA, Telephone Company, Anderson-Clayton, Newspapers, Oil Companies (very limited) and others. We need more trained Negroes to fill the jobs.

We are in communication with Texas Employment Commission (local offices), Texas Southern University on their Manpower Training Program, Merit Employment of AFSC, and are trying to work out some kind of a cooperate program in the field of employment.

Program(month by month) There are so many things going on, I'm sure that I've overlooked some.

July

1 - Executive Committee
2 - Protestant Charities - Mr. Kelly and Mrs. Dumbauld spoke before a group of young people in a summer training program learning about community agencies.
9 - College Group planning meeting

24 - Education Committee Meeting
25 - Housing Committee Meeting
African Art Program (Miss Louise E. Jefferson, New York)
26 - TSU - Miss Jefferson addressed group
27 - Annual Meeting Committee

And so it goes! There are many things I failed to keep track of--just too busy to mark them all down. We are a constant source of referral. Charles has been making many meetings as a speaker.

July, August and September financial statements are among the complete year's statements. I made some minor changes in the disbursements for one or two items when I was making the recap. I'll send you two recaps for distribution. Books have not yet been audited. Mr. Mann could not take our work until October 28th.

Enclosing copies of some of the material or letters to groups in asking for memb ership. Response is good, that is it more than pays for itself and we are really picking up new members this way. There is of course a great deal of office work involved. Still wish I had time to locate a volunteer chairman.

Thanks for the material for the Education Committee. I have made copies and am returning your material to you.

We going to move our offices, October 30th. Hope we're making the right decision. It is about 20 blocks further south, but east. The mailing address will be 5403 Austin, Zip 77004.

I have made 2 deposits this month amounting to $1,351 and we expect another check for $800. Of course, we're spending it too. Guess you must spend to get.

Somehow this report doesn't seem adaguate. Let me know if I left something out.

We have been in touch with Mr. Morgan recently and he is still planning on coming.

Most sincerely,

Ethel

Reports

The Executive Committee Meeting Summary was distributed.

Junior High Workshop - Mrs. Dukler reported in the absence of Mrs. Jay. Mrs. Clark has served as chairman of the workshop and a great deal of time and planning has gone into preparation for this workshop. It will be held Saturday, October 19, 1963, at the World Trade Center, 1520 Texas, from 12:30 to 4:30 P.M. Registration is higher than we had anticipated and we are hoping to plan a second workshop within a month to handle the additional registrations.

Annual Meeting - Mr. Holt announced that the meeting would be Wednesday, November 6th, at the Brass Rail in Humble Building. The guest speaker will be Charles Morgan, Jr., Attorney from Birmingham. The estimated expenses are $1,650 and the anticipated income is $1,400, leaving a balance of approximately $250.00.

It was suggested that the committee be responsible for delegating telephoning through the board members to the membership for promoting attendance.

Human Rights Observance - Dr. Koeninger, Chairman, reported that Dr. Liston Pope would be the guest speaker for the Human Rights Observance, Thursday, December 12, 1963, at the Cullen Auditorium. Other organizations are being asked to cooperate. It was suggested that something be planned for closer fellowship of the Board with Dr. Pope.

Mr. Armstrong Prescott and Mr. Dannenbaum of St. John's school would be in charge. It has been suggested that it run for four nights and that a possible $1,000. could be cleared. Facilities are needed.

The African Art program was well attended as was the reception following at the Barnstones.

Education - Dr. Rand, chairman, announced that a project to work with a school in the Distribution Education program has been selected.

Mr. Seals suggested that under the Council auspices Dr. Rand go to the Chronicle Station, #13 and arrange for an all-Negro program, similar to the one held in Corpus Christi, stating what they (Negroes) really want?

International Relations - Mrs. Shaw, chairman, announced that we have a fairly confirmed date with Dr. Ralph Bunche for March 26, 1964, and that we would ask the cooperation of the Houston Council on World Affairs on this program. It was brought to the attention that this would be during Easter Week and on Maundy-Thursday, and that probably we should try to change the date.

This committee is cooperating with the IIE again on placing students from Africa attending TSU with host families.

Health and Welfare - Both Miss Kimmel and Mr. Fleming were present. Miss Kimmel stated that two meetings of the committee had been held, and that a program has been suggested of holding a seminar on human relations with the volunteers (Women in Yellow) at the City-County Hospital. As a member of the Community Council we are cooperating in planning the workshop during the weeks observance in January on the topic "Poverty." It was noted that there is need for Negro volunteers in the hospitals.

Housing - Mrs. EnDean, chairman, announced that a conference for February 13, 1964, is being planned. Mr. A. P. Ayer, Director, Council for Southern Mountains, Berea, Kentucky will be the main speaker.

It was noted that many areas in our city are changing and that we should offer our assistance in at least one of these crucial areas.

VOTED AND PASSED on motion of Mr. Seals, seconded by Mr. Glatstein, that a committee be appointed to go out into one area where friction is developing; set up a meeting between the Negro and white people; listen to both sides and see if assistance can be given.

Dr. Dodd appointed the following committee: Mr. Groppe, Mrs. EnDean, Mr. Seals, Dr. Koeninger, Mr. Marsters, and Dr. Rand. Mr. Groppe will serve as chairman.

College Council on Human Relations - Mrs. Freed mentioned how effective the TV program of the College group was on September 8th, but felt that the Council on Human Relations should have been mentioned. Another film will be made of a future meeting. The college group is interested in a voter education program at present. It was suggested that the TV station be written and appreciation expressed for their cooperation.

VOTED AND PASSED on motion of Mrs. Freed, seconded by Mr. Glatstein, that thanks be expressed from Board of Directors to the people of the TV station responsible for the televised College Council program.

OLD BUSINESS

Mr. Kelly reported that no decision has yet been made on the disposition of the John Battaglia Fund. It has come to us that the Mayor is in favor of our receiving such.

VOTED AND PASSED on motion of Mr. Seals, seconded by Mrs. Dukler, that a wire be sent from the Board to the Mayor requesting that our proposal concerning the John Battaglis Estate be submitted to the City Council, Wednesday, October 23rd.

NEW BUSINESS

Mrs. Arthur Jay has submitted her resignation, with regret, as chairman of the Youth Committee because of health reasons.

VOTED AND PASSED on motion of Mrs. Freed, seconded by Mr. Whitson, that her resignation be received reluctlantly, thanking her for her impetus and enthusiasm, and informing her that we will count on her without her chairmanship.

Finance and Budget Committee - Dr. Dodd appointed the following committee: Mr. Marsters, Chairman; Mr. Noland and Mr. Glatstein. The chairman of committees should be consulted for anticipated program expenditures.

Office Space - Dr. Dodd informed the Board that new quarters were needed and that office space had been located at 1402 Prospect on the corner of Austin.

VOTED AND PASSED on motion of Mr. Glatstein, seconded by Mr. Fleming, that final decision be made by the Vice President, Dr. Dodd and two other members of the Board.

Charter - Our Council is now chartered.

Nominating Committee - The committee report will be at the Council office and available for membersof the Board.

ANNOUNCEMENTS - Dr. Dodd announced the United Nations Week Observance to be held October 22, 1963, 8 P.M. in Hamman Auditorium, Rice University, which will be open to the ganeral public.

Members of our Board are invited to the luncheon meeting to be held at the Sheraton-Lincoln Hotel that same day. The cost will be $3.50 (gratuity included) and reservations should be mailed to Mrs. David Mendell, 3611 N. Braeswood.

College Students Trying To Speed Desegregation

By HOWARD SPERGEL

Because news of federal civil rights proposals and racial unrest is sweeping the nation, more than 100 Negro and white college students are sitting down to talk out their differences and to promote peaceful desegregation in Houston.

"We're trying to get people together who have never sat down with a Negro and asked, 'How does it feel to sit in the back of a bus'," said Miss Carmen Stallings, 22, chairman of the month-old College Council on Human Relations.

About 70 students, ages 18 to 25, met this week in the Autrey House, 6265 South Main St, to discuss such questions as:

"IS THERE ANY truth to the concept separate but equal?"

"How much is segregation costing in dollars and cents and in wasted talent?"

"How do you make a Negro feel at home on a previously all-white college campus?"

Students from such institutions as the University of Houston, Texas Southern University, Radcliffe College, Tuskeegee Institute and Marquette University took part in the talks.

Two Nigerian students told how they have been taunted in Houston by questions about cannibalism and jungle life.

AN AVOWED segregationist from Jackson, Miss, argued vehemently. He said he saw no sense in the discussion group. He didn't say he wouldn't come back.

The college council is sponsored by the Houston Council on Human Relations, an organization dedicated to promoting good will, the exchange of ideas among all people and sponsoring research such as job opportunities for minority groups.

The youthful organization is an outgrowth of interracial meetings in the last two years that the Houston council has held for high school and college students.

Miss Stallings, a University of Houston graduate, said the college council is studying areas of discrimination in local business, public schools, churches and college life.

"WHAT WE really would like to do is to smooth the integration of facilities and make sure its's done," Miss Stallings said. "So far we've attracted quite a following, but we'd still like to get more Latin American people and isolated foreign students in these group discussions."

Diane Steinberg, 18, of 4537 Merrie Lane, Bellaire, said, "We all build up a social barrier . . . if we can meet and talk and find out there really are no differences except for the color of our skins, then we're taking a step toward desegregation."

Many students attending the discussion sessions said they think that desegregation will be a slow, painful process.

"BUT IF WE can carry our ideal for better human relations down to our children," Miss Steinberg said, "eventually these problems and segregation will disappear."

Edwin Dorn, 18, of 2907 Rosedale St, a graduate of Jack Yates High School, said, "Most of the people who attend meetings like this already know there is little difference between one race and the other.

"They are predominately non-segregationists," Dorn said. "If we could only encourage a few Bull Connors or George Wallaces to come . . . the meeting might not be as cordial, but we might accomplish something."

TO MEMBERS OF THE
HARRIS COUNTY MEDICAL SOCIETY

The Community has always looked to the physicians for advice and leadership not only in matters relating to health, but in the broader field of human relations. We can have justifiable pride in the knowledge that physicians invariably rise to the challenge and fulfill the demands for leadership in community and civic endeavors.

You're all, of course, well aware that we are living in a period of social change and these changes affect us on the local level as well as the state and national levels.

There is, therefore, at this time a need for all men of good will and moderation to step forward and insure that these changes occur in our community in an orderly fashion and thus avoid the unfortunate violence that has so marred the life of other communities. We can all be proud that thus far solutions to problems in our city have been worked out in a peaceful fashion. The Houston Council on Human Relations feels some justifiable pride in that they have had a part in bringing together reasonable men of various races and backgrounds and in helping them reach harmonious conclusions.

We invite you to join with us in working toward this goal and we hope you will see fit to share in this work by making a generous contribution and becoming a member of this group which is working for good will and understanding among all men.

Very truly yours,

G. E. Dodd, M.D.

AS AN EDUCATOR, you know that tomorrow does not just happen. Futures are made. And they are made, not of pious dreams and intents, but of the hard choices and difficult deeds of today.

THESE CHOICES AND DEEDS BRING CHANGE and new feeling to our times--a feeling of destiny. As a leader of our community, you know by now the certainty of change. Also, you know that changes have taken place in Houston in an orderly fashion and without violence.

THE LACK OF VIOLENCE and the peaceful way in which this change has taken place came about because people of good will, like you, have wanted it that way. In Houston the orderliness has also been due to the work of the Houston Council on Human Relations. The Council has been at work since 1958 to ease tensions and create harmony among people of our city.

THROUGH RESEARCH, distribution of educational materials, lectures and workshops, the Council has been able to watch for tension situations in the city and take remedial action to avert strife and, where possible, to remove the causes of tension.

AS ONE OF THE PERSONS OF GOOD WILL in our city, will you join with others to help make the future by supporting the work of the Houston Council on Human Relations. Settle Rights at Table, Not In Streets, Lawyers Say

CHICAGO — (AP) — The American Bar Association, in a civil rights declaration, asserted Tuesday that "mass demonstrations must give way to mass determination that the races will live together in mutual respect."

By a voice vote the association's house of delegates adopted a report of the bar's special civil rights committee set up in July in response to President Kennedy's plea for volunteer citizen action to ease racial tension.

"THE SETTLEMENT of critical racial problems at hand must be made around the conference table and cannot be made on the street," the report set forth.

"Minority groups are entitled to all of the rights given them under the Constitution: This is a principle with which no lawyer can disagree.

"Sight must not be lost, however, of the fact that their rights carry with them correlative responsibilities and obligations. Racial tranquility in this country will depend in substantial measure upon the extent to which responsibilities and obligations stand side by side with rights and enjoyment of rights which are guaranteed."

THE REPORT declared the ABA "solemnly enjoins" every lawyer as an individual and a member of bar associations:

"To assist to the fullest extent of his capabilities in procuring communication and understanding between the races in the conflicts which presently exist.

"To help organize and to serve with civic groups sincerely seeking peaceful and lawful solutions to the problem.

"With bi-racial committees, where local conditions permit, to help eliminate unconstitutional statutes, ordinances and practices.

"TO HELP DEVELOP and support needed affirmative legislation or programs.

"Publicly to urge respect for the judiciary and the legal process."

Alfred J. Schweppe of Seattle was chairman of the committee, the makeup of which was criticized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People because all its members are white persons.

Bernard Segal of Philadelphia was elected president-elect of the American College of Trial Lawyers. He will take office at the college's next annual meeting.

The group also elected six members to its board of regents including Leon Jaworski, Houston.

RE: Quarterly Report for June, July, August, 1963

In Gadsden there were reports of many Negroes beaten and assaulted by state troopers. Many prominent white people including some elected officials spent considerable time, energy, and effort to have state troopers withdrawn from Gadsden. At one point they were withdrawn, and retruned as demonstrations continued. The Executive Director of the Alabama Council on Human Relations made two trips to Gadsden, and talked with elected officials, prominent white businessmen, ministers, and some of the Negro leaders. One of the white ministers was able to arrange for some biracial meetings, but the people of the white power structure refused to be involved. It is reported that the buses were desegregated, and several owners of lunch counters agreed to desegregate their facilities. It is reported that a young Negro cursed the manager of one of the lunch counters, and he immediately contacted the others and they decided not to desegregate the lunch counters at that time.

In Huntsville the local chapter of the Alabama Council on Human Relations planned and carried out a very successful week of meeting with several of the Negro children planning to enter desegregated schools and white children.

Muscle Shoals chapter continued efforts this period to persuade elected officials in Florence, Sheffield, and Tuscumbia to establish biracial committees. People in the area were confident that Florence State College would be desegregated without incident.

In Birmingham the local council continued to meet during the summer and had two meetings in August. Two meetings were arranged for several of the Negroes about to enter desegregated schools to get acquainted with white children. Negro and white children attended one of these meetings. Plans to visit the homes of children who were about to enter desegregated schools were delayed until September, because there were difficultly in securing the names of those children that were accepted to formerly all white schools.

In Mobile the Council on Human Relations had several programs beginning in the spring to discuss peaceful desegregation of the schools in Mobile. The activities of the local council were helpful in creating interest in the white community in planning for desegregation of schools in September. ABLE (Alabamian Behind Local Education) was organized in the white community, and this group was quietly supported by the Alabama Council on Human Relations. Mr. Paul Anthony of Southern Regional Council worked with leaders in ABLE, and ABLE came under heavy attack. Mr. Anthony and SRC were also attacked.

The Alabama Council distributed material related to law enforcement to sheriffs and police chiefs across the state. Five thousand copies of the booklet, "Can We Afford To Close Our Public Schools", were reprinted. These copies were sent to school superintendents, industrialist, and some P. T. A. Groups. Hundreds of copies were given to the Young Men's Business Club for the distribution through PEP (Public Education Peacefully) this group strongly refused assistance of the Alabama Council on Human Relations, and Mr. Paul Anthony. The second meeting was broken up by the Klan, and the group collapsed. Contact was made with people close to the Mayor's office and the Community Affairs Committee, and the assistance was offered to these people even before PEP folded. It seemed apparent, efforts to prepare the community for desegregation of the schools would have to be done by individuals. Individuals in Birmingham arranged for one TV program urging that law and order be maintained as the schools be desegregated.

Through the summer people in Alabama were eager concerned about action that Governor Wallace would take. No one dared guess what he might do by the fear greatly that he would disrupt the efforts of local communities to desegregate the schools quietly. At the very end of August there was a very large meeting of white people in Tuskegee. Efforts by a few people to disrupt this meeting, and to urge resistance to desegregation were unsuccessful. While they did not accept this with any sense of approval, they felt that it was inevitable and they would have school desegregation without violence.

The National States's Rights Party with headquarters in Birmingham greatly increased their activities during the summer. The group did picket stores that desegregated lunch counters in Birmingham, and were distributing daily mimeographed page sheets. It was reported that in June their meetings were decreasing from 200 to 75 persons, but former Mayor Art Hanes and Eugene "Bull" Connor were having meetings frequently attacking all who showed any willingness to accept desegregation in Birmingham. The Senior Citizen's Committee had shown real leadership, and had been supporting the white negotiators in back of the agreement that ended deomonstrations in Birmingham. This group felt the entire responsibility for peaceful desegregation should be handled by the Mayor and the new City Government, in effect they withdrew their support from the Mayor and City Government. During the summer there was considerable anxiety in Birmingham as to whether the agreement made in May would be carried out. When desegregation of the lunch counters were started, members (white) of the Birmingham chapter of the Council were planted at the counters to sit near the Negroes when they came in. One Negro clerk was hired, and was allegedly caught stealing and fired it was reported to the Executive Director. The store was highly disappointed, because the store manager felt that it was inevitable that they would be hired and they wanted to have this confidence.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

September, October, November

1963

Audit of Progress in Desegregation

The impetus to desegregation begun during the last quarter has slowed somewhat. After the first rash of action, few positive steps have been taken.

Cultivation by SCCHR is continuing of the new contacts which were made during the summer with mayors, city councilmen, chamber of commerce executives, and officers, and others.

A committee of 85 prominent Columbians hopes to achieve an 'open city' by the end of 1963. There have been a few 'stand-ins' at downtown movie theaters but these were discontinued when voluntary desegregation was promised by mid-December.

Florence has named a Negro to its city recreation board.

A few observations follow:

1. Thoughtful Negroes are discontented at the rate and/or lack of progress.

2. There must be with the masses either a great deal of patience and faith, or much apathy. At least there is inertia for there is almost no forward thrust by Negroes at the present time.

3. Evidently the threat of Birmingham has been dulled for 'whites' and the 'it-can't-happen-here' psychology is currently prevailing.

4. White civic, economic, and political leaders continue to be unwilling to take needed initiative. To date the few faltering steps made have been taken anonymously, unofficially, and quietly. The news media have in the main either made no announcement of changes or played them down markedly.

In mid-October a questionnaire on progress in desegregation was sent by SCCHR to the thirty communities in South Carolina where there was some movement or it was believed most likely to occur. The week before SCCHR's 1963 annual meeting, Nov. 18 and 19, twenty-three responses were tabulated in a report which was distributed at the annual meeting and later through the mails to persons who didn't attend. (See Exhibit I.) By the end of November reports had been received from all communities except Greenwood.

Orangeburg and Sumter

Demonstrations in Orangeburg during the summer were much more numerous and massive than in Sumter. These towns were both target areas chosen by the NAACP.

SCCHR made two concentrated efforts to locate a leak in the dike of white resistance in Orangeburg in October.

Fred Reese and the executive director interviewed a few key business leaders. It was learned that merchants were stepping up advertising campaigns and taking large 'ads' in the newspapers. Negro consumers were assured of protection, good service and bargains!

From a leading merchant the story was learned of how resistance forces employed an attorney and succeeded in stymying the prospects of initiating bi-racial communication. Previously a permissive if not entirely favorable attitude had prevailed both in the merchants association and with the mayor and city council.

At a later date SCCHR staff members made additional contacts and assisted the Rev. John Yungblut of Quaker House, Atlanta. Consensus prevailed that for the present local residents accept the fact of a stalemate.

Orangeburg Negroes report the belief that some of the most influential white leaders are active members of the John Birch Society.

The Black Muslims have an organization in Orangeburg. Presumably it has not attracted recognized Negro leaders.

The Honorable Brooks Hayes spent two days at Claflin College, Methodist college (Negro student body and integrated faculty) in Orangeburg during October. He was quite constructive and was well received.

Picketing is still continuing in the business districts in Orangeburg.

In Sumter the Rev. Frederick C. James, pastor of A M.E. Mt. Pisgah Church and world director of social action for his denomination has served as coordinator of the movement.

Both CORE and the NAACP have participated in the Sumter movement. Students at Morris College have been active, primarily under the leadership of Freddie Williams, who was a SCCHR student interne during the summer of 1962.

School Suits and Transfer Requests

Of the three suits of longest standing, in Clarendon county, Charleston, and Darlington, only in Charleston has there been court-ordered desegregation. The Charleston public schools quietly and peacefully desegregated in September. The other two cases have not yet been scheduled for court hearings.

In Charleston applications for tuition grants (legislation establishing these was passed by the 1963 South Carolina General Assembly) have been made. The press reports that in Charleston plans are being made for increasing private school facilities and for resistance to total integration in the fall of 1964.

In Orangeburg requests for transfer of 14 Negro children to all-white Junior and Senior high schools were made in November. Suits are threatened by Mrs. Gloria Rackley if her children are refused transfer to a 'white' school and also to regain her teaching position in the public schools from which she was dismissed in October following her participation in mass demonstrations. Her suit against the Orangeburg Regional Hospital is still pending.

The Sumter public schools have previously been asked to admit children of Negro personnel at nearby Shaw Air Force Base.

In November the NAACP in Rock Hill endorsed a transfer effort proposed by parents of five Negro children.

South Carolina State Parks

Ordered by a federal court to desegregate after Labor Day, the South Carolina State Parks were closed by the Forestry Commission upon the advice of the Gressette Committee (South Carolina's committee on segregation).

Throughout September and the first part of October, hearings were held in ten towns and cities closest to the state-owned and operated parks. These hearings were in most places encouragingly moderate in tone. Hopefully, the South Carolina General Assembly will act to reopen the parks at its next session beginning in January, 1964. Presumably, swimming will be the activity most likely to be restricted at first.

The Aiken Council on Human Relations presented an appropriate petition at the Columbia hearing. It requested a fully integrated park system.

At all except two of the hearings members of SCCHR were present and determined the favorable climate of opinion.

Confidentially, the SCCHR executive director was requested by several responsible and strategically placed persons to do spade work in several communities prior to the hearings. Results were rewarding. Some valuable new contacts were made.

Significant State-wide Programs

Preparation for desegregation at the University of South Carolina culminated in an orientation conference on September 8. (For details of this conference as well as of other activities of the Program Director see Exhibit II.)

Attended by 245 persons, a conference on Farmer Cooperatives and Job Training under the leadership of the SCCHR and NSF (National Sharecroppers Fund) Field Representative was of value and importance (For a report of this conference and other activities of the Field Representative this quarter, see Exhibit III.)

The SCCHR 1963 Annual Meeting blazed a new trail in the use of facilities at the Downtowner Motor Inn where the first SCCHR integrated banquet was held. The evening meeting which followed was the first state-wide SCCHR meeting to secure use of the conference room at the Richland County public library. This is significant perhaps for two reasons:

1) Historically, only a few downtown churches have been open for bi-racial meetings. Since 1954 churches are closed. SCCHR has, previous to the 1963 annual meeting, opened meeting rooms at the ESSO Community Center and at the Wade Hampton Hotel.

2) In spite of all the fear and talk about the reaction of extremists, there have been no negative repercussions to the opening by SCCHR of these non-traditional meeting places.

(See Exhibit IV for programs and publicity of the annual meeting.)

This and That

One issue of PROGRESS was distributed this quarter - (See Exhibit V.)

The SCCHR executive director has worked with staff of the Columbia USO and with junior hostesses to desegregate facilities and services.

A close laison has been maintained with negotiating agents working to make Columbia an 'open city'.

Encouragingly, an increasing number of faculty members at Clemson College and the University of South Carolina are openly participating in SCCHR public events.

An Information Committee has been organized this quarter under the chairmanship of Thom Billington, an experienced newspaper and TV staffer who now directs public relations for the Upper Diocese of S.C. Episcopal Church. A new SCCHR promotional brochure and a regular news Review are promised.

The SCCHR state chairman and executive director participated in the annual conference of the S.C. Citizens Committee on Children and Youth.

Staff members attended the annual meeting of the South Carolina Association on Planned Parenthood.

A film on Lillian Smith of Georgia: A Tribute was on loan to SCCHR for one month. It was enthusiastically viewed by many and diverse groups.

The SCCHR executive director was banquet speaker at the SCLC Citizenship Education Leader Training School on November 22nd.

A Charleston clergyman has finally weathered a severe attack by critics in his church. A Mullins clergyman has been asked by his congregation to resign, which he has done effective January first, 1964.

George McMillan, writer, of Aiken was assisted in making contacts in Orangeburg for an article which will appear in The National Observer, perhaps in December. Further he has been introduced to key clergymen in Columbia whom he's interviewed with another magazine article in mind.

The annual conference of the Adult Education Association of the USA, held at Miami Beach in November, featured Harry Ashmore, Harold Fleming, and William Boggs in a dynamic symposium. John Griffin, valued SRC member, was program chairman. The SCCHR executive director attended the meetings.

During this quarter the executive director took field trips to Sumter, Hartsville, Darlington, Cheraw, Florence, Georgetown, Murrell's Inlet, Myrtle Beach, Conway, Orangeburg, and Penn Center, Frogmore, S. C.

S. C. PROGRESS

DESEGREGATION REPORT

(This is not, unfortunately, a complete report on desegregation in South Carolina. It may contain inaccuracies, and for these we are sorry. If you spot any, please let us know so that we may correct them. However, we have tried to make this report on desegregation progress in 21 cities and towns in the state as accurate as possible. Our information has been drawn from news reports, from community survey questionnaires sent in by members from 16 cities, and from some confidential reports from which we have lifted what has become public information. All of our sources are fallible, but accuracy has been their goal and ours.)

Editorial writers and administrative officials in our state government have pleased to note the relatively trouble-free progress which South Carolina, as a whole, has made in approaching a solution to what has variously been termed the "race revolution," the "race problem," the "race question," and the "racial situation."

One of the stranger developments, in fact, in South Carolina's battle to stave off desegregation as long as possible, but to give in with an appearance of grace when the time finally comes, has been public avoidance of the words "segregation," "integration," and "desegregation."

Linguistic oddities aside, however, Clemson, the University of South Carolina, and the Beaufort extension of U.S.C. have accepted and registered Negro students who are now attending classes without trouble. District 20 in Charleston integrated its public school system quietly and without a great deal of fuss.

There have been demonstrations in Charleston, Orangeburg and Sumter which have made the headlines. But there have been marches and pickets in Columbia and elsewhere that were barely noticed in the press or by the majority of the people.

The state parks were declared integrated, then promptly closed. All indications point to their reopening soon after the General Assembly convenes and takes action on the situation in January. They will probably open with some of the swimming and recreational activities curtailed, but they will reopen. This is a beginning.

The foregoing have been the most dramatic developments of the past 14 months. But there have been other developments, which taken as a whole, may be equally dramatic.

Despite the urgings of a number of business men and editorials in several of the larger newspapers in the state, South Carolina does not have a bi-racial committee working on a state-wide level. But, of the 21 cities and towns covered in this report, 10 that we are positive of have either formal or informal bi-racial committees,

(The cities and towns covered are Aiken, Anderson, Barnwell, Beaufort, Charleston, Clemson, Clinton, Columbia, Conway, Florence, Frogmore, Greenville, Greenwood, Newberry, Orangeburg, Rock Hill, Seneca, Spartanburg, Sumter, Winnsboro, and York.)

While only the public schools in one Charleston school district have been integrated, all parochial schools in the state will open on an integrated basis next year, and desegregation suits are pending for Greenville, Darlington and Summerton district in Clarendon County. Too, suits seem to be forthcoming in Sumter and Orangeburg.

The State Committee for Technical Education has adopted a local option policy on the question of integrating its schools. Thus far, the technical education centers at Columbia and Greenville have accepted Negro applicants. There are other schools in operation at Sumter, Spartanburg and Pendleton. Others are to open shortly at Lancaster, Florence-Darlington and Rock Hill.

Catholic hospitals have opened on a desegregated basis, but no others have, as far as we know. Most hospitals in the state will accept Negro patients, but on a segregated basis. The Veterans' Administration hospitals and other federal hospitals are integrated.

Reports seem to indicate that various state agencies and commissions are being integrated. One commission that definitely has Negro membership is the State Mental Health Commission.

Most cities which had segregation ordinances have repealed them, no so much out of respect for Negroes as from advice from the Attorney General, but they have been repealed.

Some restaurants and most lunch counters in Aiken, Anderson, Charleston, Clemson Columbia, Florence, Greenville, Rock Hill, Seneca, Barnwell and Spartanburg will serve Negroes.

As far as we've been able to determine, only two previously all-white hotels or motels have been integrated -- one in Charleston and one in Columbia. But Florence may have some integrated facilities by now, and Greenville is working in that direction.

New employment opportunities have been opened to Negroes in Charleston, Columbia, Rock Hill, Florence, Spartanburg and Greenville. Any plant connected with federal contracts will hire Negroes.

Various recreational facilities have been opened to Negroes in Anderson, Charleston, Conway, Frogmore, Greenville, Seneca and Sumter. The art galleries in Columbia and Charleston welcome Negroes to all programs.

The majority of the churches in Columbia will accept Negroes as guests. Episcopal churches in the larger cities will do likewise. Catholic churches have not been known to turn anyone away. Several other churches in Aiken, Anderson, Spartanburg, Charleston, Columbia, Clemson Florence, Greenville and Seneca will accept guests. As far as is known, no Negroes have applied for membership in previously all-white protestant churches.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Report for September - November, 1963

By Elizabeth C. Ledeen
Program Director

I. Student Program

A. Orientation Conference for University of South Carolina.

The quarter's program began with a focus on University of South Carolina where its first three Negro students were to be enrolled on September 11. On September 8 a select group of 35 University student leaders met for an afternoon and evening informal conference with the three Negro students who were to enroll. Mr. Harvey Gantt of Clemson, with several other Clemson students, served as resource leaders. SCCHR planned the conference in cooperation with a university student and chaplains committee. For the most part, students who were positive in their attitude toward the coming desegregation were invited. The purpose of the meeting was primarily to give a core of potential friends an opportunity to know the Negro students prior to the stress and publicity accompanying registration and to discuss forthrightly and honestly any questions, fears, or apprehensions about the university situation which the Negro students felt.

After a general discussion by Mr. Gantt, the group broke into small units and before the conference ended the three incoming students had met and talked with each University of South Carolina student at the conference. All of the participants in this meeting felt that this experience was a very valuable preparation for the transition which the University was to make. As one of the enrollees said, "This gave me a sense that I would not be alone in this new situation; there were indeed friends."

Mr. Gantt was enthusiastic in his evaluation of the University of South Carolina conference, saying that the warm, genuine friendliness of the University of S. C. students and the relaxed atmosphere throughout the meeting were impressive.

Mrs. Ledeen has been in close contact with the Negro students at USC. Desegregation took place quietly, and with the exception of occasional harassment in the form of stares or verbal remarks, there have been no incidents. The two undergraduates have a high degree of acceptance at all campus religious centers, at the University YMCA--YWCA, and in a number of campus organizations. The only suggested limitation placed upon them by the administration has been attendance at football games. The students complied with the request for this semester. All four Negro undergraduates now in integrated state colleges in South Carolina are active participants in various phases of the program of the S.C. Student Human Relations Council.

B. Education Project.

As formerly reported, the SCSCHR at its spring conference last year accepted as one of its projects for the year a study of the educational needs in S.C. and a tutorial program with drop-outs or potential drop-outs. As a follow up to this emphasis pilot projects have been begun in Columbia with a group of students from Allen, Benedict, and U.S.C. ~~volunteers~~ now tutoring small groups of students in one of the large Negro high schools in Columbia. This was worked out with the cooperation of the high school guidance counselor and the teachers. The tutorial work takes place in the school during the last study period of the day.

A second group of students in Columbia is in process of setting up a "readiness" program with a small group of first grade students who are having difficulty adjusting to school and who come from culturally deprived homes. This also is being done in cooperation with the school principal and with the teachers. This, we feel, is especially needed, since data on drop-outs reveals that a large number of these occur in early grades. (S.C. has no compulsory school attendance law.)

A brief evaluation of the tutorial program in the high school by the guidance counselor is attached.

Wofford College members of student council report that a tutorial program has been set up in Spartanburg in cooperation with Bethlehem Center.

It is hoped that this type of community project may be set up with student volunteer workers in every community in which a college is located. During the remainder of the year, the SCSCHR will attempt to expand this project.

C. Campus Visitation

In November Mrs. Ledeen visited five colleges in the state for informal conferences with students, faculty and religious workers to interpret the work of SCCHR, to confer about the campus needs or problems, and to explore with key people more effective ways of work in human relations in the colleges. Several private church related white colleges in the state are taking some preliminary steps toward eventual desegregation. There is a real need for strengthening the work of the council in the white colleges, and for bringing into the program of the council more students from these schools. In the November field trips, visits were made to Furman University, Clemson , Wofford, Converse, and Presbyterian Colleges. In each of these places Mrs. Ledeen conferred with concerned students, chaplains, and faculty members. A number of these new persons have registered for the forthcoming student conference to be held December 6-8.

D. General Program of S.C.S.C.H.R. [redacted] included a meeting of the steering committee with representatives from most of the participating colleges present, subsequent conference planning committee meetings working out in detail the program plans for the first semester conference [redacted] to be held at Penn Center, Dec. 6-8. A special focus in these meetings has been the relationship of S.C.S.C.H.R. to the Freedom Movements, which during this quarter have been especially active in Orangeburg and Sumter and on a more limited basis in Columbia. Hundreds of college students in Orangeburg and Sumter have been involved in the mass demonstrations and subsequent picketing in these towns. Some of the leaders in SCSCHR have also been leaders in the Orangeburg and Sumter Movements. These discussions have recognized the necessity for demonstrations in the S.C. situation but have pointed up a broad base for "direct action" which includes other methods of work. White students who do not feel that participation in demonstrations is possible may still be "involved" by boycotting, communicating directly with managers, writing letters, working in quieter ways on the local campus. One phase of the conference program is to deal with students and the direct action movement.

II. Education Committee has held two meetings during this quarter and is focusing primarily on citizen support for adult education, especially basic education, and more representative school boards. The attached sheet, which was distributed at the annual meeting, indicates the emphasis of this committee. Action on the matter of Negro representatives on school boards is urgent for each local council in the state. This committee will work with local councils in this important project during the spring.

III. The Columbia Council on Human Relations, with which the Program Director has worked, has reorganized, elected officers, set up committees and, hopefully, is preparing for a more effective program for Columbia in the spring. Four working committees have been established as an outgrowth of the May 2 Citizens Consultation: Education, Employment and Job Training, Community Affairs; and Desegregation.

IV. Implementing and Initiating desegregation in various groups continues to be an important part of the work of the staff and council members. For example, this fall white members of the Interdenominational Women's Fellowship, sponsored by the Council's committee on the Church and Human Relations, which conducted a study program lastyear, presented to the Board of United Church Women in Columbia the request that this group be inclusive of all church women in this area. Even though affiliated with United Church Women, the relationship locally has been loose, and the local white women have never been willing to include Negro women in the events. As a result of this direct confrontation by a concerned group of white church women, a change will be made, beginning with the World Day of Prayer program in February.

The Program Director alerted Negro church laymen to the fact that the ecumenical Lay School of Theology held at the local Lutheran Seminary was now open to all. This action had been taken by the Board of Directors last spring, but no information had been sent to Negro churches. A few Negro churchmen enrolled. More will be enrolled at the next session.

The Columbia League of Women Voters sought the cooperation of Council staff members in extending invitations to interested Negro women to become members. This organization, theoretically always open, has never faced up to the implications of this fact until recently. Negro women, accustomed to exclusion, had never sought membership. Now there are several new Negro members. The program director has urged qualified Negro women to seek membership in the local A.A.U.W. This no doubt will soon be done.

The EDUCATION COMMITTEE of the SCCHR urges local councils or members in communities where no councils exist to initiate a three-fold program in the area of education

I. Representative School Boards

With greater emphasis upon the necessity of quality education for all children of school age in South Carolina, it seems highly important that membership on school boards be representative of all segements of the population. The Education Committee, therefore, urges the following:

(1) That factual information concerning school board selection, personnel and operation be secured.

(2) That qualified citizens, both Negro and white, be encouraged to offer for school board positions as vacancies occur and that support be given such qualified candidates.

(3) That concerned citizens, in districts which appoint certain members of school boards, strongly urge the appointment of qualified Negro citizens to School Boards.

(4) That observers be present at each meeting of the school board. The meetings are open to the public and it is highly desirable that a few interested citizen observers be present at each meeting.

II. Citizen Support for an Expanding Program of Adult Education.

III. Volunteer services in tutorial programs in cooperation with the schools to aid potential drop-outs.

Exhibit III.

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

September, October, November

1963

By L. S. James
Field Representative

During this period, activity has been centered around four major projects:

1. Helping to organize and administer a program for low income farmers based on farmer cooperatives and job training.

2. Helping to develop integrated courses under MDTA.

3. Starting County group meetings for leadership training:

4. Reviewing the case studies of low-income farmers and making concise studies of needy families in selected rural areas and towns to determine need for distribution of surplus commodities.

Southern Rural Conference on Farmer Cooperatives and Job Training

This conference was sponsored by the National Sharecroppers Fund and the South Carolina Council on Human Relations. It was held Sept. 22-27, 1963, at Penn Center, Frogmore, S. C. Mr. James was largely responsible for organizing the program for Thursday and Friday, which was based on employment needs and job training. He kept in constant contact with the office of the National Sharecroppers Fund of New York City during the organization period of this program. He recommended both topics and speakers for the employment area of this program.

Mr. James was responsible for the registration of all participants in this Southern Regional Conference. There were representatives present from twelve states and from eighteen counties in South Carolina. A copy of the summary of this conference and recommendations are attached.

Courses under M.D.T.A.

Mr. James was asked to assist in getting a course started under MDTA in Florence, S. C. The employees of the Employment Security Commission had failed to find enough trainees to start a training project in Automobile Body Repair, after trying for 25 days. They had found only 3 eligible trainees during this time. They needed 17 additional trainees within 5 days to avoid losing this $46,000.00 project. Mr. James was given the responsibility to find 17 additional trainees in 5 days. He was successful in finding qualified persons after visiting six counties and eleven towns. The M.D.T.A. course in Auto Body Repair was started on time in Florence, S. C., on an integrated basis with 5 whites and 15 Negro trainees.

Every effort possible is being made to increase the establishment of integrated courses under MDTA. We have only 2 courses being operated in South Carolina under MDTA at present. Feasibility surveys are being made in 3 different communities preliminary to the establishment of other courses under M.D.T.A.

County Group Meetings

Mr. James is starting a long range plan for training local leaders. This training will be done in small group meetings of representatives from six neighborhood counties. Two representatives from each county in the group are expected to participate in the meetings. Since there are 24 counties eligible for aid under the Area Redevelopment Administration, there will be four groups of counties with six counties in each group.

Our first meeting of delegates from a group of neighboring counties (Group A includes Chester, Chesterfield, Darlington, Kershaw, Lancaster, and Marlboro counties) was held Nov. 14, 1963, at Pageland, S. C. This meeting was held on the same day of the exhibit of garments made by trainees who are to be employed in the Chesterfield County Garment Factory at Pageland, S.C. This project was developed by local leadership and aid from the Federal Government under the A.R.A.

The representatives from the 6 counties who attended our meeting were very pleased with this idea. They all decided to go back to their own communities and begin strengthening their county organization in order to send representatives to their county A.R.A. to seek aid and cooperation for some type of county project.

Mr. James has set up a schedule for bi-monthly meetings of each of the four groups of counties. Group A includes Chester, Chesterfield, Darlington, Kershaw, Lancaster, and Marlboro counties. Group B includes Aiken, Bamberg, Barnwell, Allandale, Hampton, and McCormack counties. Group C includes Berkeley, Beaufort, Colleton, Dorchester, Jasper, and Orangeburg counties. Group D includes Lee, Sumter, Calhoun, Clarendon, Horry, and Williamsburg counties. He has outlined a basic tentative program which will provide for discussion of similar problems from each county; an exchange of suggested solutions to these problems; review of appropriate bulletins and literature from National Sharecroppers Fund and the U.S. Government; and special reports on progress being made under ARA and training programs under MDTA.

To encourage continued cooperation from all members of the SCCHR, Mr. James passed out an outline of suggestions as to how groups and individuals can help to improve the economic status of low income families. A copy of this outline is attached.

Case Studies of Low Income Families

A review of the case studies of five selected low income farmers is being made. These studies will be used to show how these farmers who were denied help under F.H.A. have been able to make some success by cooperation with other small farmers in their area. The cases will be presented again with new data to the F.H.A. for reconsideration.

Need for Distribution of Surplus Foods

Mr. James is collecting information on the needs for food from low income families in rural areas and towns. S.C. is the only state that doesnot distribute surplus foods which are provided free of charge by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The information on low-income families will be used to show the need that exists in these families for additional food. The type of information that is being collected is described on the form entitled "Information on Low Income Family." A copy of this form is attached.

Summary of Conference on Farmer Cooperatives & Job Training
Held September 22-27, 1963 at Penn Center, Frogmore, S. C.
Sponsored By National Sharecroppers Fund
and
South Carolina Council on Human Relations

(NOTE: This summary was prepared by Austin V. Edwards, Orangeburg, South Carolina, who was invited to attend the conference. The views expressed below are not his, but those he felt were expressed by the conference participants.)

The conference was officially started Sunday evening, September 22, 1963 with an opening statement of purpose by Miss Fay Bennett, Executive Secretary, National Sharecroppers Fund; and words of welcome from Mr. Courtney Siceloff, Director of Penn Center, and Mrs. Alice Spearman, Executive Director, South Carolina Council on Human Relations. There were 245 participants in attendance, coming mostly from Georgia, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, North Carolina and eighteen counties in South Carolina.

The keynote message of Dr. Frank P. Graham, Mediator, United Nations, and Chairman,National Board, National Sharecroppers Fund, was read by Miss Fay Bennett since Dr. Graham was absent due to illness. This message really set the stage for the deliberations that following during the course of the conference. In his message Dr. Graham pointed out several important factors for consideration, among them:

1. Man has developed the capacity for production, and the capacity for destruction, unprecedented in history.

2. A family income of $4,000.00 per year is needed in America today to keep a family living above the level of poverty.

3. By this standard 68% of all farm families in the south -- and of these, 80% of them Negro farm families live in poverty.

4. It is evident that some vocational educational programs are geared too much to the past rather than to the present and future to be of maximum help to a substantial number of farm families.

5. The prime purpose of this conference is to bring an awareness to all farm families of the opportunities to initiate and participate in local, state and federal programs for the purpose of self help for the present, and to provide a fairer future for their children.

Most of the conference time on Monday and Tuesday was devoted to developing a better understanding as to what farmer cooperatives are, and what role, if any, they may play in assisting farm families to achieve participation in and benefits from new and existing programs at all levels of government. During these two days, seven well known experts on cooperatives, private and government officials, addressed the conference which was followed by lively discussions. Some of the major points brought out were:

1. In the same manner that government, private business, and farms are getting bigger and bigger in America, cooperatives are doing likewise. A hypothetical figure of $200,000.00 per year was mentioned as the suitable volume at which a local cooperative or a segment of a large cooperative may expect to be operated successfully. There are about 9,000 farmer cooperatives in the United States today.

2. Cooperatives may serve a useful purpose, in some cases as a vehicle in implementing farm programs on the local level. The services of Rural Area Development may be activated through some farmer cooperatives. Inquiries directed to The Cooperative League of the USA, Washington, D.C., may provide valuable information to persons interested.

3. A feasibility study must be made before a cooperative may be successfully launched, because a cooperative venture should not be created or revived unless there is a definite need to be served.

4. Many existing farmer cooperatives stand ready to serve small farmers and enable them to reap benefits in the form of dividends.

5. Some educational attainment is required to understand the functions of a cooperative and is a basic requirement to participate in the activities of a coop effectively.

The conference program on Wednesday was devoted to two major points of interest:

1. Credit for rural needs, and 2. Participation of small farmers in U.S.D.A. programs concerned with credit.

Five resource persons explained the various ways in which financial credit could be secured by farmers and rural groups. They represented the agencies of the Farm Credit Administration, The Farmers Home Administration, Small Business Administration, and local credit unions. The availability of credit to small farmers through local banks and conventional sources of credit was not mentioned, perhaps due to the absence of the president of a bank who was scheduled to participate on the program, but was unable to attend.

In the afternoon and evening on Wednesday, five individuals, all of whom were federal officials gave their views on the participation of small farmers in various agencies of the USDA. The Federal Extension Service of Washington was represented as well as FHA, S.C.S., A.S.C.S. and the Forestry Service. The theme of all of the government officials seems to present a solid front that the primary purpose of government is to meet the needs of its people. In the discussion that followed it was brought out that racial segregation was practiced in some localities, especially in Alabama and Mississippi, to the extent that a vast number of people are not being served and these people are the ones the programs were designed to assist.

For the most part all of Thursday and Friday (this report was read at noon on Friday) was devoted to the problems of employment needs and opportunities. Emphasis was placed on the facing up to job training needs, employment opportunities, and the effective functioning of state and local agencies in keeping with the national interest in unemployment and underemployment in the southeastern United States. ARA and USDL were represented by their research specialists, statisticians, and training specialists. The State Department of Education discussed education needs of adults.

SOME GENERAL COMMENTS ON THE CONFERENCE

1. The people in attendance at this conference came frommany different walks of life. They included dirt farmers, teachers, ministers, federal employees, state and county employees, The Congress of Racial Equality, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, Human Relations Council, and National Sharecroppers Fund. Some of the people present were among those who: (a) make things happen, (b) watch things happen, and (c) never knew anything ever happened.

2. The geographic area about which most of the discussion was directed, the Southeast, is considered to be burdened with poverty, ignorance, racial discrimination, unemployment and underemployment.

3. The conference served to reflect that times are changing, political and power structure roadblocks are being overcome, though too slowly for many.

4. Speakers and other consultants repeatedly gave a step by step approach in securing information for rural people and reporting of injustices where they are known to exist. Identification and documentation is needed for speedy action.

5. Just taking advantage of the opportunities that will occur in the immediate future will prove to be a full time job for many people.

6. The complete absence of any representative from the State Extension Service System was noted even though invitations went out to that arm of the service also.

7. The federal government is geared to the elimination of segregated services for all people.

8. The conference admonished the youth in attendance that they were needed, they are loved and admired, they are free under our system to protest and be vocal; however, ambition and aggressiveness should be tempered with patience and responsibility. Demonstrations in the streets cannot replace education in the classrooms.

9. This conference reflected the problems, frustrations, successes, conflicts, and unrest that are being experienced in the transition of socio-economic changes in the southeastern United States, as well as the rest of the country.

(The conference adopted a "Statement and Recommendations" concerning various government programs which is reproduced separately.)

Progress

Issued by November, 1963
The South Carolina Council on Human Relations, Inc.
(SCCHR), 1330 Laurel Street, Columbia, South Carolina

This report will brief significant activities of SCCHR since the last annual meeting in November, 1962. The 1963 annual meeting will be held Monday and Tuesday, November 18 and 19 in Columbia, S. C.

WHERE WE ARE: SCCHR has never retreated from its position that communication between segments of the population in S.C. is basic to peaceful and continuing progress. Its members work in a number of ways: through 9 local councils, on state-wide committees, or as members-at-large.

Two of the local councils on human relations are new this year. Also, several local groups have become SCCHR associates. Requests are coming in from other towns for help in organizing councils. Let us hear from you, if we may help.

SCCHR membership is now 945; those whose dues have not yet been paid are asked to pay now.

If it is true that South Carolinians have new "positive images" of themselves, of relationships and of South Carolina, then SCCHR's total membership might easily double in 1964 .... if "Each One (will) Reach One".

The 1963 budget has been raised. A matching grant was earned. A foundation has made a two-year gift which will expire in June 1964. A national organization pays one-half the salary of the new SCCHR field representative, Mr. L. S. James, and financed a five-day conference. What plans need to be made for expanding and financing 1964 program?

Do South Carolinians want justice and fair play for all citizens? Currently, in a number of S. C. towns and cities, community surveys are being conducted to take an Audit of Progress in Desegregation which will be compiled for distribution. It will be available soon upon request.

Some southern cities have found new ways for the new days.

COME and bring interested friends with you to the annual meeting. You will hear about Charlotte, and Knoxville, the "Open City". Your ideas and participation in decision-making are needed.

ALLIANCES FOR PROGRESS have been many during the 1963 calendar year.

PROGRAMS FOR PROGRESS have been varied. A few have been reported in the press and others will be highlighted herein.

STUDENT PROGRAMS have involved high schools and colleges during the year.

Two conferences of the S. C. Student Council on Human Relations were held at Penn Center, Frogmore, S.C., December 7-9, 1962, and on April 18-19, 1963. Students participate from 20 colleges -- Negro and white.

The pilot project begun in Columbia, January 1963, with high school youth needs to be expanded where there may be interest and sponsors.

Today South Carolinians are more interested in getting ahead than keeping anyone down.

CONSULTATION WITH GOVERNOR

On April 24, 1963, SCCHR sent a document to the Honorable Donald S. Russell which set forth four concerns as follows:

1. For executive leadership in the improvement of job opportunities for qualified Negroes.
2. For support of public education; especially the Governor's public statement of availability for all of vocational and technical training.
3. For appointment of qualified Negroes to boards of public trust.
4. For appointment by the Governor of a bi-racial advisory group to confer on public issues.

A bi-racial committee of SCCHR board members held a conference with the Governor in June and informal conversations were continued in July. A full report will be made to the Board of Directors and questions answered at the 1963 Annual Membership Meeting.

SUGGESTED BY SCCHR BOARD

At the winter meeting of the SCCHR Board of Directors, it was recommended that a study be made of agricultural agencies to determine how they are serving Negro farmers. Southern Regional Council approved, data were collected in nine counties and reported with conclusions in A Study of Negro Farmers in South Carolina.

It has been announced recently that the Farmers Home Administration has appointed as assistant state director, Mr. Austin V. Edwards, and that Negroes have been placed on FHA committees in nine counties, with more to be added soon.

TRAINING PROGRAMS BIG SUCCESSES

SCCHR has held 2 conferences on training and economic needs, especially of rural people. The first held February 13--15, was co-sponsored with Penn Center. The second, co-sponsored with National Sharecroppers Fund was held September 22-27. Both were attended by approximately 250 persons, drawn primarily from the 24 S. C. counties eligible for area redevelopment. Reports available upon request

Inter-Racial Conference

By HUGH E. GIBSON
Roving Reporter

FROGMORE—Harvey Gantt, the Negro now seeking admittance to Clemson, was among 82 South Carolina college students who attended an inter-racial conference here last weekend.

Confirmation of Gantt's presence came yesterday from Courtney Siceloff, director of Penn Community Services, Inc., which provided the physical facilities for the parley.

Mr. Siceloff, regional consultant to the State Advisory Committee Section of the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, declined to identify other student participants.

He said the 82 were members of the S. C. Student Council and came under the auspices of the Council of Human Relations. He said he attended two of the sessions but took no active part in the proceedings.

Mr. Siceloff referred all other questions to Mrs. Alice N. Spearman of Columbia, executive secretary of the Council of Human Relations.

Reached by The News and Courier, Mrs. Spearman would identify only Gantt as present at the Penn parley.

"I don't know by whom he was invited but my recollection is that he attended only the Saturday evening meeting," Mrs. Spearman said. "He took no active part in the proceedings or discussion. My impression was that he is a very fine person."

Mrs. Spearman said students from "most" of the state's colleges and universities attended the conference, which consisted of a series of three meetings and ended with a Sunday morning worship service. She listed major topics discussed as:

1. Racial relations, and what college students can do to avert a repetition of the violence that attended the integration of the University of Mississippi.
2. Industrial automation, and how best to upgrade and update the curricula or technical training programs.
3. Service programs designed to aid the community in eradicating proverty and illiteracy.

The students came to a general agreement that nonviolence is essential if South Carolina is not to witness Oxford-type rioting and bloodshed, Mrs. Spearman said. The students also agreed there is need for improvement in technical training programs to slow the outward migration of the trained from this state, she added.

No firm conclusions came out of the survey of community service programs, the executive secretary said.

Mrs. Spearman said the Council of Human Relations is an outgrowth of the old S.C. Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, formed shortly after World War I. She identified its president as the Rev. Fred Reece of Columbia, a Methodist minister. Current membership is 600, she said, drawn from all walks of life.

Drop-Out Rate Linked With Poor Background

By GUS J. CHIGGES
Staff Writer for The State

The high rate of school drop-outs in South Carolina was linked directly here Thursday with the low social and economic backgrounds of the children involved.

"We not only face the job of rebuilding slum dwellings, but of rebuilding the people living there," said William K. Marsh, director of Columbia's Department of Urban Rehabilitation.

Marsh led off a speaking program in a Citizens Consultation on Urban Problems and Potentialities attended by some 150 persons at the Hotel Wade Hampton.

"I don't know who should do it, but it is a pressing need. I keep seeing a missionary effort as the answer — perhaps led by the churches," Marsh said.

He said the "great amount" of school drop-outs between the first and second grades occur when children from low social-economic backgrounds realize they are not ready for school.

He said their low-level environment in these early, formative years has not given them the equipment to cope with the pursuit of education.

"This leads to retention (in grade) of the child, his subsequent discouragement, and finally, his complete withdrawal," he said.

Subsequent talks dealt with the close correlation between the chronic unemployment of certain segments of people and their lack of basic education required for taking training under the Technical Education program.

Keith Aull, director of the S. C. Employment Security Commission, told of studies and questionaires used to probe into the backgrounds of the chronically unemployed.

"Our inevitable conclusion is that most of the long-time unemployed are those with a low level of education."

He said that some 436 South Carolinians had thus far been put into training courses under the Manpower Development Act of 1962, and that this was considered good progress.

John E. Hills, director of the State division of Technical Services, told the group, consisting largely of teachers, ministers, and school administrators, that in offering labor forces to incoming industries, "we must sell our benefits, not our characteristics."

nomic potentialities of the state as "a very exciting field," and added, "our work in developing labor forces has been very gratifying."

Edmund L. Barnett of the Guidance and Testing Services, State Department of Education, pointed out that South Carolina graduates 47 per cent of those entering the eighth grade, against a national average of 70 per cent.

He said that Wisconsin ranked the highest in percentage of graduates, with 92 per cent, and that a study showed this was attributable to the interest and work of the churches and other private groups working with governmental agencies.

Fred Reese, president of the S. C. Council on Human Relations, sponsor of the seminar, stressed that the gathering was not called for the purpose of gathering information and statistics.

He said, rather, that it was called for an "exchange of ideas and to try and formulate plans for attacking the problems that face us."

Council Wants Parks Kept

The executive committee of the S. C. Council on Human Relations said Monday that "nothing would be gained by closing state' parks except "the loss of a positive image for genuine progress which South Carolina is building across the nation."

While no decision has yet been made with respect to the parks if and when they become integrated, the State Segregation Committee headed by Sen. L. Marion Gressette of Calhoun County, has recommended closing the parks rather than risking a breakdown of law and order if they be kept open and integrated.

COURT'S ORDER

U. S. District Judge J. Robert Martin of Greenville ruled earlier this month that the parks be integrated, but gave the state 60 days before the ruling need take effect.

In its statement, the Council of Human Relations expressed the view that South Carolinians have every right to be proud of their 22 state parks.

"The parks serve as a positive and wholesome form of diversion and entertainment for old and young alike. The accommodations offered provide youth with satisfying creative fun and thus help to control juvenile delinquency and provide activity for leisure time.

"Literally millions of dollars in land resources, employes and planning are involved in the management of our parks system. Newcomers, industry officials and interested persons all recognize the attractiveness and value of our state parks.

"We are convinced that our state parks are greatly needed and should remain open for use of all citizens in this state. Thoughtful persons will recognize the need for consideration and good will as the park facilities are made available to all people.

"It is our considered judgment that continued peace will prevail in the parks and that citizens will cooperate with park officials to maintain order.

CITIZENS URGED

"We urge citizens to express to their legislators and the Arrants House Committee their desire that the parks continue to operate that all citizens may benefit and that our investment in helpful leisure-time activities continue to pay dividends.

The executive committee of the Human Relations Council is composed of Fred M. Reese Jr., president; the Rev. Sherrod Rice, vice president; Earl Middleton, second vice president; Mrs. R. B. Cunningham, secretary; and Mrs. Marion Paul, treasurer.

September 3: Tuskegee school is surrounded by state troopers. Wallace and Flowers attack each other with opposing views on schools.

4: Dr. George Fisher of Birmingham delivers petitions to Mayor Albert Boutwell to close schools rather than desegregate them. A National State Rights Party leader urges a motorcade around the three schools to be desegregated in Birmingham this morning to see that no Negroes enter. National States Rights Party leaders, Jerry Dutton and Edward R. Fields marched in Woodrow Wilson Park in a demonstration against opening of desegregated schools in Birmingham. Huntsville school officials postponed opening of the city's schools until Friday to avert the threat of state troopers blocking the entry of pupils, the superintendent announced today. In Birmingham two Negroes enter Graymont school; police fight crowd in streets. Five arrested; high school mix delayed. A policeman was beaten and his pistol taken from him in the Ramsay disturbance. White demonstrators formed motorcades at Central Park before school opening and went from school to school. Negro students, Henry Hobdy and Dorothy Davis register in Mobile. Tuskegee teachers find doors blocked third straight day. Troopers pour into Birmingham. 'Keep Peace', Wallace urges Alabamians.

5: Attorney Arthur Shores' home blasted; 1 dead, 21 hurt in riot. Three schools closed after violence; reopening uncertain.

6: Negro attorneys, acting for five Negro students ordered admitted to white schools, yesterday asked District Judge Seybourn H. Lynne for an order that the schools of the city stay open and that Governor George C. Wallace "show cause" why he should not be enjoined from interfering with their opening. U. S. enters under civil rights act in the bombing of Atty. Shores home. City councilmen denounce outbreaks of violence. Birmingham clergymen are expected to put the city's full "religious forces" Sunday behind drives to raise a proposed $50,000 bombing reward fund as pledges and collections neared the $18,000 mark yesterday. Huntsville defies Wallace, parents break line. Determined parents led their children past state troopers into one of four schools which Gov. George Wallace has ordered closed today, and the governor reportedly promised not to interfere with schools opening Monday. In Birmingham federal panel refuses to delay school mix says local board must comply with U. S. Court's order.

9: Negro businessman, A. G. Gaston, home firebombed. No one injured. Closed schools reopen today. Governor Wallace vows school fight will continue. During the past two days, parents of Birmingham school students have presented the Birmingham Board of Education with several petitions requesting the reopening of the closed Birmingham schools. The petitions contain more than 2000 signatures.

10: Four Negroes enter Huntsville schools. Governor orders guard units to replace troopers in Birmingham. Mayor Albert Boutwell of Birmingham tells newsmen he's against state or federal help unless requested. Young Men's Business Club demands Wallace call his troops home. Two Negro girls barely stepped out of their cars at West End High School in Birmingham yesterday before being ushered off the school grounds by Public Safety Director, Al Lingo, and a host of state troopers. State troopers, enforcing Gov. George Wallace's school segregation edict, yesterday turned away a Negro student slated to enroll at Ramsay High School in Birmingham. Two Negroes in Mobile scheduled to integrate Alabama's largest public high school today were thwarted by an armed force of 150 state troopers acting under Gov. George C. Wallace's orders. A few hours later a Federal judge ordered Wallace to stop interfering with school desegregation immediately. Two schools in Birmingham receive bomb threat calls. In Birmingham Ramsay deseg--regated without any fanfare while students protest at West End High School. West End students chanted a variety of football yells shortly after two Negro girls were admitted at the school yesterday. Among the leading yells was, "2-4-6-8, we don't want to integrate, and 8-6-4-2 Boutwell is a Jew." At one point, the crowd began yelling, "We want connor," referring to former Birmingham Police Commissioner Eugene "Bull" Connor. No disciplinary action is planned for more than 1,000 students who walked away from desegregated classes at three Birmingham schools yesterday. Governor Wallace attacks President John F. Kennedy as dictator.

11: Segregation ends quietly at Mobile. Wendell Wilkie Gunn, 20-year-old Tuscumbia Negro, was enrolled today as a student at Florence State College. Gunn was enrolled after registration for white students had ended for the day. More than 5000 persons jammed Dixie Speedway in Midfield last night in a protest against desegregation of Birmingham schools and to begin plans for private schools. The Rev. Ferrell Griswold, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Minor Heights, joined former Birmingham Mayor Art Hanes in denouncing court-ordered desegregation of schools here, and asked parents to "keep your children away from these integrated schools." Jack Burton, a student at West End High School asked students at all three dese--gregated schools to stay out of school at a meeting of West End "Parents for Private Schools".

12: Wallace continues his hint of running in the primaries. The names and addresses of persons mailing an estimate 300,000 letters to Gov. George C. Wallace since his "school house door" stand at the University of Alabama are being filed for use in next year's Presidential primaries.

16: Bomb blast church, kills 4, 19 are injured. Birmingham police and sheriff's office personnel stood guard outside the bombed-out 16th Street Baptist Church here, after victims and injured persons were pulled from the wreckage. Most of the stained glass and other windows of the church were smashed by the explosion. Negro youth Johnny Robinson was dead on arrival at Hillman Emergency Hospital after being shot by a Birmingham policeman. Virgil Ware, 13 was shot and killed by two white teenagers on a motor scooter on Sandusky-Road. Birmingham police arrested 19 Negroes in the area of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church which was blasted by dynamite yesterday morning during church services. Mayor Albert Boutwell says "All of us are victims, and most of us are innocent victims." Ministers urge minute of prayer.

17: Selma arrest 62 Negroes in first racial outbreak. Tuskegee private school drive grows as boycott continues. Air of tension hangs over Mobile despite routine school situation. Two Negroes mix Anniston library. Judge Allgood deplores violence, delivers scathing attack. Bomb clues hunted in church debris. Troopers, city police ring area. Negroes demand Federal troops and white officials say they are not needed as Negroes organize to guard homes.

18: In Birmingham the Community Affairs Committee on Public Schools in a series of resolutions yesterday, urged that "all parents now insist that their children attend their schools." The organization formed by parents of children in West End's desegregated high school, was made a legal organization yesterday according to a spokesman with "signed papers." A special guest at the meeting was Malcom Bethea, state representative for Jefferson County, who said he was helping the group as an "interested citizen." First degree murder charges have been placed against two 16-year-old white youths charged with the fatal shooting of a 13-year-old Negro boy Sunday. An orderly, restrained crowd of some 2000 Negroea and more than 100 whites filled the St. John's A. M. E. Church and lined the sidewalks outside yesterday to pay tribute to one of four Negro children killed in Sunday's bombing of a Negro church. The leader of a small militant white racitst group which has stirred up much of Birmingham's school integration trouble says Sunday's bombing of a Negro church here is "wrecking the segregationist cause." Edward R. Fields said he expected to be indicted, along with other members of the National States Rights Party who led demonstrations around the city's three integrated schools, and charged he was the victim of "A frame up by the Kennedys." Birmingham police disclosed that two white teen--agers charged with shooting a Negro boy to death were traced as a result of their participation in school demonstrations forstered by the National States Rights Party. Merchants concerned with crises. Racial unrest and violence cause sales to decline.

19: Mourning three bombing victims, more than 6,000 Negroes jammed Sixth Avenue Baptist Church Wednesday for the combined funerals of the three young girls. Bomb victims fund reward offer grow. The $50,000 fund first suggested by Mayor Albert Boutwell and the City Council, passed the $76,000 and is still climbing, officials said. President Kennedy agreed today to meet seven Deep South Negro leaders tomorrow at the White House. They said they would ask him to send Federal troops to keep order in Birmingham in the wake of last Sunday's church bombing.

20: President John F. Kennedy asks restraint here, will send in two man team. President Kennedy is sending Colonel Earl H. (Red) Blaik, former Army football coach and General Kenneth C. Royall, former secretary of the Army, into Birmingham to try to ease racial tensions here. President urges city to cooperate with team. Governor George Wallace today made personal contributions of $100 to each of two groups seeking to form private schools for white pupils. Birmingham Atty. Charles Morgan, Jr. in a speech here yesterday, said "all of us" are guilty of the bombing of a Negro church that killed four children, including the governor, mayor, police force, business community, local newspapers, and others.

23: Assistant U. S. District Atty. Macey Taylor said yesterday that if a Federal Grand Jury, now in session investigating possible violations of Federal statues in the desegregation of Birmingham schools, returnns any indictments today, arrest of those indicted will follow immediately, if possible. Some 30 sign-carrying demonstrators heckled four Birmingham civic leaders at the airport yesterday as the leaders left for Washington to give President Kennedy "the true story of Birmingham." An official of the United Americans for Conservative Government, which has backed private schools, said that Mrs. Mary Lou Holt boarded the plane with the four civic leaders to Washington. The official said Mrs. Holt will attempt to see the President today, too. Demonstrations in a number of American cities today symbolized the mourning and troubled conscience of the nation over the death of four young Negro girls in the bombing of a Birmingham church a week ago.

25: Governor Wallace was ordered tonight to stop interfering with court-ordered desegregation of public schools in Mobile, Birmingham, and Tuskegee. State troopers, police jail 156 Negroes in Selma. A special presidential two-man mission, sent to Birmingham yesterday to ease racial tensions, will talk today with both white and Negro civic leaders, seeking answers to what President Kennedy called "the fears and suspicions that now exist." Young Men's Business Club called on city officials to add Negro police to the force. Hiring of Negro police in Birmingham was called for by a vote of about 70 Negroes and whites last night at a meeting of the Birmingham Council on Human Relations. Evangelist Billy Graham said today he would be willing to conduct a crusade in racially troubled Birmingham if clergymen of both races invite him.

26: Birmingham police are investigating two explosions believed to have been designed to commit wholesale slaughter in a Southside Negro area early yesterday. Investigators and the people in the community feel that only an act of fate saved amny innocent persons from certain death, and many police officers feel the double explosions were booby traps for them. Investigators said a minor explosion kwas set off in a clump of bushes near the intersection of Center Street, and Seventh and 16th Avenue South. It cause no damage and was light enough to be deceiving as to its location. Exactly 14 minutes later, a terrific blast ripped through a block-wide area, shattering windows and riddling homes with shrapnel. Second Negro enrolls at the University of Alabama Extension Center in Huntsville.

27: Governor George C. Wallace told a nationwide television audience today that "progress" is being made by state and local law enforcement, working with federal investigators, toward solving the bombing of a Negro church in Birmingham 12 days ago. City Councilmen scheduled a special meeting with the President's fact-finding mission here this morning as Birmingham police late yesterday said fragments from Wednesday's shrapnel bomb may provide them new clues in recent racial bombings. Figures compiled by the U. S. Civil Rights Commission show that Negro voter registration has almost doubled in 13 Alabama counties during the past six years. Bishop Carpenter appointed chairman of the Community Affairs Committee on Group Relations yesterday by the Community Affairs Committee on Group Relations yesterday by the Community Affairs Steering Committee.

30: Head-Zukoski statement apprears in the Birmingham News.

October 1: Five teachers hired by Macon Academy, private school in Tuskegee, as old colonial home is readied to house school.

2: State investigators find 135 sticks of synamite hid in wooded area near Birmingham.

6: Newspaper ad by prominent whites urge City of Birmingham to hire Negro police.

7: In Selma 200 Negroes spent Freedom Monday waiting in line to register.

8: Troopers rough up press in Selma, some 60 people register to vote with the first eight in line being white. Wallace asks state employees to donate to private schools. Two groups in Birmingham have workshops to organize street demonstrations.

8: Charles Cagle convicted of possession of dynamite fined $100 and sentenced to six months of hard labor. Released on $300 bond.

9: Reports indicate 350 arrested in the past three weeks in Selma. Demonstrations started with picketing of lunch counters then voter registration became goal. Alabama's Legislative Commission to preserve the peace called for Shuttlesworth and King to name those who provide money and plan nationwide turmoil.

10: Two more convicted in connection with recent bombings in Birmingham. Colonel Blaik and General Royall give interim report to President Kennedy.

14: Governor Wallace in ½ hour T. V. talk to Jefferson county citis figures to show Birmingham is growing economically. Dr. Martin Luther King at mass meeting in Birmingham. Negroes boycott of stores until Negroes are hired as clerks. U. S. Atty. Macon Weaver in a feature story in Birmingham News complains that a lot of time of the FBI is wasted by complaints of Negroes and "so-called" civil rights leaders. He states his office digested 300 complaints in 1963 and none have been recommended for prosecution by the Justice Department. "The majority of them charged nothing more than rough talk, pushing, shoving, striking, and slapping."

17: One Hundred twenty Negroes sign statement supporting Dr. King's demand for Negro policemen. U. S. Justice Department denies King rode in k rented car. Wallace charges denial complicates story and charges King rode from Birmingham to Selma and Selma to Montgomery in cars rented by Justice Department.

20: City Councilman George Seibels says there is little hope for improvement in race relations in Birmingham if local Negroes support King and "professional outside agitators".

22: City Council rejects ultimatum to hire Negro police.

24: Alabama Attorney General, Richmond Flowers, says he is prepared to invoke strong state action unless constant threats and attempted coercion of officials in Birmingham stop. Roger Blough, President of U. S. Steel, states a corporation cannot and "should not" attempt to exert economic compulsion to achieve any particular end in the social area.

29: Wallace speakst at City Auditorium in Birmingham in support of private schools , and charged U. S. District Attorney Macon Weaver with responsibility to prosecute the "communists" who "organized" the demonstrations in Birmingham in Spring of '63.

30: National States Rights Party member, Jerry Dutton in court on charges of making a false report ot police. The two "communists" he reported to police were at the National States Rights Party headquarters were FBI men.

2: White Citizens Council meets in Graymont Armory in Birmingham. One Hundred Fifty hear two Baptist preachers urge defeat of Kennedy, white voter registration drive, and white boycott of downtown stores.

4: Wallace speaks at Harvard. Governor Wallace states he can prove known communists or members of communist "front" organizations helped plan demonstrations in April of '63. Under Alabama law communists and subversive groups are required to register with Department of Public Safety on or before 5th day of if they stay in state five consecutive days. U. S. District Atty. Macon Weaver says if the alleged communists were in state 5 days, he suggest Wallace use state laws rather than asking Federal Courts to prosecute. State Atty. General Richmond Flowers says, "all I know of communists in Alabama is wha t I read in the newspapers. My office has no evidence at this time". Referring to Wallace and public safety officials. "Presumably it is their duty, if they have evidence of violation of Alabama law to turn it over to prosecuting authorities, and make it clear that to prosecute offenders they must be "proved" to be members of the communist party or an affiliate organization. Legislative probers "Commission to Preserve the Peace", decided to have monthly meetings having met twice in October and has "the current Birmingham racial situation under close scrutiny."

8: Wallace winds up New England tour with speech at Brown University in Rhode Island. Wallace told news conference that segregation is almost a religion with people of Alabama, "and there is nothing irreligious, immoral or sinful about any system which we sincerely believe to be in the best interest of all concerned." Mrs. Mary Cain, newspaper editor of Mississippi, addresses Mobile White Citizens Council. In Birmingham police seeks white man who shot a Negro without apparent provocation. Witnesses state the man came out of a restaurant and he and the Negro exchanged a few remarks in a friendly manner. Shooting him once he fell and then shot him again. Victim is in serious condition. Justice Department admits King given Selma ride. Alabama League of Women Voters opposes proposed Amendment 3 to be voted on December 3 because it would disenfranchise many white and Negro voters.

13: Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals forbids officials of Dallas County to subpoena attorneys with U. S. Department of Justice. Thirteenth President of Auburn University, Ralph B. Braughan, appeals to faculty and students to engage in no action which could possibly complicate the very difficult and trying procedures in which we must become engaged. U. S. 5th Circuit Court orders Auburn to accept Negro Franklin Howard on January 2, 1964.

15: Birmingham City Councilman George Seibels claims Johnathan McPherson, professor at Miles College, deliberately lied when he denied knowledge he was to have an interview at City Hall regarding an appointment as police officer.

CONFIDENTIAL

QUARTERLY REPORT

September, October, November 1963

This quarter has been a busy one, getting fall program under way. A Conference at Tuskegee was held for this purpose - New Ways to meet New Days. We finished our fiscal year and held our annual meeting. Local Chapters were visited and new contacts made.

The Augusta Chapter is proceeding with well planned program activities. The Education Committee and the Employment Committee are particularly active. The Chapter is growing in numbers and in activity.

The Negroes in the Brunswick High School have had a satisfactory experience so far, one girl making the honor roll the first quarter.

The Savannah Chapter rejoices with their former chairman that the shootings and harassment have ceased. After complaints to Washington from several sources the county police announced to the Waters that there would be no more trouble. However, no one had been apprehended. This reinforced our doubts concerning the sincerity of the police action. Desegregation of hotels and motels and theaters took place as scheduled October 1. In spite of picketing the theaters have maintained their policy. Restaurants are still segregated.

Rome has weathered a storm and increased in strength this fall. A White Citizens Council has recently been organized. It is under the same leadership as the former KKK, but has greater public acceptance. When our Council members left a Negro church after the October meeting the White Citizens Council members were waiting to take pictures of our members and to harass them. Telephone threats were received by many. The President of Berry was told he would be tarred and feathered if he did not fire our chairman. The photographs were shown at the next meeting of the White Citizens Council. We made efforts to have the November meeting held in the down town area in a public building. This failed. We were refused the privileges the White Citizens Council had enjoyed. The November meeting was held without police protection in a white church in the outlaying area of the town. All of our members who had been harassed returned to the meeting and brought others with them. The meeting was very successful. The White Citizens Council, who came, left quietly without making trouble. Dr. Bertrand, the president of Berry College, has stood staunchly behind Max Schaible.

Again we see that when our members have the courage to stand firmly and not be intimidated we gain strength in the organization and prestige and respect in the community. The City Council has now decided we can meet in the City Hall. The League of Women Voters who has recently accepted its first Negro members is also allowed to meet in the City Hall. Rome's Little Theater had an integrated audience for the first time.

Of the greatest importance to us is the fact that members of the Citizens Council are questioning their own actions and are sincerely communicating with members of our group. The Rome Chapter has in fact become a Council on Human Relations.

Columbus is having an interesting experiment in having regular meetings with various white people who do not have the courage to attend the integrated council meetings. After an educational process it is hoped that some of these people will take the next step and attend the council and perhaps later join. So far there has been some success.

Some staff and office time was spent working with an Atlanta group "Women for Progress". This was an effective measure to reach hundreds of women to encourage civil rights activities.

We attended the Federal Court hearing when the lawyers were seeking a change of venue in Dr. Anderson's case. We testified that Dr. Anderson could not receive a fair trial in S.W. Georgia. We also covered the insurrection trials in Americus and made a few contacts for future work.

We have sought to encourage the Georgia United Church Women to attempt integrated church groups, particularly in towns such as Macon where no serious problems exist at this time. A visit to Macon to meet the local leadership in the United Church groups (there are two, one white, one Negro) increased our belief that a truly United Church Women's organization would be an important and possible immediate step forward.

We have had 48 new members during the quarter. Twenty three in Atlanta, twenty five in the rest of the state.

We have also had our first request for help in organizing a Council. We hope early in the year to have first meetings in LaGrange, Athens and Carrollton, where preliminary contacts have been made.

Much time has been spent with the Peace Walkers who are still in the state. This group of 24 members of the Committee for Non-violent Action met with police brutality in Griffin. We took several of them to the Governors office to let them tell their own story. We learned that it is the policy of the state troopers to use the cattle prods on humans when they go limp on arrest. We endeavored to influence the state officials to persuade the state troopers to encourage the local police to allow the walkers the freedom of walking through the state giving out their leaflets. We believe this has had some good results.

The annual meeting was fairly well attended. The group was not large but was representative of the state wide membership.

Financial report attached. We were dissappointed in having no successful fund raising in Cleveland at the time of the NAIRO meeting. The President's assassination stopped our efforts. A trip to New York will be necessary to raise funds to continue our work.

'We Must Move Some Fences'

The Text of Former Governor Collins' Speech

By LEROY COLLINS

A CONTROVERSIAL ADDRESS

This is the text of remarks by LeRoy Collins, president of the National Association of Broadcasters and former governor of Florida, before the annual meeting of the Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce in Columbia on Tuesday, December 3.

The speech was one of the most controversial to be delivered in the captial city in some time. Apparently Mr. Collins considered it to be important, because advance copies were distributed by NAB headquarters in Washington and newspaper services in his native Florida were alerted well in advance.

In responding to South Carolina radio stations and others who objected to portions of the speech, Mr. Collins asked that his whole speech be read before he was judged. "I did not blame President Kennedy's assassination on the South," he said. "I said that this and other acts of violence are the products of environments where hatred has been preached and lawlessness extolled."

It is a high privilege for me to be here in Columbia, and to participate in this Greater Columbia Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting of 1963.

I like South Carolina, and I always have. Yours is a state rich in history and exciting in opportunity.

Your distinguished Governor, Donald Russell, who honors us all by his presence here tonight, is a public leader of conspicuous competence and of uncommon dedication.

I would like to add my warm congratulations to all of your Chamber of Commerce officers and committees. You have had a remarkably successful year; and while the rank-and-file support of your membership doubtless has been excellent, special praise is due all who have supplied the leadership.

Broadcasters

My message this evening is being carried by many broadcasters across this state. I am grateful to them. I also salute them, along with all other broadcasters, for their enormous efforts in reporting to the American people and to the world the story of our nation in the agony of its trial after the assassination of President Kennedy. As soon as the first dastardly shot was fired in Dallas, response of news broadcasters was immediate. It became complete, and reflected the highest skill and dedication.

This was the free broadcaster at his finest. No one from the government had to make the slightest move to get him going, or to keep him at his task, or to hold out any hope that his commercial losses would be offset in any way or shared by anyone else. It was his job. And in performing it, he asked not what the country could do for him, but only what he could do for his country.

I do not believe anyone is more genuinely proud of his southern birth and "raising" than I am. I love this land. Some thoughts have been brooding in my mind lately, especially in the few mad days since the murder of our young President, and I think South Carolina and Columbia are good places for me to talk these out.

Not all of you will agree with what what I have to say. This does not trouble me. and it should not trouble you.

Plain Talk

I have tried to be a Southern-have sounded like anti-American diatribes from some hostile foreign country.

They have done it in the national press and on the national radio and television to such an extent that citizens outside the South would be entitled to wonder if they might not need visas to pass through our region.

Battle Cries

And all the while, too many of the rest of us have remained cravenly silent or lamely defensive while Dixie battle cries have been employed to incite sick souls to violence — egged on by the rabble-rousers' call to "stand up and fight!"

It is little wonder that other Americans fail to regard us on occasions as being in the mainstream of American life and citizenship.

And I ask you tonight, how long are the majority of Southerners going to allow themselves to be caricatured before the nation by these Claghorns? How many Sunday School children have to be dynamited to death? How many Negro leaders have to be shot in the back? How many governors have to be shot in the chest? How many Presidents have to be assassinated?

All those evil happenings have been the products of environments where hatred has been preached and lawlessness extolled — environments which you and I know are foreign to the South for which we care deeply and are repugnant to most Southerners.

It is time the decent people in the South, with all their might and strength, told the cemetery had been established and blessed for the burial of Catholics only.

After considerable discussion of the point, the priest suggested as an alternative that the burial be made just outside the fence of the cemetry and said, "Here we will be sure to see that the grave is cared for and not desecrated, just as faithfully as we care for the graves on the inside."

Survivors

The arrangement was worked out, and the two boys who survived went on through the war. When peace came, they returned to their homes in the United States.

They had the understanding, however, that three years from the date their friend was killed they would meet in the French village and together visit the grave.

When this day came, they met as agreed and soon came to the little church. But when they arrived just outside the fence where they had buried their friend, they were shocked to see no sign of the grave. Angrily, they found the old priest and scolded him for his neglect.

Then the old father took the two young men out into the cemetery and led them down the inside of the fence. There was the grave just as the soldiers had left it. Then he said, "You know, some time after you left, I went back and studied our regulations further. I found it to be very clear that while I was not permitted to allow the burial inside the fence, there was nothing which prevented me from later moving the fence over."

Americans. The taproot of future progress is greatly expanded and improved public education for all American youngsters.

While in the Florida Legislature many years ago, I undertook the leadership for the passage of legislation known as the Minimum Foundation Program. Under it, the state government guaranteed to every child in Florida, regardless of where he lived or how poor his county, a public education of no less quality than certain prescribed standards. This has worked quite well, and other states have developed similar plans.

There was talk at the time that a program like this would rob local communities of local interest and influence, but this did not turn out to be the case.

Now, I feel that we should mount in this country a massive National Minimum Foundation Plan under which the nation would assure to every child an education adequate to the full development of his talents.

This would call for the supplementing of local resources in proportion to need. It could enable us to close our educational gap and bring to an end our vicious cycle of ignorance breeding more ignorance with resulting impoverishment of body, intellect and spirit.

A Necessity

This is not only a national need; I say it is a necessity. We must do this to enable the nation better to meet its adversaries in a hostile and competitive world. But, more importantly, we must do it to provide for which America must play in meeting the challenge of history.

A Stigma

Some politicians in other regins of the nation contend that the South now bears such a stigma before the nation that it is incapable of producing national leadership. And there are even some Southerners who parrot the same fallacy.

After all, where was this republic founded? By whom were our nation's principles of freedom and individual dignity hammered out?

So much of this came from the minds of Washington and Jefferson and Henry. The young republic was nourished by the philosophies of Madison and Monroe and Jackson. Southerners all.

The South should be bright and optimistic, indeed, as we face the future.

An Advance

To become a more vital part of the nation's efforts for the fulfillment of national goals will not demean our posture as states, but enhance it. It will not be a retreat, but an advance. It will not be a defeat, but a victory.

My fellow countrymen, a few long days ago our young President was struck down on the street of an American city. Good men have differences, and many Americans had differences with John Kennedy. But I do not know of any fellow countryman who, after rendezvousing with his soul, would not share the sweet dream of John Kennedy for a better America or his dedication to move his dreams toward reality. He was the unusual, heroic person in politics who thought not in terms of years, but in terms of generations and of what America must be for our children and the children of our children.

Just a few days before his death, President Kennedy was talking to one of our leading Southern editors — a very close friend — William Baggs of the Miami News, about the 2000 A.D., and of what we, in our generation, must plant and plow up to make this country right for its sons and daughters in 2000 A.D.

Moral Duty

I say to you tonight that above all else it is the moral duty of our generation to plow under dedication.

This was the free broadcaster at his finest. No one from the government had to make the slightest move to get him going, or to keep him at his task, or to hold out any hope that his commercial losses would be offset in any way or shared by anyone else. It was his job. And in performing it, he asked not what the country could do for him, but only what he could do for his country.

I do not believe anyone is more genuinely proud of his southern birth and "raising" than I am. I love this land. Some thoughts have been brooding in my mind lately, especially in the few mad days since the murder of our young President, and I think South Carolina and Columbia are good places for me to talk these out.

Not all of you will agree with what what I have to say. This does not trouble me. and it should not trouble you.

Plain Talk

I have tried to be a Southerner who speaks plainly on sensitive issues, and you are sons and daughters of a state which, from the time of Sumter and Pickens and Calhoun, has been characterized by forthright debate.

Doubtless as you have detected down the years, a number of people in other neighborhoods of America have not always agreed with the forthright talk emerging from South Carolina. But debate, if it is honest and thoughtful, refines the decisions in our republic and makes them more intelligent.

I have not come to address old grievances. It is the future of the South and of our nation I wish to take up with you here tonight. And the one is inseparable from the other.

I would hope first that we might consider as our own the creed of our new President, Lyndon Johnson, who, once exasperated by his critics in the Senate when he was the leader of that forum, sought to explain himself in these terms: "I am a free man, an American, a United States Senator and a Democrat, in that order."

Most of us, when we talk about the South, find the easy things to say. We like to recall the handicaps our region has suffered in the exploitation of its natural resources; the impoverishment which followed the Civil War, and the later unjust and repressive efforts made to thwart our growth and development. Then we like to speak of the happier days of our recent dynamic economic growth and prosperity — of the "new South," a land of vast new opportunities. And these things are all true. We can prove them by the bank deposits, by the new factories, by the lines on the charts, by the clothes we see children wear to school.

New, New South

We also like to speak of the "new, new South," which glitters with projections of future prosperity almost beyond comprehension. And I firmly believe that you and I will see all this come to pass in our lifetimes.

But let us think together this evening about things more personal than material progress.

I do not like it when people speak of Southerners as if they are not human parts of the United States. But the prime reason they do this is that for too long we have permitted the South's own worst enemies to speak for it.

We have allowed the extremists to speak for the South — the very ones against whom we in the South have had to struggle in our towns and in our state capitals for much of the progress we have made.

They have done it in speeches on the floor of Congress which to "stand up and fight!"

It is little wonder that other Americans fail to regard us on occasions as being in the mainstream of American life and citizenship.

And I ask you tonight, how long are the majority of Southerners going to allow themselves to be caricatured before the nation by these Claghorns? How many Sunday School children have to be dynamited to death? How many Negro leaders have to be shot in the back? How many governors have to be shot in the chest? How many Presidents have to be assassinated?

All those evil happenings have been the products of environments where hatred has been preached and lawlessness extolled — environments which you and I know are foreign to the South for which we care deeply and are repugnant to most Southerners.

It is time the decent people in the South, with all their might and strength, told the bloody-shirt-wavers to climb down off the buckboards of bigotry. It is time we started speaking and acting together more like loyal Americans and self-respecting Southerners.

You here in South Carolina have shown in many ways that you understand — that you are moving forward.

The Cities

The cities of Oxford, Birmingham, Little Rock, New Orleans, Dallas—and Philadelphia and Chicago, for that matter—are not to be found in the State of South Carolina.

And that fact, as all of you know well, is no accident of geography.

It is because the leadership of this community and this state reached a rational decision that South Carolina was not going to allow bigotry and lawlessness to pervade your society and pollute your bloodstream.

There has been no need for federal marshals patrolling your university campuses, thanks to the good sense and respect for law among the people of this state.

You have demonstrated to the rest of the nation, which includes the rest of the South, and to yourselves, that a Deep-South community does not have to throw itself onto a funeral pyre of hate.

Yes, there are forces at work in the South — men and women who do not have their faces turned backward, stalwart men and women who have not received the headlines and public notices which have been accorded the more sensational examples of lack of progress, but who have been in the vanguard of progress nonetheless.

A Story

There is a story which came out of World War I. I do not vouch for its literal accuracy. In fact, there are many reasons for doubting its truth in detail. But its message rings true.

Three Americans soldiers — one a Protestant, one a Catholic and one a Jew — became fast friends as they marched and fought together in France. They entered into a pact committing the survivors to do everything possible for the family of any one of them who might be killed in action.

In a battle soon afterward, on the outskirts of a small French village, the Protestant boy was killed. The only place of worship was a little Catholic church. The Catholic boy and the Jewish boy asked the priest of this little church for permission to have their friend buried in the church cemetery adjoining. But when the priest learned that the dead boy was not Catholic, he regretfully declined, pointing out that under the regulations of the Church the ed to their homes in the United States.

They had the understanding, however, that three years from the date their friend was killed they would meet in the French village and together visit the grave.

When this day came, they met as agreed and soon came to the little church. But when they arrived just outside the fence where they had buried their friend, they were shocked to see no sign of the grave. Angrily, they found the old priest and scolded him for his neglect.

Then the old father took the two young men out into the cemetery and led them down the inside of the fence. There was the grave just as the soldiers had left it. Then he said, "You know, some time after you left, I went back and studied our regulations further. I found it to be very clear that while I was not permitted to allow the burial inside the fence, there was nothing which prevented me from later moving the fence over."

Moving Fences

Fellow Southerners, we can talk about our mores, or local laws and customs, the low standards of many Negroes, but the time has come when we must move some fences.

The soul of man is beyond the reach of a court order or a legislative act. But while courts and laws cannot change the innermost dictates of the human conscience, courts and laws most certainly can control the acts of men.

This task of assuring racial justice is no easy one for us in the South — or is it for those in the North. But Americans everywhere must recognize that this is a national commitment and a national necessity. It is not going away.

The advancement of all rights of national citizenship, as we well know, will occur with the overt aid of the national government if local citizens and local and state governments do not move effectively to accomplish this on their own.

Yet, too many politicians down our way have been hoodwinking the people on the civil rights issue. They have been trying to pretend, for their own personal political advantage, that the changes which are coming over the hill really are not there. They talk defensively of "states' rights" when they and we well know that there can be no such thing as a state's rights to default on a national duty.

A Mirage

Any rational man who looks at the horizon and sees the South of the future segregated is simply seeing a mirage.

"That all men are created equal" is not an empty cliche. It was not put in our Declaration of Independence by Jefferson merely to stir out revolutionary forces to greater sacrifice.

It is a mighty idea that is the keystone of our nation's whole meaning and perpetual commitment. It is the basic idea which supports the dignity of man as an individual.

It is an idea that can never be stopped — not by custom—not by prejudice — not by hate — not by murder — not by armies — not by any mortal force.

It may be thwarted — it may be delayed—its triumph may be at great cost and sacrifice — but it will keep coming on and on, for it has the invincibility of simple truth, justice and right.

Taproot

Aside from human attitudes the most basic changes which must occur to aid us in resolving our racial difficulties is the improvement of the standards of living of all underprivileged quite well, and other states have developed similar plans.

There was talk at the time that a program like this would rob local communities of local interest and influence, but this did not turn out to be the case.

Now, I feel that we should mount in this country a massive National Minimum Foundation Plan under which the nation would assure to every child an education adequate to the full development of his talents.

This would call for the supplementing of local resources in proportion to need. It could enable us to close our educational gap and bring to an end our vicious cycle of ignorance breeding more ignorance with resulting impoverishment of body, intellect and spirit.

A Necessity

This is not only a national need; I say it is a necessity. We must do this to enable the nation better to meet its adversaries in a hostile and competitive world. But, more importantly, we must do it to provide for American children a seed bed of simple justice which is now their rightful heritage, although for millions it has not been their inheritance.

Our country has a right to expect the best from all of us, regardless of where we live.

And just as it is wrong for any one, including some Southerners to sell the South short, by the same token we in the South have no right to go off in a corner and sulk.

Southerners, like Americans from every section of this land, have a solemn obligation to make whatever general and unique contributions they can to the national good.

It is high time the South rid itself of any political inferiority complex.

Leadership in the South—business, professional, educational and political — instead of being rejected out of hand nationally must be regarded as a valuable resource in the role men have differences, and many Americans had differences with John Kennedy. But I do not know of any fellow countryman who, after rendezvousing with his soul, would not share the sweet dream of John Kennedy for a better America or his dedication to move his dreams toward reality. He was the unusual, heroic person in politics who thought not in terms of years, but in terms of generations and of what America must be for our children and the children of our children.

Just a few days before his death, President Kennedy was talking to one of our leading Southern editors — a very close friend — William Baggs of the Miami News, about the 2000 A.D., and of what we, in our generation, must plant and plow up to make this country right for its sons and daughters in 2000 A.D.

Moral Duty

I say to you tonight that above all else it is the moral duty of our generation to plow under racial injustice everywhere in the United States and to plant new opportunities for the generations which will come along after us and reside in this green part of our old planet.

This has not been anything like the speech that last week I expected to make here.

But the other day, as I followed the caisson drawn by the six white horses to Arlington's green hillside and listened to the bugler's mournful cry and saw the flame lighted on the grave as if to hold back at least a tiny part of the approaching darkness, my conscience grew heavy with the long promise of history:

"Beyond the sundown is tomorrow's wisdom;
Today is going to be a long, long ago."

Oh, God of all mankind, help us to find that wisdom. Help us to make today count for more than its sorrows.

Tax Session Out: Clement

Declines To Say If Remap Order Is Reason To Call Legislature

By BILL KOVACH

There will be no special session of the legislature "solely" to deal with the mounting surplus in tax collections, Gov. Frank Clement said yesterday.

At a press conference, the governor said it would take a "more compelling reason than a tax surplus to call a special session."

He declined to say whether the court-ordered reapportionment of the state Senate was such a "compelling" reason. Present trends indicate the state is amassing a $21 million surplus.

Clement said little to newsmen to indicate what his plans are on most subjects mentioned.

HIS POSSIBLE entry into the Senate race this summer is still up in the air. The governor declined to comment on the possibility that he would run for either of the seats up for election.

In answer to other questions, Clement said:

- He had hoped to name the 21-member Commission on Human Relations yesterday but had not "worked out the details." The announcement, he said, would be made before the year's end.
- The military cutback, announced by Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, would not affect Tennessee "so far as we know now."
- He will activity support President Johnson for re-election next year.
- He "personally" hopes the Democratic party will shift the convention site from Atlantic City to Chicago.

Clement was questioned closely on the possibility of a special session to consider the reapportionment question before the Feb. 3 deadline set by the federal court.

"I will not make any statement on the matter except to say that I will make my decision after discussing the alternatives with Atty. Gen. George McCanless."

He indicated the decision would not be made until after the Christmas holidays.

"Regardless of how large or how small our surplus might be," he said, "it will be there for distribution whenever the legislature meets and I don't think the tax surplus itself would be compelling enough to call a special session."

Unless the state comes up with some alternate proposal to the one ordered by the federal court by Feb. 3, the court's plan to reapportion the Senate will go into effect immediately. The court plan gives both Shelby and Davidson counties an additional senator.

Metro Job Bias Banned

By WAYNE WHITT

The Metropolitan government committed itself yesterday to a policy of hiring workers on the basis of job qualifications and requirements without discrimination to race, color, creed, national origin or political affiliation.

The policy also pledges the consolidated government will establish a program based on merit for the promotion, transfer, demotion and reassignment of personnel.

IT IS THE FIRST time a local government here has adopted and made public a personnel policy statement.

"And we intend to adhere to it," said Mayor Beverly Briley.

The policy was recommended to the mayor by his special committee on personnel. The mayor said the statement would be referred to the Metropolitan Civil Service Commission for implementation as quickly as possible.

THE RECOMMENDING committee included representatives of the Metropolitan government as well as personnel officers of some of the largest industries and businesses in Metropolitan Nashville-Davidson County.

The policy declares:

"It is the purpose of the Metropolitan government to apply modern business principles and practices to operate efficiently and economically a sound program of personnel management."

It is designed to remove politics as the determining factor in governmental employment.

"The personnel goals of the government have now been identified," Briley said, "and the civil service commission will prepare an entirely new personnel system."

BRILEY MADE the committee's recommendations public when he met last night with members of the Metropolitan Employes Association at Warner School. The MEA is composed of non-uniformed members of the government's work force.

The mayor said the new policy also would not permit discrimination against qualified handicapped people except where such handicaps would bar them from the uniformed service (police and fire departments).

The committee had worked for several months in preparing the personnel policy.

BRILEY SAID it would be fair to both the public and the individual employe. It places employment and promotion on merit and assures the public that the employe hired can do the job and is not being placed on the payroll because of politics.

As for position classification and pay administration, it is the policy of the government:

- To require an adequate description of every position.
- To establish appropriate position standards to evaluate each position to determine its relative worth.
- To make community wage and salary surveys periodically in order to maintain competitive wage and salary scales.
- To review position descriptions periodically and systematically to insure currency and accuracy.
- To provide for salary step increases for high quality performance.

As for employe relations and services, it is the policy:

- To develop a system of job performance standards and evaluation and inform each employe periodically and systematically of the status of his performance on the job.
- To provide employes with rules and standards as guide lines concerning their conduct both on and off the job.
- To develop and administer the leave program (vacation time) on a uniform and equitable basis.
- To provide employe benefits and services in keeping with general community practices.
- To provide a plan of employe grievance procedure.
- To establish a system of communication to inform employes concerning their responsibilities, rights, and privileges, which are derived from their employment.
- To provide and maintain a safe and healthful work environment.

As for employe development and training, it is the policy:

- To develop a well-trained work force.
- To assist employes to achieve their highest potential usefulness.
- To motivate and stimulate employes to a high degree of participation.

Questions Asked Of U.S. 'Climate'

By EDMUND WILLINGHAM
Religious News Editor

A NASHVILLE minister, in a sermon delivered two days after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, raised grave questions about the national "climate."

The Rev. Glenn Mingledorff, pastor of Brentwood Methodist Church, said:

"The tragedy of the day is that the twisted and psychopathic mind lives in a day when this kind of action is encouraged by the very climate in which he lives.

"Our climate in America is sadly one of hate.

Share in the Guilt

"You and I and millions of other persons share in the guilt of Friday. Those condescending jokes that all of us have told about the Kennedys; the malicious and vicious jokes that we have told with glee concerning the stands and positions that this administration has taken; the intense hatred that we have held for the Supreme Court and the rulings of this August body; the hatred and resentment that we hold in our hearts for those whose skin is not the same color as ours; the support of the extreme right or the extreme left groups of our country; the many ugly remarks that have poured from lips and the many acts of hatred seen in our lives.

"This is our climate. And this is why each one of us is guilty."

The Rev. Mr. Mingledorff said this did not mean that everyone must agree with the national administration. He added:

"But there is an art in rejecting a man's idea without rejecting the man himself. There is maturity in understanding the difference between a man's official position and his personal being."

The Rev. Mr. Mingledorff said:

"I am sure that as God looks upon us this morning, He is not as worried about those who see their guilt and are quick to be for mercy and forgiveness, as He must be worried about those who foolishly see no involvement on their part in this dastardly act of Friday.

Weakening Fiber

"And until we kneel and until we find God's forgiveness, the thread that holds the American fiber together becomes weaker and weaker and soon that thread will break and we will be no more.

". . . For our country is built upon dependence on God and respect for each person as a child of God.

"This is our foundation. We are losing this. We must regain it. And it begins with each of us individually."

After the sermon, the entire congregation came to the altar for confession.

Instead of greeting the congregation after services, the Rev. Mr. Mingledorff asked each to leave in an attitude of repentance and prayer.

In Clarksville

On the same Sunday, the Rev. William E. Newton, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Clarksville, said in his pastoral prayer, in part:

"We claim to be unable to understand how such a sickening and senseless crime against humanity could have happened, but we have not been so bothered when such took place in Jackson, Mississippi, and Birmingham, Alabama.

"Let the shots continue to ring out in our consciences, until we die internally to our self-centered existence that will stop short of nothing in the execution of our vengeance.

"Unable even to listen to him, unwilling even to receive him as our President when he came to visit us nearby, we blamed all our problems upon him, making him our whipping boy, our scapegoat, though every one of our problems remain, and before Thee we must admit that we have been a big part of all the problems and have had little part in their solution.

". . . O Lord, have mercy upon his murderer, a southern American produced by us, uncared for by us."

Goals Appreciated

The Rev. Mr. Newton expressed thanks for Kennedy for his concern for the needy at home and the underprivileged abroad, for his struggle for justice, for his realism about "our times," and for the graciousness he showed his critics.

He prayed:

"Counsel with Thy wisdom our new President, and by Thy grace humble us until we are willing to give him more cooperation and support than we gave his predecessor."

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Katherine Jones and Dorothy Webster

QUARTERLY REPORT: September, October, November 1963

Annual Meeting

The past quarter has been one of frustrating delays. Our annual meeting was tentatively set for October, and geared to the Governor's promise to appoint a bi-racial commission on human rights. The agreement, made with the Tennessee Voters League, more than a year ago was confirmed by Governor Clement in February 1962 when a delegation from our Council met with him in his office. Since that time numerous visits and telephone calls to the Governor and his administrative assistant have reaffirmed this agreement, but he has not yet carried it through. We know of several persons who have been asked to serve on the commission and a Nashville newspaper predicts he will make the announcement this week.

The annual meeting is now set for January 23 and 24, in Nashville. Details are still to be completed. Burke Marshall has agreed to be our dinner speaker. The last board meeting proposed that the annual meeting be directed toward local human relations commissions. We have therefore requested from the board the names and addresses of all local committee members which have not yet been received. K. Jones doubts that we can get local mayor's committee members unless the Governor puts the prestige of his office behind this. We do know that he has indicated a more active concern since a recent meeting with President Johnson. Politically, however, there may be reluctance to take a public stand and action to support the personal assistance he has given in increasing desegregation of governmental and business facilities.

Local Councils

Bristol, Tennessee-Virginia Council, under quiet direction and guidance of Sid Berman has been successful in increasing its membership and effectiveness. Mr. Berman is a psychiatric social worker who has been in Bristol only about three years, and will probably be moving on to another job. As with much of East Tennessee, there is no real organized resistence to desegregation, but a fear of any change and a mountaineer determination not to be "pushed" by anyone. There is undoubted pressure on Negro domestic workers not to send their children to integraged schools.

Chattanooga has had a re-birth, and has an active program under way, which provided opportunity for members to work at different levels of activity. Reg Stagmaier who works at WRGP-TV-radio station is new president, and I think will be a good one. He chaired all local arrangements for our October 1962 annual meeting in Chattanooga and did an excellent job.

As an outcome of the September 12 session in Memphis, the Memphis Council decided to reform, elect new officers and get a program under way. Brief reports from their November meeting were enthusiastic, but I do not know details. The new Memphis president is George Grider, a young attorney. I hope they will give him more support than they did his predecessor.

Nashville has also regrouped and set up a schedule of monthly meetings. The continuing concern has been in the area of public and private school education. Nashville's meetings have been plagued with things that went wrong - three panelists out of four who agreed to participate did not appear; local meeting room reserved four weeks in advance locked one night of meeting, etc. This is not deliberate attempt at sabotage, but it has had a depressing effect on the new officers and board who have shouldered responsibility. The Nashville membership has increased, since several board members have taken personal responsibility for recruiting.

Jackson, Tennessee

Pickets continue around downtown area with occasional and planned attempts to gain service at restaurants, etc. No success. The Mayor has been vindictive toward Negro goals. Citizens Council, by its own count, is second only to one in Jackson, Mississippi in total membership. There has grown up some very quiet communication across college campuses, protected by Lane College students and others. At a recent sit-in trial, Mr. Medford Evans, executive director of Citizens Council of America was on the front row, along with his coherts. Fear and frustration grip the community.

Haywood-Fayette Counties

Problem is lack of Negro leadership. National Sharecroppers probably doing best job. Has helped establish an agricultural cooperative for selling vegetables and fresh produce. Trucked to Memphis, Chicago, etc. Hope to use roadside stands next summer. Farmers Home Administration loans now available to all Negroes who meet qualifications. Surplus foods are being distributed, although were stopped last summer. Negro sharecroppers have been both helped and exploited by groups from outside. Art Emery, white Quaker farmer from Iowa, now living in community to give guidance; seems best resource for information.

Smaller Communities in the State

Our attempts to organize have been unsuccessful. Contributing factors are lack of need for organizational structure, fear of outsiders, "we are doing very well and making progress", silence to communications. Persistence helps. In some instances, we have been able to assist, without leading to formal organization. Lebanon, just south of Nashville, continues to be a sore spot. Negro teachers who have worked for equal rights not re-hired. Efforts to silence and discredit Negro led movement. CORE has closed its office and moved out. Our office has reported to various federal offices seeming inequities, on request of Lebanon Negro citizens.

Special Projects

National Broadcasting Company film "Miss Smith of Georgia" on loan through our office from November 2 to December 8. Showings in Nashville, Oak Ridge and Jackson (see attached letter).

Benchmark - Considerable interest throughout the state from non-members. Good newspaper coverage in Nashville. Recognized inaccuracies do not seem to Council staff to overcome its generally good reception. (See Clippings)

Nashville publication "Six Years of School Desegregation", valuable as a record of background of local school situation. Pertinent at present because of consolidation of county and city schools and anticipation of vast changes in public education for Nashville and Davidson County. (See enclosed)

Tennessee Advisory Committee to the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, health survey distributed to medical schools, city councilmen, hospitals, etc. Several request for additional copies received, including request for 37 copies from Meharry Medical College for their board of directors. Tax supported city hospital rumored to be planning integration of staff as result of survey.

Reaction to President's Death

Following the period of shock, there was some emotional outpouring of good will plus remorse, and some deification of the martyred President. Letters to the editor of newspapers were numerous and frequently spoke against hate and violence. Since then, there has been some withdrawal with resistence to passing proposed Federal legislation out of guilt. The younger white ministers seem to have taken courage to speak out about violence and hate, while ministers of the larger and more affluent churches are still largely mute. The suburban Citizens Council meeting in which President Kennedy was described as dying "a tyrant's death" was loudly protested in Nashville.

Except for the furor occasioned by the cancellation of the Langston Hughes interview on Nashville's Educational TV by school superintendent, at the instigation of a local John Birch member, there has been no known consorship of national news media programs. There has been a renewed emphasis among other groups to press for "open admission". For example - some Catholic laymen are working toward further desegregation of Catholic schools.

Community Conference on Employment Opportunity

This is a voluntary Nashville group growing out of NAACP Labor and Industry Committee, founded in 1960 by Vivian Henderson and Herman Long. With volunteers, it is now operating an employment office to match Negroes to job openings. D. Webster has given considerable time to recruitment of qualified applicants for jobs which become open through the Nashville Metropolitan Committee on Human Relations, and now major banks and insurance companies have hired at least one Negro clerical worker with openings for additional ones. Our office will continue to assist until CCEO is adequately set up to handle recruitment.

Requests for Information

Numerous people have visited our office for information including newspaper and magazine reporters and feature writers: Washington Post's Susanna McBee; UPI's Duran Cheek, and others. Requests from students, faculty, educational, civic and church groups, local and out of town agencies related to civil rights, such as Johnson City Mayor's Committee. During period when our own program was delayed it has seemed important to j make as broad use as possible all other resources. We are now located directly across the street from Southern School News which is probably a contributing factor to our increase in visitors.

Membership and Finance

For the first time in several years, we anticipate completing the year solvent. Current paid membership now numbers 540.* While this is less than previously enrolled, it is higher in actual paid memberships than a year ago. We cleared membership rolls this quarter and dropped 200 names from mailing list.

Respectfully submitted,

Katherine Jones
Executive Director

* The 540 membership is count of membership cards - with husband and wife included on one card. Total individual membership in November was 676.

NASHVILLE AND PUBLIC SCHOOL DESEGREGATION: A REPORT

What has been achieved in public school desegregation in Nashville and Davidson County?

What problems remain?

To what issues should our community address itself in the future of the desegregation process?

Introduction

On Thursday night, May 2, 1963 in keeping with its established practice, the Nashville Community Relations Council conducted its annual community assessment. The theme chosen was "Six Years of Public School Desegregation in Nashville and Davidson County." Looking toward the future loomed large in the thinking of the committee charged with arrangements for the workshop, because it was recognized that a significant turning point in the desegregation process would soon be attained. In September 1963 desegregation begins at the junior high school level. This involves our children in new school situations and brings them ever more close to problems of social relationship and adjustment. It was hoped that knowledge of what had happened might provide some clue to what will happen and thus enable those responsible for the administration of the school system to prepare creatively for the new pattern of events.

In preparation for this meeting, therefore, the Council requested Mr. Eugene Wyatt, staff writer for the Nashville Tennessean, to write a report based upon a careful study of the situation, so that material would be available for the discussion. The report was prepared not as a final statement but as a working paper. This report, together with its amending discussion are presented in what follows.

A REPORT ON SCHOOL DESEGREGATION IN NASHVILLE AND DAVIDSON COUNTY

By EUGENE WYATT

Prepared for the Nashville Community Relations Council

April 1963

Negro pressure for desegregation of public schools in Nashville began almost immediately after the 1955 implementation decision in the School Segregation Cases. Efforts to secure some sort of voluntary program failed—as it did in all other "Old South" areas—and court action was taken.

From this, and under rather explicit instructions from the presiding federal judge, a plan was evolved which still is in effect with only minor modifications. Generally it involved the admission of Negro children to schools in their attendance zones beginning with the first grade and continuing through one higher grade each year until desegregation was complete. At the same time, the long-standing system of dual school zones was abolished, and a new one established on a more or less geographic basis with each school—white or Negro—serving only one area. Since housing in Nashville is largely segregated, this has the effect of preserving the prevailing segregated school pattern to a large extent. As an additional factor minimizing desegregation, parents of school children assigned to schools where their race was in a minority were permitted to request transfer of the children to nearby schools in which their race was in the majority. With only two announced exceptions, all the white children assigned to Negro schools have elected to transfer, and probably a majority of the Negroes also.

This transfer provision was not original with the Nashville Plan, but was borrowed from the Louisville, Kentucky, school system, the first big-scale segregated system to effect any sort of desegregation.

As the plan has been used in Nashville, each student is automatically assigned to the school in his residential zone. Reassignment request is required of both Negroes and whites. Once a child is transferred to a school outside the district, he may stay there until he moves or graduates to a higher level school. He may, however, request assignment back to the school in his own district at the beginning of each year. In practice, many Negroes have entered predominantly white schools at each of the desegregated grade levels.

It has been the practice of the superintendent to examine and act personally on every request. He reports that none has ever been refused which satisfied the racial criteria of the plan. Although the transfer form calls for three choices on the school for which transfer is requested, most parents have specified only one choice and the superintendent has been able thus far to grant all of these.

The superintendent says he has never granted a request for transfer by a white student because a minority of Negroes had entered the school to which the child was assigned.

Pupil transfer provisions ruled unconstitutional early in June 1963 by the U. S. Supreme Court were deleted by the Nashville and Davidson County Metropolitan Transitional School Board from desegregation plans followed by Nashville and Davidson County Schools.

Three years after the desegregation of Nashville city schools, Negro parents in Davidson County outside the city began pressure to desegregate schools there. Again, litigation was necessary. The school board offered basically the same plan which Nashville had been using—one grade a year. The federal court rejected this as inadequate because of the delay—five years since the implementation decision in the School Segregation Cases—and because of the relatively small percentage of Negro students in the system.

Accordingly, the court ordered a plan which embraced the grade-a-year and transfer provisions offered, but which began with the first four grades instead of only the first. This has the effect of bringing the Davidson County program precisely on a par with Nashville. This first desegregation term (which began in the middle of a school year) resulted in 42 Negroes enrolled in white schools, the second year 110, and in the current school year, 182 began work in previously white situations. One element influencing the court may have been recurring proposals to consolidate the two school systems as well as other governmental functions, and this equalization may have been regarded as a facilitating factor. The consolidation has since, in fact, taken place.

Currently, there are 16,486 white and 13,933 Negro students in the city system, 462 of the Negroes are in desegregated situations. In the county there are 49,774 white and 2,556 Negro students. 130 of the latter are in schools with whites.

The "Nashville Plan" as it became known, enjoyed quite a vogue over the nation. Its success was cited with approbation by many courts, and in fact was the basis of various desegregation efforts in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, and Texas. Recently, however, because of the lapse of time, courts have been reluctant to accept the plan.

The transfer aspect of the Davidson County plan has come under court attack. Presumably, because of the consolidation with the Nashville system, both will be affected by the outcome. After federal district courts and the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed the transfer provisions, the case is currently on appeal before the United States Supreme Court. During the oral arguments held in March of this year, attorneys for the Negro students were aided by a brief filed by the United States Attorney General. In general, the students' argument is that the transfer provision is based solely on a racial factor and therefore inconsistent with the Fourteenth Amendment, and has a strong tendency to preserve segregation as well as to encourage resegregation.

Recent efforts of Negroes to desegregate the Hume-Fogg school—a vocational and technical institution in downtown Nashville—have been rebuffed by the school board. The board's position has been that the Hume-Fogg operation is covered by the overall desegregation program and will be desegregated when the grade-a-year program reaches the high school level. A vocational and technical program for Negroes has been maintained for a number of years at the Pearl (Negro) high school, but the two programs are not coextensive and Negroes feel the Pearl program is inferior, as well as intrinsically discriminatory because of segregation.

Night classes at Hume-Fogg, as well as certain practical nursing classes at the city-run hospital have been desegregated.

The biggest undecided element remaining in Nashville, besides the validity of the transfer program, is the question of the integration of school faculties and staff. These are still fully segregated, although various professional groups and the administration machinery of the system itself is integrated to a considerable degree. A petition for teacher integration has been included in several recent Tennessee desegregation suits (Obion, Wilson, and Humphreys counties, among others) but thus far the courts have either refused such an order or reserved judgment. A recent decision in nearby Bowling Green, Kentucky, however, indicates the rule may be breaking on this score as well.

Neither the city nor county system has announced any recent figures on performance of Negroes in integrated situations if, indeed, any systematic studies have been made. A study of all the Negroes who originally entered the desegregated first grade was made three years later by the school psychologist and the report presented to the Civil Right Commission conference in Gatlinburg in March, 1960.

Although the report is necessarily technical, it is possible to conclude that the five who remained in desegregated situations, four have performed satisfactorily and one failed. Of these five, three have achievement scores at or slightly above the median for their grade levels, one was slightly below the median, and one well behind. Of the five Negroes who transferred back to segregated situations, four are doing above average work and one, a child with an intelligence quotient of 76, is failing. In the integrated schools, three of the Negroes had IQs above their classmates, and two below. In the Negro schools to which the previously-integrated children had transferred, four had IQs substantially above their classmates. For all Negro third grades in Nashville, the median achievement score was one-half year behind that in white third grades.

Although it certainly cannot be said that the Nashville school board welcomed the desegregation decision, it is probably true that from the outset there was no serious belief that it could be avoided. Most of the initial legal effort was based on delay of all desegregation and, when that became impossible, on efforts to have as little as possible for as long as possible.

When the ordered desegregation finally became effective, the school administration apparently made an effort to live by the letter of the plan, and has continued to do so. After a brief lapse in the beginning, the city law enforcement agencies have done the same.

This attitude has been reflected in a number of statements of education officials, notably Mr. W. H. Oliver, the Nashville Superintendent. At a Civil Rights Commission hearing in Nashville in early 1959, during the second year of desegregated operations, there was some feeling that the federal government was "rocking the boat" a bit by having the hearing here while the situation was still rather unstable. This was reflected in statements made at the hearing itself, although this feeling dissipated to some extent as the conference wore on.

By the next year, and in the somewhat more remote atmosphere of Gatlinburg, Mr. Oliver was able to say:

> "We believe it is a good plan, based on logic and sound reasoning, with respect for the law and the Consitution as interpreted by the highest legal authority in our nation, the United States Supreme Court, giving to every individual adequate protection of his rights under law, yet recognizing the educational and social impact of local community conditions, attitudes and traditions, providing a maximum of consideration for the individual judgment of every parent respecting his children, and especially safeguarding the educational interests and welfare of every child."

The program, he continued, "up to the present time . . . has worked very smoothly and without any incidents that would interfere with the educational interests and welfare of every child."

Of his own appearance at Nashville the year before, Mr. Oliver said, ". . . I was afraid, tense, and disturbed last year. I feel more relaxed at the present time."

Two years later, in the summer of 1962, Mr. Oliver had relaxed even further. At a Civil Rights Commission conference in Washington, he was able to note: " . . . It is our hope and firm belief that it will continue to work smoothly throughout the remaining seven grades and thereafter. It is our determined resolve that it shall . . . We don't say it is the best plan for any community, but we do believe that it is the best plan for Nashville, Tennessee."

However, later in the conference he discounted a suggestion that two grades a year might be desegregated instead of one.

As to the acceptance of the plan, Mr. Oliver said: "I think it is amazing to see how well our community has accepted our plan. Yes sir; the acceptance has grown stronger as time has passed, and I think that our plan is approved and accepted and supported generally by most of the people of both races in our community."

Indeed, community acceptance has been more than many people expected. After a slow start, the program has resulted in an amount of desegregation which can no longer be called merely token. Among white people, even those with rather strong pro-segregation tendencies, there is an attitude of fait accompli. Personal observation of the progress of desegregation in Nashville schools has shown generally an easiness among the students involved and their parents which in many respects is rather surprising to a native southerner. Participation in related school activities —barbecues, carnivals, P-TA meetings—appears to be rather widespread on the part of Negroes. In one school, the P-TA attendance by Negroes, if not the membership, exceeds the proportion of Negro students in the school. There has never been any publicized allegation that Negro students were discriminated against in school facilities once admitted.

However, the problem of social contact which intensifies in the high school grades has yet to be faced in Nashville.

At least one formal effort has been made to evaluate Negro attitudes, specifically the reasons why Negro parents decide to send their children to desegregated or segregated schools. In 1960, Eugene Weinstein of Vanderbilt University surveyed 88 Nashville Negro families in areas where the child could attend either segregated or desegregated schools. Of that number, 50 enrolled their child in segregated schools, and 27 in desegregated situations. In 11 cases, a child initially enrolled in a desegregated school had been transferred back to an all-Negro one.

His general findings were that better-educated, more stable, lighter skinned parents chose to desegregate. There was a tendency among segregation-choosing families to regard society as more threatening and chaotic. Those favoring desegregation were found to have a significantly more pioneering attitude and a more-than-utilitarian attitude toward education generally.

There was a much more intense feeling that the race discrimination issue affected them personally among those choosing to integrate.

Few families felt that jobs would be lost by a decision to desegregate. In general, Weinstein concluded that "fear of reprisals of one kind or another are now at best a minor factor in the decision-making process."

Weinstein noted that the grade-a-year plan, because it necessarily kept older children in segregated schools, coupled with the parents' desire not to separate their children, provided an extra amount of gradualism beyond that implicit in the program itself.

Many of the same conclusions which Weinstein reached are reflected in the reasons given on transfer request cards sent to the city superintendent, including especially the most frequent one: a desire not to separate children.

White parents seldom assign reasons for transfer other than the racial one.

DISCUSSION

A panel was invited to discuss issues raised in the report. The members of the panel were: Mr. Wyatt, author of the report, Mr. Reed Sarratt of the Southern Educational Reporting Service, Miss Ruth MacDonald of the staff of the Davidson County Schools, and the Reverend Kelly Miller Smith, whose children had been involved in the desegregation from the beginning. Following their remarks, the meeting was thrown open to general questioning and was concluded with remarks by Mr. George Cate, Jr., vice mayor of the Metropolitan Government of Nashville and Davidson County.

Following a brief resume of his findings by Mr. Wyatt, Miss MacDonald discussed the procedures followed in the county school system, showing how important and helpful was the preparation and concern on the part of principals and teachers. She discussed problems relating to integration beyond the classroom level, as in PTA activities, where there have been advances, slow but nonetheless real. Perhaps of greatest concern was her report on the academic progress of Negro children. While many transfer children find adjustment difficult, Negro children are particularly affected. Many Negro children were found to be inadequately prepared for the school grades in which they were placed. Of what significance is it that the Negro children in Davidson County schools have not portrayed Negroes in their paintings of people?

In the new school experience, the Council recognized that accepting white teachers and relating to them is involved in this adaptation. Academic unreadiness confirms the inequality of their previous "separate but equal" education. It also reflects the home and community environment and presents the school administration with an educational challenge which it must meet.

The Reverend Kelly Miller Smith's discussion was particularly illuminating as it probed the kinds of decisions parents must make as they enter their children into a desegregated situation. What is especially involved is weighing of the values of possible effects the new situation might have. Mr. Smith pointed out that his children faced no negative reactions within the school itself. Whatever unpleasantness arose came from the outside in those agencies related to but not formally part of the school system, PTA, Girl Scouts, etc., etc. It is crucial that this be recognized, for these groups are indeed part of the total educational facilities and process in Nashville and cannot be ignored by citizens concerned with the question at hand.

Mr. Reed Sarratt, in answer to a question from the floor, emphasized that the next step into the junior high and eventually the senior high situation would bring with it many new problems as the changes in the patterns of activities take place. Not only is the physical growth of the children involved, but the relationships connected with student government, social activities and athletics, etc., have to be faced by the entire community.

Intimately connected with this question was that raised about the continuation of the present plan. It was observed that in junior and senior high schools, the shift from horizontal class divisions to a more flexible situation in which students from various grade levels may be in the same class suggests that the present grade-a-year program has come to the end of its usefulness. A revised plan might be undertaken in the light of the new situation. Merely to follow the present procedure without any further discussion seems uncreative and might lead to further costly litigation involving an unnecessary waste of public funds.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

While a community assessment takes no votes and commits none of those who attend or participate to a consensus, there yet was expressed in many ways a sense of urgency in the matter of community anticipation and preparation for the success of desegregation in the months immediately ahead. If the full educational experience of each student is to be assured, his full and free participation in the life of the school and in school-related activities must be assured also. This means the desegregation of teams, scout troops, clubs, outings, meals, and meetings, as well as the museums, libraries, parks and other facilities commonly used for school allied educational purposes. This means job training and job openings if his education is to be used. While we in Nashville have made progress in these terms too, we shall need devotion to the highest ideals of democratic education together with careful community planning in order to create full freedom in the coming months.

A pertinent summary of the Council's estimate is embodied in a paragraph from a memorandum submitted by the Council to the Metropolitan Human Relations Committee:

"Although our public schools have fulfilled the minimum requirements of the Federal Court Order with regard to desegregation, Nashville's experience in the last six years should provide confidence for bolder and more creative steps. As schools approach the junior high and senior high school years, extra curricular activities gain a larger place in the life of the students. The board of education, the administrative staff and the teachers must be aware of the importance of athletics, glee clubs, debating teams, and similar activities for all students. Such activities are an intrinsic part of a desegregated school system. Teachers should have the advantage of specific preparation for desegregation in the junior and senior high school levels, with the support of the educational system. . . ."

PREFACE

This report is based on a survey undertaken during the months of April and May, 1963, to determine whether racial discrimination exists in health facilities and related services or in the educational and professional opportunities in the health professions in Davidson County, Tennessee. Information was gathered by volunteer social science graduate students, trained in interviewing techniques. Interviews were conducted with the administrators of the major local hospitals, the deans of the two medical schools in the area, and responsible officers of the Nashville Academy of Medicine, the National Medical Association, the local branches of the American Dental Association, the National Dental Association, and the Tennessee Nurses Association. The manager of the local Blue Cross and the director of the County Health Department were also interviewed. The information obtained was supplemented by additional information made available to members of the State Advisory Committee.

INTRODUCTION

The people of the United States have always prided themselves on belonging to a democratic society dedicated to the task of securing the blessings of liberty for its members. We have a long tradition of respect for the individual and his rights in the American society in pursuit of this goal. This tradition is exemplified not only by the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence, but also by the many actions of Americans--both public officials and private citizens--who have sought to uphold this principle.

Liberty, however, has little meaning unless it is accompanied by equality. While it is a truism that all men are not equal in ability, democracy requires that all men must have an equal opportunity to develop their capabilities to the fullest extent and be equal before the law. As Thomas Jefferson put it so aptly in 1774, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. . . ."

The concept of human equality has deep roots in American society. Unfortunately, it has not been consistently applied in our history. Negro slaves, for example, were not considered to be included within its coverage by many free Americans through the formative decades of this nation. Even after the Civil War and the Fourteenth Amendment established that Negroes were to be included within the "equal protection of the law," the heritage of the past blocked the successful implementation of this idea. Even today Negroes are often systematically denied an equal opportunity for service, or to develop their potentialities for the common good.

Full equality for the Negro is now this country's most pressing domestic concern. Questions of morality as well as more pragmatic queries are involved. If we are truly a democracy how can we deny rights to members of minority groups that members of the majority expect as a matter of justice? In the final analysis the test of democracy lies in whether equal treatment is accorded minority groups by the majority. If significant liberties are denied members of minority groups democracy is the loser. Moreover, it is difficult to extoll our system of government throughout the world unless the practice of democracy extends to all Americans in all facets of our society.

It was in this context that the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights undertook an investigation of health facilities and services and the professional opportunities available in health professions for whites and Negroes in Davidson County. The survey, made in April and May, 1963, uncovered a number of areas in which individual Negroes as well as Negroes in general are disadvantaged in the health field. The major findings of the survey can be summarized under three headings: (1) the adequacy of health facilities and care for whites and Negroes; (2) the educational facilities and opportunities in the health and health-related areas for whites and Negroes; and (3) the professional opportunities for whites and Negroes trained in medicine, dentistry, and the nursing profession.

1. GENERAL SUMMARY OF DATA

Adequacy of Health Facilities and Care for Negroes

The Tennessee State Department of Public Health has accepted the non-discrimination requirement of the Federal Hill-Burton Hospital Survey Construction Act of 1946. While some Southern states have outlined plans under a clause which permits segregation of races in separate but equal facilities, this practice is not legal in Davidson County. Nevertheless, not all the hospitals in the county receiving Hill-Burton funds are complying with the Act.

Quantitative aspects of health care. The Davidson County area, which includes the City of Nashville, had a population of slightly over 417,000 in 1962. This figure includes approximately 337,000 whites and 80,000 non-whites. As few non-whites other than Negroes live in Davidson County, Negroes thus constitute about 19 per cent of the population of the area under study. Negroes also comprise 16 per cent of the population in the thirty counties of Middle Tennessee, the area served by the specialized hospitals included in this study. There are six major general hospitals and two specialized hospitals in the Nashville area (Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital, Vanderbilt University Hospital, Nashville General Hospital, Hubbard Hospital, St. Thomas Hospital, Baptist Hospital, Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital, and Central State Mental Hospital). The general hospitals have a total capacity of 2,556 general medical beds, of which 204 beds are for newborn infants. In addition, the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital has 225 beds for patients with tuberculosis, and Central State Hospital has 2,600 beds for treatment of patients with mental illness. How well is the Negro population cared for in these facilities and how does the distribution of bed care for whites and Negroes compare with the racial distribution of the population?

As far as can be determined, between 430 and 450 of the 2,556 general medical beds were occupied by Negroes at the time of the survey. This represents 17 per cent of the total general bed capacity and compares reasonably with the racial breakdown of the population. Further, 56 (or 25 per cent) of the 225 beds at the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital are maintained for Negroes from the Middle Tennessee district of thirty counties. The fact that all of these beds are not occupied suggests that there are sufficient beds for the hospitalization of tuberculous Negroes. Central State Hospital, which serves the same Middle Tennessee area, maintains 300 to 350 beds (12 to 14 per cent of its capacity) for Negro patients, or 3 to 5 per cent less than the Negro population of Middle Tennessee.

Although the total number of beds available in the area appears adequate, there is wide variability in the arrangements for whites and Negroes at different hospitals. Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital is fully integrated and admits patients without regard to race.

Approximately 20 per cent of its patients are Negroes. Vanderbilt University Hospital now has flexible admitting policies and admits Negroes to the pediatric, medical, and surgical wards, but not to obstetrics and gynecology or to the private bed areas.[1] Nashville General Hospital admits a limited number of Negroes to segregated facilities on its wards, but does not permit Negro occupancy of private beds. Hubbard Hospital, while stated to be non-discriminatory, is for all practical purposes a totally Negro hospital of 260 beds. Baptist and St. Thomas Hospitals, both hospitals with strong religious affiliations, do not admit colored patients under any circumstances except for an occasional patient requiring special facilities--e.g., the artificial kidney--available at St. Thomas. Both the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and Central State Hospital maintain separate segregated colored areas except in the surgical unit at the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and in the maximal security unit at Central State Hospital.

A survey of outpatient facilities leads this committee to the conclusion that the quantity of ambulatory health care available to Negroes compares favorably with the population statistics. The Davidson County Health Center, the Vanderbilt University Outpatient Department, Nashville General Hospital Outpatient Department, and Hubbard Hospital all see ambulatory patients on the basis of need without regard to race. Statistics on services rendered in one representative area, the kind and number of immunizations performed at the Davidson County Health Center, indicate that approximately 18 per cent of all immunizations during 1962 were given to Negro patients (Appendix B). The Health Center operates a full complement of appropriate clinics. Similarly, the number of outpatient visits to Vanderbilt, Hubbard, and Nashville General combined total slightly over 188,000 visits per year. As far as can be determined, over 100,000 of these visits, or approximately 55 per cent of the ambulatory visits, were made by Negroes. Because of their lower economic status, it is probable that hospital clinics are used more heavily by the Negro population, while the white population tends to visit the offices of private physicians for their ambulatory health needs.

Quality of health care. In addition to the quantity of care available, it is necessary to make some assessment of its quality. The available information suggests that while variable, in general the standards of formal medical care available to Negroes are high. This stems from Nashville's unusual position as the home of two medical schools, Vanderbilt and Meharry. Further, Vanderbilt University is responsible for the professional staffing of the Veterans Administration Hospital and the Nashville General Hospital. There is no evidence of discrimination in the quality of health services rendered to Negroes admitted to any of these facilities. Indeed, the professional staff is of high caliber and has the reputation of administering better than average care to all who become their responsibility. The care administered at Hubbard Hospital is more difficult to assess, but clearly

[1]Since writing of this report, Vanderbilt has fully integrated its private beds. It has also been reliably reported that St. Thomas Hospital will fully desegregate on August 1, 1963.

the motivation to give the best of care to Negro patients is high. It seems probable that the Negro patient in the Nashville-Davidson County area receives better than average general medical care than is the case in most urban communities of similar size. The quality of care for Negroes at the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and the Central State Hospital is not as well known, but there is little to suggest that there are differences in the management of white and colored patients at either of these institutions.

There are, however, certain differences in medical care which can normally be obtained by whites and Negroes in Davidson County. Differences stemming from the lower economic status of Negroes in the County, while important, are outside the central focus of this report. More closely related to this survey are those variations which stem directly from the restrictions placed on Negroes in many of the hospitals of the area. Even the Negro citizen able to pay for the best hospital facilities available is unable to obtain private accommodations at Vanderbilt,* Baptist, St. Thomas,* or Nashville General Hospitals. Further, if he is under the care of a Negro physician and wishes to be hospitalized at the Veterans Hospital, Vanderbilt University Hospital, or Nashville General Hospital, his physician must relinquish care to the hospital staff. Thus, the Negro patient from a higher income group desiring private accommodations and/or treatment by his own Negro physician can enter only Hubbard Hospital (which has only thirty private beds) or one of the smaller private hospitals catering to Negroes where facilities are inferior to those found in a large general hospital.

Educational Facilities and Opportunities in the Health and Health Related Areas for Negroes

Physician training. The two medical schools training young physicians in the Nashville area have a total capacity of approximately 460 students. Despite the fact that each school maintains that it has no racially discriminatory policies, each is, in effect, a segregated institution. Vanderbilt University has 196 medical students, all of whom are white. Meharry has 256 medical students, including only 7 whites. There is much to suggest that educational opportunities in the two institutions are not of equal caliber. Vanderbilt University has a full-time faculty of 197 and a part-time faculty of 250. Meharry Medical School has a full-time faculty of only 47 and a part-time faculty of approximately 60 physicians. Vanderbilt has well developed facilities for training in all of the specialty areas. Many of these are lacking at Meharry. The strength and national recognition of the faculty can in part be measured by the federal grant support from the National Institutes of Health. Vanderbilt received 86 grants totaling slightly over two million dollars yearly from the National Institutes. Meharry received 17 grants with a total income of slightly over $350,000.

There are also indirect evidences of differences in the caliber of their respective student bodies. Vanderbilt selects a student body of fifty from almost 1,500 applicants with high medical college aptitude test scores. Meharry selects its class of seventy students from approximately 400 applicants, and its entering class has significantly lower average MCAT scores. Further, opportunities for extended postgraduate education and specialty training are more highly advanced at Vanderbilt than at Meharry. The number of physicians in house staff and postgraduate training is approximately sixty at Meharry, whereas almost 250 young physicians are at various stages of training at Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt, because of its size and strength, has expanded its clinical opportunities for training through its Dean's Committee to the Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital and similarly to the Nashville General Hospital, while Meharry is limited to Hubbard Hospital alone.

In reviewing the evidence obtained in this survey, the committee believes that the presence of an all Negro medical school tends to perpetuate a rather static situation. Vanderbilt faculty have given considerable time to Meharry for consultations and classes, and Meharry faculty and medical students are accepted and encouraged to attend the many conferences, seminars, and symposia held at Vanderbilt. However, there have been few, if any, attempts on the part of Negroes to apply for medical school or postgraduate training at Vanderbilt. This seems to be due in part to the recency of Vanderbilt's open policy (adopted in 1962). It is also our impression that leading Negroes in the medical field have failed to encourage such applications. Indeed, the announcement of total desegregation at Vanderbilt led some Meharry faculty members to voice concern that the acceptance of Negro medical students by Vanderbilt would render their own situation more difficult by skimming the best students off the top of their classes, classes already less adequate than deemed desirable. It could almost be said that the existence of Meharry, formerly a boon to the Negroes of the South, now subtly blocks their progress. It serves as an excuse for inaction by both races; for whites can point out that Negro doctors are being trained, while Negroes do not find it necessary to press for admission to the white medical schools of the South. It deserves emphasis here, however, that Meharry has fulfilled and still fulfills a real function, not only in Davidson County, but in the country as a whole. As long as Negroes receive a less than equal primary, secondary, or undergraduate college education, many of them will not be able to satisfy the standards set for admission to the better medical schools. Until the promise of Brown v. Board of Education is more generally fulfilled, Meharry must be preserved to prevent a retrogression in professional opportunities for Negroes in the area of medicine.

Nurses training. The opportunities for Negroes to enter the nursing profession in the Nashville-Davidson County area are virtually non-existent. Until three years ago, Meharry Medical School ran a nursing school, but loss of accreditation and financial and recruitment difficulties led to its closure. The three nursing schools in the area (Vanderbilt University, the Nashville General Hospital, and Baptist Hospital) have no Negro students, even though Vanderbilt is now officially desegregated. Barring an influx of Negro nurses from outside the area, then, the number of Negroes with training in this field is almost certain to decline.

Professional Opportunities for Negroes Trained in Medicine, Dentistry, and the Nursing Profession

The professional opportunities for Negro physicians, dentists, and nurses in Davidson County are sharply limited, and there is evidence that discrimination exists in this area. Of the 900 physicians in the area, only about fifty are Negro. Thus, Negro physicians represent a mere 5 per cent of the physician population. It is generally considered that one doctor per thousand of the population represents reasonable physician to population ratio. In the Nashville area there is one physician for every 463 citizens, in large measure because of the heavy concentration of physicians at educational institutions. The ratio of white physicians to white population is one physician for each 390 citizens. In contrast, there is only one colored physician for every 1,602 Negroes in the Nashville-Davidson County area. It seems probable the paucity of Negro physicians relates in certain important ways to the lack of professional opportunities for the Negro doctor. Indeed, the number of Negro physicians has not changed appreciably since World War II. Further, the observation that over 70 per cent of the Negro physicians are over the age of fifty-five suggests that young physicians are not remaining in the area. Despite the fact that almost seventy young colored physicians are graduated each year, there is striking absence of change in the local Negro physician population. Negro physicians have only limited private beds available for their use. They are not found on the staffs of Baptist, St. Thomas, Vanderbilt, or Nashville General Hospitals. The colored physician cannot admit his patient directly to these hospitals. One is led to the conclusion that there is little to entice the professionally trained Negro to remain in this area.

Negro physicians have been readily accepted within the Nashville Academy of Medicine for a number of years, but there is little to suggest that they have been encouraged to actively participate in Society affairs by Negro leaders and have, in major measure, supported their own segregated medical society. As far as can be determined, the Negro physicians have made little effort to gain appointments to other hospitals; indeed, even to the Nashville General Hospital which is dependent on local tax funds for its support. It would appear that the presence of Hubbard Hospital and Meharry Medical School has rendered the situation tolerable, and little has been done to change the status quo.

A similar situation exists in dentistry. Of the two hundred dentists in the area, only about twenty-five, or 12 per cent, are Negro. Twenty of these hold Meharry appointments. Eighty per cent of the Negro dentists are over fifty-five and, again, there has been little change in this situation since the end of World War II. Again, there is only one hospital to which Negro dentists can admit patients. There is clear disagreement on their acceptance by the local branch of the American Dental Association. The secretary of the Capital City Dental Society (the local branch of the National Dental Association, a Negro society) believes that virtually all of the Negro dentists have applied for membership in the American Dental Association but have received no acknowledgment of their requests. On the other hand, the secretary of the local branch of the American Dental Association states that only two Negro dentist requests for membership have been received and that these have not been followed up by the individuals involved. As is the case in medicine, there is a discrepancy in the dentist to population ratios in white and colored groups. There is one white dentist for each 1,500 of the white population, but only one Negro dentist for every 3,200 Negroes in the area.

Negroes with training in the nursing profession have somewhat better opportunities than do Negro doctors or dentists. Negro nurses are known to be working in all the general hospitals that cooperated in this survey. At the Veterans Administration Hospital and at Vanderbilt University Hospital they are readily assimilated, and there is little evidence of discrimination in their job classifications, pay, or eating facilities. Colored nurses are also employed at Nashville General Hospital, but must eat in segregated dining facilities. The precise situation at Baptist and St. Thomas is unknown because of their refusal to cooperate in the study, but it is known that some Negro nurses are employed at St. Thomas Hospital. Nevertheless, of the 1,469 registered nurses in the area only sixty-seven (5 per cent of the nursing population) are known to be Negro and forty-four of these are employed at Hubbard. Unless Negroes are soon accepted by the schools of nursing in the area, even these rather unimpressive figures are likely to decrease.

To summarize, adequate medical care facilities seem available in Davidson County for the management of complicated problems of illness for both white and colored citizens. The situation is more negative, however, for Negroes who desire education in health related professions. While a greater number of Negro than white physicians are being trained each year in Nashville, there are differences in the caliber of education received and sharply limited opportunities for continuing education for Negroes at a postgraduate level. The most clear-cut evidence of discrimination is the absence of equal hospital and professional opportunities following graduation from medical school. Few of the graduating class of Meharry remain in the area. The Negro physician and dentist populations are aging and there has been little change in the situation since the end of World War II.

2. HOSPITAL FACILITIES AND PRACTICES

There are eight major hospitals in the area under study. These include the Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital, Vanderbilt University Hospital, Nashville General Hospital, Hubbard Hospital, Baptist Hospital, St. Thomas Hospital, Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital, and Central State (Mental) Hospital.

The Veterans Administration Hospital is federally owned and operated. Vanderbilt University, Hubbard, Baptist, and St. Thomas Hospitals are all voluntary, non-profit organizations. Nashville General Hospital is a city institution. Both the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and Central State Hospital on the outskirts of Nashville are state owned and operated hospitals which serve the Middle Tennessee district of thirty counties.

Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital

The new Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital, completed in 1963, maintains five hundred beds for individuals with service connected illnesses. In addition to the general admissions, the hospital maintains eighty beds for patients with tuberculosis, and a thirty-bed psychiatric service. During the year July 1, 1961-June 30, 1962, the Veterans Hospital admitted 6,250 patients. The number of Negro admissions is not precisely known but is estimated at 20 per cent. The patient population is completely integrated and the hospital appears to operate strictly on the basis of legal eligibility and need, irrespective of color or race. There were 336 deaths during the time period under consideration, but racial statistics on this group are not known. The hospital does not operate an outpatient department, but does maintain an admissions office for emergency admission. The percentage of Negro and white emergency patients was not available. The hospital is located in a basically white area but patients are drawn from both Davidson County and throughout the state. Patients are admitted to all rooms, services, and facilities without regard to race, and Negro and white patients occupy adjacent beds on all wards.

Staff practices. While the hospital has no explicit racial policy, only one of the twenty-five full-time physicians is colored and one is Cuban. Nineteen of the twenty-five physicians are Board certified. The one colored physician was accepted as a resident in 1960 and was subsequently offered a full-time staff appointment. It was indicated by the hospital administrator that no other Negro physicians had applied for staff appointments or privileges within the last five years. The single Negro physician has free access to all hospital facilities, including eating accommodations, and both he and the Cuban physician (neither Board certified) treat white and colored patients without restriction. Two Negro residents have been appointed for the year 1963-64.

The Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital is a Dean's Committee hospital affiliated with Vanderbilt. Intern and resident appointments and appointments to the professional staff are made by Vanderbilt with the approval of the administration of the Veterans Hospital. Vanderbilt residents and interns rotate through the program. Only one colored resident has previously worked at Thayer, and this individual has already been mentioned. Three Cuban have held appointments. It was stated that a number of foreign graduates have applied for residency training but have been rejected on the basis of their qualifications.

The Veterans Hospital has no explicit racial policy in the employment of nurses. There are 108 registered nurses on the staff, fourteen of whom are Negro. No practical nurses are employed. Non-white nurses share all living, dining, and recreational facilities. It was stated that Negro nurses have the same promotional opportunities and that in certain areas they supervise white nurses. There are 146 house aides and 73 nursing assistants working in paramedical positions. Many of these are Negro.

Thayer Veterans Hospital is tax exempt and donations to the hospital are tax exempt. It is not immune from tort liability. Special consultants to Thayer are appointed from a group recommended by the Dean's Committee of Vanderbilt University Hospital.

Vanderbilt University Hospital

Vanderbilt University Hospital lies in a predominantly white area on the Vanderbilt University campus. It has recently been expanded to 524 beds, forty-four of which are bassinets. The hospital is incorporated within the State of Tennessee as part of the University, is tax exempt, but not immune from tort liability. The hospital does attempt to maintain its responsibility for the care of indigent, but receives no reimbursement for the care of such patients from state or local authorities. The hospital has been built with both private and federal funds, and approximately two million dollars has been received under the Hill-Burton Act for hospital construction. The Hospital Board of Trust, appointed by the Chancellor of the University, serves as the responsible governing body for Vanderbilt Hospital.

During the calendar year 1962, a total of 11,878 patients were admitted to the hospital. While precise statistics regarding the racial characteristics of the inpatients were not available, the hospital director estimated that 20 to 30 per cent of these admissions were Negro (from the number of beds available for Negroes, 10 to 15 per cent may be a better estimate). During the same period there were 1,174 births and 399 deaths, with about 20 per cent of these estimated to be Negroes. Until three years ago a segregated twenty-two bed ward was maintained for the admission of all adult Negro patients. This has now been abandoned, and colored patients are admitted directly to pediatric, medical, and surgical beds. Pediatrics and the nursery are fully integrated with white and colored children being admitted at random to available beds. The medical and surgical services admit Negro and white patients to ward facilities according to need, but not to the same bedroom units. Thus, white and colored patients in these areas are not admitted to the same room, leading to a variable census of white and colored patients according to the demand.

Obstetrics-gynecology have not integrated their colored population, and these patients are housed on the medical or surgical floor. Although full integration of this remaining clinical service has been sought by many Vanderbilt faculty, the objections of certain of the staff, along with concern about maintaining the census on the obstetrical unit, have delayed the desegregation of this clinical facility. This area and the private beds remain areas in the hospital in which integration has not taken place.[2] Other facilities, including the cafeteria, bathrooms, and waiting room areas, are fully integrated.

[2]Private beds are now fully integrated.

Staff practices. Although the hospital has no explicit racial policy, there are no colored physicians on the staff of 197 full-time and 250 part-time physicians. Appointment to the staff requires a faculty appointment, and over 75 per cent of the physicians on the staff are Board certified. It was indicated by the hospital director that no Negro physicians have applied for faculty or staff appointments during the past five years. Appointments to the house staff (which totals over 150) are made via the matching plan and the competition for these positions is intense. There are no Negro residents or interns within Vanderbilt University Hospital, and only one Negro is known to have applied for intern or residency training within the last five years. The hospital employs ninety-five nurses, of which three or four are Negro. Both white and non-white nurses share dining and recreation facilities without regard to race. It was indicated that Negro nurses have the same promotional opportunities as do white nurses. While it was stated Negro nurses sometimes supervise white nurses, none of the present supervisors are known to be colored.

Nashville General Hospital

Nashville General Hospital lies in downtown Nashville closer to the colored living areas but still in a predominantly white section. It is licensed by the State and is under city incorporation. It is tax and tort liability exempt. It derives its operating costs from a yearly appropriation from the city plus an additional $200,000 per annum from Davidson County to offset the costs of hospitalization of county indigent. The hospital has been built from local monies supplemented by Hill-Burton funds and has recently received $165,000 under the Hill-Burton Act for the construction of a new wing containing thirty-two beds. Members of the Hospital Board are named by the Mayor and ratified by the City Council.

During the year July 1, 1961-June 30, 1962, there were 7,330 admissions to Nashville General Hospital, of which approximately 33 per cent were estimated to be Negroes. During this period there were 1,109 births, but the number which were colored births was not available. During this period there were 298 deaths, of which 120 were estimated to be Negro. Because of local municipal agreements with Hubbard Hospital (associated with Meharry Medical School), Nashville General Hospital is required to send Negro indigent patients who are city residents to Hubbard, although colored patients from Davidson County can be admitted. Negro patients are segregated on the wing of one ward containing thirty-eight beds for medical and surgical patients. Private rooms are available in obstetrics and gynecology for Negro patients. In both areas the facilities are declared to be equal in caliber to those used for white patients.

Staff practices. While the Nashville General Hospital denies any explicit racial policy, there are no Negroes among the three hundred physicians on the staff. The administrator indicated he did not know the reason for this and stated that only one Negro physician had applied for staff appointment and privileges during the last three years and that he had been refused an appointment because of the lack of appropriate qualifications. Under agreements established with Vanderbilt University in 1960, there are five full-time salaried appointments made through the respective services at Vanderbilt. The remaining staff are voluntary. The residents and interns at Nashville General are also in the main furnished by Vanderbilt on a rotation basis. There have been no Negroes employed in this capacity at Nashville General. The hospital has attempted to operate under the matching plan, but its poor training program prior to arrangements with Vanderbilt placed it in a situation where it failed to fill its appointments. During this time a number of other non-white, foreign graduates, including Filipinos, South Americans, and Orientals were members of the hospital house staff, but this group is decreasing as Vanderbilt increases its contribution of residents and interns.

The hospital employs an estimated 150 registered nurses, of whom five are Negro, and 150 practical nurses, of whom 15 are estimated to be Negro. In addition, it runs a nursing school containing seventy student nurses, but none of these are Negroes. Dining facilities are segregated and separate eating facilities are provided for colored nurses and other colored employees. It is claimed that these facilities compare favorably with the facilities for white employees. Three hundred paramedical personnel are employed in dietary, housekeeping, clinical services, and technical capacities. It is known that at least two of the technicians are colored and almost 150 of the remaining 300 employees are Negro.

Hubbard Hospital

Hubbard Hospital is the teaching hospital of Meharry Medical College. It contains 260 beds, of which twelve are bassinets. There are thirty beds for the admission of private patients. It is incorporated by and licensed by the State of Tennessee. It is tax exempt but not immune from tort liability. This hospital receives a subsidy from the local government under an agreement whereby Hubbard Hospital accepts responsibilities for all colored indigent who live within the city of Nashville. A total of $560,000 was received from the city for this service during the year July 1, 1961-June 30, 1962, but as reimbursement is at a rate below actual cost of patient care this agreement has placed Hubbard in a difficult position. The hospital was built by local money supplemented by federal funds, and current building utilizing funds from the Hill-Burton Act is proceeding. The Hospital Board is appointed by the College.

During the calendar year 1962 there were 5,780 admissions to the hospital. The patients were almost exclusively colored, there being only three white admissions. During this period there were 1,420 births, all Negro, and 314 deaths, again all Negro. Over 98 per cent of the outpatients are colored as well. Approximately 90 per cent of all patients are from the Davidson County area. While in theory patients are admitted without regard to race, it is rare that a white patient applies for admission. There are a total of forty-seven physicians on the active staff, of whom three are white and forty-four are colored, along with sixty-two colored physicians on the courtesy staff. Ten are Board certified. The house staff is composed of fifteen interns and twenty-eight residents. Of the residency group, one is Korean, one Turkish, and the remainder Negro. Because of its inability to attract house staff, the hospital dropped out of the national intern matching program two years ago.

The nursing staff is composed of forty-five registered nurses and sixty-three practical nurses. All of this group save one are colored. Since the discontinuation of the nursing school at Meharry there have been no student nurses. There are 111 paramedical personnel functioning in technical and housekeeping capacities, of whom 110 are Negro. Because this hospital is part of Meharry Medical School, it is necessary for a physician to be a member of the faculty in order to serve on the active staff of the hospital. All of the full-time faculty are salaried, although some supplement their incomes from private practice.

St. Thomas and Baptist Hospitals

Both St. Thomas and Baptist Hospitals are private, non-profit organizations operated by church groups. Despite repeated attempts over a three-month period and the intervention by a senior staff member at St. Thomas, appointments could not be arranged between interviewers and the hospital administrators involved in either hospital. It was definitely determined that an agreement had been reached between the two hospital administrations that although they would verbally agree to participate in the study, they would not actually do so. Finally St. Thomas indicated a willingness to participate and arranged an appointment with an interviewer, but when the latter appeared at the appointed time it was indicated that the administrator was out of town that week. The administrator of Baptist Hospital finally stated directly that he would not participate in the survey. Thus, information is of necessity less adequate in this area.

Both of these hospitals cater primarily to private patients. Baptist Hospital contains 420 beds, of which 70 are bassinets; St. Thomas has 328 beds, of which 59 are bassinets. There are no beds for Negroes in either hospital, with the exception of rare admissions of a colored patient to a special renal unit at St. Thomas where the artificial kidney is in use. Neither of these hospitals run large outpatient clinics, and no colored patients are admitted to their private rooms.* Thus, in these instances, clear-cut discrimination exists. While Negroes are employed in practical nursing capacities and as paramedical personnel, it is known that there are no Negro physicians on the staff and there is definite discrimination against Negro patients. Both hospitals are currently expanding their bed capacity. Despite its clear discriminatory practices, St. Thomas Hospital is said to be utilizing federal funds obtained under the Hill-Burton Act to finance these new bed facilities. On the other hand, Baptist Hospital has apparently been able to underwrite its new construction costs from private sources.

Thus, of the six major general hospitals in Nashville, it is the two religious institutions which are most rigidly segregated. If equal treatment for people of all races is regarded as a moral question, as it should be, as well as a legal issue, it is difficult to assess the basic operative values of these institutions. Not only are they refusing to stand in the first rank of those attempting to achieve equal treatment for members of minority groups, but they are in fact marching in the last row. Perhaps the example of Knoxville, where three religious hospitals, one Baptist, one Catholic, and one

*See footnote 3, page 14.

Presbyterian, are taking the lead in ending hospital discrimination in that city could prove instructive to these local institutions.[3]

Madison Hospital

Madison Hospital, operated by the Southern Union of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, is a 174 bed general hospital with 6,000 to 7,000 admissions per year. The hospital has accepted Negro patients for more than a decade. The following information was obtained in a telephone conversation with the assistant administrator: Negro patients are cared for on a designated floor of the hospital, but if this is inadequate, they are placed on other wards. They have no Negro physicians or nurses but have successfully utilized a Negro radiologist as relief staff. The School of Nursing, formerly a degree program, is now a hospital program, with about 100 nurses in training. An average of 25 Registered Nurses are graduated each year. Some of the nursing students are Negro. The nursing program is related to Madison College but is not operated by the college. No graduate Negro nurse has applied to the hospital for employment.

Madison Hospital has not formerly had Hill-Burton funds, but has recently been approved for $500,000 federal funds, and expects to begin construction of additional facilities this fall.

Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and Central State Hospital

Neither the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital, which serves the Middle Tennessee district of thirty counties, or Central State Hospital, which serves a similar area, were visited by interviewers. Nevertheless, certain aspects of their operation were isolated in telephone interviews with the Medical Director of the Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital and the chief psychiatrist at Central State Hospital.

Middle Tennessee Tuberculosis Hospital. This modern hospital has a bed capacity of 250, with 225 beds presently being in use. Admission rates have averaged between 475 and 520 during the last four years. There were 522 admissions in 1962. Fifty-six beds (25 per cent of bed capacity) are utilized for colored patients. There are twenty-nine beds for colored male patients and twenty-seven beds for colored female patients on separate segregated wards on one floor of the hospital. It was stated that such segregation was practiced because both white and colored patients tend to come from lower income groups where racial feelings are stronger, and that these patients occupy the hospital not for several days but for six months or longer. Thus every attempt was made to match individuals of similar attitudes, socio-economic groups, and race, in planning for their care in four and six bedroom units.

[3]Since completion of this survey it is reliably reported that the chiefs of staff and the professional staff have been told that St. Thomas Hospital will fully desegregate on August 1, 1963. Baptist Hospital apparently has no such plans.

Although tuberculosis rates are significantly higher among Negroes, it would appear that the number of beds available is adequate to supply the needs of the Negro population afflicted with tuberculosis. The district from which the hospital draws is 16 per cent Negro. The colored male floor has run at almost 90 per cent occupancy (a high rate), but empty beds have been rather continuously present on the colored female ward. It was indicated that while there was a waiting list both for white male and white female beds, there was only occasionally a waiting period for colored patients, and that this did not exceed or, indeed, rarely equalled the waiting period required for admission of white patients. While the facilities are separate, they are declared to be equal.

Central State Hospital. Central State Hospital lies on the outskirts of Nashville and contains 2,600 beds for the long-term care of mental illness. The hospital admits approximately 1,000 new patients yearly. Three hundred to 350 beds are maintained for colored patients. Negro patients are segregated on separate wards except in the maximum security areas where white and colored are housed together. The staff consists of twenty physicians who, with the exception of one Negro neurosurgeon, are all white. Both a colored psychologist and a colored social worker are full-time members of the staff. There are between twenty and twenty-five registered nurses, and Central State has difficulty filling its vacancies. Currently there are no colored nurses, but the hospital formerly employed two who did not work out well and were asked to leave. It was stated that both these nurses had personality problems which prevented them from operating effectively in the care of patients, and that the hospital would hire nurses without regard to race. There is no waiting list at Central State Hospital, and it was stated that patients are promptly admitted without discrimination on referral from appropriate authorities.

3. AMBULATORY PATIENT CARE, FACILITIES, AND PRACTICES

The outpatient facilities for the care of patients in the Nashville-Davidson County area appear to be run without discrimination. Nashville possesses the new and modern Davidson County Health Department which provides pre-natal, well baby, family health, and immunization clinics, without regard to race, creed, or color. Excellent venereal disease and tuberculosis control programs are in operation. An extensive inoculation program includes combined diptheria-pertussis-tetanus vaccine, poliomyelitis, smallpox, tetanus, and typhoid vaccination. Vaccinations and polio inoculations are compulsory of all first-grade children irrespective of race, and twenty-two well baby clinics and immunization clinics are operated throughout the county. Other types of general health work is done for school children on the basis of individual referral by teachers and doctors. Children are processed for summer camps, and the Department investigates conditions of health sanitation in individual homes if requested to do so by appropriate authorities. A mobile dental program with two well-equipped trailers, eleven part-time dentists, and one full-time director is in operation.

In addition to the above, the Davidson County Health Department provides public health nursing service for the entire county. The Health Department has helped influence enactment of ordinances to assure proper survey of water supply and toilet facilities, and had a vigorous campaign to condemn inadequate housing for low-income groups. Statistics on immunization for the year 1962 according to race indicate that 17.9 per cent of the total inoculations were given to colored people in the community. (See Appendix B.) This compares favorably with the population ratios of Negroes to whites in the area. The director of the Davidson County Health Department indicated that there were no significant differences in mortality rates of white and Negro groups in the area (if this indeed be true, it is surprising and unusual). The Negro birth rate, however, is higher, and the incidence of tuberculosis is somewhat higher in Negroes than in whites in the area.

In addition to the outpatient facilities under municipal management, large outpatient clinic programs are conducted by Vanderbilt University Hospital, the Nashville General Hospital, and Hubbard Hospital. Vanderbilt University Hospital operates forty separate outpatient clinics. These include a family health clinic; a pre-natal clinic; a well baby clinic; general, medical, surgical, obstetrical, and gynecologic clinics; and many special clinics. Admission to the outpatient clinics is without discrimination, charges are scaled on the basis of ability to pay, and the outpatients are estimated to be 35 to 40 per cent Negro. During 1962 there were 71,000 outpatient visits at Vanderbilt. The Nashville General Hospital also conducts general pediatric, medical, surgical clinics, in addition to certain specialty clinics. During 1962 there were approximately 80,000 outpatient visits, and between 30 to 50 per cent of the patients were estimated to be colored. Hubbard Hospital, the hospital operated by Meharry Medical School, similarly runs extensive outpatient clinics. During 1962, a total of 36,000 patients were seen, with over 99 per cent being Negro. There is little evidence of discrimination in outpatient health services catering to lower income groups.

4. EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR WHITES AND NEGROES

There are two medical schools in Nashville: Vanderbilt University Medical School and Meharry Medical College. While neither school is officially segregated, Vanderbilt, which has a consistent enrollment of from 190 to 200, has never had a Negro medical student. Meharry, with from 250 to 260 students, averages about five white students per year. Meharry has several white faculty members, but Vanderbilt has no Negro faculty member.

In 1962 Vanderbilt University Medical School replaced its policy of refusing to accept colored medical students with an explicit open admissions policy, but there have not yet been any Negro medical students at Vanderbilt. One hundred and ninety-six white students are now enrolled in the Medical School. Each year the school chooses its incoming class from a great number of applicants--as many as 1,200 to 1,500. Of these, only fifty are accepted each year. The number of Negro applicants in the previous five academic years is not known with certainty. However, for the incoming class of 1963 it is known that of 1,500 applicants three were Negroes. None of these last were felt to be properly qualified by the Vanderbilt Admissions Committee.

There is no explicit policy with respect to the hiring of Negro or other non-white faculty members at Vanderbilt. The school has, however, only one junior faculty member, currently at the Veterans Administration Hospital, who is a Negro. It was indicated by the Dean of the Medical School that there had been no recommendations for appointment of Negro faculty by the various department heads who are responsible for faculty recommendations. There are, however, a number of visiting and full-time faculty from other countries, including China, Japan, India, Lebanon, Australia, Germany, and England.

The other medical school in Nashville, Meharry Medical College, is a Negro institution. While Meharry has no explicit racial admissions policy, of the 256 students currently enrolled, 247 are Negroes, seven are white, one is Chinese, and one is Japanese. During the past five years there have been five or less white students in each class. While the school has both white and Negro faculty, the Dean did not give a quantitative breakdown on the racial make-up of the faculty. Of the forty-seven full-time and seventy part-time faculty members, however, the majority are Negroes.

Vanderbilt, in addition to its University Hospital, carries teaching and professional responsibilities at Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital and the Nashville General Hospital. Meharry Medical School utilizes Hubbard Hospital for its clinical teaching. In 1958, Meharry Medical School requested representation on the Dean's Committee responsible for the professional staffing and training program at the Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital. A conference was held in Washington between members of the Meharry faculty and the Veterans Administration, to explore the possibility of liaison. It is reported that the Veterans Administration indicated satisfaction with the operation of the Hospital under its present control (Vanderbilt University) and declared that any change should emerge from local action mutually agreed upon by Vanderbilt and by Meharry. Subsequent tentative exploration of such a possibility is stated to have failed because of a lack of interest by the administration at Vanderbilt in changing the existing arrangement. A subsequent request for representation on the Dean's Committee was made in a letter to Congressman Richard Fulton by a member of the Meharry faculty in March of 1963, but as of this writing no further formal action has stemmed from the administration at Meharry.

5. OPPORTUNITIES FOR NEGROES WITH PROFESSIONAL TRAINING IN HEALTH RELATED FIELDS

Physicians

There are an estimated 900 physicians in the Nashville-Davidson County area, of whom almost 300 are in intern and residency positions. The number of Negro physicians in the area is stated to be 50 by the secretary of the Nashville branch of the National Medical Association (Negro), and 60 by the secretary of the Nashville Academy of Medicine (white). Of the 900 physicians, 277 are Board certified in their specialty area. Ten of the Board certified group are Negroes. This represents one physician for each 463 citizens in the Nashville-Davidson County area, a very high doctor-to-patient ratio, but the number of Negro physicians is surprisingly small. The number of Negro physicians in the Nashville-Davidson County area has remained relatively static since the end of World War II despite a steady increase in the number of white physicians in the area. It was estimated that of the 50 Negro physicians in the area, 70 per cent are over the age of fifty-five. Thus it is clear that young physicians are not remaining in the area.

During the past five years, seventeen Negro physicians have applied for membership in the local unit of the American Medical Association (The Nashville Academy of Medicine). Of these, sixteen were accepted and fifteen (one has since died) hold full membership in the Nashville Academy of Medicine. When queried about the reason for this relatively small number of applicants, a leading Negro physician indicated that not many applied because they felt they were not "fully assimilated" into the Academy.

The Nashville Academy of Medicine does not have any explicit racial policy with respect to membership. The total membership of the Society is 493. Its policy is determined at a local level, although it is a member of state and national organizations. Exclusion from the local society has some consequences on the individual practice of medicine at certain hospitals. Membership is not required for appointment to the staffs at the Thayer Veterans Administration Hospital, Vanderbilt University Hospital, or Hubbard Hospital. A doctor must be eligible for membership for appointment to the Nashville General Hospital staff. Only Baptist and St. Thomas Hospitals require membership in the Society for staff appointment. The local society does not recommend or nominate members for the State Board of Medical Examiners, this being done by the state association, but the Nashville Academy nominates three individuals for appointment by the Mayor to the Hospital Board of the Nashville General Hospital. As far as could be determined, membership in the Society is not a prerequisite for serving in a state or local official agency.

All of the approximately fifty Negro physicians are members of the local branch of the National Medical Association. The secretary of this organization indicated that virtually no Negroes had applied for appointments at white hospitals, that he knew of only one, and that Negroes did not so apply because they did not expect to be accepted. The secretary felt there was free consultation with white physicians and that Negroes made good use of white doctors. As previously stated, both Negro and white patients are cared for within a number of hospitals within the area, but Negro physicians can hospitalize their private patients only at Hubbard. Specialized facilities for sophisticated medical management are available at Vanderbilt and certain other hospitals admitting Negroes, but Negro patients must be referred to white physicians who have staff privileges at the hospital. Interestingly, the secretary felt that the lack of hospital appointments was not a problem and stated that Negro physicians have treated their patients in other hospitals. No attempt has been made to establish specific facts to support or refute this statement, but in the light of the general practices outlined earlier in this report it must be most uncommon for Negro doctors to treat their patients in local hospitals other than Hubbard. It should also be noted here that continuing opportunities for non-white physicians to obtain further professional training appear to be limited, although most of the postgraduate seminars held at Vanderbilt and elsewhere in the region are open to Negro physicians. These opportunities do not appear to be commonly utilized by the Negro medical community.

Dentists

There are approximately 200 dentists in the Davidson County area and an estimated 25 to 28 are Negro. Of the total group there are 17 who hold specialty Board qualification, and of these four are Negroes. All four hold faculty appointments at Meharry. It is estimated that 80 per cent of the Negro dentists in the area are over fifty-five. In keeping with the situation in medicine, there has been little change in the number of Negro dentists available to the community since the end of World War II, despite the increased population and the increased number of white dentists. Of the Negro dentists, twenty hold appointments at Hubbard Hospital, and apparently applications for hospital appointment elsewhere have not been made because of the feeling that acceptance would not be forthcoming. The opportunities for Negro dentists to continue their education through postgraduate courses are clearly limited except through contacts at Meharry. Seminars sponsored by the Tennessee Dental Association are often open to colored as well as white dentists, but Davidson County Negroes refuse to attend because of their exclusion from membership in the local unit of the Dental Association.

In contrast to the availability of membership in the local professional societies available to Negro physicians, there appears to be discrimination against Negroes within the local branch of the American Dental Association. This organization is chartered by the State, but membership does not appear to be a prerequisite for serving in state or local agencies. Nevertheless, the secretary of the Capital City Dental Society (an affiliate of the National Dental Association) indicated that almost all the colored dentists in Nashville had applied for membership in the local dental association, but that none had received answers to their inquiries regarding membership. The secretary of the local branch of the American Dental Association, denied, however, that the local society had an explicit racial policy with respect to membership. Further, he acknowledged only two requests for application for memberships from Negroes during the last five years and declared that these were not followed through by the individuals involved. When queried, the secretary of the local branch of the American Dental Association felt that the consequences of exclusion from the Society were loss of social advantages and certain life insurance policy benefits, but was otherwise unwilling to comment. While all but one of the local Negro dentists are members of the Capital City Dental Society, no Negroes belong to the local branch of the American Dental Association.

Nurses

It is difficult to obtain precise statistics on racial background of the registered nurses in the Davidson County area. There are 1,469 registered nurses and somewhere between 1,000 and 1,200 practical nurses--this last figure an estimate. The total number of Negro nurses was not available, but it is known that there are at least fourteen working at Veterans Hospital, three to four at Vanderbilt, five at Nashville General, and forty-four at Hubbard Hospital, a total of sixty-seven. Similarly, there are approximately twenty-five colored practical nurses working at Vanderbilt, fifteen at Nashville General Hospital, and sixty-three at Hubbard, a total of 103. The number of other non-white nurses is small, though there are some Oriental nurses at Vanderbilt and perhaps elsewhere. It might be pointed out in passing that since the closing of the School of Nursing at Meharry there have been no opportunities for nursing training for Negroes in Nashville. The three nursing schools remaining in the community have no Negro students, even though one, Vanderbilt, established an open admissions policy a year ago.

6. SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

Negro health care in Davidson County is clearly more adequate than are opportunities for employment for Negroes in the medical profession. Non-whites make up 19 per cent of the population of the County, and, as far as can be determined, Negroes occupied almost one-fifth of the hospital beds available during the spring of 1963. Furthermore, 18 per cent of the immunizations given at the County Health Center in 1962 were given to non-whites. The quality of health care accorded to Negroes is more difficult to assess than is quantity, but there seems to be no appreciable discrimination here. While it is true that separate facilities are usually provided for non-whites in such sensitive areas as obstetrics and gynecology, the hospital administrators involved maintain that these facilities are at least equal to the separate white facilities. It should be pointed out, however, that it is only the presence of Hubbard Hospital in Nashville that makes the quantitative figures on county health care for Negroes look respectable. Were Hubbard not included in the totals, less than 10 per cent of the general medical beds in the County would be occupied by Negroes in 1962. This low figure is largely due to the failure of St. Thomas and Baptist Hospitals to accept Negro patients.[4]

The absence of Negro opportunities in the medical professions presents a bleak picture. Despite the fact that Negroes make up 19 per cent of the area population, only 5 per cent of the County's doctors, 12 per cent of the dentists, and approximately 5 per cent of the registered nurses are Negro. Moreover, with the closing of Meharry's School of Nursing, this last figure is likely to decline still further. Despite increasing employment opportunities in other areas there has been little improvement in opportunities in the medical field for Negroes in Davidson County in recent years. The numbers of health personnel are approximately the same as they were immediately after World War II. Furthermore, they may be on the verge of a decline, for 70 per cent of the Negro doctors and 80 per cent of the dentists are over fifty-five years of age.

[4]Vanderbilt has fully integrated its private beds. St. Thomas will integrate August 1, 1963.

Negro physicians have, however, been recognized to a greater extent by their white counterparts than have Negro dentists, and membership in the Nashville Academy of Medicine (the local unit of the Americal Medical Association) is open to qualified non-whites. In the last five years seventeen Negro physicians have applied for such membership, and sixteen were accepted. No similar development has occurred, however, with regard to dentists. There seems to be some disagreement on facts here, with the secretary of the local unit of the National Dental Association (Negro) declaring that most of his members (about twenty-five) have applied for membership in the local branch of the American Dental Association, and the secretary of the latter acknowledging but two requests for applications which he said were not followed through by the individuals involved. In any case, there are no Negro members of the Nashville unit of the American Dental Association.

In such a sensitive area as health care, desegregation is an issue involving complex political, social, economic, and emotional questions. As a result a number of whites and a number of Negroes are disinclined to change traditional ways of doing things. Thus the executive secretary of the local Negro medical society could point out that a number of his people are reluctant to join the local branch of the American Medical Association because "Negroes don't assimilate easily." While this statement oversimplifies the issue, it certainly illustrates an attitude widely held by people of both races, an attitude in part responsible for the cautions being exercised in the removal of racial barriers in the area of health facilities and service.

Nevertheless, "the winds of change" are blowing in the area of health care and medical practice in Davidson County. As President Eisenhower's Commission on National Goals (the Wriston Committee) phrased it in 1959: "Respect for the individual means respect for every individual. Every man and woman must have equal rights before the law. . . .[5] Recognition of this fact, coupled with a reluctance to change, has led to another attitude encountered time and time again during the conduct of this survey, an attitude of defensiveness. Two hospitals completely refused to discuss their racial practices, while the administrator of a third generously overstated the amount of progress made under his guidance. At least four of the key individuals interviewed in the survey evinced hostility toward the whole idea of the survey, declaring that the government should refrain from interfering with time-honored customs in the area of medical care.

In answer to this, it should be pointed out that over the centuries societies have found it necessary to organize themselves in order to fulfill their goals. They have found it essential to establish some kind of authority structure to bring about the basic principles agreed upon by the members of the society. If the fruits of cooperation are to be secured, conflict must be controlled. Rules must be established along with institutions to enforce them. This requires a degree of subordination of individual freedom. Those who live in our democratic society are fortunate in the fact that their government provides not only a means of applying public authority but it gives our people a voice in the determination of basic goals and how these shall be applied. Early in the history of the United States as a nation the people of America staked their lives in support of the declaration "that all men are created equal." This concept of equality has been clearly applied to all Americans regardless of color by the Fourteenth Amendment. Consequently, the American people are now fully justified in pressing the government to act as their agent in securing the abolition of rules and regulations in the health field as well as in other areas that reflect the attitudes of a bygone day, so as to achieve the promise of liberty and equality for all? Should we expect less in a democratic society?

Arizona's Papago Indians, their world destroyed by modern civilization, sit and wait—for nothing. They move beds outside to escape heat of adobe houses.

POVERTY: A SPECIAL REPORT

We are the richest nation on earth, yet one American in five is without adequate food or shelter or medicine, and nobody seems to care.

THE INVISIBLE AMERICANS

By Ben H. Bagdikian

There is a world inside the United States where the American dream is dying. It is a world where, when it rains at night, everyone gets up to move beds away from the leaks. Where there is no electricity—but refrigerators are valued to keep food safe from rats. Where regularly at the end of the month whole families live on things like berries and bread. Where children in winter sleep on floors in burlap bags and their lung X rays at age 12 look like old men's. Where students drift hungry and apathetic through school and their parents die 10 or 20 or 30 years earlier than their countrymen.

These are the poor. They are not just the psychological cripples. Nor are they located only in small, isolated pockets. They are everywhere in the country. Every city, every region has them. In a few places there is scarcely anyone else.

At least 36 million Americans, one in every five, are poor. They are the men, women and children who don't come close to living under minimal standards of food, shelter and medical care. They are not basically different from their fellow Americans. But they have had the bad luck to be born in a poor region, or to be trained for a dying or automating industry. They may have dark skins. They may be sick. They may have lost their jobs after they were 40 years old—too old to find new jobs but not old enough to die. Or, like the American Indians and the small farmers, they may merely have been born into an obsolete culture.

The poor in 1963 are largely invisible. They are concealed by modern apparel—all Americans tend to dress casually and, with modern dyes, most old clothes remain unfaded. They are also hidden by the new shape of the metropolis, where the most wretched people are unseen in the central cores of cities while their comfortable compatriots are gone to the suburbs. Finally, the poor are obscured by The National Average. Since World War II it has been taken for granted that the United States, with the world's highest standard of living, has eliminated poverty. For 80 percent of the population this is true, and this 80 percent assumes it is the same for all.

The American poor are incomparably luckier than the poor of Asia and Africa and the Middle East, who die by the hundreds on the streets. But poverty is measured according to the standards of a man's own community.

If most of America is well fed, the man who can't find three meals a day for his family is poor. If most of America has modern weatherproof housing, the man whose home is leaky and has no piped water is poor. If most of America has enough medical care to stay alive until age 70, the man who can't afford to live beyond age 55 is poor. Such a man is poor statistically. But he is also poor in a far more damaging way: He is a failure in his neighbor's eye and in his own.

Most of the poor are helpless victims of a social upheaval they could neither foresee nor control. Farms are becoming great mechanized operations, surviving through science, size and big investment. In the process, country people are being squeezed off the land—more than a million a year—and are fleeing to the cities.

The traditional urban foothold for the novice from the country is the unskilled job, and this is being eliminated by automation. Nevertheless, the city has much excitement, some jobs and a tradition that the starving shall be fed. At this moment, millions of rural Americans are merely waiting for the bus fare or the hint of a job, or for the last vestige of family loyalty to die so that they can flee the rural misery they know for the risk of urban misery unknown.

Willie Johnson is a short, stocky West Virginian. He is 55 years old, which means that society expects at least seven more years of work from him before he qualifies for a Social Security pension. Like his father, he went into the coal mines at age 13 and worked steadily. Twelve years ago he was earning more than $100 a week. Today he earns nothing. He will probably never work again.

"If a man looks hard enough," the middle-class belief goes, "he will find some work." This is hard to believe in Logan County. It is one of the 230 counties of southern Appalachia, the beautiful mountain region that runs from West Virginia to northern Alabama, where seven million Americans are gasping from economic suffocation. In all of Appalachia the three main ways to earn money—farming, lumbering and mining—need ever fewer men. In Logan County, where mining is the sole source of money, there were 14,000 men in the mines in 1954 when Willie Johnson last held a job. Now there are only 3,500.

Hoping to raise money by selling junk, a ragpicker sullenly trudges along Chicago's West Madison Street.

With 10,000 families out of work in one small county, the men who get no welfare because they are not crippled or have no dependents live in abandoned shacks or friends' woodsheds, and no one is sure how they stay alive.

Willie Johnson's family is on maximum relief in the county. Each month they get $165. Rent is low, $27 a month (four rooms, leaky roof, no running water). Electricity is $7.50. This leaves $130.50 for everything else.

With eight children at home, it is not an easy choice between shoes, books and food. Books in the public high school cost $28 a year; this can be prohibitive. When he was in the ninth grade, the oldest son, young Willie, dropped out of school so the younger ones could stay in.

"First two weeks we have it right smart," Willie Johnson says of their diet. Breakfast is eggs, salt pork and brown gravy. Lunch is a bowl of pinto beans. Supper may be two fryers for 10, potatoes, beans, milk for the children and coffee for parents.

The last two weeks bring a pinch known to millions of the poor: By then, small catastrophes have occurred—a schoolchild's shoes have literally fallen apart and one has to spend four dollars for a new pair that will disintegrate in the first rain, or eight dollars for a pair that will last. The night they had an unexpected visitor the 10 Johnsons were having berries picked from the back hill, mixed with flour. It was the 25th of the month, with a week more to go before the next welfare check.

For two Christmases there have been no presents in the Johnson household. The children have never seen a movie. An old television set is broken. The last time a doctor was in the house was 1951. Recreation? "I don't know the meaning of it," Willie Johnson said without rancor.

'Oh, Lord," an old man's voice cried out. "I'm dying, Lord. Please have mercy on me!"

He mostly sits on his sagging porch in a sagging tubed chair, looking at the melancholy hills around him. From his chair he can see, high and shadowy on a distant ridge, a strip mine that produces 40 railroad cars of coal a day. When he was young, it employed 500 men. Today it produces the same amount of coal with 20 men. Young Willie spends a lot of time sitting on the porch too.

Johnson goes to bed at sundown, in one of the four beds in which the 10 members of the family sleep.

"I pray every night. My boy, he wants to be a mechanic. This girl of mine, she's fourteen, she wants to be a teacher. They talk about this and while they're talking I'm hoping and at night I pray: They've got to get out of here."

The farmer has always been the folk image of The Perfect American—hard-working, self-reliant, prospering from his own labor and beholden to no man. Farmers and farm workers are today among the poorest people in the United States. Forty acres and a mule no longer will support a family. It takes at least 325 acres for an average American standard of living, plus good credit at the bank and heavy investment in fertilizers, weed killers and complicated machinery.

The brutal fact is that most farmers are not really needed anymore. Fifty years ago each one grew enough food and fiber for seven people; today he provides for 24. It is not surprising that in the last 10 years eight million Americans left their farms for the cities. At this moment there are over 1.5 million young men between 10 and 19 growing up on farms, but in the next 10 years there will be only 150,000 openings for farm operators. Yet most farmers still retain their compulsive desire to make things grow, and their bitter love for the land.

Columbus Cooper is 57 years old. His father owned his own farm and divided the land among his male children. Cooper started clearing his 26 acres when he was 16 years old. He built his present house with his own hands, an unpainted pine clapboard cottage. On a rainy day recently he looked out on his land in Sumter County, S.C., at the sagging tobacco shed, the drizzle glistening on the small tractor and moistening the rust on his six-year-old car. For him, too, the revolution was a perpetual puzzle.

"Things are kind of standing still. That's what's worrying me. I'd like to redeem myself, but the expenses are growing. Things could break bad for me if I can't stop this expense and pay back my indebtedness. . . . Sometimes I can't sleep nights trying to solve my problems."

It is generally agreed that a farmer in the United States, if he wants to live at an ordinary standard of living, needs to gross at least $10,000 a year cash income. Columbus Cooper, with a family of 12, grosses $1,500.

He is no rarity in American farming. There are 350,000 full-time family farms that average $438 a year in sales. Because he is a Negro he is worse off than most. More than 40 percent of all Negroes in rural areas have less than $1,000 a year income. Rural whites are better off, but not much; 50 percent earn less than $3,000; 20 percent, less than $1,000.

Cooper, a thoughtful man who dresses neatly and looks out steadily through shell-rimmed glasses, cannot quote national statistics. But he knows that four years ago he had to mortgage the farm for the first time for $2,000 at seven percent interest. Since then he has reduced it to $1,500, sometimes with bales of cotton. But each year he has less money to start the next crop and has to borrow for seed, fertilizer and fuel to cure his tobacco.

He grows most of the vegetables they eat—cabbage, collards, turnips, peas, beans—and spends $600 a year for store food: rice, flour and occasionally stew meat. If the cow is milking, the children get milk. In summer he and the boys may catch pike, bream or catfish. In winter and fall they hunt for squirrel, which Mrs. Cooper boils and then fries.

He pays $400 a year on his tractor, $85 for kerosene to cure his tobacco, $200 for fertilizer. Clothes, mostly shoes, cost about $150 a year. All his older children finished 12th grade and the rest plan to; he carries heavy insurance—at $200 a year—to try to guarantee it. But this already is $1,635, and provides nothing on his mortgage or on the $300 he still owes on his car. Nor for medical and dental bills. Or anything else.

Mrs. Cooper is a younger, round-faced, serious woman who thinks she works harder than her mother, who worked very hard. "I do a lot of mending and altering hand-me-downs, but you know older girls in school."

Their living room was neat ("the roof leaks in two or three places but not bad") with clean yellow curtains on the windows, an old but scrubbed linoleum, two sofas used for sleeping in summer (there are seven beds for 12 people), and a piano given them by an aunt in North Carolina.

"Jo Earl, she's fifteen, takes lessons. They cost sixty cents a week. It's a lot for us, but I think the girls ought to have something like that," Mr. Cooper said.

At Christmas they spend about two dollars for each child. "Birthdays there aren't presents, but we do eat something special, like chicken or sweet bread."

A doctor was last in the house four years ago. When toothaches are unbearable the children go to a dentist in town at three dollars a visit.

When Cooper wishes out loud, he wishes he could pay cash to start each crop instead of going into debt. He wishes he could get a Government loan to clear 20 more acres and thus increase his income.

"But mostly I hope my kids do better than I'm doing. They'll have to achieve something on their own, and they'll have to study for that, learn modern farming, or a trade like brickmasonry. But I hope they won't have to leave home. Oh, I hope they won't. But I want them to do better than I have."

"Those who labor in the earth," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "are the chosen people of God."

But Jefferson didn't know the migrant workers, the two or three million Americans who work on other people's farms. They move like nomads from farm to farm and from state to state. They live in the worst squalor, the most hopeless family chaos, and the most ignored poverty of the American poor.

Theirs is a strange existence. Their seasonal movements are charted on maps like those of the birds, but more is known about birds than about these human beings. They are almost outside the normal workings of American society—except that their hands pick the nation's fruit and vegetables.

They are constantly crossing state lines, but are exempt from federal minimum-wage laws for workers in interstate commerce. They are almost never eligible for welfare, since they do not live long enough in one place. They do not get unemployment compensation when they are out of work, or workmen's compensation when they are injured.

In 1960 the average migrant worker earned $1,016. Where there are families, they all work. It is hard to get anyone to admit there is still any child labor, but in 1959 a special U.S. census showed 457,000 children between the ages of 10 and 15 employed in agriculture.

If you drive north from Miami on Route 441, you will see no sign of migrants unless, somewhere along a 30-mile stretch north of Fort Lauderdale, you turn off onto dirt roads, bump into still smaller roads and run into one of the 90

Clutching an empty bottle in one hand, he searches gutter for other saleable items. Feeling the rag-picker may offend his customers, a storeowner comes out and kicks him in an attempt to drive him off.

"I hope my kids won't leave home. Oh, I hope they won't. But they got to do better than I have."

clusters of shacks in the tall grass where 35,000 migrant workers work during the winter. They hope to earn enough money to move north for picking in the summer, and then have enough at season's end to get back south again.

This year desperation ran through the camps. One Thursday it began to rain in flooding sheets, and two days later the last of the bean crop was ruined. It was a severe financial loss for the farmers, but it meant starvation for the pickers.

Mildred Mason—not her real name—is 18 years old. She had an illegitimate child when she was 15, but the baby died of dysentery. This is not unusual. She now is legally married, has two healthy children and appears to be in firm control of her life. This is unusual.

She and her husband Joe live in a one-room shack. There are no windows, only hinged boards. Fleas and flies are so thick nobody troubles to brush them off anymore. The only source of heat and cooking is an open fire outside their doorway. Water comes from a pump that serves 11 other shacks.

Mr. Mason can make $36 or $42 a week, and Mildred makes $20 or $30. But they do not make this every week. In 1959 the average days worked by all migrant workers was 143, and work gets harder to find as automatic machinery learns to plant, weed and pick. Cotton used to be a six-dollar-a-day crop six months a year. Now it is closer to 60 days. Yet migrants continue to appear, like the Masons coming mostly from sharecropping, where there is now no work whatever.

The Masons see the handwriting on the wall but do not know what to do about it. Last May they left Florida after six months' work with $25 to show for it. They arrived, two days and nights of continuous riding later, in Cedarville, N.J., with $14 left. The strawberry crop in New Jersey was 10 days late, so they—two adults and a child, with one on the way—tried to stretch the $14 until the crop was ready. After a summer of picking—with time off while she was sick—they returned to Florida with three dollars.

Mildred Mason is slender, solemn and possessed of an uncommon poise. But now she spoke in a rush: "I don't want my husband picking crops anymore and I don't want my children to. I'm tired of worrying about crops being ready, worrying if it's going to rain, worrying if there'll be a storm. I want food for my kids, a house that doesn't have rats or bugs, that has windows in it, a house where the wind won't come through the wall and the rain won't come in like there was no roof at all. I want my kids to have an education. It's awfully hard to get a job without an education. We're good pickers. But I never in my whole life had more than forty dollars cash at one time. Right now I don't have a single penny."

Her eyes filled and she looked fierce as her six-month-old child crawled to her feet and stuck a fist into his mouth.

"I don't have a single penny and no food. But I don't care. I don't want to go up that road anymore."

José Chico is a powerful, barrel-shaped American Indian who calculates that he is 61 years old. During the first 30 years of his life he lived pretty much as his forefathers did in the year A.D. 1500. Like others in the Papago tribe in southern Arizona, he dwelt in adobe houses, grazed cattle, coaxed crops out of the grudging soil, hunted deer and rabbit in the mountains. The tribes were ruled by village elders in remote family clusters in what is still some of the most lonely and inaccessible inhabited land in the United States. Their ancestors have been there for about 5,000 years, and, like most of the 500,000 American Indians, his people are repulsed by personal aggressiveness and by failure to work for family and tribe. The mastery of the quiet Indian was his instinct for catching deer, his ingenuity in trapping flash-floods to sustain desert gardens, the incredible sensitivity to the austere land and its life. But now this is all wrong. The lack of personal aggressiveness in a competitive labor market becomes apathy and laziness. The sensitivity to nature becomes quaint confusion in the city. Family and tribe are no help on the paved streets of Phoenix and Chicago. In less than a lifetime, José Chico's world has leaped ahead 500 years.

José Chico, cataracts forming over his eyes, peers over the desert range, at the giant cactus, the golden paloverde trees, the scarlet punctuation of the ocotillo, the purple mystery of mountain and mesa—the visible evidence that the tribe is rich in nature, since they own 4,000 square miles of this land. Yet starvation is endemic among them.

Like his father, he still coaxes a usable garden out of the desert, he still does some herding of cattle for others. In addition, he picks some cotton to make about $500 a year to support his wife and five children. He gets surplus federal foods. But still there is not enough cash.

Two of his sons attend a mission high school in New Mexico, their tuition and board paid by the church. But he got a letter saying they needed shoes. The $30 he had saved for food for the month of May went by return mail.

José Chico stood by the corner of the well-made adobe house and the neat ocotillo-branch corral he has proudly maintained his whole life. He was somber. What did his children plan to do to make a living after they finished high school in New Mexico?

He stared at the questioner as long as it is courteous for an Indian to look at anyone without speaking. Then he looked back at the shadows stretching out over the desert.

"I don' know," he said. "Come back home with me, I think. Maybe, I hope."

"George, you obscenity-head! You know what today is? You know, you dumb bastard? Today is Sunday, April fourteenth. Easter! And you know what that means? That means a bottla wine is gonna cost you eighty-five cents."

A half-human sound: "All I got is an obscenity seventy cents."

"Thass what I'm tellin' ya, you cheap obscenity! The only way you're gonna get a bottle today is from the bootleggers. There ain't no fifty-cent bottles today. There ain't no sales."

The animal sound came plaintively again. "All I got is seventy cents."

SCCHR (Case study by L.S. James)

Each year Columbus Cooper has to fight even harder to scratch a living from his South Carolina farm—only to slip further into debt.

"Why, you cheap bastard! You got five bucks downstairs advance rent. Go get it, you cheap bastard. You know today's Easter."

From a distant cage a voice groaned.

Nearby someone vomited.

Another voice cried out in sleep.

You walk down both long flights of stairs, past the flophouse sign that reads, CLEAN, QUIET, NO DRUNKS. Outside, a man's body was sprawled across the curb, half in and half out of the gutter, an empty wine bottle near his hand.

The Easter sun was just up, pouring yellow, horizontal and thick down West Madison Street like a searchlight. There was no sound, but moving ghostlike through the blinding light were dozens of men, shuffling, wandering, moving noiselessly in the middle of the street, along the side of buildings, men who walk all night because they have no place to sleep or who have slept in doorways and are in the sun trying to warm muscles gone stiff from sleeping on concrete. A few purposeful men already rifle the trash barrels for the treasured empty bottles, worth half a cent each toward the golden goal of 50 cents, the price of one pint of red fluid marked PORT, which acts on foodless bodies to produce a strange narcosis through which some men choose to die slowly, all for 50 cents a pint. Except that this was Easter and you would have to spend at least 85.

This was Skid Row in Chicago, one of the areas in the country's 100 largest cities where men congregate to accompany each other over the edge of civilized life and then over the edge of life itself.

But these wrecks are not typical of the poor. They are only a few hundred thousand of the more than 30 million poor. Actually, they constitute only 60 percent of Skid Row inhabitants. The rest are aging bachelors, maybe former seamen or truck drivers, who have come to Skid Row to live as cheaply as they can or because they prefer its naked drama to life in a respectable middle-class rooming house.

My flophouse "room" was a steel cage, a windowless hole with ugly mustard-colored corrugated steel walls. It was eight feet long, too narrow to stretch the arms wide in, and eight feet high, the top covered with chicken wire. Inside was a locker, a broken wooden stool and a cot with one sheet, one blanket and lice. On the whole floor of the building—where my cage was No. 270—the stench was solid, sticking in the throat for days after, a mixture of urine, vomit, dirty socks, sweaty bodies and smells unidentifiable. It was a place easy to leave for the rough excitement of Saturday night on Skid Row. For the huge bar—"FULL SHOT BEER, 25¢"—where a casual inquiry brought a cold, "You ask too goddam many questions." For the all-night movie: "It's a good joint; they let you sleep but you gotta watch out you don't wake up and maybe your shoes is gone." Or the mission where a lugubrious sermon on Sodom and Gomorrah was preached to 18 soundly sleeping men.

Back in the flophouse the sounds are much like those of men dying. The maids usually find one man dead each morning among the 38 flophouses.

"Oh, Lord," an old man's voice cried out in the night. "Oh, Lord, have mercy on my soul. Oh, Lord, I'm sick. I'm dying. Please, Oh, Lord, please have mercy on my soul."

A voice from the next cubicle barked, "Shut up, you bastard."

Other men got the shakes as they lay on their cots, the terrible shivering of a man addicted to wine and now having withdrawal symptoms cured only by a new drink. Only during their fitful sleep do fragments from the past float to the surface of men's minds, like the cry in the night, "Where's my dad? Where's my dad?" and the wild sobbing.

Edmund MacIntosh had been depending on the theory that hard-boiled eggs and opened cans of meat need no refrigeration. And he was sick.

He had also depended on the theory that if you work hard, live frugally and mind your own business you will get by without help. And now he was 74 years old and needed help.

MacIntosh, to use a descriptive but not a real name, depended on hard-boiled eggs because his Los Angeles hotel room has no refrigerator, and he cannot afford to eat out. He is trying to live on his $50-a-month Social Security check. Room rent is $38.50 a month, which provides a room with clean linen every two weeks and clean towels every day. The remainder goes for food and chewing tobacco. Every week friends on the same floor do his shopping for him: two dozen eggs, seven small cans of V-8 juice, two cans of meat, a carton of dry cereal and his tobacco. He boils the eggs at once and eats them morning and evening. He stretches a can of meat for three days or so. He has just discovered that hard-boiled eggs and canned meat need refrigeration in warm weather.

MacIntosh has a solid, dignified manner, even as he lies on his bed, propped on an elbow, his square-jawed face ashen. He looks vital, but he has dizzy spells, and so fears to walk outside. "I'm afraid I'll fall down, and the cops will think I'm a wino. That happened to a friend of mine, and when I couldn't find twenty-one dollars bail money for him he got thirty days."

His response to the present problem is one of hurt rather than anger. He was always able to earn money. He finished high school in North Carolina and two years in a military institute. He was in the Navy in World War I, married a Georgia girl, had a daughter and after the war bought a newsstand on Times Square in New York and made $2,500 a year. When the depression ended that, he worked in a Baltimore hospital, then in the late 1930's got back to newspaper distribution in Washington at $3,000 a year. He joined the Navy the day after Pearl Harbor and was on a troop transport at Midway when he got the letter saying his wife was getting a divorce.

After the war he became a watchman at a California air base for $38 a week with free room; then a railroad guard at $80 a week, until 1954, when the railroad began laying off men.

Then he came to Los Angeles—"because it's warmer here, and that helps"—and began doing a variety of odd jobs. He had a regular clientele for lawn cutting until automation reached him in its own way. "People began getting those power mowers. That was the end of me."

Willie Johnson's wife cooks a pot of beans for her unemployed husband (rear) and family.

He had known he was eligible for Social Security but let it pile up. When the power mowers took over, he collected an accumulated $1,250 and began his $50 a month. He bought a suit of clothes and prepared for the rest of his days. But it became apparent $50 a month would not care for the rest of his days. He sold his TV set when he was economizing. But this only brought $15.50. He is down to $250 of his nest egg and needs medical care for his stomach, his dizziness, his failing eyesight. And he needs something to help through his loneliness. "I got a letter a year ago. It was from the bank telling me how much I had left."

Edmund MacIntosh is one of eight million Americans who form the aged poor. He lives, or tries to, on $600 a year. There are 1.5 million lone individuals who live on less, tucked away in the cheapest rooming houses. Millions of others live in poverty as couples. These are the lonely old people known mostly to welfare workers, to postmen delivering the Social Security checks on the first of the month, and to the firemen who carry the elderly outdoors when an alarm flushes them out of the geriatric warrens.

When Edmund MacIntosh was a boy, there were fewer than four million Americans over 65. Today there are more than 16 million. In 1920 more than 30 percent of the aged were working, today only 20 percent work. Science is keeping them alive longer but it is taking away their jobs, making them obsolete.

MacIntosh did nothing wrong in planning for his old age, but his plans were not good enough. And now he needs help.

"What I need most is medical attention. I need a suit of clothes. I'd like to go to church. I'd love to go to a picture show. And if I had some good company, I guess that would be pretty good."

Into the cities they pour, refugees from a silent revolution.

We are in the midst of a great upheaval in American life. In the last four decades 27 million people have flocked to Metropolis. It is a greater migration than the one from Europe, which at its height—from 1880 to 1920—brought twenty-one million newcomers to America's cities.

In Chicago the white folk from the countryside come mostly by Trailways bus, carrying all they own—a suitcase tied with rope, an old trunk, three shopping bags, a folded baby buggy, a bag of grits—and clutching a letter from a relative, who came earlier, with an address and a warning: "Don't take the cabs, they'll cheat you."

If they are colored, they come mostly by that great iron artery in southern Negro life, the Illinois Central Railroad, getting off in awe under the largest building they ever saw, carrying their old suitcases and trunks, cardboard boxes with clothes and pans—and they, too, bring a carefully written address, an address that may no longer exist, because newcomers go to the slums, and massive redevelopment is turning numerous urban slums into vacant lots or luxury apartments.

"I got no money and no food. But I can't go down that road anymore."

If they are American Indians, they may come in rickety old cars from the Dakotas and Utah and Arizona, fleeing the hunger of the reservations, making Chicago the fourth-largest concentration of Indians in the United States.

But it is not just Chicago. It is the same in New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Washington, Atlanta, St. Louis—all the great cities. Almost all of the newcomers are poor, and most of them remain poor.

There are enormous differences in each person's response to adversity, and this has led to the assumption by some people that poverty makes one more noble. This was never true for most of the poor, nor is it now. Yet the belief persists that the poor, compared with the affluent, ought to be more honest, more resourceful, more puritanical, more disciplined, more resilient against despair, more emotionally stable and simultaneously more aggressive and more submissive. They are not. Poverty is the pressure of living at the bottom of the social sea, and this pressure finds the weakness in every personality. Poverty is dirty, hungry, cold in winter, broiling in summer, and worst of all it is lonely and self-reproaching.

The modern American immigrant comes at an unhappy time. The unskilled job, foothold for the newcomer, is being replaced by machines. From 1947 to 1961, twice as many new people entered the labor force as there were new jobs to be had. From 1957 to 1962, industrial production went up 20 percent, but there were one million fewer factory jobs. The new openings are in white-collar, professional and managerial work, and these are the jobs for which the untrained poor are totally unsuited.

Today's cities are stranger to the American rural poor than were Boston and New York to the European immigrants of the turn of the century. All Americans two generations ago were learning to live in the city, and the Europeans often were city folk of long standing. Today's rural migrants come from simple homes and shacks. Back in the small towns whole lifetimes were spent in face-to-face personal relations that stayed stable. But in the city these are replaced by impatient people who talk fast, and demand applications in triplicate. The punctuality and impersonality of city jobs seem depressing.

In school the children of newcomers are, in the fifth grade, two grades below city children of the same age, a reflection of the slower-paced education that existed where they came from.

The final irony is that today it costs more to be poor. Children must go to school: thus law as well as custom demands a higher standard of living. And the family without a car is lacking what has become a basic tool of American living: The factories and shopping centers have fled to the suburbs, as have the experienced city-dwellers. The poor find it harder to compete for jobs, and they pay more for their food than those with cars. They feel more isolated than ever.

"You mean you want to take a look at a hillbilly?"

Homer Burleigh, 33, out of Anniston, Ala.—hefty, freckle-faced and sandy-haired—stood in the doorway of his flat, dressed in T-shirt and slacks, immobile with resentment. Like 20,000 other southern whites now living in the 2½ square miles of Chicago's Uptown, he has his troubles, his pride, and an innate suspicion of the city slicker.

But he is too good-natured to stay sullen. Inside, four of his five children, ranging from two to seven years old, ran about in underpants. His wife, a wan, tired woman, was pregnant. The five-year-old chanted at the visitor, "You got on a necktie. You got on a necktie."

Once Homer Burleigh decides he likes you, he is an engaging man. His mother had died when he was three. As he tells it, he had fought with his stepmother, gone with an uncle to Detroit; and, by persistent trial and a winning honesty about his lack of experience but his desire to learn, was soon earning $100 a week. Two years later, with a 1940 Chevrolet and $3,000 in savings he went back to Anniston. "Between me and the car and a few good-looking women, that $3,000 didn't last ten months."

Like many southern white men, he shifted from the North, when plants shut down or work slackened, to the $40-a-week jobs back home in Alabama. Then he met his wife, a waitress with a child by a previous marriage. They decided to get married and try Chicago. Four days after his arrival he was earning $100 a week on a punch press.

In the next seven years there were four more children, more rent, more food, more medical bills. They learned to make his pay stretch fairly well until work began to slacken. He couldn't support his family on less than 40 hours' work, so when his plant went on short time he went out and found another job working full time. But this meant he built up no seniority, and when the new plant had to lay off men, he, being the last hired, would be the first fired.

A familiar set of walls moved in on him. Machine-shop work in the city went on shorter time. He had the almost universal desire for a car and the $60 a month on his 1954 Pontiac became harder than ever to squeeze out of his $300 take-home pay. He developed running sores under his arms that interfered with his work. The finance company attached his pay. So Homer Burleigh committed folly. He got a new Social Security number and drew his pay under another name, to balk the finance company.

A doctor gave him a letter saying he should not work. He applied for welfare aid, which would take about two weeks to be processed and during those weeks he kept on working.

When I saw Homer Burleigh, his welfare had been cut off because of fraud. He did not know what would happen about the Social Security number. He said the finance company had seized the car. Because he was out of work and without welfare aid for a month, he had fallen behind in his rent, and he was going to be evicted in four days. Already the furnishings of normal life were beginning to fall away. One room of the flat was bare except for a sewing machine in the middle of the room, one chair and a caged parakeet in the corner. The living room had two pieces of furniture, a sofa and a TV set.

"If the arm continues this way and if they don't give me assistance," he said gloomily, "I'm going to have to put the kids in a home."

Homer Burleigh is a likable man who reacted foolishly to a crisis. Whether society punishes him is yet to be seen. But there remain his wife, five children and a sixth expected, and whether they head down the road to perpetual dependence upon others will be governed by how far-sighted society is in dealing with the poor, the foolish and the unlucky.

"I'm going to be a lawyer," said Harry, aged six. "Lawyers make good money. I'm going to keep my money."

"I'm going to be a doctor," said his seven-year-old brother firmly, "and I'm going to take care of my family."

Their eight-year-old sister announced serenely, "I'm going to be a nurse in a big hospital and wear a real uniform and help people."

The sweet optimism of youth could have been heard in millions of American homes, but this home was rather special.

Though it was midafternoon, the tenement was dark. Gray plastic sheeting was tacked to the insides of the windows. Plaster was off part of the ceiling and walls, and strands of hair on laths trembled with the passing wind from outside. Double doors opened onto the kitchen, which was almost invisible. Its windows, too, were sealed with opaque plastic, presumably to preserve heat. But the darkness was thickened by a crisscross of clothes-lines that filled the room with hanging rags of clothes. In one corner of the kitchen was a table with three legs and one chair. In another was a stove bearing a pan of cold soapy water with clothes soaking, next to it a pan of cold beans and beside that a crusted frying pan bearing one single short rib congealed with fat. Through one kitchen door was a bathroom with the toilet boarded over; it had frozen and burst in the winter cold. Through another door was "the kids' room," two beds for seven children. Neither bed had a mattress; the children slept on the springs.

"Look at this book I got from school," Harry said. "Want to hear me read?"

Harry read about Dick and Jane and their dog, Spot. Dick and Jane were clean-cut, well-dressed Anglo-Saxon children who lived behind a white picket fence in a red-roofed cottage with geraniums in the window. Their mother was a smiling blonde with clear, square teeth. Their father wore a snap-brim hat, a conservative suit, and carried a briefcase. And they all lived happily in a schoolbook called Friends and Neighbors.

Little Harry might as well have been reading science fiction. His own family had never in his memory eaten a meal together—there were not enough chairs, dishes or forks. The mother's role or the oldest daughter's at mealtime was to watch as each child took a portion of the pot on the stove to make sure no one took more than his share.

But Harry was still eager to please. He had not yet learned that other people

WHO ARE THE POOR?

Average family income in 1960 was $6,800, certainly not "poor." But "average" is an abstraction. If a man with an income of $200,000 a year lives in a mansion and the only other house on the block belongs to his chauffeur, with $4,000 a year, the average income for that block is $102,000—which tells nothing about either inhabitant. Something like this has happened nationally.

Half of all American families earn less than $5,600. Almost one third earn less than $4,000; 22 percent earn less than $3,000; 13 percent earn less than $2,000; and 5 percent of our families earn less than $1,000.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics regards $1,500 in cash and benefits—free food and fuel, for example—as necessary for a lone individual to live modestly. And in 1959 the U.S. Department of Labor surveyed 20 American cities to find what is a "modest but adequate" family budget. The average was about $6,000, of which a family of four spent about $4,000 for food, shelter, taxes, medical and working expenses.

If the lowest adequate income for an individual is $500 and that for a family $2,000, there are still 20 million Americans who fail to meet those standards. As the standards rise, so do the totals. If the minimums are raised to $1,000 and $3,000, there are 36 million poor. If to $2,000 and $4,000, there are 54 million.

Assuming that 36 million qualify as poor, one can identify a number of groups composing this total, some of them overlapping. About eight million live in rural areas, mostly on farms. About eight million are aged poor. About seven million fall into that group of obsolescent citizenry, the "unskilled workers"—people who wash dishes, work in hospitals, drift in and out of similar simple labor. About 500,000 are American Indians. A few hundred thousand are derelicts on Skid Rows. Among these groups are the semipermanently unemployed: coal miners, steelworkers, meat cutters, auto workers—families of men who once worked for the most respectable wages in industry but who have now been replaced by machinery.

Most noticeable of the poor is the Negro, once concentrated in the rural South, now two thirds in the cities. Many went from field to factory during World War II and the Korean War, when labor was in demand; but being the last hired, they were the first fired when automation or recession came. Negroes still average 40 percent less than whites in wages and have double the white unemployment rate. They are 22 percent of the American poor—double their proportion of the population. But, numerically, the great majority of the poor are white.

Poverty is not particular to any region. It is a normal reservoir in all rural areas. It is a migratory stream of desperation headed for the cities. And it is now a festering concentration in every metropolis in the land.

In a poverty-stricken neighborhood of Chicago, a man and his dog stare from window.

expected him to be like Dick and his sister to be like Jane, to have parents like Dick and Jane's, to live in a house like Dick and Jane, and that as a Negro slum kid all of this was as remote to him as the canals of Mars. And unless he were uncommonly lucky, this book and the school would soon seem as remote.

The Martins—a fictitious name—are living off welfare. They came from McCrory, Ark., six years before, and Martin got a job at $84 a week in a meat-packing plant. Last year the plant moved away, and the family went on welfare. Last winter a newborn child whose crib was a supermarket basket died of pneumonia. Martin began drinking and has been more or less drunk ever since.

Mrs. Martin looks weary and bewildered, huddling in the perpetual twilight of their tenement, fearful of the outside world. She was hard to picture as a young woman entering a new city with excitement—until I asked when she had last bought a dress. She stared blankly and then for the first time her eyes lost their emptiness and she smiled. Her voice had a kind of life it had not had before, so much so the children stopped talking and listened in amazement.

Her last good dress

"It was six years ago. We was making good money at the meat plant and he took me out to a dress shop. When he saw how much I liked that dress, he said, 'Honey, you get it.' It cost thirty dollars. Oh, that was a dress. I mean it really was a dress. It was pink, and it was cut a lot lower than this one and it had sequins all over, and they shined and shined and the pink was so pretty."

The girl from McCrory, Ark., was for the first time identifiable as a woman with a range of emotions. Then the face began to sag again. She wiped her hands automatically on the side of her stained dress, and one could see that her slip was held up with pieces of knotted twine.

Outside, Sister Mary William, the young, tall, indomitable Irish nun who strode through Chicago's West Side, looked down the endless line of row houses, at the trash barrels lolling on their sides, the broken glass laid like a glistening carpet as far as the eye could see. It was the sight her own father had looked at when he first visited from St. Louis and asked his daughter in dismay, "What was it you did that was so bad they sent you here?"

She crunched the broken glass under her awkward black shoes and said, "You figure out what's going to happen to Harry Martin when he finds out he's never going to be a lawyer. And his brother's never going to be a doctor. And his sister's never going to be a nurse. The worst most of us have to resign ourselves to is that there's no Santa Claus. Wait until this hits those kids."

Poverty is like cancer. Left to itself, it will generally get worse. There is no simple cure. And elementary humanity requires that the sufferer be cared for.

Welfare payments are inescapable. Families in the city cannot create their own food and shelter without work, and in a rapidly developing industrial country it is inevitable that some men will have their work suddenly withdrawn. If the poverty that follows is not to be multiplied by the deprived children, and if industrial society is to remain civilized, such families cannot be left to starvation and exposure.

Yet simple money payments do not solve the problem. What is needed is intelligent work to help the poor to self-sufficiency. Many need to be taught the subtle skills of city living. The unemployed have to be kept in touch with jobs and new skills, for the poor live in isolation from the world of success.

The best work among the poor is done by those who live among them. The poor are submissive, but they are also suspicious. It is "us" and "them," and the social worker who is one of "them" seldom gets anywhere.

It is impossible to cross the United States in pursuit of poverty without being impressed by its paradox: the continuing vigor of the land and the strong pulse of humanity among its people. And yet poverty continues to be the fate of one American in five. This does not mean that America is callous about its poor. It means that most comfortable Americans have come to believe that the poor do not exist at all.

This belief is dangerous. It is easier than ever to avoid seeing the poor, but it is also more perilous. Each year the poor become more densely packed into the centers of our cities, ever more isolated from the hopes and satisfactions of normal American life. While this is happening, the demands increase for education and skill in order to earn a living. Thus, the poor get packed tighter together while their hope of rising becomes dimmer. There are persistent rumors that Communists are running food and propaganda into the starving populations of Kentucky and West Virginia. It would be ironic if they should undermine a proud people's faith in the future, and in the midst of a country that has a strong tradition for helping the unfortunate.

Time is running out on the fuse of poverty. To look into the faces of the poor in America is heartrending but the situation is not yet hopeless.

There is not yet the frozen, bitter cynicism of the Old World poor. Their children are not yet taught to hate those who have money. Their parents, most of them, still feel a sense of obligation to work for something better. The look on José Chico's face was one of obstinate hope, on Homer Burleigh's of belligerent pride, on Columbus Cooper's of quiet courage. They still expect—without much proof—that it is abnormal for them to be poor. When that expectation goes, this country will have changed.

"Poverty in the midst of plenty," the late President Kennedy said shortly before he was killed, "is a paradox that must not go unchallenged, because there are men, women and children who need intelligent help.

"But comfortable Americans have another reason for challenging poverty, for to turn their backs on those in need would tarnish the noblest element in the American character." THE END

Houston, a Backwater of the Revolt

Houston

Saul Friedman

In spite of demagogic efforts to join Texas to the conservative confederacy of the American Southwest, it remains inextricably an ideological if not entirely a geographical part of the South. Although chamber of commerce billings have Houston "the gateway to the great Southwest," it is in fact the largest city in the South.

Within the vague boundaries of metropolitan Houston there are about 290,000 Negro citizens who comprise one of the largest Negro communities in the South. According to the Census Bureau, Negro purchasing power here is more than $515,000,000 a year, making the Houston Negro community potentially the most powerful economically in the South.

Yet for all their numbers, for all the dollars they spend, for all the voting power they wield, the Negroes of Houston are among the most politically docile and backward in the South, if not the nation.

In Houston "The Kingfish," not Martin Luther King, is the ideological leader of the Negro community. In Houston the Negro community continues to sup from the back door on rights that are thrown like bones from the table of the white power structure. In Houston as virtually nowhere else in the land, the white community is completely unaware, completely indifferent to its Negro neighbors. In Houston there has not been a single, effective demonstration by Negroes in more than two years.

Dr. John Lash, a Negro who is a humanities professor at Texas Southern University, voices his frustration:

"The tragedy of Houston is that the white community is indifferent. If the Negro revolt has done nothing in other places in this country, at least it has wiped away the smug look of indifference. Everywhere else the whites are getting mad, scared, hostile, or over-friendly. In Houston the whites are simply indifferent; and that is the fault of the Negroes."

A white leader of the bi-racial Houston Council on Human Relations is equally frustrated: "One of our biggest problems is trying to instill a measure of militancy among Houston Negroes. If our council is to be effective in getting the white community to negotiate and make concessions, we have to be supported by Negro strength. As it is, the white community is afraid of what demonstrations might do to business and the Houston image. So they give just what they seem to need to give.

"In effect the Negroes of Birmingham, Oxford, Jackson, Plaquemine, Little Rock, New York, and Philadelphia have fought for the gains the Houston Negroes have gotten. Houston's Negroes haven't really deserved the advances that have been made."

Deserving them or not, Houston Negroes have gotten concessions from the whites, or more accurately the whites have given the Negroes concessions they weren't really forced to give. Most restaurants, downtown theaters, hotels, the city and county public recreation facilities, and the public schools have ostensibly been integrated.

They really have, for Negroes who have the price to go to the theaters, hotels, and restaurants; or for Negroes who want to journey out of their ghettoed wards to go to the parks and playgrounds, or for Negroes who haven't missed equality in the schools because they're too old.

Nearly 61% of the Negroes of Houston earn less than $4000 a year; nearly 25% earn less than $2000. Although the total income of Negroes in Houston is as high as or higher than the income of other Negro communities in the South, the average income is lower than Birmingham.

Houston Negroes, without a single exception, are confined to the traditional wards. There has been absolutely no attempt to begin to integrate housing. As a matter of fact, the city has now rejected any more funds to build needed federally-aided housing projects because they must now be integrated.

Although there is more construction going on in Houston than in most places in the South, there is not a single Negro engineer, draftsman, union bricklayer, union electrician, plumber, or crane operator. Without exception Negroes are laborers on construction projects. Even the federal projects, like the Manned Spacecraft Center being built for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, employ segregated unions.

This year the Houston newspapers heralded the fourth year of integration in the public schools. Under court order Houston is supposedly desegregating at the rate of a grade a year beginning with the first grade. There are about 25,000 Negro children attending the first four grades; only 250 are in previously all-white schools. There has been a consistent, continuous process of harrassment of Negro parents to convince them to keep their children in Negro schools. Principals of Negro schools have been reminded by school officials that their jobs would be jeopardized if they allowed too many Negro children to leave their schools for the all-white schools.

The only sufficiently staffed and equipped vocational school in the system remains all-white; and the vocational schools in the Negro areas continue to emphasize courses for those jobs which have been traditionally filled by Negroes.

Although law suits have been threatened, there has not been a single display of Negro anger at any of these defamations of the spirit of the 1954 Supreme Court decision.

Recently a Negro father humbly requested that his five-year old daughter be permitted to enroll in the kindergarten of a white school a block from her home. The Negro school was a mile-and-a-half away, said the father. He and his wife had to work and couldn't pick up the child, he said. He could not have his little girl walk more than a mile home, he said.

School Supt. John McFarland refused to soil the lily-white kindergartens even with a tiny Negro girl. "I walked more than a mile to and from school when I was a little boy," drawled McFarland, "it didn't do me any harm."

McFarland was able to add such insult to the injury of the Negro parents and get away with it. At the subsequent school board meeting not one Houston Negro, save the father, appeared to protest the cynical casuistry of the school superintendent.

Nor has there been any strong attempt to desegregate a bit faster than a grade a year. Nor has there been any movement to integrate the vocational high school, although the Negro community knows the crying, desperate need to train Negroes for jobs.

IT IS ALL VERY CURIOUS that the Negroes have done nothing effective to gain more than they have. Some leaders protest that the churches are segregated, that jobs are segregated, that even the jails and cemeteries are segregated, and that all the United Fund agencies are segregated. But that's as far as it goes. Just a protest, carried perhaps in one of the newspapers. Then nothing.

It is curious because the inaction of the Negroes is completely contrary to all the processes of political revolt. The mystique of revolt is difficult to decipher, but this much is well enough known. When the oppression is at its greatest there is little movement from among the oppressed, for there is little room and opportunity to move. But when gains have been won, there is room to move, and with opportunity and leadership the revolution then becomes irresistible. Moreover, after making gains, the oppressed can see more clearly what they were, how strong they are, and what they are missing. And so they inevitably press on.

It is happening everywhere in the world. And it is happening in virtually every urban area in the nation, and in many rural areas. Yet it is not happening in Houston, and there is only one explanation. Houston's effective Negro leaders are content to maintain the status quo, content to play the game of the white power structure, and undermine any militant leader who may rise in ranks of the Negroes.

Let us get down to cases.

The effective leadership of Houston's Negroes includes Julius Carter, a businessman and owner-publisher-editor of the Forward Times, largest Negro newspaper in the state; A. E. Warner, president of the Houston Negro Chamber of Commerce; George Washington, an attorney and a leader of the United Political Organization of Texas (U.P.O.); Rev. L. H. Simpson, minister of the largest Negro church and president of the Baptist Ministerial Alliance; Dr. A. W. Beal, a physician and president of the 20th Century Organization, a group of Negro business and professional men and women; Theodore Hogrobrooks, a businessman and a board member of U.P.O.

These are the members of the Negro power structure, and as effectively as the white power structure controls the entire community, they control the Negroes. They may be members of the NAACP, they may have put money into bail bonds for some youthful demonstrators in 1960 and 1961, they even contribute to Martin Luther King when he comes to Houston on a fund-raising drive. But they hold the militants in check.

They would like to believe they are cagily trying a new tactic: Be financially independent from the white, build your own economic resources, create your own political machine, put yourself in no one's hip pocket. In short, play the white man's game.

But Dr. Lash remarks: "The white man has taught you everything you know. He hasn't taught you everything he knows."

Sociologically it could be said that the members of the Negro power structure have coveted their hold in the Negro community because they have been so summarily and systematically excluded from any of the policy-making functions of the white community or the community as a whole. The Negroes are thus driven to hold onto what power they have, for all men—black and white—seek some bit of power.

Rev. Simpson will not permit the young, more fervent ministers to take the leadership of the community's Negro Baptists away from him. They must check with Rev. Simpson before using the name "Baptist" or before using their churches for any semi-political purpose. Rev. Simpson has a large, large following and can use that following to good stead when he needs something from the white community.

Dr. Beal, a young man who wants to lead a campaign to integrate the hospitals, thinks it best that the Negroes be kept from boorish displays such as demonstrations. He has sought to negotiate, for example, with the officials of Houston's Memorial Baptist Church. They have had some friendly discussion, but the big sign on the downtown hospital, two months after negotiations, still says "Colored Annex." And the officials of the hospital have refused to budge.

They like to think Houston's Negroes could demonstrate if they had to. Dr. Beal vaguely promised the hospital officials such a demonstration might come about. But Houston Negroes are through demonstrating under their present leadership.

Although Houston is the South's largest city, when twin "Freedom Now" marches were held last August in Washington and New York, fewer than 50 Houston Negroes took part.

Rev. A. A. McCardell, president of the Houston NAACP, had predicted that two chartered buses would go from Houston to Washington. Less than 20 persons rattled around in the one bus that was sent.

"Houston Negroes are going to Austin instead," was the explanation. But only about 20 Houston Negroes went to Austin that day.

Returning from Washington, McCardell called for a mass march in Houston for Sept. 29. It was postponed so that it would not come before (and thus put pressure on) Houston city elections Nov. 9. The march has been rescheduled for Nov. 24th—Thanksgiving—and Rev. McCardell has predicted that 30,000 Negroes will take part.

Several weeks ago a group went into a restaurant to induce the owner to stop holding out against integration. In the group of six were two whites and two Africans. A far cry from the first student movement in 1960.

Tired of waiting for the Negro power structure to give them the go-ahead, a group of Texas Southern University students caught the spirit of the sit-ins that year. And led by young, and immature, Eldreway Stearns, a sometime student at TSU, they struck out with sit-ins of their own. They were just a few students, with no plan and no financial backing. But they were successful. They closed down some lunchcounters, they got themselves in jail, and they forced the affluent Negroes to follow them. Hogrobrooks' two teen-aged children were among those arrested, and he backed up the youngsters with bail money and attorneys.

Although they were just a few, the students of the Progressive Youth Assn. were exceedingly successful. The white community took notice, and the demands were met. Eventually the downtown lunch counters were integrated, and at PYA insistence Negroes were hired for some jobs previously reserved for whites only. The movement and the organization grew and threatened to eclipse the older Negro leadership.

(It should be parenthetically inserted here that the liberal Democratic white leadership gave little help, little encouragement to these youngsters as they went to jail time after time. At one point when Negroes and white students from Rice University were in court on charges, a prominent liberal Democrat attorney, who now holds high office, defended the whites but not the Negroes. And he told his clients it would be better for them not to be tried together with the blacks.)

Stearns was not as steady a leader as the Negro students might have hoped for. But then what leader worth his salt doesn't have some faults? He was vulnerable because of them, and one day he found the bail money and financial backing had been withdrawn, and he was deposed as leader. The PYA died, and so did Negro militancy in Houston.

Stearns fought again for leadership, but he was offered a job as a public relations man for the Houston Colts and he took it.

Rev. Julius Scott, who was leader of Methodist students at TSU, seemed a likely militant leader for the Negro community. He had aided the youngsters of the PYA. He had been working to integrate the Methodist student groups at TSU and other student groups on other campuses. He needed $2000 to continue his work this year, but Methodist Bishop Paul Martin couldn't find the money, and Rev. Scott couldn't raise it from among the Negroes of Houston. Rev. Scott took a fellowship at a northern school.

ATTORNEY WASHINGTON once was a lawyer for the embattled students of the PYA. Now from his law office —where he displays chamber of commerce magazines and U.S. News & World Report for prospective clients—he works for the U.P.O. and gains favor from Gov. Connally. He and Hogrobrooks are able to impress Negroes with their power to name gubernatorial appointees like Hamah King.

Washington's chief client is a group trying to open a string of finance company offices throughout the state. Washington

An Exception

Prairie View A&M College is near Houston, and just five miles from Hempstead. Lately students led by William Batts III and Edward Garner, the student president, have formed SELF, Students for Equality, Liberty, and Freedom, and have instituted an economic boycott of Hempstead in association with demands for integrated facilities and more jobs for Negroes there. The students (all of whom are Negroes) are backing the movement, 3,000 of them applauding 46 student leaders who have resigned to protest the administration's alleged hostiility to SELF. In Hempstead, the boycott is hurting some merchants. Student leaders say they will demonstrate there soon. These events are especially interesting when seen against the general patterns in the Houston area delineated in Saul Friedman's article this issue.

has been employed to get the charter and cut the state red tape.

He is angry at liberal Democrats, he says, without mentioning he supported Nixon in 1960.

"What have they done for us? We have worked our guts out for liberals and they give us nothing even if they win. What has trade union labor done for us in 20 years?" he says.

On June 19 last the more militant Negroes of Houston scheduled a protest march to City Hall on the centennial of the Emancipation Proclamation in Texas. When they heard of the demonstration, Washington and Hogrobrooks jumped in to lead the preparations. Only a handful of Negroes appeared, and Washington made an impassioned speech to endear himself to the militant spirit of those few fighters who showed up. But the demonstration impressed no one.

Probably the best indication of the thinking of the Negro power structure comes from Julius Carter, who founded the Forward Times three years ago and built it to a newspaper with a circulation of more than 30,000.

"Martin Luther King's tactics would not do here," he says. "I'm against demonstration for demonstration's sake. There's just too much demonstratin' going on. Our job should be to build the Negro economic power, to build the Negro market. Then the whites will respect us."

When questioned, Carter didn't know the name of Dr. King's organization. Nor did he know what the letters C.O.R.E. stand for, or what "Snick" is. When asked which Negro action organization he felt closest to he replied quickly: "The Riverside National Bank." The Riverside National Bank is the first Negro-owned bank in the state, and Carter is one of the founders.

PERHAPS THE WHITES, the liberals, presume too much when they voice frustration at the apathetic, conservative, status quo minded Negro leadership. Is Carter any different from a white businessman when he shows off the plaques on his wall from the segregated Boy Scouts, the segregated Girl Scouts, and the segregated United Fund? Hasn't he achieved true equality when he can value all the things the status-minded middle class liberal values? Why should he be expected to fight differently from the way the liberal fights?

We accuse the Negroes of not struggling, when we are really asking them to struggle for us. Make no mistake about it, when Negroes fight for their immediate causes, they fight the only simplified cause left for American liberalism—the race problem. Each time some of the 20,000,000 American Negroes demonstrate they fight for all the liberal causes—peace, employment, social welfare, economic justice, political action. So it is inevitable that Negro apathy should frustrate the white liberal.

And conversely there are reasons why the Negroes should look with disdain upon liberal exhortations to fight. Negroes have been long used by liberals who needed them to fight their battles. Negroes have been cynically included on slates. The traditional liberal demands have somehow been separate from the traditional Negro demands. Now that traditional liberal demands have become submerged and shaded by the complexities and subtleties of modern life and the Negro question is the last cut-and-dried cause, liberals have latched onto it. Many Negroes are jealous of their cause and do not want it adopted as someone else's.

Middle-class Negroes who exercise the conservative control over the Houston Negro community have been particularly embittered in this decade of the polarization of the races. They have learned from the whites how to achieve the power, the money, and the status they have. They have learned from the whites how to protect vested interests. They have learned from the whites of America—liberal and conservative—how important it is to maintain the status quo, or if it must change, how to change it and at the same time control the change. They have aspired to be like the class which does the most to oppress them. They have sought the values which helped relegate them to second class citizenship. In short, they harbor hatred for what they want to become.

No wonder then that the black bourgeoisie of Houston should be conservative and at the same time torn. It cannot be very long before that tear widens and the Negroes of Houston join in the revolt that has so far passed them by. □

IN TEXAS

BEER IS A NATURAL

From nature's light grain comes sparkling, light beer . . . Texas' traditional beverage of moderation — it's light, sparkling, delicious.

And naturally, the brewing industry in Texas considers it noteworthy that it contributes more than twenty million dollars to the state in excise taxes each year plus additional millions in licenses and permit fees. These millions of dollars help support our public schools, farm roads, old age pensions, teacher retirement funds and help needy children and blind citizens.

Arkansas Council on Human Relations

Quarterly Narrative Report
October-December, 1963

I. Significant Events

A. In Communities and State

1. The Fayetteville Council on Community Relations presented to the local school officials its recommendations for eliminating Lincoln School (elementary) by September, 1964, with supporting facts and interpretations.

The Fayetteville Junior Chamber of Commerce on December 16 adopted a resolution calling for the elimination of this "only remaining segregated school."

2. The "annual farm family of the year forum and luncheon" (Negro families) was held at A.M.& N. College, Pine Bluff, December 5. "Sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Service, Arkansas Press Association, Arkansas Power and Light Company, and the Agricultural Agencies," this event was held simultaneously with a similar event for the white farm family of the year in Little Rock.

3. In Little Rock at Hotel Marion, November 11, the annual Chamber of Commerce luncheon to honor senior members of local high school national honor societies included Horace Mann School's members without a trace of discrimination. Last year the Chamber refused to include the Negroes.

4. On November 16, officials at Helena, separated from Mississippi only by the bridged MIssissippi River, arrested 31 Negro sit-in demonstrators. All were fined and given jail sentences and a lecture by Municipal Judge Heslip.

On December 8 two field secretaries of SNCC were arrested there on charges of "planning to create a disturbance."

The Arkansas Gazette editorially disapproved this action saying "the Justice Department (U.S.) should give the Helena arrests immediate attention."

5. The Fine Arts Club (white) had for its program, December 3, a concert by Horace Mann High School Choir at the auditorium of the Arkansas Arts Center.

6. In November at the auditorium of the Arkansas Arts Center Mrs. Hazel Hynson had a recital of her piano students (Negro) in which she used 16 pianos!

B. In the Schools

1. On October 9 Dr. Roosevelt D. Crockett was formally inaugurated as the President of Philander Smith College with many churchmen and educators (white and colored) participating. Dr. Harold Case, President of Boston University delivered the inaugural address.

2. Texarkana school officials announced it had received and rejected requests from nine Negro students for admission to white schools. At the same time they said they would plan to desegregate in September, 1964.

3. On November 23, after Governor Faubus had on November 12 voiced opposition to desegregation of athletics at the University, the University Board of Trustees at Fayetteville declared, "The board feels that there should be no change in policy." Nine of the ten trustees are Faubus appointees.

4. On November 22 the Little Rock School Board rejected all the demands of the Council on Community Affairs made last August 29 (see last quarter's report). Four members signed the answer, one abstained. Mr. Lamb set forth his disagreement in a 700-word statement.

5. Central High School at Little Rock in pre-season tournament at North Little Rock gym for the first time usedKenneth Robinson, Negro Junior, on its varsity basket ball team. Since then Robinson has played against all big ten teams with their approval. Robinson makes the difference in Central team!

6. President Marshall Steele of Hendrix College, Methodist, in his public relations letter, disclosed that the college has been studying carefully all aspects of desegregation looking to probable action by the Board this Spring opening the College to Negro students. Every other private college in the state has had at least one Negro enrolled. The Profile, Hendrix student paper, strongly approved "integration" in spirit as well as letter.

C. In Organizations

1. The women of Temple B'Nai Israel were hostesses to the "Panel of Americans" on October 2 for lunch. Guests included a wide representation of religious and racial groups.

2. The interfaith Conference on Religion and Human Relations on November 19 completed its three projected sessions addressed to racial justice in church and community. More than 200 churchmen from many groups participated in each session.

A project of one committee of the Conference published a "Pastoral Letter" on Race and Conscience. Eight thousand copies were distributed to churches many of which read the letter to their congregations on November 24.

3. In November the monthly interracial fellowship luncheon of ministers was resumed. The Reverend Jac Ruffin, Second Presbyterian Church, is moderator for the group.

4. On November 3, two students of Philander Smith College, at the invitation of a member of the Church, appeared at Winfield Methodist Church for worship. They were turned away unceremoniously.

5. The above happened at a time in which a number of Little Rock churches have reversed former policies of turning Negro worshippers away. To the knowledge of ACHR four Methodist churches have reversed their policies.

6. On November 13 the Arkansas Council of Churches inaugurated the Reverend Sam Allen as full-time Secretary with Catholic and Jewish clergy participating in the ceremony. In published statements Mr. Allen has indentified himself with liberal social forces.

7. On November 2 the Women's Emergency Committee of Little Rock voted itself out of existence. It was organized September, 1958, to keep public schools open.

8. The Reverend James Rice, President of Hot Springs' NAACP declared the organization had appealed to federal authorities to desegregate hot springs baths in private hotels. In December Mr. Rice's church was burned. He charged arson. Officers and FBI agents reported no evidence to support his charge.

D. In Politics

1. President Kennedy came to Arkansas on October 3 to dedicate Greer's Ferry Dam and to speak at the Arkansas Livestock Exposition. In introducing the President, Governor Faubus chided him because "we observe a great deal of time and effort is being spent in sponsoring unworkable proposals for solution of certain social and political problems - proposals which would go so far as to deprive a citizen of the right of trial by jury, interference with the right of an individual to operate and control his own private business and even his own home, --" The President ignored the attack.

2. Governor Faubus has said he would issue a "factual" answer to the Education Report of the Arkansas Advisory to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, that his facts would be available to the public, "unlike the report of the Committee." The Governor's promise on December 8 that the Arkansas Department of Education would answer that Report has not been fulfilled to date.

3. The news on November 12 that University of Texas would desegregate football was answered immediately by the Governor with a statement that he would oppose this move at Arkansas University. On November 23 the University Board concurred (see above).

II. ACHR Activities Related to Events

A. In Communities

1. On October 30 the Director met with the leaders of the Fort Smith Council on Human Relations (the name adopted after this meeting). This group is having monthly meetings with fifty or more in attendance, is issuing a good news letter to many others, is exerting "talking" pressure on city leaders for change.

2. The sit-ins, arrests, and tensions at Helena have called constructive influences into play. Father Walter Clancy of ACHR Board, a native of that city, met with the church leaders at their invitation. These have received certain suggestive materials, including editorials in state papers. They have asked advice from a Little Rock business leader.

3. More than a hundred members and citizens heard Dr. James Silver of the University of Mississippi on November 30 in the auditorium of the Arkansas Education Association Building. He was brought by ACHR.

4. Mrs. Arnold, ACHR staff, for the Advisory Committee to the Civil Rights Commission, carried out her inquiries in eight selected cities in October (see report attached).

B. In the Schools

1. The Associate Director appeared before the Little Rock School Board in its October meeting urging that body to reply to the petition of the Council on Community Affairs (see above).

2. The directors appeared before the Wesley Foundation and the Newman Club at Little Rock University.

3. Both directors were on the program of the Arkansas Teachers Association in November.

4. In the name of the Charles C. Walker Memorial Fund forty-one students in desegregated schools in Little Rock have received memberships in ACHR.

5. The Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights released its study of Arkansas schools, "Separate and Still Unequal", on October 6, with excellent news coverage in Little Rock and Pine Bluff as well as forthright supporting editorials (see politics above). Mrs. Arnold, ACHR staff, member of the Committee, with a sub-committee gathered the data.

C. In Organizations

1. The Director was invited to participate in a workshop of the Presbyterian Church, USA, in Tulsa, Oklahoma, on October 18, aimed at implementing the action of the Church's assembly for ending racial discrimination.

2. On October 20 Mt. Zion Baptist Church (Little Rock) staged a pageant, "The Negro in Story and Song." The Associate Director wrote the script and served as narrator. Essentially it relates the steps in the human rights movement among Negro Americans.

3. On November 3 the Director participated in the "Appreciation Service" in Allen Temple AME Church, Pine Bluff, honoring Reverend A.M. Roberts, Jr., a member of ACHR Board. The NAACP and the Pine Bluff Movement also took part. A number of local white leaders joined in the service. Mr. Roberts is a member of the executive committee of the Pine Bluff Movement. His church has been the center for the Sunday evening rallies for this group.

4. On November 15, Mr. Rogers, social worker at Ft. Roots Veterans Hospital called to get data from ACHR on the most pressing needs for change toward racial justice. He was elected by the local social workers to represent them in Washington at a Conference on the relation of social workers to the crisis in civil rights.

5. On November 23-24 the Associate Director led in a workshop for students on voter registration at Houston, Texas, sponosred by the Christian Student Association.

D. Miscellaneous

1. In November the Personnel Manager of Time Corporation invited the Associate Director and the Secretary of the Urban League to breakfast where he told them of that company's plan to employ Negro women on more than token basis, 20 to 25 now. This after he had belligerently resisted in an earlier conference the proposal that he employ Negro women here.

2. A number of incidents at restaurants in Little Rock and Pine Bluff has been reported to ACHR. These stem from the fact that these cities have been opening up. This means more uncertainty on the part of Negro patrons as to where they can and cannot eat. It also gives point to a law against discrimination in "public" accomodations.

S.C.C.H.R. REVIEW DECEMBER, 1963

A montly news review issued by the Information Committee of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, 1330 Laurel Street, Columbia, S. C.

CHARLOTTE JOURNALIST, SRC REPRESENTATIVE, AT ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Some 200 members of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations gathered in Columbia, Nov. 18-19 for a two-day annual conference that included dinner at a downtown motel restaurant, talks by two well-known figures in human relations and a day of business meetings at Benedict College. Speaking at the first session, Nov. 18, were L. M. (Pete) Wright Jr., city editor of the Charlotte Observer, and Paul Anthony, director of field services of the Southern Regional Council.

Wright, speaking on the background of desegregation in Charlotte, described events leading to the dropping of racial barriers in motels, hotels, theatres, restaurants and downtown businesses during this summer. The city is still a long way from solving its problems, he said, "but a step has been taken. The committee (the bi-racial committee which began meetings in 1960) established the roots of understanding. The people 'over here' have to understand what the prople 'over there' want--who is after what, and why. There may be trouble ahead for Charlotte, but if it comes or when it comes, you will find some people in both the white and Negro communities are on speaking terms." Wright said there must be frank and open discussion. He credited the success of Charlotte's steps toward peaceful desegregation to the people's awareness that something must be done to avoid trouble and to leadership from the state level.

Paul Anthony, speaking on the "New Revolution in the South and the Nation," called Birmingham the "trigger for the explosion." He said there were two Souths: the closed society, typified by Mississippi which refuses to play by the ground rules of democratic society by denying dissent of any form, and the 'other South' which has some disposition to change. "It is this South," Anthony said, "which will progress." He cautioned that one of the larger problems this South has to face is resistance from the other South and more militant demands to 'go faster.' This could lead to a lessening of good relations among the races, he said.

STATE PARKS, EDUCATION, VOTER REGISTRATION TALKED AT BUSINESS MEETINGS

During its annual business meeting Nov. 19 at Benedict College, the Council predicted that state parks will re-ope , probably on a limited basis. The parks were closed following a Federal court order dropping racial barriers under a state segregation law. The prediction was based on a 21-city survey, news reports and other sources. Swimming and some recreational activities probably will be curtailed.

A call for intensified programs to promote vocational and technical training came from one committee. A proposal urged that all underemployed and unemployed persons register at their nearest employment service for both training and work. Also urged was the seeking of new job openings in government at all levels, in voluntary agencies and institutions and in private business and industry. The education committee urged that "qualified citizens both Negro and white, be encouraged to offer for school board positions as vacancies occur and that support be given such qualified candidates."

The Rev. Fred M. Reese, Jr., Council Chairman, said there is a climate for progress prevailing in race relations across the state." Dr. H. E. Wright, president of Allen University, said the state has "high calibre leadership" in key positions. Leadership of key officials, he said, has lent broad understanding and good will to the state's growth in human relations.

VOTER REGISTRATION TALKED AT BENEDICT BUSINESS MEETING

Paul Anthony of the Southern Regional Council reported that a voter registration push in 39 counties has produced more than 10,000 additional Negro voters in 18 months. The SRC is encouraging the registration drive through its Voter Education Project, which entails a direct but modest grant to local groups.

A leader of the registration drive in Charleston and Berkeley Counties reported it is costing about $1 apiece to get Negroes registered in Charleston and about 50 cents apiece to acquire voter certificates in Berkeley. Costs are incurred by projects such as voter registration schools, where students are taught to read the voter registration blank and instructed on what to expect during registration procedures. J. Arthur Brown, president of the State NAACP, said the program has experienced difficulties in Charleston which could possibly be removed if a Negro were named to the registration board.

NEEDED: QUALIFIED JOB APPLICANTS

The Army Program of Equal Employment Opportunity in the Southeastern States needs qualified Negro personnel for jobs open by contractors. The need for personnel varies ... white-collar clerical, accounting, secretarial, salesmen, machinists, electronics specialists, etc. If you know a qualified person, one who may be interested in such a job opening, get his or her name to WRITE YOUR REPRESENTATIVES!

A Congressman last month wrote a minister that he was impressed with the emphasis placed upon civil rights and other issues confronting the country by the churches. But he pointed out:

> "This letter is prompted by the fact I have had less than 100 letters from constituents on this great moral issue. I am hoping that we might together stimulate the thinking of our people; that we might touch their conscience; that as your representative I might have the benefit of your counsel and wisdom."

In addition, New York Times writer James Reston says, "Nothing is more fallacious in American political life than the popular idea that Congressmen pay no attention to letters from their constituents. Some of them are impervious to reason and others won't or can't read, but all of them want to be re-elected, and all of them know the political power of the church-people, even if they never go to church except for votes."

CHURCH HAS CHOICE OF HYPOCRISY OR INTEGRATION

Dr. Claude U. Broach of St. John's Baptist Church, Charlotte, told an NAACP minister's conference at Gethsemane AME Zion Church Sept. 10 that if the Christian Church is to avoid hypocrisy, it must pull down its own traditional racial barriers. "We must let the doors of the church be open. Whoever will may come, and we will worship God together," he said. "Whenever courageous action is taken in the city of Charlotte in the direction of justice and compassion, it is taken under the leadership of the people who have drawn their ideals and their courage from the Christian Church at worship and prayer," he said, pointing out that the protest movement has been characterized by religious overtones.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE-- 'AT THIS VERY LATE HOUR' (A Southern Regional Report)
Reprinted from The Birmingham News, written by James A. Head, President of James A. Head Co., and Charles Zukoski, consultant to the 1st National Bank of Birmingham.

The bombings continue. Birmingham drifts downward, amid heart-sick doubt at home and unrestrained, bitter censure abroad. Unless we can find the way to retrieve ourselves from this tragic state, our fate as a community is indeed sealed.

For almost a decade we have been listening to misguided prophets. Ever since the school cases, we have been told, day in and day out, that the Supreme Court has been guilty of unconstitutional violation of our rights, that the Federal Government is some kind of alien power seeking to deprive us of our liberty, and that if we would only hold fast, we could in the end maintain our traditional way of life. Even when, as the pressure grew, some few wise citizens were bold enough to face the inevitable and come out with a plea for law and order, there was no heart in their voices and their words were unaccompanied by any moral conviction.

This is no time for recriminations. At this very late hour, when Birmingham has been blazoned across the front page literally of every paper in America and throughout the civilized world as the most lawless community in our country, when all of us are tasting the bitterness of violence and frustration, it is time for some new appraisals and for a new course of action. We suggest that in charting these, the community must face up to some basic truths:

(1) The Negro is a human being, with all of the feelings, the hopes and the aspirations of his white fellow-man. He is entitled, as a matter of simple fairness, to all of the rights and opportunities before the law possessed by any of us.

(2) The American Constitution guarantees to every citizen the equal protection of the laws. We know in our hearts that segregation has been and is our way of keeping the Negro in his place; that is its purpose and that is its effect. We have wanted it that way, and to say that under segregation there can be any true equality of the races is just a self-serving, plain denial of fact.

(3) The Supreme Court has not violated our system of law. From early English times, ours has been a system of common law, of law made by the judges in day to day determination of controversies between men. . . If the people do not like what the courts have decided, they can, through legislation or constitutional amendment overturn it.

(In closing, Mr. Head and Mr. Zukoski called for an end to segregated facilities, setting up a bi-racial committee and the hiring of Negro policemen.)

"We do not minimize the difficulty this process of regeneration poses for many sincere men and women. We dare not hope that they will quickly change their minds. But surely now, in the great tragedy of the hour, they will see -- as Lee did 100 years ago, when in the face of final defeat he laid down his sword and took up the educator's task of leading his people into a new life not of their choice -- that we are faced with ultimate compulsions, which at least many think are right, and which, whatever our view can no longer be avoided, and that it is for all of us to behave as men and women capable of bravely facing the future that lies so inexorably ahead."

ORANGEBURG: 'FEAR AND HOPELESSNESS'

ORANGEBURG -- Members of the S.C. Civil Rights Advisory Committee described this city as one with an oppressive atmosphere of fear and hopelessness after taking testimony from more than a dozen civic and Negro leaders, the Columbia State newspaper reported Dec. 6.

In a strongly worded statement following the full-day hearing, the commission said the hopelessness pervading the city could possibly be overcome by restoring the lines of communication which have been torn down.

Orangeburg was the scene of some 1,500 arrests during civil rights demonstrations two months ago. The group unanimously agreed that a complete breakdown in negotiations caused the continuous boycott of downtown businesses.

Foremost in the minds of those who testified during the fact-finding hearing was a desperate need for a bi-racial committee. Mayor Clyde Fair, who testified briefly to the commission, said he had been unable to find enough citizens who would be willing to serve on such a committee.

For the most part, testimony generally supported the contention that the Orangeburg movement against alleged racial discrimination would continue as well as the boycott which is currently in progress.

A statement issued by the commission at the conclusion of the Thursday hearing said that the "time is over-ripe for greater effort on behalf of white leaders to meet with representatives of the colored community to achieve a greater degree of cooperation and understanding which should lead to a reduction of racial tension and clear away obstacles standing in the paths of greater progress."

The statement was signed by acting chairman Dr. Thomas C. McFall, Courtney Siceloff, Andrew M. Secrest, Dr. Dewey M. Duckett, Ira Kaye, the Rev. James H. Nelson and Father Gordon Krahe.

NO 'BREAKDOWN' FOUND AMONG INTEGRATED CHILDREN!

A summary report, entitled "The Desegregation of Southern Schools: A Psychiatric Study," from a study conducted by Dr. Robert Coles, Atlanta psychiatrist, has been published by the Southern Regional Council and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Among findings:

-Some 'segregationist children' change their attitudes toward Negro children after attending school with them for a year.

-Negro children find attendance in white schools 'stressful but not incapacitating.'

-White children in desegregated southern schools suffer no 'medical or psychiatric damage' and no 'breakdown in ability to work, study and get along with friends.'

-Children of both races continue their studies 'without impairment.'

-From an academic viewpoint, desegregation is easier in elementary grade schools.

This study is the second in a series issued by the Anti-Defamation League and the SRC. The first, "Token Desegregation and Beyond," by J. Kenneth Morland, professor of sociology at Randolph-Macon Women's College in Virginia, analyzed 'devices' used by 'resistant' states in the South which had limited desegregation to less than half of one per cent of Negroes in all school districts, and contrasted these efforts with those of six 'compliant' states which had moved 51.1 per cent of Negro pupils to non-racial schools 'creatively and successfully.'

Copies of both studies are available from the national offices of the Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N.Y., or from the Southern Regional Council, Inc., 5 Forsyth St., N.W., Atlanta, Ga.

On Memorial Day, the then Vice-President of the United States, Lyndon B. Johnson, spoke at Gettysburg. Among remarks he made:

"One hundred years ago, the slave was freed.
"One hundred years later, the Negro remains in bondage to the color of his skin.

"The Negro today asks justice.
"Until justice is blind to color, until education is unaware of race, until opportunity is unconcerned with the color of men's skins emancipation will be a proclamation but not a fact. To the extent that the proclamation of emancipation is not fulfilled in fact, to that extent we shall have fallen short of assuring freedom to the free."

HUMAN RIGHTS WEEK: Dec. 10-17

The late President John F. Kennedy proclaimed the week of Dec. 10 as Human Rights Week. The Bill of Rights came into being Dec. 15, 1791. In a broadcast notice, the Institute of Human Relations of the American Jewish Committee asks:

"First, look at our Bill of Rights. Next, look at the UN Declaration. Then, look at your own town. Does everyone enjoy the same equal justice, the same equal opportunities, without racial or religious discrimination? Are jobs open to all, strictly on merit? Are families free to buy or rent the homes they can afford? Are youngsters given equal schooling? If not, you'll know there's work to be done. During Human Rights Week, roll up your sleeves for a year-round job. By living up to our Bill of Rights at home, we point the way to human rights for all the world."

CHILDREN IN PICKET LINES

"There are those who have raised questions about children participating in public demonstrations and picket lines for civil rights. They look with seeming horror upon little boys and girls, neatly brushed and dressed, walking bravely to school while adult women scream unspeakable oaths at them, and men and boys taunt them with vulgarities, and endanger their lives with stones and bricks. These critics say 'spare these children from the sight of their elders being rushed by dogs, pummelled by hoodlums and swept aside by firehoses.' Yet I say that these critics are as ignorant of the lives of Negro children as they are of life on Mars. They do not know that millions of children of this vast minority group in generation after generation have been born and reared in an environment entirely contrary to all that is just and right. Have these pepple who cry 'horror' ever looked into their child's eyes when he asks, 'Why?' Do they know what goes on in the heart of a child, and his parent, when the child says, 'Why can't I go into the library and get a book?' 'Why do we have to stand in the bus when these other people who have just got on can sit down?' 'Why don't you vote?'

"To those of you who are shocked at children in demonstration, who are afraid of what might happen to their innocent lives, I ask 'Where have your voices been all these years? Where, your concern? Where, your words?'

----From a serman by the Rt. Rev. John M. Burgess, Suffragan Bishop of Massachusetts, delivered at Boston Common, Sept. 18, 1963.

What They Say About the Council on Human Relations

FATHER RICHARD J. BURKE, Roman Catholic Diocesan Superintendent of Schools

To use the talents God gave me in order to serve my fellowman is a distinct privilege I have as a human being. The Council on Human Relations gives me this wonderful opportunity for which I am most grateful.

MRS. J. L. BLAIR BUCK, Former President, General Federation of Women's Clubs

The work of this council is highly important for Richmond—for Virginia. Many more of our citizens should be participating in it.

J. RUPERT PICOTT, Executive Secretary, Virginia Teachers' Association

Effective communication between people is the great need of our times. The Richmond area council deserves hearty congratulations for fulfilling this role.

BOOKER T. BRADSHAW, President, Virginia Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co.

The program and objectives of the Council on Human Relations are highly commendable. They deserve the wholehearted support and cooperation of every patriotic American in this community.

THEODORE F. ADAMS, Pastor, First Baptist Church, Richmond

I am sure that many are grateful for any worthy means of promoting understanding and brotherhood across the lines of color and creed. The Council on Human Relations provides just such a channel for many men and women of goodwill.

ROBERT P. DANIEL, President, Virginia State College, Petersburg

The Council on Human Relations makes a significant contribution to the cultivation of wholesome attitudes necessary for the solution of the racial issues involved in community problems. Tensions and misunderstandings can be removed, indeed prevented, by the cooperative efforts of people of mutual respect and goodwill.

Subject: QUARTERLY REPORT - October-December 1963

Activity

During the final quarter of 1963, the Executive Director travelled 7,258 miles for the FLORIDA COUNCIL, made 24 addresses, and carried on normal duties.

The most significant happening of this quarter has been the change in policy of membership and role of Executive Director. This change was enacted by the Executive Committee on October 5, and initially promulgated to local councils through a state-wide meeting of presidents and delegates from local councils in Daytona on November 2.

Membership is now contingent solely upon signature, dues being replaced by voluntary pledging. The work of the Executive Director will henceforth proceed through local councils, rather than as an individual.

LAWYERS AND RACIAL UNREST

In late June of this year a Special Committee was emergently created by the Board of Governors in response to President Kennedy's plea at his White House conference of lawyers for volunteer lawyer action to ease racial tension.

President Kennedy did not request support for his legislative program, but rather called on lawyers as community leaders in their own areas to assist in working out voluntary solutions for racial unrest.

The Special Committee, working diligently in the short time available, made its report to the Board of Governors and then to the House of Delegates at the Annual Meeting at Chicago in August. At that time the House of Delegates, with but one dissenting vote, approved a resolution submitted by the Board of Governors adopting the principles of the Special Committee's report as the official position of the Association.

The basic theme of the report is the call for law and order on the part of everyone, and the achievement of all goals within the law. "Respect for the constitutions of the United States and of the several states, the various applicable statutes, and the decisions of the federal courts and of the courts of the varicus states must be observed, and observed with respect."

The report recognizes fully the right to seek change by lawful means, the right to peaceful methods of persuasion and the right to resort to the courts for the redress of grievances, but cautions that "in exercising the American rights of free speech, assembly and petition, there is a grave responsibility on all Americans in these times of high emotions, and when the United States stands before the world as a symbol of democracy, to exercise these rights with due respect for law." Indeed, "There would be chaos and anarchy if each citizen were free to choose which laws he would obey."

Recognizing that a government of laws cannot exist without lawyers to interpret, apply and defend the law, the report calls on lawyers for action by way of (1) offering their services in their own communities to local officials, with whom such problems usually come to a focus, in bringing about better communication and understanding among all races, (2) using their influence, whenever possible, in bettering, on a nondiscriminatory basis, educational and economic opportunities for minority groups, (3) eliminating, within their sphere of influence, discrimination, if any, in the legal profession, and (4) carrying out the duty of the legal profession with respect to defendants in locally unpopular causes.

By the resolution mentioned above "the American Bar Association calls on its members particularly, and upon state and local bar associations and the legal profession generally, to dedicate themselves to the full implementation of these principles".

Quarterly Report for October, November and December, 1963
By Heslip M. Lee, Executive Director, VCHR

VCHR's Annual Meeting was the highlight of the past quarter. This was held at Union Theological Seminary with 250 people in attendance. There was a good attendance at all sessions, including the meeting of the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors, plus VEJOB Committee meeting. HIGHLIGHTS of the Annual Meeting were the addresses by Dr. Aubrey N. Brown, President, Mr. Paul Anthony, Field Director of SRC, and the Reverend L. Francis Griffin of Prince Edward County.....The warm welcome and words of encouragement given by Mayor Eleanor Sheppard of Richmond.. the warm hospitality of over-night accomodations furnished by local Richmond families to all out-of-town delegates.....Happy Lee's interviews of local council representatives during Dinner.....the response of delegates and pre-pledges of $4,106.00 towards our 1964 budget.....and the exceptionally fine attendance at an open forum Breakfast on Saturday Morning. One of the exceptionally fine developments from the Annual Meeting was the appointment of a special committee to pursue the financing of an additional staff member to be in charge of fund raising for expanding VCHR projects and over-all work. In addition, several resolutions were adopted by the Board of Directors and sent to respective related agencies across the state. These resolutions called upon state political leadership to open public schools in Prince Edward County; called upon leaders in Danville to sit together in good faith to resolve tensions there; and deplored conditions of hate in this country which could lead to the assassination of our beloved President, John F. Kennedy. Copies of the resolutions were sent also to all members of the VCHR Board and local council presidents.

Certainly 1963 was the best year ever for VCHR. Although the auditor hasn't yet finished the exact financial report for 1963, we reached the basic budget with several local councils going over their quotas. We began this past quarter with a cash balance of: $ 557.87

VCHR income for the quarter.....	6675.78
SRC quarterly gift.....	975.00
Special gift for fund raiser.....	1000.00
Total.....	$9208.65
Total expenses for quarter.....	7268.40
Balance on Hand 1/1/64.....	$1940.25

VCHR gifts include non-budgeted items such as New South subscriptions plus Annual Meeting Dinner, etc.

I would like to bring you up to date on financial matters, although some of this part of my report will go beyond the end of the last quarter. The special Committee mentioned above met at the close of the Annual Meeting. It was decided that I would go to New York and seek to obtain $5,000 from a Foundation, while other members of the Committee sought to get interested Virginia persons to underwrite the financing of $6,000. If and when the total amount of $11,000 was obtained, we would hire a fund raiser as a staff person. The New World Foundation will now give us the $5,000.00 for this purpose once we have in hand the other $6,000.00. $1,000.00 has been given by Father John McMahon, president of the Richmond Petersburg Council towards this (notice in financial report above), and we also have the remainder underwritten. With this security the special Committee authorized the hiring of a fund raiser, and Mr. Henry Caravati of Richmond, Virginia, was employed and began work on Monday, January 6. As of this writing he is approaching those who underwrote this project to get the money in hand so our foundation money can be paid.

The Prince Edward Schools remain unresolved. The Virginia Supreme Court has ruled that the State has no responsibility to intervene and provide public schools anywhere. The U.S. Supreme Court has voted to hear the appeal of this state court ruling. Although the Prince Edward Free School Association is functioning smoothly with integrated Trustees, administration, faculty and student body, it is my opinion that the state political leadership has failed miserably in solving the dilemma. The Governor has sought financial help for the White Academy which to me was a great disappointment on his part. This has also convinced most concerned persons that he has no intention of lending his support directly to the problem. Therefore, should the U.S. Supreme Court delay in its decision beyond Summer, the Prince Edward crisis could go over into another school year. It is my opinion that an all-out effort should be made on a National scale by mid-summer to save the Prince Edward Free School Association for 1964-65 school year.

Danville is rather quiet at the present. The Danville Story will be published this Spring. There is still political division, as well as division among the business, religious and civic leadership in Danville.

VCHR has been invited into several communities for the first time during this past quarter. In many cases these invitations came from the Chamber of Commerce, mayors and other community leaders. Bi-racial commissions continue to be established all over the state with exceptions such as Danvile. Much progress in opening eating establishments, theaters, hotels and merit employment practices continue to be realized in all areas of the state except Southside. Here scarcely anyone will be brave enough to openly discuss human relations with his neighbor, much less a visitor.

By the end of the past quarter, VCHR had completed plans for our first Consultation of Opinion Makers. We had 85 Virginia lawyers at this first consultation at the Executive Motor Hotel, Richmond, on Saturday, January 11, 1964. Invitations were sent several hundred lawyers and judges over the state by the Honorable F.D.G. Ribble, former Dean of the University of Virginia Law School, the Honorable Dudley Woodbridge, former Dean of the William and Mary College Law School, and the Honorable Armistead Boothe, former Virginia State Senator. (see enclosed program) We can truly report that the day was a great success. An evaluation session is planned and other consultationa will follow.

November found the Executive Director having let a year of promises pile up for speaking engagements, and he was proud to live through it all. I spoke to several state-wide groups holding Annual Meetings. One of these was the PHI Phi Chapter of the Omega Psi Phi National Fraternity at which occasion, both Dr. Aubrey N. Brown, VCHR President and the Executive Director received awards for what the fraternity called outstanding achievement in Human Relations. Some of my most challenging experiences, were at Bridgewater College, where I was on a program for a series of addresses from November 11-13. The addresses were routine I suppose, but the bull-sessions, especially with Freshmen from Southside and Western Virginia, brought back every memory and frustration of College Freshmen and caused me to have to sharpen my logic in dealing with un-committed people. Some times I think I live a sheltered life visiting local councils where un-committed people don't go. I came through it and really enjoyed the fun.

With all the speaking engagements behind and a promise to the VCHR Board to never fill my schedule that tight again, plus the Annual Meeting, the lawyers consultation and the employment of a fund-raiser behind, I look forward to putting some of my dreams and plans on paper for a change. Perhaps I will get to do a bit of that before the Senate Filibuster abd fireworks begin.

Report of Activities of Field Representative
of S. C. C. H. R. During The Months
December, January, February
1963-1964

The activities of our Field Representative during this period has been based largely on the following four projects:

1. Holding local leadership training meetings on a neighborhood county group basis.

2. Helping to publicize and recruit potential trainees for the new M. D. T. A. program (STEP) for South Carolina.

3. Helping farmers make appeals from local F. H. A's unfavorable decisions to the State Director of F. H. A.

4. Encouraging interested representatives to get an ARA project started.

Leadership Training Meetings:

As was stated in our previous report, all of the 24 counties which are eligible for ARA aid in South Carolina have been organized in neighborhood groups of six counties each. These groups have been meeting bi-monthly. Each group has had at least one meeting since the organization.

The agenda of these meetings has included such topics as follows:

a. To learn how to get help for employment under ARA and MDTA.
b. To get information on how to secure surplus foods for needy families.
c. How to exercise citizenship rights including participation in voter registration and precinct reorganization meetings.

Mr. James has helped the leaders from the counties to understand how to approach the State Officials in order to get the opportunities which are guaranteed by state and federal laws in many instances. He even contacted the S. C. Attorney General to find out the lawfulness of preventing Negroes from participation in reorganizational meeting of ward and precincts. He also found out from the State Attorney General how to get a lost registration day because of the illness of the registration officer restored.

All participants have been very pleased with the help, information, and advice received at these meetings. Even the agricultural county agents are beginning to attend these meetings. They are becoming very active in encouraging cooperation with our program of guidance and training.

New MDTA program, STEP for S. C.:

Every since the Governor of S. C. announced that a grant from the Federal government had been received under MDTA in the amount of $5,635,994, our Field Representative has been helping to give wide state publicity to this program. This money is to be used to fight against the State's prime enemies--ignorance and unemployment. This program is known as Special Training for Economic Progress (STEP).

Mr. James has been asked to assist the State Coordinator of MDTA in recruiting trainees throughout the State. He has been giving special emphasis to recruitment of potential trainees since the program was first announced January 1, 1964. He has already received credit for being responsible for recruiting more trainees for this program than any of the employees of the State Employment Commission. Since 5,000 unemployed persons are to be trained each year that the STEP program is in effect, he hopes to get 3,000 Negroes trained of the total 5000 annually. (See January 1964 issue of SCCHR Review, and circular letter announcing STEP program attached.)

Appeals to State Director of F. H. A. for Unfavorable Decision of Local F. H. A. to farmers:

Our Field Representative has had 10 requests for help from farmers who have been denied aid by local FHA offices. Each case has been written up in the form of a case history of the family envolved and referred to the State Director of F. H. A. as an appeal for his decision. So far the State Director has given favorable answers on 3 of the 10 cases submitted. If the State Director makes unfavorable decisions these cases will be referred to the FHA Administrator in the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The following statements are excerpts from one of the recent letters from the S. C. State FHA Director in answer to some appeals referred to him two months ago:

> "Further reference is made to your letters in the interest of certain applicants in Clarendon and Sumter Counties. Since Last contacting you I have had these cases looked into further by our area supervisor and also by Mr. Austin Edwards, Program Staff Assistant, here in my office.
> We are in the process of trying to work out a Farm Ownership loan for Mr. Columbus Cooper, in order that he can do necessary repairs to his dwelling and refinance his debts. I do not know, as yet, how much we will be able to do, but I should know within the very near future. Incidentally, Mr. Cooper seemed to be getting along very nicely working with his sharecropping arrangement.
> In the other cases, namely, Messrs. Wheeler, Canty, and Burgess, and Mrs. Deschamps, there is a doubt that we shall be able to help. In the case of Mrs. Dechamps, we are trying to find a way to help her, however, we have not found a solution, as yet, to her problem."

It has taken two annual appeals to get favorable reply on Mr. Columbus Cooper. (Further information on this project is found in the January 1964 issue of SCCHR Review, copy of which is attached.)

Encouraging New ARA Projects

Mr. James has been requested to help the people of Colleton County to get a project started under ARA. He went to the County for a special preliminary planning meeting on January 17, 1964. He explained to them how to approach the all white local ARA county Committee who had already started projects without informing the Negroes. They did not know the chairman of the ARA committee.

He has lately been informed by Mr. William Hamilton, owner of the Hamilton Funeral Home in Walterboro, South Carolina that they were very cordially received by the chairman of the committee. They were given instructions as to how to request a sewing industry for that community. They have also gotten the promise from a local firm already established in the county to take all the garments produced by them.

Mr. James has interested the State Coordinator of ARA in helping to get this project started. The coordinator has promised to get the cooperation of the power structure leaders in the Waterboro Community for this project. Once this is done they will be able to get the loan they need from the Federal Government. The Coordinator is planning to be with us at our next neighborhood county meeting to explain the detail requirements for the Colleton County project and others like it under A. R. A.

The South Carolina Council on Human Relations
1330 LAUREL STREET
Columbia, South Carolina

The State of South Carolina has just received from the Federal Government a grant of $5,634,994. The purpose for this grant is to provide training for those people who are considered the hardcore unemployed and underemployed, male and female, so that they might qualify for entrance into the labor market with skills that can be used. You will be able to learn more about this program by reading the enclosed pieces: 1. Summary of MDTA Amendments; 2. A Proposal for MDTA Training Act in South Carolina, and 3. Occupational Training Areas. This is the first opportunity that South Carolina has had to make an all-out attack on illiteracy and job training suitable for persons needing it.

This program has been given the name of Special Training for Economic Progress in South Carolina. We would like for you to remember this as STEP and to do everything you can to inform unemployed and underemployed people about this program. Each county in South Carolina will have an opportunity to participate in this massive program.

Trainees will have the opportunity to select courses for training from those listed under occupational training areas. (See enclosure 3) Where persons do not have the educational background required for taking the course, the educational training will be given to qualify them for taking the vocational training. Please have this announced in churches, clubs, fraternal meetings, and through personal contacts.

We hope that announcement will stress that those who are interested must register for this STEP Program at the nearest employment service office in their county. When they register be sure to say they are registering for employment and training under the STEP Program.

Sincerely yours,

Alice N. Spearman

PUBLIC LAW 88-214
SUMMARY OF MDTA AMENDEMENTS IN H.R. 8720

(passed House December 12 and Senate December 13, 1963)
Signed December 19, 1963

1. Lowers the age of youths eligible for training allowances from 19, as in existing act, to 17. The 17- year olds would have to have been out of school at least a year.

2. Permits up to 25 percent of the persons receiving training allowances to be youths under 22 years of age. (Present law limits youth training allowances to 5 percent of the total training allowances.) Excludes youths able to benefit from the provisions of the Vocational Education Act of 1963.

3. Requires one-third matching in F.Y. 1966. (Present law requires 50-50 matching to begin in F.Y. 1965). Contains language to the effect that 50 percent matching is intended for subsequent years.

4. Adds 20 weeks of allowances to trainees who are taking basic education training. Precise determination of occupational objectives for these trainees need not be made before educational training begins.

5. Permits increases in the weekly training allowance to $10 above the State unemployment compensation payment, which is now the upper limit. This provision is designed as an incentive to get unemployed workers to seek training rather than draw unemployment pay.

6. Permits trainees to work up to 20 hours part-time without any loss in training allowances.

7. Reduces to 2 years the prior work experience required for trainees to be eligible (Present law requires 3 years).

8. Permits a member of the family, where the head is unemployed, to receive a training allowance. Only one person in the family group is eligible at any one time. (Present law limits training to heads of households.)

9. Provides, through demonstration projects, grants and/or loans to unemployed workers to help finance their relocation expenses.

10. Title I.
Extends for 2 more years (through F.Y. 1967) present authorization of $3 million/ fiscal year for information, evaluation, and research programs.

Title II.
Authorizes $161 million for F.Y. 1964, $407 million for F.Y. 1965, and $281 million for F.Y. 1966 for the training programs. (Present law authorizes $161 million for each of fiscal years 1964 and 1965.)

Title III.
Extends for 2 more years (through F.Y. 1967) present authorization of $1 million/ fiscal year for preparing the Secretaries' reports and other miscellaneous expenses.

A PROPOSAL

To Implement Public Law 415,
Manpower Development & Training Act
in South Carolina

ADULT EDUCATION OFFICE
STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
COLUMBIA 1, SOUTH CAROLINA

A. Statement of General Principles

If this proposal is to provide a constructive solution to the needs of the State, we believe it must, first of all, comply with the following general principles:

(1) The program should be supplementary to other educational efforts and should in no sense replace emphasis in basic fields of learning, or in Technical Education.

(2) The program must have a Vocational objective but it shall emphasize the basic fields of learning to qualify the students for both citizenship and for our industrial society.

(3) The primary objective of the new program, while it will contribute to the development of the State's industrial economy, should be to enlarge the potential of the individual student through education in the knowledge and the skills which will be useful to him, and thus to his employer, and in that way ultimately to benefit the State as a whole.

(4) The program should be highly responsive to the needs of students and thus should be flexible enough, both in the curriculum and in the facilities provided, to meet those needs as they differ in different localities and as conditions change.

(5) Instruction in this field should have well defined qualitative standards, so as to provide in each student a capability in his education void which can be recognized by his school, his employer, and himself, when he receives a certificate indicating the specific kind and quality of his achievement.

(6) The mandate for a general and uniform system of education, as well as our own assessment of the educational needs of the State, would require that this program be offered on a state-wide basis, but only to those areas providing clear proof of need for this type of instruction as well as the ability and the inclination to support it financially and otherwise.

We believe, furthermore, that there is a direct relationship between one's educational achievement and his earning capacity, as well as his general capabilities as a citizen and member of society. This proposal, therefore, has direct bearing upon the solution of the State's problem of low per capita income as its industrial economy expands. On the other hand, we wish to make it clear that to emphasize our needs in this respect is not to derogate our needs elsewhere, either in general fields of learning or in other occupational fields.

In view of the substantial technological advances in industry, it seems obvious that if South Carolina is to expand industrially, it must provide a program designed to educate the present unemployables. Since other states are doing this, our failure to do so may result in retarding our industrial expansion.

It is acknowledged that this is the major group of South Carolinians that no present program can serve; neither the universities, the Technical Education Center, nor Vocational Education. This group quite often applies for training in the new industry Special Schools operated by the State Committee for Technical Education. They are most often pushed aside by other applicants who are more capable and literate.

B. Outline of the Proposed Program

(1) Purpose

The purpose of this proposal is to provide an education opportunity to 14,000 selective service rejects, hardcore unemployed and underemployed, male and female, with pre-occupational and occupational training to qualify them for entrance into the labor market.

(2) Plan of Finance

A detailed plan of operation will be submitted to the U. S. Office of Education requesting the following amounts of funds for operation:

1963-64	$1,300,000
1964-65	$2,000,000
1965-66	$2,000,000

These funds will be used to underwrite operating costs at the state and local level.

(3) Students

This instructional program shall be available to 5,000 persons annually, with preference given to heads of households who are unemployed

(4) Faculty

Teachers shall be paid wholly from Federal funds under salary schedules and certification standards established and they shall be employed for specific courses of instruction of definite duration.

(5) Qualitative Standards

Each course, while it may differ from other courses in length and intensity, shall conform to state-wide standards as to content and emphasis established for that particular course. The primary objective of such standards is to provide a legitimate basis for the training allowances given by the Federal government and to drop those students who attend for pay rather than self-improvement. Clearly defined standards shall serve as a useful guide to the prospective employer as he considers the student's training as an instrument in job placement. The Curriculum Laboratory for the Technical Education Centers shall provide and measure the standards established.

(6) Buildings

Suitable buildings shall be provided which are separate and apart from existing educational efforts. A survey shall be immediately made to determine availability of buildings. Rent and operational costs of these buildings will be borne by Federal Funds. Every effort shall be made to secure a suitable building in every county of the State. Buildings shall be selected which are within easy reach of the majority of students, who will provide their own means of transportation.

(7) Regional Planning

Local leaders will aid in defining the region served. Because these leaders enjoy the respect of those to be reached by this program, lay leaders must be responsible for developing the desire of the less fortunate in improving themselves through education. Industrial development groups and other civic bodies must work and plan, describing this program as one facet in the development of their primary resourse..the people.

C. A Revised Plan for Administering Public Law 415, Manpower Development and Training Act

(1) Relationships-State Board of Education and State Committee for Technical Education

The State Board of Education shall designate the State Committee for Technical Education to share in the administration of the program. The program will be coordinated under the direction of the State Director of Vocational Education and the Coordinator of the State Committee for Technical Education. Specific responsibilities are as follows:

(a) The State Committee for Technical Education shall have the responsibility for administration of fiscal affairs and shall disperse funds for operation to area or regional bodies under a plan of local supervision.

(b) The present State Supervisor of Manpower Development and Training in the Division of Vocational Education shall have the responsibility for organization and supervision of the program.

(c) The State Director of Vocational Education and the Coordinator of the State Committee for Technical Education shall jointly prepare reports and records as required by the U. S. Office of Education and the Boards and Agencies concerned with the conduct of this program.

(2) Legal responsibilities given to the South Carolina Employment Security Commission under Public Law 415 shall be consistently observed with regard to student testing and selection, any payment to trainees, and other matters for which they are accountable.

(3) Subject to the prior approval of the State Board of Education a Master Plan for local supervision and control will be developed which may use present boards or commissions or may create new regional committees to insure proper and efficient conduct of the program by laymen at the local level.

READ AND ACT!

(A CALL FOR SERVICE BEYOND THE "LINE OF DUTY"

Dear Fellow-Citizen:

On February 25, Columbia voters have a DATE WITH DESTINY .... when it becomes the duty of each one to help elect two members of City Council. FAST ACTION is in order now. We do not have time for CHIN MUSIC.

By telephone (PLEASE CALL TEN PEOPLE AND ASK THEM TO TELL TEN MORE), by contact with organized groups, word of mouth, we must roll the vote out to the polls.. Canvas your block, or help canvas your neighborhood with the appeal to "BE SURE TO VOTE ON FEBRUARY 25."

For all farsighted Columbians, this is the most important local election - bar none - held in this generation. While we are to elect two councilmen, we are more importantly - to make a choice between sound, stable government in the hands of men of vision, forthrightness, high intelligence, and proven performance or the LAYING OF THE FOUNDATIONS of a government of intense hatred, threats, burnings, bombings, trigger-happy policemen, vicious police dogs, and every other earmark of rabid political leadership.

DON'T SAY, "IT CAN'T HAPPEN IN COLUMBIA!" It can! The healthy seeds are planted here. We must not let them sprout.

Let's not move one step backward toward a situation where our homes may be blasted, our churches bombed, our children mangled as they worship the Living God, or killed by snipers as they move through city streets.

Columbia has been a peaceful city. We are a people of peace, even under oppression and denial. In connection with our long range objective to exhaust all legal means to insure our enjoyment of our civil liberties, we must carry out our immediate objective of voting wisely now to keep the peace. We must support political leaders who are inclined toward peace and efficiency rather than those who are inspired by hate and rabble-rousing.

We B E G all ministers and church leaders serving within the Columbia city limits to make Sunday your kick-off day to spread our message which we know carries the burden of your thoughts and your prayers. Ministers in rural areas are asked to urge their membership appeal to relatives in friends in the city limits to be sure to vote in this election. EACH PERSON MUST VOTE FOR 2 MEN.

After calm and careful consideration of much information at hand, our organization has voted to support RUBIN(Hyman) and HYATT(Troy L.). We trust that you, your friends and followship will join us in this choice, and V O T E !

A monthly news review issued by the Information Committee of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, 1330 Laural Street, Columbia, S. C.

War on Poverty

A year before Pres. Johnson's declaration of war on poverty, SCCHR had set up a program geared to the needs of rural low-income families. One of S. C. family being assisted by such programs is written up in the Dec. 28 issue of The Saturday Evening Post. The father of the family is quoted as saying "I hope my kids wont leave home. Oh, I hope they wont. But they got to do better than I have."

Exciting New Programs

Field Representative Mr. L. S. James has been in constant contact with the on-the-job training in Ridgeland, S. C. hoping to get the course approved under MDTA. The State Supervisor of Apprenticeship Training along with the State Coordinator of MDTA have reported that the on-the-job training course for furniture construction has been approved for the company, operating at its own expense on an integrated basis.

To improve opportunities for local leadership training, Mr. James has divided the twenty-four counties eligible for Area Redevelopment Aid into four groups. Each composed of six neighboring counties meeting bimonthly at a designated place in one of the counties on an alternating basis. A schedule has been made which includes meeting dates in each month for the year 1964.

The general aim of the meetings is stated as follows:

"Making better use of our Community Resources". Some of the immediate objectives are - how to get FHA assistance; how to get help for employment from ARA and MDTA; and how to get surplus food for low-income families.

Job and Literacy Training Opportunities

SCCHR cooperating with the State Coordinator of the MDTA program, helping to publicize opportunities for job and literacy training under the new program entitled Special Training for Economic Progress. Under this program there are 33 occupational training areas with opportunities for 5000 trainees. These courses are to be given without discrimination as to race of color. It is hoped that all unemployed and underemployed male and female persons will apply immediately to their nearest employment service office and register for training under this new program (STEP). Applicants will be accepted without regard to educational limitations since educational background training will be given for each training course.

Mark Your Calendar

A Conference called jointly by the S. C. and Ga. Councils on Human Relations has been scheduled for March 20-21. Meetings will be held in Augusta, Georgia with the Augusta and Aiken Councils acting as joint hosts.

Latest information will be available concerning education-for-employment programs being launched in the respective states. Outstanding leaders have been invited. Complete information will be available soon. Plan now to attend.

SCCHR Board to MEET

The mid-winter meeting of the SCCHR board has been set for Wednesday, February 5 from 4:40 - 9:30 p. m. at the Wade Hampton Hotel. Mr. Paul Anthony, Director of Field Services for SRC, will be present as a resource person to work with the board in its planning Some twenty new members of the Board elected at the Annual meeting are expected to attend their first meeting.

Local Council News:

The Columbia Council on Human Relations met on January 20 and a panel discussion on STEP and related programs was held. Richland County Rep. Heyward McDonald expresses opinion that constituents fail to communicate to their legislators their real desires. Other participants were State Adult Education Supervisor Mrs. C. E. Anderson, E. E. Taylor, Principal of Benson and Saxon Elementary Schools, Columbia. About 60 were on hand.

The Rock Hill Council on Human Relations at its December meeting had the Reverend Fred M. Reese as speaker.

Worthy Quotes

"Congress gets surprisingly little civil rights mail. Many southerners report few protests other than organized segregationist letters."

Wall Street Journal

"A frank and cordial concession of absolute and practical civil as well as political equality between all citizens without discrimination on account of race or color would remove the cast barrier which opposes the political cooperation of good men, of whatever color, for the regeneration of the State."

Student Conference Brings Challenge and Response

Seventy-five students from 15 South Carolina colleges met in conference at Penn Center December 6-8 to think together concerning the role of the student in our changing society and to plan for the work of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. The SCSCHR, an integral part of the total program of the Council, is now in its third year. One of the most important phases of its work has been its student conferences.

The focus of the program was implied in its theme: The New Revolution: Challenge and Response. An able analysis of the continuing revolution in the south and the nation was made by Mr. Vernon Jordan, of the Southern Regional Council Staff. South Carolina's own Dr. James McBride Dabbs followed with an address, Meeting the Demands of the Present. These presentations set the stage for full discussion of various issues and problems confronting us. Dialogue and task force groups dealt with Feelings and Fears: An Honest Confrontation; Ways of Work on the Local Campus; The Role of the Church; Student Responsibility in the Community; Students and the Freedom Movement.

Progress reports were made on the Education Project initiated at the student conference last spring. Tutorial programs are now being sponsored by Council student members with high school students in Columbia and with elementary school children in Spartanburg; a readiness program for first graders is to begin the second semester.

For Your Program

You may secure on loan from SCCHR office tape recordings of four short plays which deal with various aspects of race relations. These were written by Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal Chaplain at Wayne University and are played by professional actors.

Each of these is brief, stimulating and provocative of discussion. Especially effective is They Are Not Real to Me, in which roles are reversed with a white minority experiencing the discrimination and prejudice of a dominant Negro community. These are especially recommended for small groups in local councils, youth or adult church groups.

Student Conference Brings Challenge and Response

Seventy-five students from 15 South Carolina colleges met in conference at Penn Center December 6-8 to think together concerning the role of the student in our changing society and to plan for the work of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. The SCSCHR, an integral part of the total program of the Council, is now in its third year of work. One of the most important phases of the total student program each year has been the student conferences.

The focus of the December conference was implied in its theme: "The New Revolution: Challenge and Response." An able analysis of the continuing revolution in the south and the nation was made by Mr. Vernon Jordan of the Southern Regional Council staff. South Carolina's own Dr. James McBride Dabbs followed with an address, "Meeting the Demands of the Present." ~~(see below.)~~ These presentations set the stage for full discussion of various issues and problems confronting us. Dialogue and Task Forde groups dealt with "Feelings and Fears: an honest Confrontation; ways of work on the local campus; the role of the Church; student responsility in the community; students and the Freedom Movement."

Progress reports were made on the Education Project initiated at the student conference last spring. Tutorial programs are now being sponsored by SCSCHR members with high school students in Columbia and with elementary children in Spartanburg; a "readiness" program for first graders is to begin the second semester.

As always there was much fun and good fellowship in the relaxed atmosphere of Penn. Already we are thinking of the next conference in the spring (see below.)

SCSCHR Group Tutors High School Students

The following evaluation of the tutoring project was written by Mrs. Fannie Phelps Adams, Guidance Counselor.

The Guidance Department of Booker T. Washington High School, Columbia, S. C., uses various techniques which tend to enable every student to realize his maximum potential. Thus, there was an anthusiastic acceptance of the tutoring services offered by members of the Columbia Student Human Relations group. This plan is designed to provide additional help for a number of students who possess good academic ability, but who are presently considered by their teachers as underachievers.

Serving as tutors for these high school students are persons from Benedict College and the University of South Carolina who are active members of the SC Student Council on Human Relations. Subject areas covered include algebra, biology, chemistry, English, French, Spanish and United States history.

The services are of course given on a voluntary basis, and the high school students await each session with great enthusiasm. The interpersonal relationship experienced between both students and tutors is most noteworthy. The administration, faculty and students of Booker T. Washington High School are very grateful for the services these tutors are reddering, and feel confident that the results achieved will prove invaluable to both students and tutors.

The South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations has great reason to be proud of this work.

Resource Material for Your Program

Tape recordings of four short plays which deal with various aspects of race relations, may be secured on loan from SCCHR office. These were written by Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal Chaplain at Wayne University and are played by professional actors.

Each of these is brief, stimulating and provocative of discussion. Especially effective is "They Are Not Real to Me," in which roles are reversed with a white minority experiencing the discrimination and prejudice of a dominant Negro community. Especially recommended for small, informal discussion groups on campus.

For those interested in the psychological aspects of desegregation, e.g. stresses, feelings of inferiority, identification, a report of a study made under the sponsorship of Southern Regional Council by Robert Coles, Atlanta Psychiatrist, is recommended. It is the result of prolonged interviews with white and Negro students in desegregated situations. (very good for a course in psychology or sociology.) Available from Southern Regional Council, 5 Forsyth St., Atlanta, Ga. free of charge. Title: "Southern Children under Desegregation."

PLEASE NOTE

College students who have contact with high school students, especially seniors, should emphasize the importance of College Board Examinations and the dates on which they will be given: May 2, July 8 Application should be made by April 1 and June 5, respectively.

To Define and Affirm Our Love and Our Life

This is an attempt to reconstruct the thoughts of Dr. James M. Dabbs at the Frogmore Conference. Quotes are taken from a similar address by Dr. Dabbs at the annual meeting of the Southern Regional Council in 1962.

Dr. Dabbs cited our need for action and stressed our need to define and so create, for old definitions are not acceptable. "Especially do we of the South need to define our love.. We have stressed emotion; we are people of feeling, of sentiment; we are proud of our ability to commit ourselves to a cause regardless of the cost. . Whether our hearts have been right or wrong, we have trusted them too much, our minds too little. What is this kindliness, this love? We don't think about it. We don't define it in the sense of separating it in our thoughts from the things about it, into which it moves imperceptibly, taking another color as it moves; nor do we define it in the sense of placing it in the total picture. This second form of definition may be called affirmation; we do not affirm it. As a consequence, the white's so-called love for the Negro turns into hatred; it does not flower into justice, and the fact that it bears no fruit of justice proves it is not real love but a mere sentimental wish. . We feel that life itself is good. Then, by God, and in God, we'd better affirm it. As we know how we stand, we know how to proceed. The future exists within us; we have but to accept it.

Ending with what might be considered the most striking sentence of the conference and of this decade, Dr. Dabbs quoted Lyndon Johnson's words as he stood on a plane in Dallas, Texas: "Let's get this plane back to Washington."

Steering Committee Plans Spring Conference

SCSCHR Steering Committee met in Columbia on Saturday, February 8, for a preview of this semester's program. Major emphasis was placed on the spring conference, projects in the field of education (tutorial programs, etc.) exchange and local campus programs. The conference was set for the week-end of April 10-12, to be held at Penn Center, Frogmore. Tentatively, the program will include an emphasis on Africa and African affairs and their relation to the civil rights and other movements in the US. Importance was placed on the need to involve African students and other international students on SC college campuses, in addition to the usual enlistment. PUT THE ABOVE DATES ON YOUR CALENDAR NOW!

A Call for Action - Save the State Parks

From the Christian Action Council's publication, Your State House, there comes an urgent request. The State Park bill now resides in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Senator Marion Gressette, chairman of this committee, is publicly on record as being opposed to opening the state parks, even on the limited basis approved by the House. The crucial question NOW is: Will the Senate pass H.1959, or will it - by not passing the bill - keep the State Parks closed and permit the reversal clause (in many of the parks) to operate? If that happens, the State will lose some of its parks and the whole State Park system will be potentially destroyed. It is URGENT that you get in touch with the senator from your home county NOW and request other people in your community to do likewise.

Join the Council Now

IF the fellowship which we have had together in SCSCHR has meant something to you; IF you feel that our conferences, meetings, and projects have been worthwhile; IF you believe that honest communication must continue and increase among college students in S. C., then certainly you will want to support the work of the Council by becoming a student member. In 1964 our membership must increase if we are to move forward. Please fill out the enclosed membership blank and mail in to the office in Columbia NOW.

IF you are already a member for this year, pass the membership blank on to some one else. Personal contact to be the best possible method of enlistment.

REPORT OF PROGRAM DIRECTOR
December 1963--February 1964

The student program of SCCHR began this quarter with the first conference of this academic year held December 8-10, 1963 at Penn Center.

Seventy-five students from 15 South Carolina colleges met in conference at Penn Center December 6-8 to think together concerning the role of the student in our changing society and to plan for the work of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. The SCSCHR, an integral part of the total program of the Council, is now in its third year of work. One of the most important phases of the total student program each year has been the student conference.

The focus of the December conference was implied in its theme: "The New Revolution: Challenge and Response." An able analysis of the continuing revolution in the south and the nation was made by Mr. Vernon Jordan of the Southern Regional Council staff. South Carolina's own Dr. James McBride Dabbs followed with an address, "Meeting the Demands of the Present." These presentations set the stage for full discussion of various issues and problems confronting us. Dialogue and Task Forde groups dealt with "Feelings and Fears: an honest confrontation; ways of work on the local campus; the role of the church; student responsibility in the community; students and the Freedom Movement."

Progress reports were made on the Education Project initiated at the student conference last spring. Tutorial programs are now being sponsored by SCSCHR members with high school students in Columbia and with elementary children in Spartanburg; a "readiness" program for first graders is to begin the second semester.

The student conferences, which have been sponsored by the student council twice each year, provide direction and inspiration for a continuing student program. Planning for these conferences is done democratically by student members of the steering committee of SCSCHR. This constitutes one of the Council's major efforts in leadership training. (Conference program attached in exhibit.)

The Tutorial Program begun in November in the Columbia area at Booker Washington High School has increased from 6 to 15 volunteers who are now giving time to this work. The director of guidance counseling who coordinates the program has written an evaluation which appears in the February 28th News Letter of the South Carolina Student Council. (Exhibit attached)

Recently the counselor has commented that this program was not only of value in upgrading the students academically, but was in a very real way preparing them to live in an integrated society. Most of these students have never before had contact with a white person who has accepted them as fellow human beings. It is recognized that this type of project should be set up in many communities throughout the state. The student council plans to intensify its efforts in the tutorial field.

A third important phase of the student council's work this quarter has been that of the public relations committee, of which Mr. Harvey Gantt is chairman. A full description of the background, present situation and work of this committee is included in this report.

The Committee on the Church and Human Relations is hoping to extend its membership and give greater support to committed religious leaders, ministers and laymen, throughout the state who are isolated and sometimes suffer varying types of recrimination for their stand on race relations. With this in mind, the chairman of this committee has invited Rev. Will Campbell of the Committee of Southern Churchman to give a block of time to South Carolina in establishing contacts and bringing together churchmen in a closer working relationship. The committee urged attendance on the part of Negro church women at the World Day of Prayer Services in Columbia, February 14 (opened to all for the first time) and at the annual meeting of United church women. Announcements, with accompanying letters, were mailed to key Negro ministers and religious leaders in the Columbia area concerning participation on the part of Negro churchmen in The Columbia Lay School of Theology winter courses. The Board of Directors of the Lay School had previously voted to admit Negroes, but no publicity concerning the school had been sent to Negro churches.

A speakers bureau to place speakers before church groups is still in the initial planning stages.

It is interesting to note that the Columbia Ministerial Association (white) voted in January to invite all ministers to membership. Luncheon meetings, which were being held at the University of South Carolina, are continuing on a monthly basis.

The program emphasis upon education has increased in local councils and at the state level in the past few months. Citizen support for programs of adult education has received special emphasis in local council meetings, which have been held in Columbia and Rock Hill. In February, the chairman of the Education Committee and the Program Director set up the program for the workshop on the role of the citizen in upgrading and updating the public schools, one of the four workshops scheduled for the joint-conference of the Georgia-South Carolina Councils on Human Relations.

The Public Relations Committee of South Carolina Student Council
on Human Relations

I. Background

Since the court ordered integration of Clemson College in January of 1963 when Mr. Harvey Gantt was enrolled at Clemson as the first Negro student to enter any formerly all-white college in the state, there have been few additional Negro students seeking enrollment.

The desegregation of Clemson was followed by that of University of South Carolina in September of 1963 when four students were enrolled after a court order admitting Miss Henri Monteith, three at the University in Columbia, one at the University Center in Beaufort.

The situation at present, the second semester of the academic year 1963-1964, concerning Negro enrollment in the Colleges is as follows: Mr. Gantt is continuing his education in the School of Architecture at Clemson; a young lady was admitted in the fall of 1963 as a Freshman; the four Negro students at the University have re-enrolled for the second semester. A total of six Negro students are now enrolled in the two largest state supported colleges--five among a total enrollment of around 11,000 students. It should be added that degegregation at both of these colleges was achieved quietly with a minimum of difficulty. The six students are exceptionally high calibre and are making a fine contribution to the total life of the colleges at many levels.

II. The Position of the Colleges

It is apparent that Clemson and University of South Carolina will continue to comply with "the letter of the law," admitting other Negro students who qualify. It remains to be seen as to whether the colleges will attempt to be more selective with Negro applicants than with white applicants. The basic attitude of the politically appointed Boards of Trustees seems to be that of reluctant acceptance of a minimum number. Certainly nothing is to be done to encourage any Negro student to enroll, not even the top graduates of the best Negro High Schools, most of whom are being offered liberal scholarships to attend the leading universities of the country elsewhere. Thus South Carolina is continuing, as has been true for decades, to lose its finest potential leadership at a time when it is more desperately needed than in any period of history.

It is believed that the Board of Trustees of Winthrop (South Carolina College for Women) may accept Negro applicants without a court case.

The private colleges of the state are beginning to take a few first steps toward desegregation. The motivation with these private, church-related colleges is primarily economic. Expansion on a broad scale is not possible without foundation grants and federal support (National Science Foundation projects, and loans as for example.) These colleges are already losing large amounts which may be available if and when the colleges are integrated. The general climate of this state and the conservatism of the parent bodies with which the colleges are affiliated, make it impossible at the present for these colleges to "recruit" or in most cases to announce an open policy. Many persons, however, in positions of leadership at these colleges are hopeful that qualified Negro students may make application. This would appreciably speed the process of desegregation.

III. The situation in the Negro schools and among Negro students

It is generally conceded that generations of segregation have succeeded in doing exactly what such a system of complete separation was designed to do; namely, to keep the Negro in an inferior position, dependent upon and beholden to a power structure completely controlled by the white community. The results of such a system are apparent everywhere among Negro students and adults with whom the students come in contact. Fears and feelings of inferiority are so deep-rooted as to constitute a major block to progress. This is doubly tragic at this time when new doors of opportunity are opening on every side for the qualified Negro, who because of his long conditioning is afraid to enter. One of the major aims of the Public Relations committee is to overcome this apprehension and develop self-confidence among capable Negro students in South Carolina.

In most cases the public school people--principals, guidance counselors, teachers--in the Negro schools of S. C. are fearful, very reluctant to take a stand or to encourage students to follow non-traditional patterns of action. There are notable exceptions to this, of course, but this group is definitely in the minority. Unfortunately, at times the schools confirm the "myth" rather than challenge it. Frequently, the Negro students are not confronted at all in their schools with the possibility of applying to the recently desegregated or soon to be desegregated schools in the state. As a matter of fact, in some cases about which we know, this possibility when suggested by students, was strongly discouraged by guidance counselors. It is not surprising that over and over again our student panel has confronted the feeling, strongly expressed, "I cannot compete with the white student, "I do not dare go because I may fail." Implied in this is the attitude of the inherent inferiority of the Negro, or the belief that his background and training is inadequate. Unfortunately the latter is sometimes true. One of the fallacies, however, which the student committee attempts to point out, is that of inherently inferior Negro schools. While it is true that there is a difference in the offerings and quality of teaching in some Negro schools as compared with some white schools, it is also true that there is a wide differential generally in urban and rural schools. It is also pointed out that a large proportion of the students enrolled in Clemson and in USC come from small town and rural areas of the state. A good serious student from an accredited Negro high school in South Carolina, who is willing to apply himself diligently to his studies, will be able to achieve successfully in his academic work in these colleges.

Guidance counselors have traditionally tended to favor the top few outstanding students and have secured for them excellent scholarships to study in some of the outstanding universities of the nation. This was the only recourse when the better colleges of South Carolina were closed to Negroes. It is found, however, that this pattern is continuing and that the other college-bound high school students are channeled into the Negro college.

To summarize, no group and few individuals in either the white or Negro communities of the state are taking seriously the matter of recruiting qualified Negro students for the formerly all-white colleges of South Carolina.

IV. The Work of the Public Relations Committee of SCSCHR

In the light of the background situation which has been described and in view of the tremendous need in South Carolina to increase integration on a wide scale, the committee began its visitation project. The type of "tokenism" which now prevails must not continue year in and year out. Realistically, the students recognize that recruiting Negro students for these colleges will be a long, slow, continuous process. The students also believe that a much larger number of Negro students in South Carolina colleges will do much in the long run to change traditional attitudes and practices in this state. In a very real sense the future leadership of S. C. is now on the college campus.

The committee is now in the process of visiting most of the larger cities and towns in the state, in which good accredited Negro high schools are located. Arrangements for the meetings are set up by adult SCCHR members in a given community, after communication from members of the staff of the Council. No attempt is made to go to the high schools or to make arrangements through teachers or school administrators, except in places such as Columbia, where the Council has a continuing working relationship with Negro principals and guidance counselors in the schools.

The panel of student leaders comprising the committee includes Mr. Harvey Gantt, chairman, the other three Negro undergraduates now enrolled at Clemson and USC, six to eight additional students from the above colleges and on occasions students from some of the private colleges. The meetings are informal, with ample time to answer questions and discuss problems which the local students raise. A brief opening statement of the needs in South Carolina, the opportunities now available, the role of the young Negro in the present social revolution, etc. gives the context for the discussion. This is usually done by Mr. Gantt or one of the other Negro students.

The Negro students always present a very positive image of the colleges which they are attending. This is genuine for they feel positive about them. It is good for Negro young people all over the state to come to know these pioneers who have opened the doors. But, as Harvy Gantt says on each occasion, "enthusiastic response to this meeting is not enough. Positive action on your part is needed now."

SOUTH CAROLINA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

Quarterly Report

December 1963 - February 1964

SCCHR Review

SCCHR's news reporting service to members and friends has been put on a regular monthly basis by the recently appointed Information Committee of which Mr. Thom Billington is chairman.

Mr. Billington, a former newsman with WIS-TV and THE STATE, Columbia, S.C., is currently serving as director of Christian Promotion (Public Relations) and editor of the Piedmont Churchman, publication of the Episcopal diocese of upper South Carolina. He is also an Associated Press (A.P.) correspondent.

Attached are copies of the December, January, and February issues of the Review, which report types of program activities formerly included in the quarterly reports to SRC.

Movie Theatres Desegregate in Columbia

There has been much noise and some rightist activity in Columbia concerning the work of Mayor Lester Bates, the City Council, an anonymous committee of 85 white leaders, and an all-Negro committee which led to the desegregation of movie theatres in Columbia.

Large advertisements have appeared in THE STATE signed by a group listing itself as PUBLIC INFORMATION COMMITTEE. This committee publishes a free booklet, "Privileges You Can Live Without" and presents news programs at 10 A.M. and 6 P.M. on WQXL.

The former president of The S. C. Association of White Citizens Councils, Mr. John Adger Manning of Columbia, has been publicly very critical. Quarter-page "ads" listing his name and approximately 50 others protested the "undemocratic desegregation action" taken in Columbia.

An organization about which little had been heard in recent years, The National Association for the Preservation of White People, placed pickets at City Hall and at the movie theatres to protest desegregation of the theatres. Small "ads" offering work at $1.50 per hour signed by the president of the above-named group have appeared in Columbia newspapers -- evidently there was not much spontaneous interest in the picketing effort.

Confidentially, the SCCHR executive director was 'phoned from the Columbia City Manager's office and requested to round up citizen support for the theatre managers after a premature announcement of the theatre's being "open" was made by the local press, about mid December.

In response to SCCHR's efforts, citizen support was immediate, widespread, and sizeable. Theatre managers were so favorably impressed by the response that they made permanent the new policy which had been adopted on a limited trial basis at first and to which basis Negro students had protested by setting up picket lines.

(Detailed information concerning SCCHR's most successful "Operation Grape Vine", which involved most of the mass opinion-forming organizations in Columbia, can be reported, if desired.)

"Firming-Up" SCCHR

There is still hesitancy and reluctancy on the part of many white people to join an "integrationist outfit" and be counted as members. Furthermore not a great many white persons who are SCCHR members wish to be publicly identified. It is hoped, however, that a more disciplined, better organized, more active SCCHR may be able to increase in membership and enlarge its financial support. A few reasons for this are as follows:

1) Court-ordered desegregation of Clemson College, the University of South Carolina, and the public schools of Charleston -- a few more successful suits are necessary, most people agree.

2) Pioneer efforts of SCCHR in calling public attention on May 2, 1963, to the interrelationship between poverty, school drop-outs, rejectees for military service due to failure to pass mental tests, functional illiterates; and, the failure of ARA and MDTA training programs to get off the ground -- some strategically placed leaders are crediting SCCHR with having created the awareness and provided momentum which culminated in securing of 5.6 million dollars for South Carolina's Special Training for Economic Progress (STEP program). (For details on STEP see Report of the Activities of Field Representative of SCCHR, which is enclosed.)

3) SCCHR's unique role in opening without incident such facilities as the Downtowner Motel, the Richland County Public Library conference room, eating and meeting facilities of the Wade Hampton Hotel, etc.

4) The modification of the political climate under the leadership of Governor Donald Russell.

5) The interest of economic leaders in industrialization and realization of the need and value of trained manpower, Negro as well as white.

Mid-Winter Meeting, SCCHR Board of Directors

On February 5, 1964, the first Board meeting of the calendar year met at the Wade Hampton Hotel, Columbia. (See attached materials.)

The twenty new members of the Board add to the range of skills and to the representative nature of the Board. For the first time there are now on the Board faculty members from Clemson and the U. of S.C., an insurance executive, a member of the State Department of Education, the head of the psychology department at the State Hospital, and leaders of numerous lay organizations.

To this meeting were invited members and friends from several communities in which there is interest in forming new councils. Present also were representatives of the four inter-county leadership conferences held regularly by the SCCHR field representative, Mr. L. S. James. (See again his Report, enclosed.)

Materials prepared for use by small working groups at this Board meeting are being refined for more wide-spread uses. Recommendations made to strengthen SCCHR's program and structure are being acted upon slowly. Progress will be reported, as made.

Growing Vitality of Membership Groups

Local councils on human relations are upgrading their programs. Attendance at monthly meetings of the Columbia Council has grown so that a larger meeting place has had to be found. The Southern School News reported the February meeting.

The Sumter Council is gaining vigor through engaging in several action programs, one of which is an effort to set up for the county the distribution of Surplus Foods.

The newly formed Aiken Council now has 72 members. Mr. Paul Anthony of SRC was featured speaker at the February meeting.

The Columbia Inter-Collegiate Council is bursting with vigor and for lack of a large enough meeting place.

The S.C. Student Council also is expanding its program and effectiveness as attested to in the enclosed Report of Program Director.

Speeding the Thaw

A heavy correspondence, many interviews and a large distribution program are being used to lay a solid foundation for planned membership and finance campaigns.

Finance

At the end of the quarter, the executive director made a trip to New York to explore new sources of support and to discuss proposals for new grants with old friends. Quarterly Finance Report is enclosed.

REPORT OF PROGRAM DIRECTOR
December 1963--February 1964

The student program of SCCHR began this quarter with the first conference of this academic year held December 8-10, 1963 at Penn Center.

Seventy-five students from 15 South Carolina colleges met in conference at Penn Center December 6-8 to think together concerning the role of the student in our changing society and to plan for the work of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations. The SCSCHR, an integral part of the total program of the Council, is now in its third year of work. One of the most important phases of the total student program each year has been the student conference.

The focus of the December conference was implied in its theme: "The New Revolution: Challenge and Response." An able analysis of the continuing revolution in the south and the nation was made by Mr. Vernon Jordan of the Southern Regional Council staff. South Carolina's own Dr. James McBride Dabbs followed with an address, "Meeting the Demands of the Present." These presentations set the stage for full discussion of various issues and problems confronting us. Dialogue and Task Forde groups dealt with "Feelings and Fears: an honest confrontation; ways of work on the local campus; the role of the church; student responsibility in the community; students and the Freedom Movement."

Progress reports were made on the Education Project initiated at the student conference last spring. Tutorial programs are now being sponsored by SCSCHR members with high school students in Columbia and with elementary children in Spartanburg; a "readiness" program for first graders is to begin the second semester.

The student conferences, which have been sponsored by the student council twice each year, provide direction and inspiration for a continuing student program. Planning for these conferences is done democratically by student members of the steering committee of SCSCHR. This constitutes one of the Council's major efforts in leadership training. (Conference program attached in exhibit.)

The Tutorial Program begun in November in the Columbia area at Booker Washington High School has increased from 6 to 15 volunteers who are now giving time to this work. The director of guidance counseling who coordinates the program has written an evaluation which appears in the February 28th News Letter of the South Carolina Student Council. (Exhibit attached)

Recently the counselor has commented that this program was not only of value in upgrading the students academically, but was in a very real way preparing them to live in an integrated society. Most of these students have never before had contact with a white person who has accepted them as fellow human beings. It is recognized that this type of project should be set up in many communities throughout the state. The student council plans to intensify its efforts in the tutorial field.

A third important phase of the student council's work this quarter has been that of the public relations committee, of which Mr. Harvey Gantt is chairman. A full description of the background, present situation and work of this committee is included in this report.

The Committee on the Church and Human Relations is hoping to extend its membership and give greater support to committed religious leaders, ministers and laymen, throughout the state who are isolated and sometimes suffer varying types of recrimination for their stand on race relations. With this in mind, the chairman of this committee has invited Rev. Will Campbell of the Committee of Southern Churchman to give a block of time to South Carolina in establishing contacts and bringing together churchmen in a closer working relationship. The committee urged attendance on the part of Negro church women at the World Day of Prayer Services in Columbia, February 14 (opened to all for the first time) and at the annual meeting of United church women. Announcements with accompanying letters were mailed to key Negro ministers and religious leaders in the Columbia area concerning participation on the part of Negro churchmen in The Columbia Lay School of Theology winter courses. The Board of Directors of the Lay School had previously voted to admit Negroes, but no publicity concerning the school had been sent to Negro churches.

A speakers bureau to place speakers before church groups is still in the initial planning stages.

It is interesting to note that the Columbia Ministerial Association (white) voted in January to invite all ministers to membership. Luncheon meetings, which were being held at the University of South Carolina, are continuing on a monthly basis.

The program emphasis upon education has increased in local councils and at the state level in the past few months. Citizen support for programs of adult education has received special emphasis in local council meetings, which have been held in Columbia and Rock Hill. In February, the chairman of the Education Committee and the Program Director set up the program for the workshop on the role of the citizen in upgrading and updating the public schools, one of the four workshops scheduled for the joint-conference of the Georgia-South Carolina Councils on Human Relations.

The Public Relations Committee of South Carolina Student Council
on Human Relations

I. Background

Since the court ordered integration of Clemson College in January of 1963 when Mr. Harvey Gantt was enrolled at Clemson as the first Negro student to enter any formerly all-white college in the state, there have been few additional Negro students seeking enrollment.

The desegregation of Clemson was followed by that of University of South Carolina in September of 1963 when four students were enrolled after a court order admitting Miss Henri Monteith, three at the University in Columbia, one at the University Center in Beaufort.

The situation at present, the second semester of the academic year 1963-1964, concerning Negro enrollment in the Colleges is as follows: Mr. Gantt is continuing his education in the School of Architecture at Clemson; a young lady was admitted in the fall of 1963 as a Freshman; the four Negro students at the University have re-enrolled for the second semester. A total of six Negro students are now enrolled in the two largest state supported colleges--five among a total enrollment of around 11,000 students. It should be added that degegregation at both of these colleges was achieved quietly with a minimum of difficulty. The six students are exceptionally high calibre and are making a fine contribution to the total life of the colleges at many levels.

II. The Position of the Colleges

It is apparent that Clemson and University of South Carolina will continue to comply with "the letter of the law," admitting other Negro students who qualify. It remains to be seen as to whether the colleges will attempt to be more selective with Negro applicants than with white applicants. The basic attitude of the politically appointed Boards of Trustees seems to be that of reluctant acceptance of a minimum number. Certainly nothing is to be done to encourage any Negro student to enroll, not even the top graduates of the best Negro High Schools, most of whom are being offered liberal scholarships to attend the leading universities of the country elsewhere. Thus South Carolina is continuing, as has been true for decades, to lose its finest potential leadership at a time when it is more desperately needed than in any period of history.

It is believed that the Board of Trustees of Winthrop (South Carolina College for Women) may accept Negro applicants without a court case.

The private colleges of the state are beginning to take a few first steps toward desegregation. The motivation with these private, church-related colleges is primarily economic. Expansion on a broad scale is not possible without foundation grants and federal support (National Science Foundation projects, and loans as for example.) These colleges are already losing large amounts which may be available if and when the colleges are integrated. The general climate of this state and the conservatism of the parent bodies with which the colleges are affiliated, make it impossible at the present for these colleges to "recruit" or in most cases to announce an open policy. Many persons, however, in positions of leadership at these colleges are hopeful that qualified Negro students may make application. This would appreciably speed the process of desegregation.

III. The situation in the Negro schools and among Negro students

It is generally conceded that generations of segregation have succeeded in doing exactly what such a system of complete separation was designed to do; namely, to keep the Negro in an inferior position, dependent upon and beholden to a power structure completely controlled by the white community. The results of such a system are apparent everywhere among Negro students and adults with whom the students come in contact. Fears and feelings of inferiority are so deep-rooted as to constitute a major block to progress. This is doubly tragic at this time when new doors of opportunity are opening on every side for the qualified Negro, who because of his long conditioning is afraid to enter. One of the major aims of the Public Relations committee is to overcome this apprehension and develop self-confidence among capable Negro students in South Carolina.

In most cases the public school people--principals, guidance counselors, teachers--in the Negro schools of S. C. are fearful, very reluctant to take a stand or to encourage students to follow non-traditional patterns of action. There are notable exceptions to this, of course, but this group is definitely in the minority. Unfortunately, at times the schools confirm the "myth" rather than challenge it. Frequently, the Negro students are not confronted at all in their schools with the possibility of applying to the recently desegregated or soon to be desegregated schools in the state. As a matter of fact, in some cases about which we know, this possibility when suggested by students, was strongly discouraged by guidance counselors. It is not surprising that over and over again our student panel has confronted the feeling, strongly expressed, "I cannot compete with the white student, "I do not dare go because I may fail." Implied in this is the attitude of the inherent inferiority of the Negro, or the belief that his background and training is inadequate. Unfortunately the latter is sometimes true. One of the fallacies, however, which the student committee attempts to point out, is that of inherently inferior Negro schools. While it is true that there is a difference in the offerings and quality of teaching in some Negro schools as compared with some white schools, it is also true that there is a wide differential generally in urban and rural schools. It is also pointed out that a large proportion of the students enrolled in Clemson and in USC come from small town and rural areas of the state. A good serious student from an accredited Negro high school in South Carolina, who is willing to apply himself diligently to his studies, will be able to achieve successfully in his academic work in these colleges.

Guidance counselors have traditionally tended to favor the top few outstanding students and have secured for them excellent scholarships to study in some of the outstanding universities of the nation. This was the only recourse when the better colleges of South Carolina were closed to Negroes. It is found, however, that this pattern is continuing and that the other college-bound high school students are channeled into the Negro college.

To summarize, no group and few individuals in either the white or Negro communities of the state are taking seriously the matter of recruiting qualified Negro students for the formerly all-white colleges of South Carolina.

IV. The Work of the Public Relations Committee of SCSCHR

In the light of the background situation which has been described and in view of the tremendous need in South Carolina to increase integration on a wide scale, the committee began its visitation project. The type of "tokenism" which now prevails must not continue year in and year out. Realistically, the students recognize that recruiting Negro students for these colleges will be a long, slow, continuous process. The students also believe that a much larger number of Negro students in South Carolina colleges will do much in the long run to change traditional attitudes and practices in this state. In a very real sense the future leadership of S. C. is now on the college campus.

The committee is now in the process of visiting most of the larger cities and towns in the state, in which good accredited Negro high schools are located. Arrangements for the meetings are set up by adult SCCHR members in a given community, after communication from members of the staff of the Council. No attempt is made to go to the high schools or to make arrangements through teachers or school administrators, except in places such as Columbia, where the Council has a continuing working relationship with Negro principals and guidance counselors in the schools.

The panel of student leaders comprising the committee includes Mr. Harvey Gantt, chairman, the other three Negro undergraduates now enrolled at Clemson and USC, six to eight additional students from the above colleges and on occasions students from some of the private colleges. The meetings are informal, with ample time to answer questions and discuss problems which the local students raise. A brief opening statement of the needs in South Carolina, the opportunities now available, the role of the young Negro in the present social revolution, etc. gives the context for the discussion. This is usually done by Mr. Gantt or one of the other Negro students.

The Negro students always present a very positive image of the colleges which they are attending. This is genuine for they feel positive about them. It is good for Negro young people all over the state to come to know these pioneers who have opened the doors. But, as Harvy Gantt says on each occasion, "enthusiastic response to this meeting is not enough. Positive action on your part is needed now."

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Katherine Jones and Dorothy Webster

QUARTERLY REPORT: December, January, February 1963-64

Almost the entire quarter has been devoted to the Annual Meeting. In early December we received confirmation of Burke Marshall's acceptance of our invitation to be our dinner speaker. We then started recruiting other program participants, revising our program outline in accordance with the talent available. Governor Clement announced the creation of the Tennessee Commission on Human Relations on January 1, 1964, and named 16 members to it. Five were named later in the month. While the limitations in selection were disappointing (no white business or industry representative) the fulfilling of his pledge gave impetus to our meeting.

It is unnecessary to detail the myriad telephone calls and maneuvers utilized in gaining acceptance of our invitation by mayors of several Tennessee cities. Mayor Duncan of Knoxville declined at the last minute (he is one of our members) because of illness was hospitalized. Fortunately, Mr. Backus, Johnson City vice-mayor appeared on the scene, and his genuine, non-political interest in racial progress added an authentic note to the panel discussion. The annual meeting voted to have the next NEWSLETTER printed, which has resulted in a delay in getting it out.

In evaluating the annual meeting, I think its positive contribution included the holding of all meetings at a downtown hotel, and the educational experience for mayors, and members of the Governor's Commission who attended certain of the sessions. There was considerable "status and prestige" involved in the meeting, and we hope that this will pay off in the Council's acceptance as a respectable, reliable force for state and community progress. On the negative side was the lack of enrichment and limited direct participation of our own members. The 24 hour meeting is the time limit our membership has determined for the annual meeting and I question the wisdom of trying to extend it. The meeting received considerable publicity through local newspapers prior to the meeting and afterwards due to the involvement of both the publisher and the editor of the Nashville Tennessean.

We were pleased that Vernon Jordan was present at our meeting, and regretted that matters were so rushed that there was little opportunity to seek his guidance and assistance. I am especially regretful that he was not introduced at the Board or membership meetings.

Tennessee Commission on Human Relations

The Governor's Commission attended the Thursday afternoon session panel discussion of mayors and power structure representatives. The Commissioners were the Council's guests that evening at the dinner meeting addressed by Mr. Marshall. We have supplied the Commission with various materials including, "The State Executive and Civil Rights", Kentucky Commission reports and several of our own publications. Their participation in our meeting undoubtedly had some mutual advantage in implying that change was happening on several fronts, and was to be expected and accepted. The Governor's Commission's initial meeting coincided with our annual meeting by plan; second meeting was held on February 25. Members of the Commission are enthusiastic about its potentials. It is reported that the Governor's most politically minded Commissioner (of Education) is sitting in throughout the meetings, while other Commissioners come and go.

Survey of Opportunities for Vocational and Technical Training in Tennessee

This survey was authorized at the November 1963 Board meeting, to be completed and readied for distribution at the annual meeting. By Board action, the survey was to be made by Board members. The number of returns was disappointing. No report was received from Knoxville, although we have seven Board members there. K. Jones eventually had to make the Nashville survey. It is probable that some additional cities would have been included if the survey had not coincided with the Christmas season, and if the staff had personally designated members from our membership roster. However, the meager returns confirmed Paul Anthony's November evaluation that the Board itself had not accepted real responsibility for the Council. The survey has since been forwarded to all current Board members along with the January Board meeting and annual meeting minutes. (This was President Willis' decision.)

Knoxville

Under the auspicies of Fellowship House and with our partial support, Paul Rilling spoke in Knoxville on January 22. Since it was the night before our annual meeting, I could not attend, and have not been able to obtain an adequate report of the meeting. I gather that the crowd was disappointing, but that Paul was well received. It will be necessary to wait until my next visit to learn what really happened.

At a Federal District Court hearing in February 1964, the school board announced plans to desegregate all 12 grades in September 1964. The Board is to submit a plan by June 5, 1964 to "eliminate all racially discriminatory practices". This plan will include the Knoxville Evening School (for adults) which also operates under the Board of Education.

Memphis

A chapter meeting was held in February 1964 - the first since November. Louise Young attended and reported that there was considerable interest and an attendance of about 50, although there were several other meetings that same night in which some of our membership was involved. Mr. A. W. Willis, vice-chairman of the Governor's Commission and one of the young Memphis Negro lawyers, gave an enthusiastic report of the first meeting of the Commission. The state council annual meeting was also reviewed. An unfavorable report was made about the treatment of Negro students at Memphis State University. This was evidently entirely unanticipated by both Negro and white members, and we hope that the Memphis chapter will follow through on correcting this, as they agreed to do. Memphis has not had regular meetings or programs, but there is a drive on at present to bring in new members, and to broaden the base of their operations.

Cookeville

Another crisis in Cookeville was resolved due to the personal intervention of the State Commissioner of Education. Through our appeal to the chairman of the Governor's Commission, he enlisted the assistance of the Commissioner. In February 1964, the college forensic tournament was to meet at Tennessee Tech (TPI) when it was discovered that motels would not accept Negroes. Through numerous telephone calls, the Commissioner of Education brought pressure on the college president for motel desegregation. Two motels were promptly opened and the Negro college students report that they were cordially received, and Fisk University returned with a first prize.

Oak Ridge

Members have asked for a report on what would be involved in becoming a chapter. The local council is defunct, but there is some interest in reviving it. Material has been sent.

Chattanooga

Under leadership of Mayor Kelley, a Mayor's Commission (or Committee) on Human Relations has been formed, and is at work. While some of our members are a part of it, the names and activities are not openly known, and it operates quietly. Under the auspicies of the Council for Cooperative Action, and some of the regional organizations, a large regional meeting is being planned for April 14 and 15. TCHR will probably be one of the sponsors, but we are awaiting further details.

Finance and Membership

See attached material which was prepared for the state meeting. Our solvency at the end of the fiscal year was a new experience. The membership count was made from membership cards, and does not include double memberships (of husband and wife). When these additional members are added, it brings the membership count to about 675.

Respectfully submitted,

Nashville - (Addenda)

In December 1963, the National Council of Churches held a conference in Nashville for ministers and others working with students. The discussion revolved around stimulating interest and concern in race relations. This was not a public meeting, but the press was admitted, and the news story and following editorial carried in the Nashville Banner raised a furor in Nashville. Jim Bevel was one of the participants. Apparently the sessions were informal brain-storming sessions, but from the newspaper accounts, the National Council of Churches was promoting the breakdown of family ties, and encouraging children to be disobedient. Although remarks were taken out of context, it seems evident that the organization and administration of the consultation was unwise. The Nashville Banner then repeated its editorial and news story in special tear-sheets, and the supply was exhausted before I could obtain a copy.

Many conservative church members, who have been uneasy about NCC position statements immediately began to denounce the NCC in all its phases. The John Birch Society got on the band wagon. Statements were further misinterpreted. Some churches have withdrawn financial support of the NCC. Numerous telephone calls have been received in Elbert Jean's office and some irate visitors have appeared in the building which we share with the Southern Project of NCC. Our office was not invited to the consultation, but has not avoided the whirlwind. Some of our undertakings have been confused with NCC, both in Nashville and Memphis. The usual accusations of communist domination has been made. Letters to the editor have abounded, and other groups have distributed the Banner editorial and news story. A recent local TV program including six ministers and a young John Birch lawyer was calm and rational. It is not so much what hits the news media as the under current of propaganda.

The Southern Project of NCC is disbanding its Nashville office on March 13. We have negotiated to purchase their inventory with the plan of re-selling part of it, if we can. The transaction has not been completed.

Nashville has experienced a series of meetings on school drop-outs, largely organized by Mrs. Tom Ragland and Mrs. James Todd. They have resulted in bringing together representatives of PTA, schools, employment service, United Church Women, social agency representatives, etc. They have been loosely organized, but have served to expose the inadequacy of the school programs, and the technical training offered in school and past high school. TCHR has been represented as has the Nashville Chapter.

On January 18, 1964, there was a conference on automation and education under the sponsorship of Peabody College, Center for Southern Education Studies, and U. S. Congressman Richard Fulton who represents Nashville (the 5th District). On invitation, I attended. While I did not find it especially stimulating, I do think it brought together some business, labor and community leaders and their recognition of the need to increase and modify training in relation to the changes in the economic structure.

On March 12, there will be a Middle Tennessee Conference on Religion and Race. This is the long delayed follow-up on the January 1963 Chicago meeting. (See enclosed program). We have been asked to supply various materials, and serve as a resource person.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

BOARD MEETING
January 24, 1964

The Board meeting of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations met Friday morning at the Andrew Jackson Hotel in Nashville. Mr. George Barrett presided.

The first order of business being the election of officers, Mr. Barrett asked for the report of the nominating committee. Mrs. Todd presented the proposed slate of officers. For president, William Willis of Nashville; for vice-presidents, Dr. Vasco Smith of Memphis, John Compton of Nashville, and Lewis Sinclair of Knoxville; for secretary, Mrs. Fran Silver of Oak Ridge; and for treasurer, Dr. G. J. Tarleton of Nashville. The committee further proposed Mrs. Eugene Kilgore of Johnson City, Mrs. Fred Muhleman of Chattanooga and Mrs. Ray Allen of Memphis to serve as members of the Executive Committee. Mrs. Hull moved the adoption of the slate; Rev. Proudfoot seconded and the officers were duly elected.

Kay Jones, executive director, gave a report of the action taken on resolutions previously passed by the board. A copy of this report is attached.

Rev. Crutcher moved that the 1964 annual meeting be held early in November. Mrs. Silver seconded asking that the actual dates be set well in advance of the meeting. The time for the next Board meeting was discussed and Mrs. Ish issued an invitation for the meeting to be held in Memphis. Rev. Jones moved the adoption of her invitation, Mrs. Silver seconded and the motion was adopted. Mrs. Schweid moved that the Executive Committee be authorized to decide a time for the Board meeting, Rev. Jones seconded and the motion carried.

Mrs. Silver brought to the attention of the Board the motion adopted at the November 2 meeting calling for the appointment of a committee to evaluate the TCHR office, the staff, the program, the executive committee and the board members and its interrelation of these component parts with its officers. This committee has not been appointed and Mrs. Silver moved that Mr. Willis do so immediately and that the committee be instructed to meet before the next Board meeting and bring a report. Rev. Crutcher seconded and the motion was adopted.

Mrs. Peelle suggested that "Operation Benchmark" be repeated this coming July.

Mrs. Todd moved that a resolution be sent to all members of the Congressional Delegation from Tennessee urging their support of the entire Civil Rights Bill and that the TCHR further urge its individual members to write. Mr. Porter seconded the motion and it was adopted.

Mrs. Schweid moved that Miss Kay Jones be instructed to take a two weeks vacation with pay as soon as possible. Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion carried.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. B. R. Schweid, Secretary

ADDENDA TO BOARD MINUTES

The resolution to be sent to the Tennessee Congressional Delegation, urging their support of the entire Civil Rights Bill was not sent. A review of the Council's charter, the Council's by-laws, and the federal tax exemption regulations were made by President Willis. Both the charter and the by-laws state that "no part of its (the Council's) activities shall be... attempting to influence legislation." This same phrase is included in the federal tax exemption certification. It is believed that these restrictions precluded our implementation of the resolution.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING
January 23, 1964

The Annual Membership meeting of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations was convened Thursday afternoon, January 23, 1964 at the Andrew Jackson Hotel in Nashville. Mr. George Barrett, president, was in the chair.

Mrs. James Todd moved that the minutes be adopted as circularized to the membership. Motion seconded by Mrs. Schweid and adopted.

Mr. Barrett asked for the report of the nominating committee which Mrs. Todd presented. Mr. Barrett then called for nominations from the floor and Mrs. Todd nominated Mrs. Garland Fisher and Rev. Dogan Williams, both of Bristol, for Board members for terms ending in 1966. These nominations were seconded by Mrs. Fuson, who then moved the election of all those who had been nominated by acclamation. Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion was adopted. The report of those so nominated and subsequently elected is attached.

Dr. G. J. Tarleton, treasurer gave the treasurer's report. Rev. Proudfoot moved its acceptance, Mrs. Fuson seconded and the motion was adopted. The report is attached.

The chairman of the membership committee, Mrs. Fran Silver, gave her committee's report. She stated that the committee regretted it had been unable to fulfill its responsibility of increasing the membership, but it was hoped that with the aid of the office staff, this could be accomplished in the near future. The committee proposed that the state be apportioned into its geographical divisions and board members be assigned to go into the communities within these divisions and actively recruit members. Mrs. Silver moved that the Council underwrite the expenses of these individuals. Mr. Porter seconded the motion and it was adopted.

Mrs. Fuson announced that Mrs. Gladys Rawlings, executive secretary of the Philadelphia Friends Committee on Race Relations will present the Green Circle Program (a technique for teaching sound race relations) at the Social Religious Building, Peabody College at 8 p.m., March 12. The meeting is open to the public and is under the sponsorship of the Nashville Community Relations Council. TCHR members along with teachers are especially urged to attend.

Mrs. Silver moved that the membership extend its thanks to the retiring board members. Rev. Crutcher seconded and the motion was adopted.

Rev. M. J. Jones read a resolution in memory of Senator Estes Kefauver. Mr. Porter moved its adoption, Miss Frances Thompson seconded and the motion was adopted. Rev. Will D. Campbell read a resolution in memory of President John F. Kennedy, Rev. Jones moved its adoption, Mrs. Todd seconded and the resolution was adopted. Miss Louise Young read a resolution in memory of Mrs. Blanche Fensterwald which had been previously adopted by the board. Miss Young moved its adoption by the membership, Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion carried. Copies of all three resolutions are attached.

Miss Gault suggested that a report of the Annual Meeting be sent to Tennessee Senators and Representatives and that it also be circularized to various public officials. Mrs. Ray Allen asked that the Representatives to the Tennessee General Assembly be involved in local activities of the TCHR. Mrs. Fuson suggested that the report of the annual meeting to these government officials should be a printed report mailed first class with a cover letter.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. B. R. Schweid, Secretary

REPORT BY KATHERINE JONES, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

At the November 1963 Board meeting a question was raised regarding implementation of previous actions of the Board. Therefore, Board and membership minutes were reviewed, beginning with the October 1962 annual meeting in Chattanooga. A resolution in regard to the denial of educational opportunities by the state of Tennessee, to Negro blind children was adopted at this meeting. In early December 1962, through the impetus of TCHR, representatives of United Church Women, the American Association of University Women, The National Council of Negro Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, and the Tennessee Council on Human Relations, made a direct personal plea to Governor Ellington, asking what plan the state had for educating Negro blind children. The Negro unit was reopened in January, and first grade Negro blind children were integrated into the Tennessee School for the Blind at Donelson.

Letters were written to James Meredith, the Reverend Duncan Gray and Sidna Brower in regard to their positive part in the integration of the University of Mississippi. These communications had been authorized at the 1962 annual meeting. The 1962 annual meeting also adopted a resolution requesting members to work for integrated hospital service throughout the state and for recruitment of Negro students for medical schools which had recently dropped racial bars. Although the state council mounted no direct drive for hospital service, Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis in particular, have experienced considerable success in extending hospital service. State Council mimeographed and distributed the report of the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights, entitled "A Survey of Health Facilities, Health Services, and Professional Opportunities for Whites and Negroes in Davidson County, Tennessee." The report was sent to local medical school directors, selected physicians, medical societies, hospitals, etc. About 120 copies were originally mailed. Requests since then have exhausted our original supply of 200 copies. The report has been an effective weapon in bringing about change in the Nashville area. Direct costs of the survey, borne by TCHR were $142.08.

TCHR underwrote the cost of printing and mailing "Jobs and Color". A copy was sent to each TCHR member in addition to distribution to state government leadership. Additional copies are available. Total direct cost to TCHR for printing was $340.85.

Constitutional amendment to abolish the poll tax was ratified by the Tennessee Legislature in 1963. State parks in Tennessee are fully open in accordance with Commissioner McSween's orders. Former restrictions pertaining to separate service in restaurants have been abandoned. The Governor created the State Commission on Human Relations and announced the appointment of 21 Commissioners in January 1964.

A survey of desegregation across the state was authorized, completed and mailed to the membership under title "Operation Benchmark". A revised and updated report on Memphis was sent to the membership in December.

An accounting of geographic location of membership and source of contributions and dues payments was submitted to the Board of Directors in May 1963. On Board request, this report was updated and submitted at the membership meeting in January '64.

President Kennedy was urged to issue an executive order banning discrimination in housing. The President was also urged to speak directly to the south at the time of his May 1963 visit to Nashville. Both of these requests were made on Board authorization.

Staff has not been successful in its efforts to further an integration policy in state PTA. A committee authorized by the Executive Committee in August 1963 on further use of the Field Foundation Grant, and Board authorized committee in November 1963 on staff and board responsibilities have not been implemented. Appointments to the committees have not been made.

SURVEY OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOCATIONAL AND TECHNICAL TRAINING IN TENNESSEE

January, 1964

In December, 1963, a questionnaire was sent to members of the Board of Directors of the Council in an effort to determine the currently available opportunities for vocational and technical training throughout the state. This survey was authorized by the Board at its November meeting in recognition of the increasing interest in employment and job training for all citizens faced with the revolutionary changes in employment patterns, and especially for Negroes seeking entrance into technical fields of employment.

The following report, compiled from replies received from Chattanooga, Jackson, Johnson City, Murfreesboro, Memphis, Oak Ridge, and Nashville, does not claim to be either complete or absolutely accurate. Responses varied in the degree of inclusiveness they considered appropriate. This compilation is simply a rough effort to give some picture of the current situation. Council members are aware of the continual changes in all areas of human relations. What was the situation yesterday may be somewhat different today, and totally changed tomorrow.

SURVEY OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR VOCATIONAL AND TECHNICAL

TRAINING IN TENNESSEE

Chattanooga's report listed two available facilities: Chattanooga Technical Institute, a post high school and integrated for the second semester this year, and McKenzie Business College, a business training school which has one Negro enrolled and one accepted for the second semester. There is a projected manpower re-training program (Manpower Development and Training Act). One manpower re-training project was begun but there were no qualified Negro applicants. Certain restrictions such as a requirement of being head of a family and a three year employment history reduced the number of applicants. Type of training was limited to draftsmen which further eliminated applicants as it required higher mathematical skill. Effort is being made to increase the number of Negroes in training programs by the Mayor's Full Employment Committee, the Chattanooga Council for Co-Operative Action, the N.A.A.C.P. and the Community Relations Conference.

In Jackson the only available facility, Southside High School, gives Electronic Training for adults and high school and is segregated. There is projected for 1964 a Regional Vocational Technical Training School. Negro applications have not been accepted even though officially the school is open. The N.A.A.C.P. would appear to be the only organization working for registration of Negroes in training programs.

The Johnson City Vocational School, providing adult and high school programs, integrated approximately two months ago. The adult evening class, in Auto Mechanics, was previously all Negro, has a current enrollment of about six whites and seven Negroes and two or three Negroes are enrolled in other formerly all white classes. A manpower training school has been approved for the Tri-City area to be built near the Tri-City Airport; construction has not yet begun. The N.A.A.C.P., the Progressive League and the Johnson City Council for Community Concerns are all working for increased Negro registration.

In Murfreesboro technical training is offered at Rutherford County Central High School where one Negro is enrolled, and at Holloway High School which is all Negro. The Murfreesboro-Rutherford County Training Program, a coordinated city-county program, will go into operation fully in the fall of 1964. Currently the two are cooperating and through a coordinator are providing some programs. There are five Negroes in the present class for licensed practical nurses. As the program will be geared to the needs of industry, industry's hiring policies will influence the degree of integration. However, major industries have begun hiring Negroes. The training program for the retarded reports that in its brief operation it enrolled five Negro women without incident. There are no organizations actively working for increased registration of Negroes in local training programs though it was believed that an agency the Chamber of Commerce has been working for increased employment opportunities and the Mayor's Biracial Committee is interested in this area.

The Memphis Technical School which is for both adult and high school students has one Negro in an otherwise all white day classes and about ten Negroes in night classes. Booker T. Washington School for both adult and high school students is all Negro, and two private schools, William R. Moore School of Technology and Allied Technical are segregated. The Area-Vocation School, open from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m., is integrated, and a number of Negroes are enrolled in all programs except auto mechanics. Additional courses are contemplated in 1964. There has been active recruitment over radio station WDIA.

Oak Ridge reports a limited industrial arts and secretarial course at the high school but there is no technical high school. There is at present a program of study with regard to this need in the community though nothing positive has been decided. Officials of both Union and Management at Carbide in Oak Ridge endeavor to operate an apprenticeship program without racial prejudice but the feelings of prejudice on the part of many of the craftsmen make it difficult for Negroes to enroll in or complete the apprentice program. The Oak Ridge Community Relations Council has in the past made an effort to interest Negroes in applying to the apprenticeship training at Oak Ridge plants, and on invitation of the N.A.A.C.P., Dr. Vivian Henderson visited Oak Ridge last year to encourage increased Negro participation.

The Nashville Community Conference on Employment Opportunity is advocating a detailed census of the Negro population to determine current skills and needs. They believe that we cannot determine effective training until we know what our labor profile is in untrained, under employed and potentially unemployed due to automation. Assistance of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations requested in appeal to organized labor to assure their support of non-discriminatory training and employment.

Nashville offers vocational and technical training to high school students at Pearl High School (all Negro) and at Hume Fogg Vocational School (all white but officially desegregated in January, 1964). Courses offered at the schools are as follows: At Pearl, cosmetology, business, electronics, auto mechanics, trowel trades, tailoring and woodworking. At Hume Fogg, cosmetology, commercial art, drafting (which includes architectural and mechanical drafting), refrigeration and air conditioning, radio and television repair, machine shop, electricity, industrial chemistry, auto mechanics, and business and secretarial training.

Other high schools usually offer some commercial courses, plus mechanical drawing. For example, Hillsboro High School offers two years of typing, and one of shorthand in addition to instruction in mechanical and architectural drawing and industrial arts. Haynes High School (Negro) has courses in building trades, agriculture, typing, mechanical drawing and industrial arts.

Literary classes for adults are scheduled to begin at both Pearl High School and Hume Fogg on February 4, and are available without racial distinction.

The University of Tennessee, Nashville Center, offers general business courses at the college level including shorthand and typing. Of the 2100 students enrolled in the fall quarter about 100 are Negro.

Watkins Institute, a quasi-public adult education school, receives no state funds but is directed by Commissioners appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate. Watkins offers a variety of courses in languages, arts and homemaking skills. Of particular pertinence to this survey are courses available for the completion of high school, plus full commercial program with stenographic studies and business machine operation. It is strictly limited to whites only.

Three business colleges, under private auspices, offer full stenographic training including business machines, accounting, etc. None of them will accept Negro students. Training in comptometer operation and key punch is available without racial restriction, and Negroes have been enrolled at the Comptometer School. Students must pass an aptitude test given by the Employment Service before acceptance.

The National School of Business and Mason's Business School (all Negro) offer two year courses in office machines, typing, shorthand (beginning and advance), dictaphone and general office practice (Business English, accounting /beginning and advance/ Business Law, Business Math and Office Management). Secretarial Science is also a part of the curriculum. National School of Business has day and night classes while Mason's Business School has only night classes.

Nashville has one diesel school (segregated), an electronics institute (segregated), graphic arts school (segregated), and medical arts school with training in medical and dental technology and medical secretarial training (segregated). Training for medical laboratory and X-ray technicians is available at one school through segregated classes, with a night course offered to Negroes. These facilities are all privately operated as commercial ventures.

Registered nurse training is offered at five Nashville hospitals, but is available to Negroes only at Vanderbilt University Hospital (degree program) and at Madison Hospital (hospital program). Licensed practical nurse training is offered at several Nashville hospitals, but as far as is known, classes are not bi-racial. Nursing technician training is available at Vanderbilt without racial restriction.

Through the Manpower Development and Training Act, courses are currently available at Hume Fogg High School for auto mechanics, machinists, and mechanical draftsmen. A total of 85 persons are enrolled, including "several Negroes." An additional course in auto mechanics will begin in July, 1964.

As a project of the Area Vocational School, a two year IBM Data Processing Course was initiated on January 6, 1964 at Hume Fogg. Twenty students are enrolled, two are Negro. Another section of this course will begin in June. Prospective students must pass an aptitude test, but previous work history is not required.

Projected for Nashville is a large scale federally financed program for youth, age 17 through 21 years. Recruitment is proposed from the most disadvantaged groups, and specific technical training offered will be determined after a six weeks initial evaluation which may include testing, counselling, literacy course, remedial work, etc. Probable training will include sheet metal, sales, commercial cooking, auto body work, etc.

Working for increased registration for Nashville Negroes in trade training are the N.A.A.C.P., the Community Conference on Employment Opportunity, Nashville Christian Leadership Council, and Nashville Community Relations Council. The Metropolitan Committee on Human Relations has supported and encouraged Negro employment in nontraditional jobs, and the Metropolitan Government has adopted a merit employment policy, specifically eliminating race and creed as consideration for employment.

One of the questions on the survey asked for suggestions as to what assistance local human relation groups and the Tennessee Council on Human Relations staff might give toward improving trade training opportunities. Memphis suggested publicizing what opportunities are available through mass media such as radio and television programs. Murfreesboro also made this suggestion. Johnson City posed the need for a survey in that community of Negroes available for training and employment. Jackson asked that officials be encouraged to open the schools. Chattanooga suggested local enrichment programs, with a visitation program as an initial step and advocated assistance at the state level through contact with the Governor and Commissioner of Education. Workshops held at the University of Tennessee and Peabody instead of traditional Negro colleges supports and recognizes integrated education. Oak Ridge felt a need for general education programs as to what is available, possibly a tutorial program to prepare the student for enrollment, and asked a question in turn, how can local unions be encouraged to carry out national union policies when it comes to vocational training programs?

Report of Activities of Field Representative
of S. C. C. H. R. During The Months
December, January, February
1963-1964

The activities of our Field Representative during this period has been based largely on the following four projects:

1. Holding local leadership training meetings on a neighborhood county group basis.

2. Helping to publicize and recruit potential trainees for the new M. D. T. A. program (STEP) for South Carolina.

3. Helping farmers make appeals from local F. H. A's unfavorable decisions to the State Director of F. H. A.

4. Encouraging interested representatives to get an ARA project started.

Leadership Training Meetings:

As was stated in our previous report, all of the 24 counties which are eligible for ARA aid in South Carolina have been organized in neighborhood groups of six counties each. These groups have been meeting bi-monthly. Each group has had at least one meeting since the organization.

The agenda of these meetings has included such topics as follows:

a. To learn how to get help for employment under ARA and MDTA.
b. To get information on how to secure surplus foods for needy families.
c. How to exercise citizenship rights including participation in voter registration and precinct reorganization meetings.

Mr. James has helped the leaders from the counties to understand how to appraoch the State Officials in order to get the opportunities which are guaranteed by state and federal laws in many instances. He even contacted the S. C. Attorney General to find out the lawfulness of preventing Negroes from participation in reorganizational meeting of ward and precincts. He also found out from the State Attorney General how to get a lost registration day because of the illness of the registration officer restored.

All participants have been very pleased with the help, information, and advice received at these meetings. Even the agricultural county agents are beginning to attend these meetings. They are becoming very active in encouraging cooperation with our program of guidance and training.

New MDTA program, STEP for S. C.:

Every since the Governor of S. C. announced that a grant from the Federal government had been received under MDTA in the amount of $5,635, 994, our Field Representative has been helping to give wide state publicity to this program. This money is to be used to fight against the State's prime enemies--ignorance and unemployment. This program is known as Special Training for Economic Progress.(STEP).

Mr. James has been asked to assist the State Coordinator of MDTA in recruiting trainees throughout the state. He has been giving special emphasis to recruitment of potential trainees since the program was first announced January 1, 1964. He has already received credit for being responsible for recruiting more trainees for this program than any of the employees of the State Employment Commission. Since 5,000 unemployed persons are to be trained each year that the STEP program is in effect, he hopes to get 3,000 Negroes trained of the total 5000 annually. (See January 1964 issue of SCCHR Review, and circular letter announcing STEP program attached.)

Appeals to State Director of F. H. A. for Unfavorable Decision of Local F. H. A. to farmers:

Our Field Representative has had 10 requests for help from farmers who have been denied aid by local FHA offices. Each case has been written up in the form of a case history of the family envolved and referred to the State Director of F. H. A. as an appeal for his decision. So far the State Director has given favorable answers on 3 of the 10 cases submitted. If the State Director makes unfavorable decisions these cases will be referred to the FHA Administrator in the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The following statements are excerpts from one of the recent letters from the S. C. State FHA Director in answer to some appeals referred to him two months ago:

> "Further reference is made to your letters in the interest of certain applicants in Clarendon and Sumter Counties. Since last contacting you I have had these cases looked into further by our area supervisor and also by Mr. Austin Edwards, Program Staff Assistant, here in my office.
> We are in the process of trying to work out a Farm Ownership loan for Mr. Columbus Cooper, in order that he can do necessary repairs to his dwelling and refinance his debts. I do not know, as yet, how much we will be able to do, but I should know within the very near future. Incidentally, Mr. Cooper seemed to be getting along very nicely working with his sharecropping arrangement.
> In the other cases, namely Messrs. Wheeler, Canty, and Burgess, and Mrs. Deschamps, there is a doubt that we shall be able to help. In the case of Mrs. Dechamps, we are trying to find a way to help her, however, we have not found a solution, as yet, to her problem."

It has taken two annual appeals to get favorable reply on Mr. Columbus Cooper. (Further information on this project is found in the January 1964 issue of SCCHR Review, copy of which is attached.)

Encouraging New ARA Projects

Mr. James has been requested to help the people of Colleton County to get a project started under ARA. He went to the County for a special preliminary planning meeting on January 17, 1964. He explained to them how to approach the all white local ARA county Committee who had already started projects without informing the Negroes. They did not know the chairman of the ARA committee.

He has lately been informed by Mr. William Hamilton, owner of the Hamilton Funeral Home in Walterboro, South Carolina that they were very cordially received by the chairman of the committee. They were given instructions as to how to request a sewing industry for that community. They have also gotten the promise from a local firm already established in the county to take all the garments produced by them.

Mr. James has interested the State Coordinator of ARA in helping to get this project started. The coordinator has promised to get the cooperation of the power structure leaders in the Waterboro Community for this project. Once this is done they will be able to get the loan they need from the Federal Government. The Coordinator is planning to be with us at our next neighborhood county meeting to explain the detail requirements for the Colleton County project and others like it under A. R. A.

The South Carolina Council on Human Relations
1330 LAUREL STREET
Columbia, South Carolina

The State of South Carolina has just received from the Federal Government a grant of $5,634,994. The purpose for this grant is to provide training for those people who are considered the hardcore unemployed and underemployed, male and female, so that they might qualify for entrance into the labor market with skills that can be used. You will be able to learn more about this program by reading the enclosed pieces: 1. Summary of MDTA Amendments; 2. A Proposal for MDTA Training Act in South Carolina, and 3. Occupational Training Areas. This is the first opportunity that South Carolina has had to make an all-out attack on illiteracy and job training suitable for persons needing it.

This program has been given the name of Special Training for Economic Progress in South Carolina. We would like for you to remember this as STEP and to do everything you can to inform unemployed and underemployed people about this program. Each county in South Carolina will have an opportunity to participate in this massive program.

Trainees will have the opportunity to select courses for training from those listed under occupational training areas. (See enclosure 3) Where persons do not have the educational background required for taking the course, the educational training will be given to qualify them for taking the vocational training. Please have this announced in churches, clubs, fraternal meetings, and through personal contacts.

We hope that announcement will stress that those who are interested must register for this STEP Program at the nearest employment service office in their county. When they register be sure to say they are registering for employment and training under the STEP Program.

Sincerely yours,

Alice N. Spearman

Signed December 19, 1963

1. Lowers the age of youths eligible for training allowances from 19, as in existing act, to 17. The 17- year olds would have to have been out of school at least a year.

2. Permits up to 25 percent of the persons receiving training allowances to be youths under 22 years of age. (Present law limits youth training allowances to 5 percent of the total training allowances.) Excludes youths able to benefit from the provisions of the Vocational Education Act of 1963.

3. Requires one-third matching in F.Y. 1966. (Present law requires 50-50 matching to begin in F.Y. 1965). Contains language to the effect that 50 percent matching is intended for subsequent years.

4. Adds 20 weeks of allowances to trainees who are taking basic education training. Precise determination of occupational objectives for these trainees need not be made before educational training begins.

5. Permits increases in the weekly training allowance to $10 above the State unemployment compensation payment, which is now the upper limit. This provision is designed as an incentive to get unemployed workers to seek training rather than draw unemployment pay.

6. Permits trainees to work up to 20 hours part-time without any loss in training allowances.

7. Reduces to 2 years the prior work experience required for trainees to be eligible (Present law requires 3 years).

8. Permits a member of the family, where the head is unemployed, to receive a training allowance. Only one person in the family group is eligible at any one time. (Present law limits training to heads of households.)

9. Provides, through demonstration projects, grants and/or loans to unemployed workers to help finance their relocation expenses.

10. Title I.
Extends for 2 more years (through F.Y. 1967) present authorization of $3 million/ fiscal year for information, evaluation, and research programs.

Title II.
Authorizes $161 million for F.Y. 1964, $407 million for F.Y. 1965, and $281 million for F.Y. 1966 for the training programs. (Present law authorizes $161 million for each of fiscal years 1964 and 1965.)

Title III.
Extends for 2 more years (through F.Y. 1967) present authorization of $1 million/ fiscal year for preparing the Secretaries' reports and other miscellaneous expenses.

A PROPOSAL

To Implement Public Law 415,
Manpower Development & Training Act
in South Carolina

ADULT EDUCATION OFFICE
STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
COLUMBIA 1, SOUTH CAROLINA

A. Statement of General Principles

If this proposal is to provide a constructive solution to the needs of the State, we believe it must, first of all, comply with the following general principles:

(1) The program should be supplementary to other educational efforts and should in no sense replace emphasis in basic fields of learning, or in Technical Education.

(2) The program must have a Vocational objective but it shall emphasize the basic fields of learning to qualify the students for both citizenship and for our industrial society.

(3) The primary objective of the new program, while it will contribute to the development of the State's industrial economy, should be to enlarge the potential of the individual student through education in the knowledge and the skills which will be useful to him, and thus to his employer, and in that way ultimately to benefit the State as a whole.

(4) The program should be highly responsive to the needs of students and thus should be flexible enough, both in the curriculum and in the facilities provided, to meet those needs as they differ in different localities and as conditions change.

(5) Instruction in this field should have well defined qualitative standards, so as to provide in each student a capability in his education void which can be recognized by his school, his employer, and himself, when he receives a certificate indicating the specific kind and quality of his achievement.

(6) The mandate for a general and uniform system of education, as well as our own assessment of the educational needs of the State, would require that this program be offered on a state-wide basis, but only to those areas providing clear proof of need for this type of instruction as well as the ability and the inclination to support it financially and otherwise.

We believe, furthermore, that there is a direct relationship between one's educational achievement and his earning capacity, as well as his general capabilities as a citizen and member of society. This proposal, therefore, has direct bearing upon the solution of the State's problem of low per capita income as its industrial economy expands. On the other hand, we wish to make it clear that to emphasize our needs in this respect is not to derogate our needs elsewhere, either in general fields of learning or in other occupational fields.

In view of the substantial technological advances in industry, it seems obvious that if South Carolina is to expand industrially, it must provide a program designed to educate the present unemployables. Since other states are doing this, our failure to do so may result in retarding our industrial expansion.

It is acknowledged that this is the major group of South Carolinians that no present program can serve; neither the universities, the Technical Education Center, nor Vocational Education. This group quite often applies for training in the new industry Special Schools operated by the State Committee for Technical Education. They are most often pushed aside by other applicants who are more capable and literate.

B. Outline of the Proposed Program

(1) Purpose

The purpose of this proposal is to provide an education opportunity to 14,000 selective service rejects, hardcore unemployed and underemployed, male and female, with pre-occupational and occupational training to qualify them for entrance into the labor market.

(2) Plan of Finance

A detailed plan of operation will be submitted to the U. S. Office of Education requesting the following amounts of funds for operation:

1963-64	$1,300,000
1964-65	$2,000,000
1965-66	$2,000,000

These funds will be used to underwrite operating costs at the state and local level.

(3) Students

This instructional program shall be available to 5,000 persons annually, with preference given to heads of households who are unemployed

(4) Faculty

Teachers shall be paid wholly from Federal funds under salary schedules and certification standards established and they shall be employed for specific courses of instruction of definite duration.

(5) Qualitative Standards

Each course, while it may differ from other courses in length and intensity, shall conform to state-wide standards as to content and emphasis established for that particular course. The primary objective of such standards is to provide a legitimate basis for the training allowances given by the Federal government and to drop those students who attend for pay rather than self-improvement. Clearly defined standards shall serve as a useful guide to the prospective employer as he considers the student's training as an instrument in job placement. The Curriculum Laboratory for the Technical Education Centers shall provide and measure the standards established.

(6) Buildings

Suitable buildings shall be provided which are separate and apart from existing educational efforts. A survey shall be immediately made to determine availability of buildings. Rent and operational costs of these buildings will be borne by Federal Funds. Every effort shall be made to secure a suitable building in every county of the State. Buildings shall be selected which are within easy reach of the majority of students, who will provide their own means of transportation.

(7) Regional Planning

Local leaders will aid in defining the region served. Because these leaders enjoy the respect of those to be reached by this program, lay leaders must be responsible for developing the desire of the less fortunate in improving themselves through education. Industrial development groups and other civic bodies must work and plan, describing this program as one facet in the development of their primary resourse..the people.

C. A Revised Plan for Administering Public Law 415, Manpower Development and Training Act

(1) Relationships-State Board of Education and State Committee for Technical Education

The State Board of Education shall designate the State Committee for Technical Education to share in the administration of the program. The program will be coordinated under the direction of the State Director of Vocational Education and the Coordinator of the State Committee for Technical Education. Specific responsibilities are as follows:

(a) The State Committee for Technical Education shall have the responsibility for administration of fiscal affairs and shall disperse funds for operation to area or regional bodies under a plan of local supervision.

(b) The present State Supervisor of Manpower Development and Training in the Division of Vocational Education shall have the responsibility for organization and supervision of the program.

(c) The State Director of Vocational Education and the Coordinator of the State Committee for Technical Education shall jointly prepare reports and records as required by the U. S. Office of Education and the Boards and Agencies concerned with the conduct of this program.

(2) Legal responsibilities given to the South Carolina Employment Security Commission under Public Law 415 shall be consistently observed with regard to student testing and selection, any payment to trainees, and other matters for which they are accountable.

(3) Subject to the prior approval of the State Board of Education a Master Plan for local supervision and control will be developed which may use present boards or commissions or may create new regional committees to insure proper and efficient conduct of the program by laymen at the local level.

S. C. C. H. R. REVIEW

February, 1964

A monthly news review issued by the Information Committee of the South Carolina Council on Human Relations, 1330 Laurel Street, Columbia, S.C.

BOARD WORKSHOP IS HELD

Over 80 persons attended the SCCHR Board workshop, held Feb. 6 in Columbia's Wade Hampton Hotel.

Paul Anthony, Director of Field Activities for the Southern Regional Council, came from Atlanta to address the group on the work of the Board and led a workshop in the area of programs.

Other resource persons worked in round-table discussions of board administrative and program committees.

The sharing sessions involved board and key non-board persons in efforts to make SCCHR structure and impact more effective in these crucial days.

The board also elected officers for the year. They include:

President, the Rev. Fred Reese Jr.

1st vice president, Earl Middleton.

2nd vice president, Dr. J. Sherrard Rice.

Secretary, Mrs. R. B. Cunningham.

Treasurer, Mrs. Marian B. Paul.

One immediate result of the meeting was the strengthening of organizational lines and more meaningful efforts to relate SCCHR to the work of local communities.

SOUTHERN REGIONAL GRANT

On the basis of past performance and future promise, SRC has made available $6,000 to SCCHR for the current year's operation. This means that SRC assumes that South Carolinians are determined to undergird at least half of the annual budget for SCCHR.

Memberships or contributions from individuals and groups are the SCCHR mainline of support.

HAVE YOU JOINED YET ?

JOINT SC-GA MEET IN MARCH

Hopefully, you have already marked your calendar for March 20-21 and are planning to attend the joint conference of the S.C. and Ga. Councils on Human Relations to be held in Augusta beginning with dinner at 6 p.m. Friday and ending with lunch on Saturday, March 20.

The March issue of SCCHR REVIEW will include information on housing, meals, place of meetings and costs.

The Aiken and Augusta Councils will be hosts. Subject of the conference will be "Education: Prerequisite for Employment Opportunities."

Mr. Otis Finley, asst. dir. of National Urban League, will give the keynote address Friday night. He is the NUL specialist on education and youth incentives.

Dr. Lucius Pitts, president of Miles College, Birmingham, Ala., will be luncheon speaker Friday. He is a thoughtful, energetic and effective educator.

Saturday, from 9 a.m. - 12:30 p.m., workshops will stress learning what one must know and how one may work at community and state levels to update and upgrade public education; to make full use of state and federal government training programs- such as STEP, Special Training for Economic Progress; to help find the man for the job, the job for the man.

Youth leaders and school personnel in your community might benefit from this conference. Their contribution to discussion would be of inestimable value also. Invite them!

POVERTY AMIDST PLENTY

In its presentation of some sobering end-of-the-year statistics, the Saturday Evening Post states that almost one-third of all American families have an annual income of less than $4,000; 22 per cent earn less that $3,000; 13 per cent earn less than $2,000; and , incredible fact, five per cent of families earn less than $1,000.

"We are the richest nation on earth," comments the Post, "yet one American in five is without adequate food or shelter or medicine, and nobody seems to care."

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS

In common justice, the right of property in our law either is or should be the "inn keeper's law" in the tradition of the Anglo - Saxon common law....

This rule stated that whoever opened an inn or tavern serving travelers with bed and food should not then discriminate among those who apply for these services he is in business to sell, and that in the possession and use of suchprivate property he should not turn anyone away for whom he had room.

It meant that certain forms of property were to be destined by their owners to the common good in the service of the concrete needs of men without arbitrary distinctions.---Paul Ramsey in "Christian Ethics and the Sit-In."

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

TO: Paul Anthony

FROM: Katherine Jones and Dorothy Webster

QUARTERLY REPORT: December, January, February 1963-64

Almost the entire quarter has been devoted to the Annual Meeting. In early December we received confirmation of Burke Marshall's acceptance of our invitation to be our dinner speaker. We then started recruiting other program participants, revising our program outline in accordance with the talent available. Governor Clement announced the creation of the Tennessee Commission on Human Relations on January 1, 1964, and named 16 members to it. Five were named later in the month. While the limitations in selection were disappointing (no white business or industry representative) the fulfilling of his pledge gave impetus to our meeting.

It is unnecessary to detail the myriad telephone calls and maneuvers utilized in gaining acceptance of our invitation by mayors of several Tennessee cities. Mayor Duncan of Knoxville declined at the last minute (he is one of our members) because of illness was hospitalized. Fortunately, Mr. Backus, Johnson City vice-mayor appeared on the scene, and his genuine, non-political interest in racial progress added an authentic note to the panel discussion. The annual meeting voted to have the next NEWSLETTER printed, which has resulted in a delay in getting it out.

In evaluating the annual meeting, I think its positive contribution included the holding of all meetings at a downtown hotel, and the educational experience for mayors, and members of the Governor's Commission who attended certain of the sessions. There was considerable "status and prestige" involved in the meeting, and we hope that this will pay off in the Council's acceptance as a respectable, reliable force for state and community progress. On the negative side was the lack of enrichment and limited direct participation of our own members. The 24 hour meeting is the time limit our membership has determined for the annual meeting and I question the wisdom of trying to extend it. The meeting received considerable publicity through local newspapers prior to the meeting and afterwards due to the involvement of both the publisher and the editor of the Nashville Tennessean.

We were pleased that Vernon Jordan was present at our meeting, and regretted that matters were so rushed that there was little opportunity to seek his guidance and assistance. I am especially regretful that he was not introduced at the Board or membership meetings.

Tennessee Commission on Human Relations

The Governor's Commission attended the Thursday afternoon session panel discussion of mayors and power structure representatives. The Commissioners were the Council's guests that evening at the dinner meeting addressed by Mr. Marshall. We have supplied the Commission with various materials including, "The State Executive and Civil Rights," Kentucky Commission reports and several of our own publications. Their participation in our meeting undoubtedly had some mutual advantage in implying that change was happening on several fronts, and was to be expected and accepted. The Governor's Commission's initial meeting coincided with our annual meeting by plan; second meeting was held on February 25. Members of the Commission are enthusiastic about its potentials. It is reported that the Governor's most politically minded Commissioner (of Education) is sitting in throughout the meetings, while other Commissioners come and go.

Survey of Opportunities for Vocational and Technical Training in Tennessee

This survey was authorized at the November 1963 Board meeting, to be completed and readied for distribution at the annual meeting. By Board action, the survey was to be made by Board members. The number of returns was disappointing. No report was received from Knoxville, although we have seven Board members there. K. Jones eventually had to make the Nashville survey. It is probable that some additional cities would have been included if the survey had not coincided with the Christmas season, and if the staff had personally designated members from our membership roster. However, the meager returns confirmed Paul Anthony's November evaluation that the Board itself had not accepted real responsibility for the Council. The survey has since been forwarded to all current Board members along with the January Board meeting and annual meeting minutes. (This was President Willis' decision.)

Knoxville

Under the auspicies of Fellowship House and with our partial support, Paul Rilling spoke in Knoxville on January 22. Since it was the night before our annual meeting, I could not attend, and have not been able to obtain an adequate report of the meeting. I gather that the crowd was disappointing, but that Paul was well received. It will be necessary to wait until my next visit to learn what really happened.

At a Federal District Court hearing in February 1964, the school board announced plans to desegregate all 12 grades in September 1964. The Board is to submit a plan by June 5, 1964 to "eliminate all racially discriminatory practices". This plan will include the Knoxville Evening School (for adults) which also operates under the Board of Education.

Memphis

A chapter meeting was held in February 1964 - the first since November. Louise Young attended and reported that there was considerable interest and an attendance of about 50, although there were several other meetings that same night in which some of our membership was involved. Mr. A. W. Willis, vice-chairman of the Governor's Commission and one of the young Memphis Negro lawyers, gave an enthusiastic report of the first meeting of the Commission. The state council annual meeting was also reviewed. An unfavorable report was made about the treatment of Negro students at Memphis State University. This was evidently entirely unanticipated by both Negro and white members, and we hope that the Memphis chapter will follow through on correcting this, as they agreed to do. Memphis has not had regular meetings or programs, but there is a drive on at present to bring in new members, and to broaden the base of their operations.

Cookeville

Another crisis in Cookeville was resolved due to the personal intervention of the State Commissioner of Education. Through our appeal to the chairman of the Governor's Commission, he enlisted the assistance of the Commissioner. In February 1964, the college forensic tournament was to meet at Tennessee Tech (TPI) when it was discovered that motels would not accept Negroes. Through numerous telephone calls, the Commissioner of Education brought pressure on the college president for motel desegregation. Two motels were promptly opened and the Negro college students report that they were cordially received, and Fisk University returned with a first prize.

Oak Ridge

Members have asked for a report on what would be involved in becoming a chapter. The local council is defunct, but there is some interest in reviving it. Material has been sent.

Chattanooga

Under leadership of Mayor Kelley, a Mayor's Commission (or Committee) on Human Relations has been formed, and is at work. While some of our members are a part of it, the names and activities are not openly known, and it operates quietly. Under the auspicies of the Council for Cooperative Action, and some of the regional organizations, a large regional meeting is being planned for April 14 and 15. TCHR will probably be one of the sponsors, but we are awaiting further details.

Finance and Membership

See attached material which was prepared for the state meeting. Our solvency at the end of the fiscal year was a new experience. The membership count was made from membership cards, and does not include double memberships (of husband and wife). When these additional members are added, it brings the membership count to about 675.

Respectfully submitted,

Katherine Jones

Nashville - (Addenda)

In December 1963, the National Council of Churches held a conference in Nashville for ministers and others working with students. The discussion revolved around stimulating interest and concern in race relations. This was not a public meeting, but the press was admitted, and the news story and following editorial carried in the Nashville Banner raised a furor in Nashville. Jim Bevel was one of the participants. Apparently the sessions were informal brain-storming sessions, but from the newspaper accounts, the National Council of Churches was promoting the breakdown of family ties, and encouraging children to be disobedient. Although remarks were taken out of context, it seems evident that the organization and administration of the consultation was unwise. The Nashville Banner then repeated its editorial and news story in special tear-sheets, and the supply was exhausted before I could obtain a copy.

Many conservative church members, who have been uneasy about NCC position statements immediately began to denounce the NCC in all its phases. The John Birch Society got on the band wagon. Statements were further misinterpreted. Some churches have withdrawn financial support of the NCC. Numerous telephone calls have been received in Elbert Jean's office and some irate visitors have appeared in the building which we share with the Southern Project of NCC. Our office was not invited to the consultation, but has not avoided the whirlwind. Some of our undertakings have been confused with NCC, both in Nashville and Memphis. The usual accusations of communist domination has been made. Letters to the editor have abounded, and other groups have distributed the Banner editorial and news story. A recent local TV program including six ministers and a young John Birch lawyer was calm and rational. It is not so much what hits the news media as the under current of propaganda.

The Southern Project of NCC is disbanding its Nashville office on March 13. We have negotiated to purchase their inventory with the plan of re-selling part of it, if we can. The transaction has not been completed.

Nashville has experienced a series of meetings on school drop-outs, largely organized by Mrs. Tom Ragland and Mrs. James Todd. They have resulted in bringing together representatives of PTA, schools, employment service, United Church Women, social agency representatives, etc. They have been loosely organized, but have served to expose the inadequacy of the school programs, and the technical training offered in school and past high school. TCHR has been represented as has the Nashville Chapter.

On January 18, 1964, there was a conference on automation and education under the sponsorship of Peabody College, Center for Southern Education Studies, and U. S. Congressman Richard Fulton who represents Nashville (the 5th District). On invitation, I attended. While I did not find it especially stimulating, I do think it brought together some business, labor and community leaders and their recognition of the need to increase and modify training in relation to the changes in the economic structure.

On March 12, there will be a Middle Tennessee Conference on Religion and Race. This is the long delayed follow-up on the January 1963 Chicago meeting. (See enclosed program). We have been asked to supply various materials, and serve as a resource person.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

BOARD MEETING
January 24, 1964

The Board meeting of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations met Friday morning at the Andrew Jackson Hotel in Nashville. Mr. George Barrett presided.

The first order of business being the election of officers, Mr. Barrett asked for the report of the nominating committee. Mrs. Todd presented the proposed slate of officers. For president, William Willis of Nashville; for vice-presidents, Dr. Vasco Smith of Memphis, John Compton of Nashville, and Lewis Sinclair of Knoxville; for secretary, Mrs. Fran Silver of Oak Ridge; and for treasurer, Dr. G. J. Tarleton of Nashville. The committee further proposed Mrs. Eugene Kilgore of Johnson City, Mrs. Fred Muhleman of Chattanooga and Mrs. Ray Allen of Memphis to serve as members of the Executive Committee. Mrs. Hull moved the adoption of the slate; Rev. Proudfoot seconded and the officers were duly elected.

Kay Jones, executive director, gave a report of the action taken on resolutions previously passed by the board. A copy of this report is attached.

Rev. Crutcher moved that the 1964 annual meeting be held early in November. Mrs. Silver seconded asking that the actual dates be set well in advance of the meeting. The time for the next Board meeting was discussed and Mrs. Ish issued an invitation for the meeting to be held in Memphis. Rev. Jones moved the adoption of her invitation, Mrs. Silver seconded and the motion was adopted. Mrs. Schweid moved that the Executive Committee be authorized to decide a time for the Board meeting, Rev. Jones seconded and the motion carried.

Mrs. Silver brought to the attention of the Board the motion adopted at the November 2 meeting calling for the appointment of a committee to evaluate the TCHR office, the staff, the program, the executive committee and the board members and its interrelation of these component parts with its officers. This committee has not been appointed and Mrs. Silver moved that Mr. Willis do so immediately and that the committee be instructed to meet before the next Board meeting and bring a report. Rev. Crutcher seconded and the motion was adopted.

Mrs. Peelle suggested that "Operation Benchmark" be repeated this coming July.

Mrs. Todd moved that a resolution be sent to all members of the Congressional Delegation from Tennessee urging their support of the entire Civil Rights Bill and that the TCHR further urge its individual members to write. Mr. Porter seconded the motion and it was adopted.

Mrs. Schweid moved that Miss Kay Jones be instructed to take a two weeks vacation with pay as soon as possible. Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion carried.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. B. R. Schweid, Secretary

ADDENDA TO BOARD MINUTES

The resolution to be sent to the Tennessee Congressional Delegation, urging their support of the entire Civil Rights Bill was not sent. A review of the Council's charter, the Council's by-laws, and the federal tax exemption regulations were made by President Willis. Both the charter and the by-laws state that "no part of its (the Council's) activities shall be... attempting to influence legislation." This same phrase is included in the federal tax exemption certification. It is believed that these restrictions precluded our implementation of the resolution.

TENNESSEE COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP MEETING
January 23, 1964

The Annual Membership meeting of the Tennessee Council on Human Relations was convened Thursday afternoon, January 23, 1964 at the Andrew Jackson Hotel in Nashville. Mr. George Barrett, president, was in the chair.

Mrs. James Todd moved that the minutes be adopted as circularized to the membership. Motion seconded by Mrs. Schweid and adopted.

Mr. Barrett asked for the report of the nominating committee which Mrs. Todd presented. Mr. Barrett then called for nominations from the floor and Mrs. Todd nominated Mrs. Garland Fisher and Rev. Dogan Williams, both of Bristol, for Board members for terms ending in 1966. These nominations were seconded by Mrs. Fuson, who then moved the election of all those who had been nominated by acclamation. Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion was adopted. The report of those so nominated and subsequently elected is attached.

Dr. G. J. Tarleton, treasurer gave the treasurer's report. Rev. Proudfoot moved its acceptance, Mrs. Fuson seconded and the motion was adopted. The report is attached.

The chairman of the membership committee, Mrs. Fran Silver, gave her committee's report. She stated that the committee regretted it had been unable to fulfill its responsibility of increasing the membership, but it was hoped that with the aid of the office staff, this could be accomplished in the near future. The committee proposed that the state be apportioned into its geographical divisions and board members be assigned to go into the communities within these divisions and actively recruit members. Mrs. Silver moved that the Council underwrite the expenses of these individuals. Mr. Porter seconded the motion and it was adopted.

Mrs. Fuson announced that Mrs. Gladys Rawlings, executive secretary of the Philadelphia Friends Committee on Race Relations will present the Green Circle Program (a technique for teaching sound race relations) at the Social Religious Building, Peabody College at 8 p.m., March 12. The meeting is open to the public and is under the sponsorship of the Nashville Community Relations Council. TCHR members along with teachers are especially urged to attend.

Mrs. Silver moved that the membership extend its thanks to the retiring board members. Rev. Crutcher seconded and the motion was adopted.

Rev. M. J. Jones read a resolution in memory of Senator Estes Kefauver. Mr. Porter moved its adoption, Miss Frances Thompson seconded and the motion was adopted. Rev. Will D. Campbell read a resolution in memory of President John F. Kennedy, Rev. Jones moved its adoption, Mrs. Todd seconded and the resolution was adopted. Miss Louise Young read a resolution in memory of Mrs. Blanche Fensterwald which had been previously adopted by the board. Miss Young moved its adoption by the membership, Mrs. Todd seconded and the motion carried. Copies of all three resolutions are attached.

Miss Gault suggested that a report of the Annual Meeting be sent to Tennessee Senators and Representatives and that it also be circularized to various public officials. Mrs. Ray Allen asked that the Representatives to the Tennessee General Assembly be involved in local activities of the TCHR. Mrs. Fuson suggested that the report of the annual meeting to these government officials should be a printed report mailed first class with a cover letter.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Respectfully submitted,
Mrs. B. R. Schweid, Secretary

REPORT BY KATHERINE JONES, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

At the November 1963 Board meeting a question was raised regarding implementation of previous actions of the Board. Therefore, Board and membership minutes were reviewed, beginning with the October 1962 annual meeting in Chattanooga. A resolution in regard to the denial of educational opportunities by the state of Tennessee, to Negro blind children was adopted at this meeting. In early December 1962, through the impetus of TCHR, representatives of United Church Women, the American Association of University Women, The National Council of Negro Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, and the Tennessee Council on Human Relations, made a direct personal plea to Governor Ellington, asking what plan the state had for educating Negro blind children. The Negro unit was reopened in January, and first grade Negro blind children were integrated into the Tennessee School for the Blind at Donelson.

Letters were written to James Meredith, the Reverend Duncan Gray and Sidna Brower in regard to their positive part in the integration of the University of Mississippi. These communications had been authorized at the 1962 annual meeting. The 1962 annual meeting also adopted a resolution requesting members to work for integrated hospital service throughout the state and for recruitment of Negro students for medical schools which had recently dropped racial bars. Although the state council mounted no direct drive for hospital service, Knoxville, Nashville and Memphis in particular, have experienced considerable success in extending hospital service. State Council mimeographed and distributed the report of the Tennessee Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights, entitled "A Survey of Health Facilities, Health Services, and Professional Opportunities for Whites and Negroes in Davidson County, Tennessee." The report was sent to local medical school directors, selected physicians, medical societies, hospitals, etc. About 120 copies were originally mailed. Requests since then have exhausted our original supply of 200 copies. The report has been an effective weapon in bringing about change in the Nashville area. Direct costs of the survey, borne by TCHR were $142.08.

TCHR underwrote the cost of printing and mailing "Jobs and Color". A copy was sent to each TCHR member in addition to distribution to state government leadership. Additional copies are available. Total direct cost to TCHR for printing was $340.85.

Constitutional amendment to abolish the poll tax was ratified by the Tennessee Legislature in 1963. State parks in Tennessee are fully open in accordance with Commissioner McSween's orders. Former restrictions pertaining to separate service in restaurants have been abandoned. The Governor created the State Commission on Human Relations and announced the appointment of 21 Commissioners in January 1964.

A survey of desegregation across the state was authorized, completed and mailed to the membership under title "Operation Benchmark". A revised and updated report on Memphis was sent to the membership in December.

An accounting of geographic location of membership and source of contributions and dues payments was submitted to the Board of Directors in May 1963. On Board request, this report was updated and submitted at the membership meeting in January '64.

President Kennedy was urged to issue an executive order banning discrimination in housing. The President was also urged to speak directly to the south at the time of his May 1963 visit to Nashville. Both of these requests were made on Board authorization.

Staff has not been successful in its efforts to further an integration policy in state PTA. A committee authorized by the Executive Committee in August 1963 on further use of the Field Foundation Grant, and Board authorized committee in November 1963 on staff and board responsibilities have not been implemented. Appointments to the committees have not been made.

Dear Kay:

Thanks for the good and prompt quarterly report. All of it made good reading.

Incidentally, we have no plans to reprint the Readers Digest feature. I agree with you that it does not merit a special effort, although I'm happy the magazine did it.

Best.

Dear Friends:

We feel sure that you are interested in knowing the names of the various registration boards in the counties of South Carolina. Enclosed you will find a list which gives the names of each registration board in each county in South Carolina. We hope this information will be useful to you.

For a long time we have been trying to secure an official number of Negroes who are eligible to vote in each county of South Carolina. We have found it very difficult to secure such information prior to this request. It is hoped that you will select a committee to contact the county registration board in your counties and find out from them how many Negroes are eligible to vote in your county.

This information should be available in the records of the county board of registration since each person is required to give his race when he applies for a registration certificate. The registration certificate also designates the race of the person who holds it. Please give this request special attention as soon as possible.

In advance, we thank you for your cooperation and response.

Sincerely yours,

REVIEW OF REPORTS AS LISTED ON AGENDA

Membership Campaign- The total amount pledged in the Membership Campaign was $10,969. This was toward a goal of $27,400. Although the campaign was designed to be completed the Big Gifts Division ($100.00 or more) did not complete its canvas and is continuing solicitation. According to our anticipated needs, $15,000.00 additional must be raised this year to continue our present operations.

A permanent Budget and Finance Committee has been appointed to oversee the entire financial operations of the Council. One of the items to be considered by this committee is the possible readjustment of membership fees. This committee, composed of at least Five members and a Chairman who is to be a member of the Board of Directors.

Battaglia Project - Dr. Mary Ellen Goodman and Mr. Kelly met with Mr. John Wildenthal, City Attorney for the City of Houston and Mr. Ed Cazares, first Assistant and reviewed the status of the project. Strong support for our request was given by Mr. Wildenthal. This proposal will be brought before the City Council as soon as Mr. Kelly can assure enough support from the various Councilmen to assure passage. This should be done within the next two weeks.

Racial Harmony Communications Project - Mr. Bob Dannenbaum, of the advertising firm of Goodwin, Dannenbaum, Littman and Wingfield, Inc. has proposed a study to determine if the mass communications media of our community could be used to influence the people of Houston against prejudice and to act as a pilot project for other communities. The project group is composed of the HCHR as sponsoring group, a Negro Rights leader (Mr. Asbury Butler), a Social Scientist (Dr. Rupert Koeninger) and a Marketing Counselor (Mr. Dannenbaum). The Executive Committee has approved the participation of the Council in the project.

The first phase of the project will be to discover the opinion and attitude of the people of Houston toward Negroes and then to devise a communications program to influence this opinion toward facts and truth. The project will be financed through foundation funds to be secured by the HCHR.

Committee on Independent Study - This Committee under the leadership of Mrs. Besselle Attwell is designed to increase the academic performance of selected students through a tutoring relationship with college students and other adults interested in voluhteering such services. The committee has developed a screening process for both the students and the tutors and now has the first pilot project under way.

Employment Meetings - The HCHR has been co-sponsor for two meetings of persons interested in the employment picture in Houston. Other sponsors have been the Texas Employment Commission and Texas S.U. The last of these two meetings was attended by 69 persons representing various employers and sponsoring organization members. Items of discussion were: Available Labor Market Selection Factors, Testing and Adjustment of the working environment. Under the direction of Dr. B. A. Turner, Chairman of the Employment Committee of the HCHR, these meetings have opened communications between many persons concerned with the problems involved in hiring minorities in jobs which have formally been closed to them. Another gathering of these persons and others interested will be held in the next few weeks at the request of the last group present.

Dr. Ralph Bunche Meeting - Mr. Adolph Susholtz has completed an excellent meeting for the HCHR to present Dr. Bunche. As of last Tuesday, all tickets have been sold and many persons have been turned away. Included as honored guests for the evening are the Presidents of the five Universities in Houston, Mr. Dick French, Secretary of the Houston Chamber of Commerce, Mr. John de Menil, Mr. Palmer Hutcheson, and Mayor Louis Welch who will present a key to the city to Dr. Bunche.

Housing Committee - Reports of the Housing Conference have been mailed to you in the last newsletter but two further reports may be of interest. First, the Committee will sponsor the Bus Tour for any group in the city interested. The cost will be $50.00 and the Council will take care of all arrangements. Second, there has been established a sub-committee to begin working in the area of rehabilitating depressed or grey areas of our city. They are looking for a small project which could serve as a demonstration area.

Columbia, South Carolina

"As a Christian I am obligated to act on the basis of what I know and what I believe and not on the basis of what I like," said Dr. Haywood N. Hill, Presbyterian elder in an address on race relations to an adult Church School class at his church, Trinity Presbyterian, in Atlanta.

A copy of this notable address and other materials on race relations are enclosed for your thoughtful reading. The S. C. Council on Human Relations recognizes a deepening concern on the part of many Christian leaders in our state for a constructive and just approach to this complex area of human relations. We realize that your own concern grows from your deep rooted Christian conviction. The staff of the Council shares this conviction and believes that the issues which we face today require the highest dedication of mind and spirit on the part of Christian leaders in our churches.

You are no doubt aware of the fact that the S. C. Council on Human Relations has a continuous history of 41 years of interracial work in this state, having been originally organized as the Interracial Commission, largely through the efforts of the late Bishop Finlay of the Upper Diocese of the Episcopal Church in S. C. Our work continues to be primarily in the broad field of education. In this conjunction we shall be happy at any time to work with you or any group in your church which desires to study or work on the problems of race relations in the context of Christian faith.

We shall appreciate your reaction to the enclosed material. If you know persons whose names you would like to add to our list to receive materials from time to time, we shall be happy to have these. May we express the appreciation of the S.C. Council on Human Relations for your Christian concern and interest. These are indeed times when many of us will need to "walk together unafraid into the future."

Cordially yours,

(Mrs.) Elizabeth C. Ledeen
Director of Program Services

SUMMARY OF WORKSHOP

SUBJECT: The Role of Citizens in Implementing State and Federal Training and Retraining Programs

PANEL DISCUSSION: Mr. George Butler emphasized the role of the Federal Government in job training. He showed that the Federal government has a long history of providing training for its citizens.

1. Early efforts were practical trainimg as provided by the Smith-Hughes Act and the Morrill Fund.

2. The New Deal provided for training for youths as well as adults; in the National Youth Administration and the W.P.A.

3. Following World War II the Arm Forces provided training for skills and the G.I. Bills provided for the training after war service.

4. Our Modern Day programs are National Defense Loans to Education for higher education and training, including aid to teaching technical skills.

5. The New Frontier has provided the great Manpower Training and Development Act and the training opportunities under the area Redevelopment Administration.

6. In fact Mr. Butler emphasized that the Federal Government is always providing opportunities for training of its citizens. It is one of the main functions of the President's committee on equal employment opportunities to help keep the interest of Federal legislature in providing opportunities for training and retraining of citizens whenever and wherever needed.

Mr. John H. Wheeler discussed the role of citizens in helping to provide occupational training. He made it clear that citizens should feel a moral responsibility for the welfare of the community. This interest should be expressed in the following ways:

1. Making surveys to discover training needs and economic status.

2. Studying state and federal programs already available for meeting training needs on all levels.

3. Providing tutoring programs for potential drop-outs in order to help them adjust to new and changing environments before they become drop-outs.

4. Feeling a direct responsibility for helping to implement all worthwhile Federal and State Programs for vocational, technical and scientific programs.

Mrs. Sarah W. Herbin based her talk on how the state of North Carolina meets the need for occupational training and employment. She gave the following methods used in North Carolina to promote training and employment.

1. A list and a description of opportunities for training are distributed to Negro schools.

2. Encouraging vocational counseling to stimulate Negroes to take advantage of available opportunities.

3. A proposal has just been made by the State of N. C. to the federal government for a grant to provide training for the functional illiterates and the unemployed.

Mr. Phenizee Ransom, Jr. gave an evaluation of South Carolina's new STEP program. He had just completed his first official visit to South Carolina and had made a careful study of the effectiveness of the Special Training for Economic Progress. He noted the following features of this program:

1. It provides training for functional illiterates and unemployed men and women on an integrated bases.

2. Program is financed by a grant from the Federal MDTA to the amount of $5.6 million.

3. It is under the administration of the following agencies selected by the Governor of the State: Technical Education Commission and the Employment Security Commission.

4. He visited two of the four schools that were already in operation. He found excellent cooperation and skillful operation.

Following the panel discussion the members of the workshop asked questions and made many favorable comments. Mr. Maxwell Hahn, Executive Vice-President of the Field Foundation and his wife remained with our workshop group for the entire period. He said: " I was informed and inspired." ALABAMA COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
Quarterly Report
January, February, March, 1964

The Annual Meeting of the Alabama Council on Human Relations was held February 1, 1964 in Birmingham, Alabama at the L. R. Hall Auditorium with an attendance of about 200. There were three speakers: Mrs. William McMurry, President of the North American Baptist Women's Union; Dr. Lilburn Moseley, Pastor of the Tourist Church of Daytona Beach, Florida; and Rev. Powers McLeod, Pastor of the Auburn Methodist Church and Outgoing President of the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

The Meeting was a splendid success, and everyone felt that they had heard some of the best addresses of their lives. The members seemed to have gone away with a renewed spirit.

Since the Annual Meeting there has been a meeting of the Membership Committee and Board of Directors. The Membership Committee is putting on an intensive drive for members with signs of progress already beginning to show. With the determination that the Board has, I am confident that this is going to be an excellent year for the Alabama Council on Human Relations.

The Huntsville Council on Human Relations is planning a seminar to be held in the late Spring or early summer.

The Birmingham Council on Human Relations is launching research projects concerning community life in Birmingham. There are high hopes that they will be able to do research in many areas of the community life in Birmingham.

Jan. 1: Auburn University ready to enroll first Negro student, Saturday, January 4. Strict security to be enforced; law, order expected to prevail. Thirty-one year-old Harold Franklin of Montgomery is expected to end segregation at Auburn University on Saturday afternoon.

3: Governor George Wallace said today he will not repeat his "stand in the school house door" to prevent desegregation at Auburn University Saturday, while condemning Federal courts for interfering in state affairs. The Huntsville Board of Education yesterday complied with a Federal order by submitting a plan of desegregation beginning this month and carrying through September, 1965.

6: The State Legislative Council will probe the legal points of Alabama making grants available to private segregated schools at its quarterly meeting this week. The study, asked by Governor Wallace, could clear away legal cobwebs concerning the financial backing of a private school at Tuskegee. Governor Wallace packed his suitcases, industry hunting equipment and states rights ammunition Sunday as he prepared to leave here Monday on a 10-day tour of five far Western States. Auburn University suspended four white students

Sunday for pulling up "off limits" signs place around the campus Saturday when the school's first Negro student arrived.

8: The Supreme Court has refused to review a decision that Montgomery officials were liable for damage to a white couple arrested there while eating with Negroes in a public restaurant. The Nesmiths and 10 students went on a trip south in March, 1960 to study "the non-violent technique as a method of sociological change." The couple were arrested in the Regal Cafe in a Negro neighborhood, but they were released on bail the same evening. In a suit for damages filed in U. S. District Court, the Nesmiths charged false arrest and malicious prosecution and asked damages under the Federal Civil Rights Act. Evidence against five Alabama National Guardsmen charged with setting off explosions near the University of Alabama will be presented to the Tuscaloosa County Grand Jury. They are accused of taking part in three mid-November explosions which rocked the campus near the dormitory housing Negro student Vivian Malone. No one was hurt.

9: Catcalls and hecklers and some 200 pickets parading outside failed to fluster Alabama's Governor George Wallace as he continued his campaign to win the West in Denver. Governor Wallace said today state troppers' cars would continue to shuttle white students to and from schools in nearby Shorter and Notasulga to prevent them from having to attend integrated classrooms in Tuskegee.

13: Gov. Wallace carried his states rights program into the country of the "Maverick" today the home of one of his bitterest critics, U. S. Sen. Wayne Morse, D. Oregon. Eli A. Howell Legislative analyst, has told the Alabama Legislative Council that he is dubious about drawing up a workable law to provide private school tuition from state funds, He accurately warns that the Federal court will be looking very sharply at any such law. If it were found to be an evasive device to maintain all white schools through some financial backdoor arrangement, such law would be knocked out, in all likelihood, by a court order.

14: In Birmingham testimony will begin this morning in the murder trial of a 16-year-old former Phillips High honor student, Larry Joe Sims, who is charged in the fatal shooting of a young Negro boy here last Fall. Young Sims and another youth Michael Lee Farley, also 16 are charged in the slaying of 13-year-old Virgil Ware of 236 DeKalb-Street, Pratt City, who was shot as he rode on the handlebars of his brother's bicycle on a loney stretch of the Docena-Sandusky road.

15: In Montgomery the City Commission Wednesday announced the formation of two citizens' committees, composed respectively of 45 white and 45 Negro leaders, to study and make recommendations for solving racial problems and other facets of community life. In a written statement signed by all three commissioners, it was declared that the time has come "when thoughtful leadership from the respective white and Negro communities must come together in an atmosphere of trust and understanding to resolve mutual problems." At a later date, it was announced, a Steering Committee will be appointed, composed of 11 members each from the two main committees. In Birmingham Jesse B. Stoner, National States Rights Party attorney accused of obstructing school desegregation here last September, has asked Federal court here that charges against him be dropped. A federal grand jury indicted the men last Fall, citing numerous charges which included assaults, meetings, and demonstrations designed to "impede" the court-ordered desegregation of Birmingham schools.

16: The Junior Chamber of Commerce reported today a survey showed greater recreational facilities, including reopening of public parks - as the No. 1 demand of Montgomerians. Parks were closed in Montgomery in 1959 after Negroes indicated they would file a desegregation suit. The suit was submitted to U. S. Middle District Judge Frank M. Johnson, Jr. after the recreational areas were padlocked and animals at the zoo sold. Johnson ruled the parks must be integrated if they are ever reopened. A letter protesting the donation of state funds to a private "freedom foundation" has been sent to Governor Wallace by the Inter-Citizens Committee, J. L. Ware, president of the committee announced yesterday.

17: In Birmingham Negro attorneys yesterday raised objections to the Huntsville School Board's plan of desegregation, and asked Federal court to consider a swifter course allowing for desegregation o f the first six grades in September, and all grades by 1966. Lee County Bulletin editorial: "However popular he might be, there is some question whether Governor George Wallace always speaks the sentiments for the majority of Alabamaians. For instance, on Tuesday he told a Western state audience that Alabama would like to see Federal taxes drastically cut,even if it meant cancellation of Federal expenditures in our state. If the Feds got out of the taxing business Alabama could finance needed programs in the state, he said.

Since Alabama receives from Washington considerably more money than it sends there we doubt that the Governor was speaking for very many of his constituents.

This state benefits from application of the equalization principle. Taxes paid by wealthy states such as New York and California help finance government programs in the poorer states such as Alabama and Mississippi."

21: Huntsville studies mix applications. Processing of applications by 11 Negroes to transfer to white schools are being studied by the City School System, Dr. Raymond Christian, superintendent, said today. Only one of the applicants qualified for entry in a white school under a plan devised by the school board and submitted to a District Federal court in Birmingham.

22: Representatives to an East Alabama Presbytery meeting postponed today a decision on whether to admit two Negro churches to the organization. State Pardon and Parole Board officials said here today parole hearing for three Birmingham men imprisoned five years ago for a Labor Day sex mutilation of a Negro will be heard "in the very near future." Another participant in the 1957 emasculation, former Ku Klux Klan secretary-treasurer, Jesse W. Mabry, was paroled last week after serving five years of his 20 year sentence.

24: Wallace vows personal aid to Macon Academy. That $10,000 which the Alabama Sovereignty Commission sent to Fundamental American Freedoms, Inc. will be used to try to defeat the pending civil rights bill. A resolution calling for a stand on racial matters threw the final session of the 133rd annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Alabama into a closed session, where the resolution was defeated, the Huntsville Times said today.

27: The State Board of Education has ordered that nonresident students can't be enrolled in Alabama public schools without the approval of both local and state school board.

28: Further desegregation of Birmingham schools will not come this school year. The decision was made yesterday through a Federal Court order which tentatively turns back Negro opposition to the Birmingham School Board's plan for desegregation. Four schools desegregate in Huntsville without incident yesterday when 10 Negro students entered unescorted to begin attending classes at the previously all-white institutions. The State Pardons and Paroles Board, answering protests over the parole of a Birmingham man convicted of mayhem in 1957 has defended its action because of his "good prison record."

30: The State Board of Education today ordered the immediate closing of Tuskegee High School where the students, once all white, is now composed only of 12 Negroes.

Feb. 2: Crosses were burned tonight at the homes of three members of the Macon County School Board, several hours before 12 Negro pupils are expected to test the closing of Tuskegee High School by the Board.

4: A Federal judge today ordered 12 Negro students shifted from a padlocked high school in Tuskegee,Alabama to white schools in nearby towns and Governor Wallace, announced that "we intend to resist," rushed 175 state troopers to the scene. Wallace said he did not plan to be on hand for the showdown, but said, "I will be there in spirit" "We plan to take Action" he said. "We intend to resist." Two Birmingham Negro teachers last night attended classes at the University of Alabama Birmingham Extension Center. The two, Miss Ruth Benella Lewis, couselor at Miles College, and Luther Lawler, English teacher at Ullman High School, expressed their gratification at being able to further their education at the Center. The State Board of Education today unanimously voted to provide grant-in-funds for students who transferred from court-desegregated Tuskegee High School last year. Riot trained state troopers maintained strict guard today around two rural schools ordered integrated by a Federal judge in the first major racial crisis faced by President Johnson.

6: Flowers urges care on school action. Warning that any ill-planned state action in court-ordered Macon County school desegregation could involve all Alabama schools, Atty Gen. Richmond Flowers said today he is still the State Board of Education's legal officer. A Justice Dept. atty. asked a Federal court tonight to enjoin Notasulga Mayor James M. Rea from blocking the admission of six Negro students to Macon County High School. Notasulga crowd cheers as photographer is beaten. A commerical photographer ejected from a Negro school bus today in Notasulga, appeared at Governor Wallace's office today to make a full report . Protection for newsmen ordered. Notasulga mayor will obey mix order, calls town water works fire accident, says boycott up to parents. Board fires Atty. General, however the Atty. General has indicated that he still intends to represent the State Board if that's what the law requires.

10: Mayor James (Kayo) Rea said today that if white students carry off a threatened boycott of the Macon County High School he would have "no choice" but to admit six Negroes to the school.

11: The Young Men's Business Club of Birmingham yesterday adopted a resolution requesting that interference into the affairs of various school districts by the Governor and the State Board of Education "draw to an end." A bomb threat temporarily closed Monday an integrated school at nearby Shorter while a total white boycott at Notasulga cleared the way for Negroes to enter the high school here.

13: White pupils refusing to attend class with Negroes stayed away from Notasulga, and nearby Shorter high school again today on the eve of another Federal court hearing.

18: Governor Wallace of Alabama again criticized the civil rights bill today as "a tyrannical threat to our whole concept of government and society."

27: Governor Wallace - In a dispute over registration of Negro voters- is attempting to have the Chairman of the Jefferson County Board of Registrars fired, according to Justice Department records revealed in Federal court here yesterday.

March 2: Five Negroes have qualified to run for offices in the May 5 Democratic primary in Macon County.

3: The second private school growing out of cour-ordered desegregation in Macon County opened its doors today to white pupils unwilling to attend class with Negroes. Alabama Negro leaders have been called to a statewide meeting in Montgomery March 4 to discuss civil rights problems with the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr.. Republican James D. Martin, urging a massive letter-writing campaign against the proposed Civil Rights Bill, yesterday charged the measure "is the most inhumane, hate-breeding, ill-advised piece of legislation since Reconstruction."

4: In Birmingham leaders in a move to restore a commission form of government to the city are seeking an attorney general's ruling to designate a date to file for a new change-in-government election.

5: The Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. said today mass racial demonstrations would resume in Birmingham within 30 days.

6: Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers today promised "strong state action" to counter threatened racial demonstrations in Birmingham and elsewhere in Alabama.

9: Racial demonstrations in Birmingham last spring cost the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People more than $100,000 in legal expenses alone.

11: Gadsden businessman James D. Martin predicted last night that some form of the "so-called" Civil Rights Bill now pending in Congress would be passed. The State Highway Department is scheduled to buy a $250,000 twin-engine airplane this week to be used by Governor George Wallace.

12: Voter registration boards in Alabama have discarded the uniform questionnaire used for 12 years and have started a new system of submitting different questions to prospective new voters each month. The change was made under a legislative act which grew out of complaints that while the old questionnaire remained unchanged, Negro applicants learned to memorize the questions and answers while attending voter registration classes conducted by civil rights groups.

17: Jefferson County Young Republicans yesterday sent a letter to Illinois Rep. Sen. Everett Dirksen protesting the Civil Rights Bill now before Congress. Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers contended today that Alabama does not have a statewide system of segregated schools and therefore a three-judge Federal panel should not issue a statewide desegregation order.

18: Evangelist Billy Graham to appear in Birmingham Sunday, March 29. White Citizens' Council raises objection to Graham's appearance. Florence City Commission today announced the hiring of two Negro policemen.

23: In Birmingham seven Negro pickets arrested in front of Loveman's and Pizitz Thursday will be tried in Recorder's Court today. Birmingham has begun work on the communications necessary for a city with large white and Negro populations, the Community Affairs Committee said in its first full report issued this weekend. The Gadsden school board has only nine days remaining to submit a school desegregation plan for the 1964-65 term, according to City School Superintendent I. J. Browder.

25: State records disclosed today that Edwin Strickland has been employed at $600 a month by the Commission to Preserve the Peace. The commission was created by the Legislature last year to investigate individuals and organizations "who may be engaged in activities of an unlawful nature which may be detrimental to the peace and dignity of the state..." Six Negroes picketed Birmingham City Hall for about three hours yesterday with signs protesting alleged discriminatory practices in city government.

30: Approximately 35,000 Negroes and whites listened to Billy Graham on Easter Sunday afternoon in Birmingham. More than 300 city and county law enforcement officers were ready for any situation during Billy Graham services at Legion Field.

31: Birmingham "has achieved a certain amount of maturity" since last Summer's racial demonstrations, Man-of-the-Year, Frank Newton told the Young Men's Business Club yesterday.

TIME IS CREEPING IN, MEMBERS!

With a third of the year almost gone, many persons have not yet renewed membership in SCCHR. Time is slipping by and an enlarged program requires more support and members.

For many, $5 memberships constitute sacrifice. It is worth the effort, though, to realize that your Council is providing more vital information needed to upgrade employment and education for all citizens than any single organization in the state.

These are days of solid challenge and the need for deep commitment to the causes of justice and equality of opportunity.

Have you made your contribution yet?

At a recent Executive Committee meeting, action was taken to relate Executive Committee members to local Council programs.

It was hoped that such a relationship would help to provide services for local councils to strengthen organization and programs.

Dr. Austin V. Edwards and Dr. Robert J. Moore were elected as members-at-large to serve on the Executive Committee.

WILL STATE PARKS BE LOST?

On Jan. 30 the State Park Bill (H.1959) passed the 3rd reading of the House. On the same day it received first reading in the Senate and was referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee. It is to be reported March 10 to a meeting of the full committee.

The crucial question now is: will the Senate pass the bill, or will it by not passing the bill keep the state parks closed and permit the reversal clause in many parks to be implemented?

It is urgent that your Senators hear from you now. Members of the Judiciary Committee are:

Chairman, Gressette, Calhoun; 1st vice chairman, Morrah, Greenville; 2nd vice chairman, Williams, Orangeburg; Long, Union; West, Kershaw; Stevens, Horry; Gasque, Marion; Bristow, Richland; Cushman, Aiken; Nicholson, Greenwood; Grimes, Georgetown; Harrelson, Colleton; Leppard, Chesterfield; Lindsay, Marlboro; and Morris, Clarendon.

SCSCHR TUTORS HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS
By Mrs. Fannie Phelps Adams, Guidance Counselor

The Guidance Department of Booker T. Washington High, Columbia, uses various techniques which tend to enable every student to realize his maximum potential. Thus, there was an enthusiastic acceptance of tutoring services offered by members of the Columbia Student Human Relations group. The plan was designed to provide additional help for a number of students who possess good academic ability, but who are presently considered by their teachers as underachievers.

Serving as tutors for these students are persons from Benedict College and the University of South Carolina who are active members of the South Carolina Student Council on Human Relations.

Subjects include Algebra, Biology, Chemistry, English, French, Spanish, and U. . History.

The services are on a voluntary basis, and students await each session with great enthusiasm. The inter-personal relationship experienced between students and tutors is most noteworthy.

The administration, faculty, and students of Booker T. Washington High are grateful for the services these tutors are rendering, and feel confident that the results achieved will prove invaluable to both students and tutors.

The S.C. Student Council on Human Relations has great reason to be proud of this work.

REPORT OF ACTIVITIES OF FIELD REPRESENTATIVE OF
S. C. C. H. R. DURING THE MONTHS
MARCH, APRIL AND MAY 1964

The field activities of the Field Representative during this period has been based largely on the following four projects:

1. Cooperation with Employment Security Commission for Job Training.
2. Special Conferences and Neighborhood County Meetings.
3. Cooperation with Visitor from United States Commission on Civil Rights.
4. Present status of ARA and STEP programs of South Carolina.
5. Study of Poverty in S. C. and Cooperation with voter registration.

Cooperation for Job Training

The Executive Director of the Employment Security Commission got Mr. James through request to visit with Mr. Phenisee F. Hanson, Regional Representative of the Employment Bureau Security of the United States Department of Labor, while he was in South Carolina on a routine State visit to some Employment Service Offices.

Mr. Hanson was also interested in seeing not only activities of the Employment Service Offices of the State, but to see the organized STEP training schools. Mr. James spent the entire week of March 16-20, 1964, traveling with Mr. Hanson at the expense of the Employment Security Office. We visited four Employment Service Offices and two STEP schools. At that time, only two STEP schools were open; one in Camden and one at Coosahatchie, Jasper County, near Ridgeland. This gave Mr. James a chance to meet officially managers of Employment Service Offices in the following cities: Camden, Charleston, Columbia, and Beaufort. All the managers impressed us with their efforts to serve the public without any evidence of discrimination. We are equally pleased with the integration; in one school the faculty was integrated, too. We reported our finding to Mr. Keith Aull, Executive Director of the South Carolina State Employment Commission. (See copy of Mr. Aull's letter attached).

Special Conferences and Neighborhood County Meetings

For the first time in the history of the SCCHR, the Georgia and South Carolina Councils on Human Relations held a joint conference in Augusta. This meeting was held at the Augusta Townhouse Motor Inn March 20-21, 1964. Mr. James was responsible for organizing materials, selecting speakers and acting as chairman of the workshop based on the topic, "The Role of Citizens in Implementing State and Federal Training and Retraining Programs." A summary of the discussion, together with a list of some of the people who attended the workshop and the program are attached to the report.

Mr. James has held four neighborhood county group meetings during this period. The group counties included Chester, Chesterfield, Darlington, Kershaw, Lancaster, and Marlboro not April 3rd in Camden, South Carolina. It was fortunate to get the principal of the pilot STEP school in Camden, South Carolina, in the person of Colonel Elder to speak at this meeting. Two county agricultural agents attended this meeting. Colonel Elder emphasized the fact that integration of the school was accepted without complaint by the faculty, students and community. This meeting encouraged four now important ministers of large churches to promise cooperation in helping to spread information about the STEP schools and opportunities available for training of functional illiterates along with other trainees for jobs available in their communities.

The county group meeting on April 17th was held in Barnwell, South Carolina with the following counties participating: Aiken, Bamberg, Allendale, and Barnwell. The chief problem discussed at this meeting was the eligibility of trainees of new STEP schools. The problem of getting underemployed farm workers to receive $15 per week released for training was also discussed.

The April 24th meeting at Kingstree included representatives from four counties: Lee, Sumter, Clarendon and Williamsburg. The chief problem discussed at this meeting was how to get Negro farmers to participate in local elections of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Community Committee election. It was reported that an official report of an election was not given after Negroes participated in the community election. This problem was investigated at the State Office of ASCS. We are still trying to get a Negro County Agricultural Agent for Lee County.

At St. George, May 8th, 1964, the county group meeting included reports from the following counties: Berkeley, Orangeburg, Dorchester, Colleton, Beaufort and Jasper. Mr. James secured the services of Mr. Jacob R. Henderson, Field Coordinator of ARA to speak for this meeting. He described the kind of projects which the ARA would like to support and indicated that there are no projects in South Carolina or Georgia that meet the democratic requirements of ARA policies.

Conversation with Visitors from United States Commission on Civil Rights

Mr. James was asked to help, in anyway possible, two representatives from the United States Commission on Civil Rights. These two gentlemen were in South Carolina from April 13-17, 1964 investigating the possibility of discrimination on the part of the Farmers Home Administration and the Extension Service. Mr. James was able to give them a list of persons to contact and furnish them information from his files. They took all of the case studies, correspondence and other written information which Mr. James had in his files relative to appeals from local decisions of FHA committees on applications for helping our low-income farmers.

They were also interested in information in Mr. James' files, relative to letters which showed that one Negro lady applicant, who had qualified on a recent register for clerk-stenographer on the level of Grade 4 with an average rating of 87, was refused a job as secretary in the State FHA Director's Office, even after he promised to hire her if she qualified on the register. Mr. James permitted the representatives from the United States Commission on Civil Rights to take all information mentioned above to their office in Washington for a study. Since their visit, the State Director of FHA has appointed for the first time a Negro Assistant Supervisor in the local office of the FHA Supervisor of Clarendon County. He has also appointed a Negro to membership of the local three-man committee of the FHA in the same county. During this same week, Mr. James sent, on April 13th, a low-income farmer named Willie P. Canty from this same County to testify before the United States House Committee on Education and Labor in favor of the Anti-Poverty Bill. His report was well received and our daily paper called "STATE" carried an article (short write-up) on his appearance before the House Committee on Education and Labor. A copy of this article and Mr. Canty's written testimony is attached.

Status of ARA and STEP Programs of South Carolina

In the last report mention was made of the efforts of Mr. James to get an ARA project started in Colleton County. The leaders in the county organized what is called a Colleton County Garment Corporation which really developed out of their Development Corporation in the same county. They have in the treasury more than $7,000.00 already deposited in one of the leading banks in Walterboro. Since ARA is not inclined to help garment industries anymore, this corporation has decided to work independently without aid from the ARA. The president of the bank in which the money is deposited has promised to co-sign with them for a loan from the Small Business Administration to finance their garment industry project and they have already gotten the STEP school at Cocoshatchie to train 40 power sewing machine operators to do their sewing. This training was done for them free of charge with the help of a large garment factory which is already established in Walterboro.

They are planning to start production at once. All that they produce in garments will be taken by this large garment industry and sold for them. The Chesterfield County Garment Corporation at Pageland has finally gotten started. They are employing 25 persons with a weekly payroll of $1400.00. They are small beginning, but we hope will grow and develop into a large industry in the State.

The Special Training for Economic Progress (STEP) is constantly setting up additional courses in schools throughout the State. Mr. James is still helping to recruit trainees for these schools throughout the State. At present 22 schools have been started with an enrollment of 1380 trainees. So far, 39 counties out of a total of 46 counties have asked for STEP schools. These schools are beginning to turn out people who have completed courses and are now ready for employment.

Mr. James spent the week of May 25-29 visiting various "pockets of poverty" with Mr. Philip Stern and Mr. de Vincent from Washington, D. C. Mr. Stern is a writer and Mr. de Vincent is a photographer. We covered the lower section of the state and spent the day with the migrants in Charleston county. All pictures taken by Mr. de Vincent were to be shown to the Committee on Labor of the U. S. Senate. (see letter from Mr. Stern attached)

Mr. James made special efforts to cooperate with voter registration in all neighborhood county meetings. He prepared a list of the names of the members of all registration boards in all counties in South Carolina and sent them to leaders in each county with a letter suggesting that they contact the registration boards for names of Negroes who have registered.(see copy of letter and list attached.)

THE ARKANSAS COUNCIL ON HUMAN RELATIONS
Narrative Report
January-March, 1964

I. Significant Events

A. In the Schools

1. Former Congressman Brooks Hays delivered two addresses at Philander Smith College on Lincoln's birthday as a part of the college's lyceum series.
2. On February 28 the Texarkana School Board announced a desegregation plan that it intends to put into effect in September 1964. The plan is to begin with the first two grades and add two grades annually applying the provisions of the Arkansas Assignment Law in the screening of students, although it avoids use of the title of this Law. Students above grades one and two will never be in desegregated schools.
3. North Little Rock School Board has been asked by the white Elementary PTA Council and a group of Negro leaders, separately, to explain its plans for desegregation. The Board officially said it would announce the plan in two months.
4. On February 22 the City Teachers Association of Little Rock (Negro) presented a Freedom Pageant at Horace Mann Auditorium detailing the history of the struggle for freedom down to current events.
5. In response to a request by the University Senate Chairman - the Senate, faculty members with the rank of assistant professor or higher - that faculty members at the University of Arkansas express their views on the desegregation of athletics, about twenty percent replied. A majority of those replying were in favor of desegregation.
6. The winter issue of AAUP Bulletin disclosed its criticism of the University of Arkansas for its treatment of four faculty members who refused to comply with Act #10, a teacher loyalty law later declared unconstitutional. The University has refused to reinstate one of these, John L. McKenney, who asked for reinstatement.

B. In Organizations

1. Unexpectantly, on February 5, Father David Boileau, professor at St. John's Seminary in Little Rock, was assigned by Bishop Albert Fletcher as assistant rector at Stuttgart parish. Father Boileau was a founder and prime leader in the Greater Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations organized last April. The action came shortly after some published statements by Father Boileau on the occasion of receiving a citation from Little Rock's Junior Chamber of Commerce, concerning the coming reforms in the Catholic Church depending on the demise of some Latin cardinals.
2. The Reverend Edward Harris of the First Methodist Church, Pine Bluff, on February 9 (Race Relations Day) preached a sermon based on official statements of the Methodist Church in which he declared the removal of racial restrictions on membership and attendance at his church. He said: "To insist that schools, restaurants, hotels and business establishments provide equal accommodations for all people without regard to race or color, but to exempt the church from the same requirement is to be guilty of absurdity as well as sin."
3. The NAACP sponsored Mrs. Medgar Evans as speaker before about 400 persons at Dunbar Community Center February 16. The meeting originally scheduled as a dinner at Hotel Marion was cancelled by Manager Shelley six days before the engagement on the ground Mrs. Evers was "controversial."
4. The Greater Little Rock Conference on Religion and Human Relations sponsored its fourth public session of the season on January 21, at the Second Presbyterian Church at which a large audience heard the Panel of Americans and at its business session elected "more permanent" officers: The Reverend Donald Campbell, Grace Presbyterian Church, Chairman; Mrs. Edwin Mendel, Secretary; The Reverend William Gentry, Director of the Wesley Foundation, Treasurer.
5. On January 26the Pine Bluff Movement observed its first anniversary at St. Peter's Rock Church with John Lewis of SNCC as guest speaker.
6. The executive board of the National Baptist Convention (Negro) meeting in Hot Springs on January 22 called for a moderate approach to civil rights and criticized militant methods such as demonstrations and boycotts. The Reverend James Rice of Roanoke Baptist Church, Hot Springs, a member of the Baptist Convention, vigorously criticised the president, Dr. J. H. Jackson of Chicago.

C. In Communities
